'Tis now high Time to reſume the Thread of Domeſtick Occurrences in Great Britain. About the Middle of July, Count Bergoni, Envoy Extraordinary from the Duke of Modena, had his * publick Audience of the Queen, and of her Royal Conſort, at Windſor; and, not many † Days after, Antony Artemonowitz de Matueof, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from the Czar of Muſcovy, had his private Audience of Leave. The ſame Day, the Baron le Begue, Envoy Extraordinary from the Duke of Lorrain, had his firſt private Audience: And Two Proclamations were order'd to be publiſh'd, for a publick and general Thankſgiving, on the 19th Day of Auguſt throughout England, and on the 26th of the ſame Month, in North-Britain. A ‖ Week after, Sir John Holt, Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Queen's-Bench, was ſworn a Privy-Counſellor: And the Place of Recorder of the City of London having, ſome Time, been vacant, by her Majeſty's advancing Sir Salathiel Lovel to be one of the Barons of the Exchequer; the Court of Aldermen ∴ made choice of Peter King, Eſq; a Perſon of eminent Parts, and profound Learning, to ſucceed him; on whom likewiſe her Majeſty did, not long after, beſtow the Honour of Knighthood, as a particular Mark of her Royal Favour and Eſteem.

In the Month of July, an Ambaſſador from the Emperor of Fez and Morocco arrived in Great Britain, with a Preſent of Six Lions for her Majeſty; but upon his coming to Hammerſmith, a Village about Four Miles to the Weſt of London, he was put under an eaſy Confinement, by way of Reprizal, for the Reſtraint put upon Captain Delaval, her Majeſty's Envoy in that Country, before he reach'd that Emperor's Court; which happen'd upon a falſe Report, that ſome ill Uſage had been offer'd to Hamet Ben Hamet Cardenas, the late Morocco Ambaſſador here. Upon better Information, the Captain was immediately releaſed, as was alſo the Morocco Ambaſſador: But, however, the Britiſh Envoy did not think fit to go in Perſon to the Court of Morocco; and only ſent thither (with her Majeſty's Letter and Preſent) Mr. Corbiere, his Secretary; who was receiv'd with great Demonſtrations of Reſpect.

The Morocco Ambaſſador confin'd, and ſoon after ſet at Liberty.

Mr. Corbiere goes to the Court of the Emperor of Morocco.

About this Time, an Indignity offer'd in London, to Antony Artemonewitz de Matueof, the Muſcovite Ambaſſador, was highly reſented, not only by himſelf, but likewiſe by all concern'd in the Preſervation of the Rights and Privileges of publick Miniſters. Thomas Morton, a Laceman in Kingſtreet, Covent-Garden, and ſome other Tradeſmen, to whom his Excellency ow'd ſeveral Sums of Money, amounting in the whole to about Three Hundred Pounds Sterling; finding he had taken his Audience of Leave, and being fooliſhly apprehenſive, that he would leave the Kingdom incognito, without paying his Debts; altho' a City Merchant, trading to Muſcovy, had ſet a Day for ſatisfying moſt of them; held ſeveral Conſultations together, and, at laſt, imprudently reſolv'd to arreſt him; which was done accordingly on the 21ſt of July, in the open Street, with ſome aggravating Circumſtances. For the Ambaſſador, not knowing (at firſt) the Reaſon of his being ſeized, and imagining he was ſet upon by Villains, ſtruggled, in his own Defence, and was ill uſed and overpower'd by the barbarous Bailiffs; who carry'd his Excellency to a Spunging-Houſe, at the Sign of the Black Raven, where he was detain'd till the Earl of Feverſham and a City Merchant had bail'd him. The Ambaſſador, juſtly incens'd at this Inſult, in Violation of the Law of Nations, apply'd himſelf for Redreſs to the Government; and, the next * Day, wrote a Letter to Mr. Secretary Boyle, wherein he urged, "That the Queen, who was ſo jealous of the Reſpect due "to the Ambaſſadors of Crown'd Heads, and had ſo glorioufly vindicated the Honour "of the Earl of Mancheſter, her Ambaſſador at Venice, and caus'd a rigorous Pu-"niſhment to be inflicted on the Officers of the Cuſtom-Houſe, ſome of whom were "ſet in the Pillory, and others condemn'd to the Gallies, only for inſulting the "Gentlemen of his Retinue; could not but moſt juſtly revenge the Affront lately "put upon him, by a corporal Puniſhment. That Count Zobor, who was deliver'd "up to the Diſcretion of the King of Sweden, for picking a Quarrel with his En-"voy, likewiſe afforded an Inſtance of the Satisfaction he requir'd; as being de-

At the ſame Time, Count Gallas, Imperial Envoy Extraordinary, the Baron Spanheim, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from the King of Pruſſia, and ſeveral other Foreign Miniſters, thinking themſelves concern'd in the Affront put upon their Character, demanded a due Reparation for the ſame: All which having been laid before the Queen, who ſtill continued at Windſor; her Majeſty expreſs'd a very great Reſentment for the Indignity offer'd to the Muſcovite Ambaſſador, and com-

The next † Day, before Mr. Secretary Boyle was return'd from Windſor, the Muſcovite Ambaſſador wrote to him another Letter, importing, " That as he had not received any Teſtimony of Concern or Regret, ei- " ther from the Queen, or any of her Miniſters, ſince he had ſent him his Com- " plaints in Writing, he found himſelf oblig'd to preſs for his Departure; and " therefore intreated Mr. Secretary, to get a Paſsport for him as ſoon as poſſible." Hereupon Mr. Secretary Boyle acquainted the Ambaſſador, That Seven of the principal Accomplices, in the deſperate Attempt upon his Perſon, were committed to Priſon, and under Proſecution, by Order of the Privy-Council; who was to meet again about that Affair as ſoon as poſſible: But the Ambaſſador being impatient to leave the

In Anſwer to this, Mr. Secre-

‖ Dated Sept. 17. from whence he tranſmitted hither a Memorial, with a ‖ Letter from the Czar of Muſcovy to the Queen; wherein that Prince demanded no leſs, than " that a Capi- " tal Puniſhment, according to the Rigor of the Law, be inflicted on all the Ac- " complices of the Indignity put upon the Perſon of his Ambaſſador; or, at leaſt, " ſuch an one as was adequate to the Nature of the Affront, which every particu- " lar Perſon put upon the Ambaſſador." Such a Puniſhment being altogether inconſiſtent with the Laws of England, this unlucky Affair gave no ſmall Uneaſineſs to the Queen and her Miniſters; who, in the Opinion of many, might have prevented the Conſequences of it, by uſing more ſpeedy, and more effectual (a) Methods to appeaſe the Ambaſſador.

On the 18th of October, Sir Richard Temple, Brigadier of her Majeſty's Armies, arriv'd at Kenſington from the Duke of Marlborough, with an Account of the Surrender of the Town of Liſle, and was receiv'd with particular Diſtinction by the Queen, in regard of the conſiderable Share he had in that Service: But the Joy, occaſion'd by the News he brought, was ſoon pall'd by the Death of the Queen's Royal Conſort, Prince George of Denmark. His Royal Highneſs had, for many Years, been troubled with a conſtant Difficulty of Breathing, and ſometimes with ſpitting of Blood, which often endanger'd his Life; and about Three Months before, a dropſical Humour (with which his Royal Highneſs had been formerly afflicted) ſeized his Legs, and moſt Parts of his Body. This was attended with a Sleepineſs, Cough, and an Increaſe of the Aſthma; and on Saturday the 23d of October, the Violence of the Cough produced a ſpitting of Blood, and an Increaſe of the Coma, or Sleepineſs, with an Addition of convulſive Motions of the Tendons; which Symptoms not yielding to the Remedies adminiſter'd by his own and ſeveral other Learned Phyſicians, on the 28th of the ſame Month, between Ten and Eleven in the Morning, his Royal Highneſs fell into a Suffocation, from which neither Bleeding, nor a Vomit (both being adminiſter'd) could relieve him, her Majeſty aſſiſting in his laſt Moments, as well as during his whole Illneſs, in the moſt mournful and moſt affecting manner, till he expir'd. His Royal Highneſs's great Humanity and Juſtice, with his other extraordinary Virtues, had ſo highly endear'd him to the whole Nation, that all Orders of Men diſcovered an unſpeakable Grief for the Loſs of ſo excellent a Prince. His Royal Highneſs was Duke of Cumberland, High Admiral of Great Britain and Ireland, Generaliſſimo of all her Majeſty's Forces, both by Sea and Land, and Warden of the Cinque Ports. On the 28th of July 1683, his Royal Highneſs was married to her Majeſty, by whom he had Iſſue of both Sexes, particularly the late Prince William, Duke of Gloceſter, Great Britain's Hopes, who, like the reſt, was unfortunately nipp'd in the Bloom. His Royal Highneſs was eminently inſtrumental in the late happy Revolution; conſtantly attended King William at the memorable Battel of the Boyne, and during all that Year's Campaign. He ſhew'd, on all Occaſions, his hearty Affection and Zeal for the Proteſtant and Britiſh Intereſt; and as he ſet an illuſtrious Pattern of Conjugal Love, ſo was he the beſt of Maſters. And by another Order publiſh'd on the 2d, it was declar'd, That it was expected that all Perſons on this Occaſion ſhould put themſelves into the deepeſt Mourning, long Cloaks excepted; that as well all Lords as Privy-Counſellors, and Officers of her Majeſty's and his Royal Highneſs's Houſhold, ſhould cover their Coaches, and Chairs, and cloath their Livery-Servants, with black Cloth, by Sunday the 14th of that Month; and that no Perſon ſhould uſe any varniſh'd or Bullion Nails, to be ſeen on their Coaches, Chariots, or Chairs: Which Orders were readily complied with. On the 11th of November, the Body of his Royal Highneſs was carried from Kenſington to the Painted Chamber, within the Palace of Weſtminſter; where having lain in State till the 13th, it was that Night interr'd in the Abbey-Church, with all the Pomp conſiſtent with a private Funeral.

The Death of Prince George neceſſarily occaſion'd ſome Alterations at Court: His Royal Highneſs being of late much indiſpoſed, the Affairs of the Admiralty were, for the moſt part, adminiſter'd by his Council, whoſe Power expiring with him, the Queen manag'd thoſe Affairs her ſelf, till her Majeſty thought fit to be eaſed of that Burden, by conſtituting Thomas Earl of Pembroke, Lord High Admiral of Great Britain and Ireland, which Office he had diſcharg'd, with univerſal Applauſe, in the Year 1702. His Lordſhip being at this Time Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and Preſident of the Council, which Places are hardly conſiſtent with that of Lord High Admiral, her Majeſty beſtow'd the firſt on Thomas Earl of Wharton, and the other on John Lord Somers, who at the ſame time was ſworn one of her Majeſty's moſt honourable Privy-Council; as were alſo John Lord Archbiſhop of York, Ralph Duke of Montague, James Duke of Montroſs, Robert Marquis of Lindſey, Lord Great Chamberlain, Hugh Earl of Loudoun, Robert Lord Ferrers, Peregrine Bertie, Eſq; Richard Earl Rivers, and Algernoon Earl of Eſſex. The new Parliament of Great Britain met on Tueſday the 16th of November; and the Queen having granted a Commiſſion under the Great Seal, appointing his Grace the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Lord High Chancellor, the Lord High Treaſurer, the Lord Steward of her Majeſty's Houſhold, and the Great Maſter of the Horſe, to repreſent her Royal Perſon, the Commons were deſired in the Name of the Lords Commiſſioners, by the Gentleman Uſher of the Black Rod, to come up to the Houſe of Peers, and hear the ſaid Commiſſion read. The Commons attending, the Lord Chancellor acquainted both Houſes with the ſad Occaſion of her Majeſty's Abſence; and the Commiſſion having been read, his Lordſhip ſignified to the Commons, that they ſhould forthwith proceed to the Choice of a fit Perſon to be their Speaker, and preſent him the Thurſday following. The Commons being return'd to their Houſe, the Lord William Powlet moved to chuſe Sir Richard Onſlow for their Speaker, and was ſeconded by Sir William Strickland: But Major-General Mordaunt, by way of Irony, propos'd, "That they ſhould chuſe Mr. Jodrell, the Clerk "of the Houſe, who having been Aſſiſtant to good Speakers, to indifferent ones, and "to the worſt, ſeem'd to be as well qualified for that Station as any Body. Lord William Powlet and Sir William Strickland took Sir Richard Onſlow from his Seat, in order to place him in the Chair, which they did, after he had made a ſhort Speech; in which he modeſtly endeavour'd to decline that important Truſt, in ſo nice a Juncture of Affairs, wherein the good or bad Succeſs of this neceſſary War, did, in a great Meaſure, depend on the Reſolutions of that great Aſſembly. It is, however, obſervable, That the Tories, upon a Surmiſe that the Court, or Whig-Party, would have been divided between Sir Richard Onſlow, and Sir Peter King, Recorder of London, had deſign'd to have put up Sir Thomas Hanmer; but being diſappointed in that Expectation, they thought it Prudence, not being able to make a Majority, unanimouſly to ſtrike in with the reſt. The ſame Day, the Duke of Queenſberry was introduced into the Houſe of Peers, by the Dukes of Somerſet and Ormond, as a Peer of Great Britain, and Duke of Dover. After this, both Houſes adjourn'd to the 18th, on which Day the Commons being come to the Houſe of Peers, to preſent their Speaker, the Lord High-Chancellor, in the Name of the Lords Commiſſioners for opening and holding this preſent Parliament, ſignified to them her Majeſty's entire Satisfaction, in their Choice of a Perſon ſo well qualified for that Office, both by his great Abilities, and his Zeal and Affection for the Government, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion: And then his Lordſhip deliver'd to both Houſes the following Speech.

The Choice of a Speaker approved, Nov. 18.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

IN Purſuance of the Authority given us by her Majeſty's Commiſſion under the Great Seal, among other Things, to declare the Cauſes of her Majeſty's calling this Parliament,

The Lords Commiſſioners Speech to both Houſes

We are, by her Majeſty's Command, in the Firſt Place, to obſerve to you, that the extraordinary Length of this Year's Campaign, hath obliged her Majeſty to defer your Meeting longer than otherwiſe ſhe would have done, that you might be inform'd with the greater Certainty, of the State and Poſture of the War, in order to your Reſolutions for the enſuing Year.

This neceſſary Delay hath now ſo far ſhewn us the Succeſs of Affairs Abroad, as that, whether you conſider the Places acquir'd by the Allies, or the farther and continued Proofs given this laſt Year, of their Superior Courage and Conduct, (which as to the future Part of the War, is equal to all other Advantages) we may, with Thanks to GOD, and Juſtice to thoſe he hath been pleas'd to uſe as INSTRUMENTS in this great Work, conclude, that upon the whole, we are brought much nearer than we were the laſt Seſſion, to the End of our undertaking this War, the reducing the dangerous Power of France, and ſettling ſuch a Peace, as may ſecure it ſelf from being violated.

Her Majeſty therefore commands us to aſſure you, ſhe hath not the leaſt Doubt, but that this Parliament will be of the ſame Opinion with her laſt, as to the vigorous Proſecution of the War, and the Ends of it; believing it impoſſible, the Repreſentative of the Britiſh Nation can endure to think of loſing the Fruits of all our paſt Endeavours, and the great Advantages we have gain'd, (particularly in this preſent Year) by ſubmitting, at laſt, to an inſecure Peace.

And therefore, ſince probably nothing can hinder our Succeſs Abroad for the Time to come, but Miſunderſtandings among our ſelves at Home; we have it in Command, to conjure you, by your Duty to GOD, and to her Majeſty, your Zeal for the Proteſtant Religion, your Love for your Country, and the Regard you cannot but have for the Liberty of Europe in General, to avoid all Occaſion of Diviſions, which are ever hurtful to the Publick, but will more eſpecially be ſo at this Juncture, when the Eyes of all our Neighbours are upon you with a very particular Concern; and your Unanimity and good Agreement will be the greateſt Satisfaction and Encouragement to all our Allies.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

You cannot but be convinc'd, that the ſeveral Parts of the War which were provided for by the laſt Parliament, will require your Support, at leaſt in the ſame Degree: But in Flanders, the Nature of the War is much alter'd by the great Advances made there, towards entring into France, which hath ſo far alarm'd our Enemies, that they are drawing more Troops daily to that Side, for the Defence of their own Country: And therefore her Majeſty hopes you will have ſo right a Senſe of our preſent Advantages, as to enable her Majeſty to make a conſiderable Augmentation for preſerving and improving them, which, by the Continuance of GOD's Bleſſing on our Arms, muſt ſoon put a glorious Period to this long and expenſive War.

As to the Condition of the Fleet, we have it in Command from her Majeſty to acquaint you, That the conſtant and remote Services, in which the Ships have been employ'd, have made a greater Sum than uſual requiſite, as well for the extraordinary Repairs, as the building of new Ships. And the taking of Port-Mahon, as it hath afforded the Means of having a Part of the Fleet operate with more Readineſs and Effect on the Enemy, or wherever it may be uſeful to the Common Cauſe in thoſe Parts, ſo the making ſuch Proviſions, at ſo

All which her Majeſty recommends to your ſerious Conſideration, deſiring you to provide timely and effectual Supplies for thoſe Ends; and likewiſe for the carrying on ſuch Fortifications for the Security of our Ports, and extinguiſhing the Enemy's Hopes of profiting by Diſturbances in Scotland, as you ſhall think fit.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Union is eſteem'd by her Majeſty to be ſo happy and great a Part of the Succeſſes of her Reign; and her Majeſty hath ſo much at Heart, the confirming and improving it, that ſhe is pleaſed to command us to remind you of preparing ſuch Bills, as ſhall be thought conducing to that End; and particularly to make the Laws of both Parts of Great Britain, agree, as near as may be, for the common Intereſt of both People, eſpecially as to thoſe Laws which relate to Criminal Caſes, and Proceedings, and ſettling the Militia on the ſame Foot, throughout the United Kingdom.

Her Majeſty is graciouſly pleas'd we ſhould alſo aſſure you, that if you can propoſe any Means for the Improvement of our Trade or Manufactures, or better Employment of the Poor, her Majeſty will take the greateſt Satisfaction in enacting ſuch Proviſions; there being nothing ſhe ſo earneſtly deſires, as that GOD would bleſs her with more and more Opportunities of doing all poſſible Good, to ſo well-deſerving a People, ſo firm and affectionate to her Intereſts.

And as her Majeſty doth not doubt, by GOD's Bleſſing, and your good Affections, to continue to defeat the Deſigns of the Pretender, and his open or ſecret Abettors; ſo her Majeſty will always endeavour, on her Part, to make her People happy to ſuch a Degree, as that none (except of deſperate Fortunes) ſhall enter into Meaſures for the Diſturbance of her Government, the Union, or the Proteſtant Succeſſion, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, without acting, at the ſame Time, manifeſtly againſt their own true and laſting Intereſt, as well as their Duty.

The Lords condole with the Queen.

The ſame Day, the Lords reſolved to preſent an Addreſs to her Majeſty, to condole with her upon the Death of his Royal Highneſs Prince George, and to aſſure her, that they would ſtand by, and aſſiſt her Majeſty with their Lives and Fortunes: Which being drawn up, the * next Day, their Lordſhips took into Conſideration the manner of preſenting the ſaid Addreſs; and being of Opinion, that the moſt private way might be moſt agreeable to her Majeſty at this Time, order'd, That the Marquis of Dorcheſter, who reported the Addreſs to the Houſe, ſhould attend her Majeſty with the ſame. His Lordſhip having waited † on the Queen accordingly, ſhe thanked the Houſe of Peers very kindly for their Addreſs, as well as for the manner of ſending it to her on that Occaſion.

The Convocation meets, and is ſuddenly prorogued.

On the 19th of November, the Clergy of the Province of Canterbury, met in Convocation; but before Divine Service and Sermon, which were to precede the Choice of a Prolocutor, they were unexpectedly exonerated, and prorogued to the 25th of February next, by the Metropolitan, purſuant to the Queen's Writ to him directed. This ſudden Diſmiſſion was generally aſcribed to the late Endeavours of the Lower-Houſe, to withdraw themſelves from the legal and ancient Authority of their Metropolitan; and to the bold Attempts of ſome of their Members, who, to maintain their pretended Right and Privilege of adjourning themſelves, and holding intermediate Seſſions, invaded her Majeſty's Royal Supremacy: So that, in order to put a ſtop to thoſe illegal Practices, her Majeſty thought fit, ſome Time before, to write a Letter to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to be communicated to the Biſhops and Clergy of his Province, wherein ſhe threatned to uſe ſuch Means, for the puniſhing Offences of this Nature, as are warranted by Law. Notwithſtanding this Commination, many Acts of Contempt were done by the Lower-Houſe; and on the 10th of April, 1707, a Day of Canonical Seſſion, the Polocutor abſented himſelf, without Leave of the Preſident: Whereupon an Action of Contumacy was commenced, and continued in the Upper-Houſe, againſt Dr. Binks, Prolocutor to the Lower-Houſe, who making a formal Submiſſion to the Archbiſhop, the Proſecution againſt him was ſuperſeded. It might with Reaſon have been expected, that the other hot Members of the Lower-Houſe would have taken Warning by his Example, and been brought to a cool Temper: But to the great Grief of all ſober Chriſtians, it was obſerv'd, that, inſtead of entertaining the Thoughts of Peace, ſome Time before the new Parliament was to meet, great Induſtry was uſed in making a Party for the chuſing Dr. Atterbury Prolocutor; which look'd like a new Inſult upon the Archbiſhop and Biſhops, and an expreſs Defiance to them: As if the Lower-Houſe of Convocation could fight under no other Leader, but him who had unhappily begun the Quarrel; and was known to be moſt averſe to Peace and Union, the greateſt Bleſſings of Church and State. Moreover, Dr. Atterbury did, about this Time, very impoliticly, give manifeſt Indication of his jarring Temper, by publiſhing, without any Provocation, a Pamphlet, intituled, Some Proceedings in the Convocation, Anno Dom. 1705, faithfully repreſented:

Wherein,

A. D. 1708.

Wherein, under Colour of giving an Account of the ſeveral ineffectual Attempts, at divers Times made, by the Lower Clergy, towards quieting all Diſputes, and proceeding upon Synodical Buſineſs: "When about a Year and a half had paſs'd, ſince any Thing "was written on the Subject of theſe unhappy Differences; he made a new Ap- "peal to the Publick; not upon the Matter laſt under Debate, but by rip- "ping up Things from the very Beginning, and turning them upon the Arch- "biſhop and Biſhops, and many of the Lower-Houſe, with all the Acrimony that is "familiar * to him." Theſe laſt Expreſſions are purpoſely borrow'd from another Pamphlet, intituled, Partiality detected, written by way of Reply: And becauſe Dr. Atterbury ſeem'd not only to new-kindle the Holy War in England, but to call in Auxiliaries from the Members of the Convocation of Ireland, to whom he addreſs'd that Writing; the Perſon who took the Pains to anſwer him, diſcover'd the many partial Repreſentations, and unjuſt Reflections contain'd in the ſaid Pamphlet, particularly as to what concern'd the Proceedings of the Convocation in Ireland. Upon the Peruſal of this Reply, which remain'd unanſwer'd, all ſober impartial Men look'd upon the ſudden Prorogation of the Convocation, both as a juſt Puniſhment on ſome reſtleſs Spirits of the Lower-Houſe, and, at the ſame Time, as the beſt and moſt likely Method of endeavouring to reclaim them; Time being thereby given them for Reflection and Conſideration, or, at leaſt, to make others, who had been influenc'd by, and follow'd their Directions, to take and purſue better Counſels for the future. It is to be obſerv'd, that the Perſon, whom the Moderate Members of the Lower-Houſe of Convocation had in their Thoughts and Wiſhes for Prolocutor, was Dr. Willis, Dean of Lincoln; a Divine, as in all other Reſpects, ſo ſingularly qualified for that Office, upon Account of his Temper, and conſtant Endeavours for ſuch an Agreement, as reaſonably might be expected from an Aſſembly made up of the Adminiſtrators of the Goſpel of Peace.

* See a Pamphlet call'd, Partiality detected, p. 2. & ſeq.

The Members of the Houſe of Commons having ſpent Three or Four Days in qualifying themſelves, by taking and ſubſcribing the Oaths; the firſt Thing the Houſe † did, was to vote an Addreſs to the Queen, to "condole with her upon "the Death of Prince George; to deſire ſhe would take care of her Royal Perſon; "and to aſſure her, that they would ſupport her againſt all her Enemies." Then the Speaker having reported the Lords Commiſſioners Speech, it was reſolved to preſent another Addreſs; to "congratulate the glorious Succeſſes of her Majeſty's "Arms; and to aſſure her of their utmoſt Endeavours to enable her to carry on the "War, until the Liberties of Europe might be ſecured, by a ſafe and an honourable "Peace." Both which Addreſſes, according to the Queen's Deſire, were ‖ preſented to her by ſuch Members of that Houſe as were of the Privy-Council, and were very graciouſly receiv'd. It was obſerv'd, that Mr. William Bromley, a leading Member of the High-Church Party, moved for the Addreſs of Condoleance; and Sir William Strickland, one of the Chief among the Whigs, for that of Congratulation.

The Commons being informed by Mr. Hungerford, That the Humour of laying Wagers, about the Events of War, was grown to ſuch a Height, that many unwary Perſons were thereby ruin'd; and that the moſt crafty in thoſe Bargains, maintain'd clandeſtine Correſpondences abroad, which might be of dangerous Conſequence to the Government; the Houſe reſolved to put a ſtop to thoſe miſchievous Practices; and thereupon order'd a Bill to be brought in, to prevent the laying of Wagers relating to the Publick; which Mr. Hungerford preſented accordingly, on the 3d of December. The ſame Day, the Commons proceeded to take into Conſideration that Part of the Act for Uniting the Two Kingdoms, which relates to the Election of Members to ſerve in that Houſe, for that Part of Great Britain called Scotland; whereupon Mr. Serjeant Pratt, Mr. Phipps, Mr. Raymond, and Mr. Lutwyche, were heard as Council; and the Petitions and Repreſentations, relating to the Incapacity of the Eldeſt Sons of Scotch Peers, to repreſent the Commons of Scotland in the Parliament of Great Britain, were again read. The Subſtance, both of the Council's Arguments, and of thoſe Repreſentations, was, "That by an Act of the Scotch Parliament, in- "tituled, An Act for ſettling the Manner of Electing Sixteen Peers, and Forty five Com-

Arguments againſt it.

A. D. 1708.

" moners, to repreſent Scotland in the Parliament of Great Britain; which Act was " ratified, by the Act for Uniting the Two Kingdoms; it is declared, That none ſhall be " capable to elect, or be elected, to repreſent a Shire, or Burgh in the Parliament of Great " Britain, for this Part of the United Kingdom, except ſuch as are now capable to elect, " or be elected, as Commiſſioners for Shires or Burghs to the Parliament of Scotland: " That from hence it evidently followed, that the Scotch Peers Eldeſt Sons could not " ſit in the Houſe of Commons of Great Britain, unleſs it did appear, that they " were capable to be elected, and to ſit as Members of the Parliament of Scotland: " But, as a Proof of the contrary, ſeveral Inſtances were alledged, of their being " always rejected by the Parliament of Scotland; and, in particular, the Viſcount " Turbat's Eldeſt Son, in the Year 1685, and the Lord Levingſton, in the Year 1689. " That the Fundamental Law of the Union had moſt expreſly reſerv'd to the Com- " mons of Scotland, that valuable Privilege of Electing their Repreſentatives in " Parliament, from among the beſt qualified Gentlemen of their own Number " and State, in the ſame manner as they had formerly uſed to do. That in elect- " ing Members of Parliament, the Choice of the Electors ought to be made as free " as is poſſible, from the Influence either of Bribes or Threats; and, in Juſtice, " ſhould only be determin'd by the Honeſty and Candor of the Perſon to be cho- " ſen: That his Character be ſuch, as promiſes a faithful Diſcharge of ſo great a " Truſt; and that his Inclination be accompanied with a ſufficient Capacity to " ſerve the particular Intereſt of the Conſtituents, as well as the general Intereſt of " his Country: But that few in Scotland could be ſuppoſed to be in a Condition to " maintain this Character; the Commons there being ſurrounded with a numerous " and powerful Peerage, who, like ſo many Sovereigns, judge and determine with- " in their reſpective Bounds, in Criminal as well as Civil Matters; being veſted " with vaſt Superiorities, and hereditary Juriſdictions; ſo that no Commoner, hold- " ing any Part of his Lands of a Peer, or indeed being in his Neighbourhood, could " be reckon'd at Liberty to make a free Election of his Repreſentative: And " therefore the Commons of Scotland, whereof the Majority of their Parliament " conſiſted, had invincible Arguments for preſerving entire to themſelves that ne- " ceſſary Privilege of excluding their Peers Eldeſt Sons from being Members of " that Houſe.———That if the Parliament of Scotland, which conſiſted of Peers " and Commoners, ſitting together in the ſame Houſe, enjoying the ſame Liberty " of Speech, and the ſame common Privileges and judicative Capacity, being alſo " reſtricted to the ſame Rules and Forms, had ſo many weighty Reaſons for exclu- " ding their Peers Eldeſt Sons; how many more Arguments, of greater Moment, " might be urg'd in the Houſe of Commons of Great Britain, who were a ſeparate " and diſtinct Houſe from the Peers; enjoying by themſelves ſo many valuable " Privileges and Immunities, which could not be incroach'd upon, or ſubjected to a " Houſe of Peers, without endangering the whole Conſtitution of the Houſe of " Commons? And, in the laſt Place, That England and Scotland being now united, " and their Intereſts inſeparably join'd, it ought to be a Maxim with all true Bri- " tons, That the Liberty of the Commons of Scotland, will always be an Advan- " tage to thoſe of England; and that the Slavery of the firſt, cannot fail ending in " the Deſtruction of the latter.

The Peers of Scotland's Eldeſt Sons declar'd incapable to ſit in the Houſe of Commons, Dec. 3.

Little was offer'd on the other ſide againſt theſe Arguments; ſo that the Queſtion being put, That the Eldeſt Sons of the Peers of Scotland were capable, by the Laws of Scotland, at the Time of the Union, to elect, or be elected as Commiſſioners of Shires or Burghs to the Parliament of Scotland; and therefore, by the Treaty of Union, were capable to elect, or be elected, to repreſent any Shire or Burgh in Scotland, to ſit in the Houſe of Commons of Great Britain? It paſs'd in the Negative, to the great Surprize of ſome Courtiers, who had ſtirr'd very much for the Affirmative; and the no leſs Mortification of the Scotch Peers, whoſe Eldeſt Sons had thereby a degrading Mark of Diſtinction put upon them from the Engliſh. Three * Days after,

" the Commons order'd their Speaker to iſſue out his Warrants to the Clerk of " the Crown, to make out new Writs for the electing Commiſſioners to ſerve in " this preſent Parliament, for the Shire of Aberdeen, in the Room of William Lord " Haddo; and for the Shire of Linlithgow, in the Room of James Lord Johnſtown; " who being Eldeſt Sons of Peers of Scotland, were declared to be incapable to ſit in " that Houſe.

The Thanks of the Commons given to Maj. Gen. Webb, † Dec. 13.

The Injury done to Major-General Webb, after his Victory at Wynendale, having made a great Noiſe, the Leaders of the Tory Party readily laid hold on this Opportunity, both to do him Juſtice, and, at the ſame Time, to expoſe the Partiality of thoſe in Power. Hereupon Sir Thomas Hanmer made † a Motion, " That the " Thanks of the Houſe be given to Major-General Webb, for the great and eminent " Services perform'd by him, at the Battel of Wynendale;" which was unanimouſly carried carried in the Affirmative. Major-General Webb being then in the Houſe, Mr. Speaker gave him, in his Place, the Thanks of the Houſe accordingly; which he acknowledged in a very handſom and modeſt Speech, ſaying, among other Things, That he valued the Honour done him by the Commons, above the greateſt Rewards. This gave Mr. (William) Bromley occaſion to ſay, "That he did not diſapprove the Cuſtom, which, of late Years, had been introduced, of returning Thanks to ſuch "Generals as had perform'd eminent Services; eſpecially when they receiv'd thoſe "Compliments as modeſtly as the worthy Member to whom they were now given, "had done. But 'twas with Grief, he obſerv'd, That a certain Commander, on "whom, not only the Thanks of both Houſes, but alſo great Rewards had been be-"ſtow'd, appear'd yet to be unſatisfy'd." This Reflection was viſibly levell'd at the Duke of Marlborough; and, to this purpoſe, we may take Notice, that about this very Time, Two ſhrewd Pieces were printed, and induſtriouſly ſpread about, the one intituled, A Speech of Caius Memmius, Tribune to the People of Rome. Tranſlated from Salluſt: The other intituled, An Account of a Dream at † Harwich: Wherein, under Alluſions, and Fictions, the Pride, Avarice, and revengeful Spirit, of ſome Men in Power, were ſeverely laſh'd and expoſed.

Libels againſt the Miniſtry.

On the 15th of December, the Commons, in a grand Committee, reſolv'd to grant Twelve Hundred and Twenty Thouſand Pounds, for augmenting the Troops in Flanders; which Vote was agreed to the next Day; but, on the 17th, it was reſolv'd to addreſs the Queen, "That ſhe would uſe her utmoſt Endeavours, with "her Allies, to engage them to furniſh their Proportion towards that Augmentation. By this Time, the Commons were enter'd upon an Affair, in which the Court Party met with notable Oppoſition: On the 16th of December, the Houſe proceeded to the hearing the Merits of the Election for the City of Weſtminſter; And after the Council on both Sides were heard, and ſeveral Witneſſes examin'd, in relation to the Proceedings of Mr. John Huggins, the high Bailiff of Weſtminſter, who preſided at the ſaid Election, it was reſolv'd, "That the ſaid Mr. Huggins had, in Defiance "of the Law, arbitrarily and illegally refuſed to tender the Oaths of Abjuration, "when required ſo to do, and thereby was guilty of a high Crime and Miſde-"meanor:" For which Offence, he was order'd to be committed to her Majeſty's Priſon of Newgate. This Vote, however, through the Negligence of ſeveral of the Whig-Members, who went out of the Houſe, was carried only by one Voice: And when, Two Days after, the Commons proceeded to the farther Hearing of the Merits of that Election, the Council on both Sides having been heard, and ſeveral Witneſſes examin'd, it was reſolv'd, That Thomas Medlycott, Eſq; who had been put up by the Tory-Party, was duly elected for the ſaid City, by a Majority of One Hundred Fifty Four Voices, againſt One Hundred Forty Two: About Five and Thirty Members, who, in all probability, would have given their Votes for Sir Henry Dutton Colt, the Petitioner, againſt Mr. Medlycott, being gone out of the Houſe, moſt of them upon an Opinion, that the further Conſideration of that intricate Election, would have been put off to the next Monday. It is alſo to be obſerv'd, That Sir Henry Dutton Colt having denied the writing of a Letter to Mr. Huggins, whereby he conſented to a Scrutiny of the Poll, and which a Member of the Houſe averr'd to be his Hand; his Prevarication loſt him a great many Voices.

Jan. 12. The Lords take into Consideration the State of the Nation, in Relation to the intended Invasion.

The Lord Haversham's Speech.

My LORDS,

I Have a greater Respect for your Lordships, than to keep you in any Expectation; there is nothing, I can say, I am sure, can in the least deserve it.

My LORDS,

When the Campaign was at an End, when a Land-Tax lay on your Table, when the due Respect had been paid to that Sorrow, in which we all bear a Part, when the Session of Parliament was so greatly advanc'd, and a long Recess so near at Hand, I thought it might be a proper Time to put your Lordships in mind of the late intended Invasion; and the rather, because an Inquiry into this, seem'd to me, to be what the Nation expected, and what I have observ'd, even those who have differ'd in their Thoughts about it, yet unanimously desir'd; but above all, because it is a Matter, in which not only our Welfare and Happiness, but our very Being it self, the Security of the Nation, and the Safety of her Majesty, are so highly concern'd.

I did endeavour to prove the first of these to your Lordships, when I made you this Motion, by Reasons taken from the flourishing of your Trade, the Support of your Credit, the Nature of your Victories, and the quieting of Men's Minds at Home; and shall now, with your Lordships Leave, say a few Words to the other Part, and shew your Lordships how much this Inquiry concerns us all, in Point of Safety.

Some, perhaps, may think, that after such wonderful Successes Abroad, as we have had the last Year, after the French King has lost Lisle, and been forc'd to abandon Ghent and Bruges; to speak to your Lordships of any Danger at Home, or to have the least Apprehension from such a baffled Enemy, were to expose the Weakness of a Man's own Judgment: But I shall endeavour to shew your Lordships, how dangerous a Mistake this is, from Example, Reason, and Authority: The Three best Arguments I know, to prove any Truth.

My LORDS,

Were not Hockstet and Ramellies as Glorious Victories, and as great Mortifications to the French King, as our taking of Lisle, or reducing of Ghent? And yet, after such entire Victories, such repeated Defeats, had not this haughty Neighbour of ours, the Presumption, the last Year, to attempt the setting a Pretender upon her Majesty's Throne? And can we reasonably promise our selves any Security, when he is in a Condition to give us the least Disturbance? And, is he not in a Condition? Is he not as near us this Year, as he was last, notwithstanding all our Conquests? That's an Advantage our Allies only have by them, to have their Enemy at a greater Distance. Has he not as many Ships, and as many Friends too, except One, as I mention'd to your Lordships? Nay, My Lords, has he not as great Encouragement to renew his Attempt, as he had to undertake it? as I shall presently shew your Lordships. From whence, then, does our great Security arise? Besides, My Lords, what is yet further, every body is convinc'd, by the inconsiderable Force, the small Number of Ships and Troops, the French King employ'd, in the last Attempt upon us the the last Year, That his chief Dependance was upon the Incouragement and Promises of Assistance he had from hence; and yet, notwithstanding all our Inquiries, is it not as great a Mystery to this Day, as it was, who the Persons amongst us are, who were concern'd in this black and unnatural Treason?

'Tis true, My Lords, several Persons, of great Quality and Interest, have been taken up, upon Suspicion; brought from their own Homes, and Country, whilst others, thereby, have had the Opportunity of supplanting them in their Interest there: 'Tis not for me to say, whether this proceeded from Ill-will to some, or Favour to others; but has any Thing been proved against them? Does not the Bail that has been given for them, and their sitting in this House, convince every body of their Innocency? So that this way of Proceeding, has rather proved vexatious to the Subject, than any real Security to the Government, and I hope will make it, for the future, set a greater Value upon our Habeas Corpus Act, which was the Right of every Subject before, by Common Law.

A. D. 1708.

Nor have the Characters, that have been made of Perſons who ought to be ſuſpected, had any better Effect. There are Two I ſhall mention to your Lordſhips, and I think greater Miſtakes than both of them, can ſcarce be put into Words: The Firſt is, That Men of arbitrary Principles, are the Perſons who ought to be ſuſpected. This Argument has been very much labour'd, and great Pains have been taken, to perſuade the World from Men's Practices in former Reigns, that they are ſtill of arbitrary Principles, and from thence 'tis inferr'd, they ought to be ſuſpected. I ſhall not trouble your Lordſhips, or my ſelf, at preſent, to ſhew the Weakneſs of this Argument: I will take it as they, that have made Uſe of it, would have it, for a ſtrong and undeniable Conſequence, and then I aſk, What, My Lords, is the Nation to ſuſpect any who are at the Head of your Miniſtry, of giving this Encouragement to your Enemies? For I will be bold to ſay, in this Place, if this be a good Argument, it is as ſtrong againſt ſome who are at the Head of your Miniſtry, as againſt any Man I know of who is out of it.

There is another Character of ſuſpicious Perſons, which I cannot but take Notice of, becauſe, I take it to be very fatal to the Freedom of Parliament, for it is impoſſible for any Man to take Notice, either in Parliament, or to the Queen her ſelf, of any wrong Meaſures, or falſe Steps, in the Management of publick Affairs, without ſo far reflecting on the Miniſtry: And if this is to be interpreted as an artful Method of leſſening her Majeſty's juſt Eſteem of her Miniſters; and thoſe who do ſo, are to be mark'd as dangerous to the Safety of her Majeſty's Perſon, and the preſent Eſtabliſhment, I am afraid her Majeſty, for the future, may have ſeveral Things conceal'd from her, which might be for her Service to know; and one of the great Ends and Uſes of Parliaments, the redreſſing of Grievances, and keeping great Men in Awe, will quickly be laid aſide. But, My Lords, we have a very viſible Inſtance, that this is a great Miſtake; for do we not ſee thoſe Lords, who, the laſt Year, eſpouſed the Caſe and Complaint of the Merchants in Parliament, now advanced * to the greateſt Places of Truſt and Power? So that theſe Two Methods have rather ſhewed us, who ought not, than who are to be ſuſpected.

* Meaning the Lord Wharton, and ſome others.

My LORDS,

I ſhall now take Leave to ſay one Word to the poſitive Part, and if we would apply an Obſervation of the Schools to the Caſe in Hand, I believe it would ſet this Matter in the trueſt Light. They tell us, there is a great Difference to be made between a Diviſion and a Diſtinction, but every Diſtinction is not a Diviſion; the Soul and the Body are diſtinct, but they are not divided, for that would be a State of Death. It is ſo in this Caſe, the Papiſt, Jacobite, and Nonjuror, are a Party of Men divided from the reſt of the Nation; they want that Forma informans, as they call it, that vital Spirit of Love and Loyalty, that animates every good Subject: But as for others, however they may be diſtinguiſh'd, and differ among themſelves in their Notions, relating either to Eccleſiaſtical or Civil Policy, yet they ſeem all to have the ſame Regard and Concern for the Honour and Safety of her Majeſty and Government. I would not be miſunderſtood, as if I did not think ſome, of all Perſuaſions may be faulty: I know, that even among the Apoſtles themſelves, He that bore the Bag, † prov'd the Traytor: My Meaning only is, That thoſe who have taken the Teſt to the Government, may, at leaſt, pretend to an equal Degree of your Charity, with thoſe who never yet own'd it; and it is theſe Perſons who never ſwore to the Government, that her Majeſty directly points at, in her laſt Parliament: For after ſhe has been pleas'd to ſay, It is certain we muſt be all inexcuſable, if we do not take Warning from this Attempt, to compleat what may be neceſſary for our Security at Home, and the diſcouraging the like for the future; to which, by God's Bleſſing, there ſhall be nothing wanting on my Part: In the following Paragraph ſhe is pleaſed to add, I muſt recommend to you, at your Return into your ſeveral Counties, to uſe your utmoſt Care and Diligence, in putting the Laws in Execution againſt Papiſts, and all others diſaffected to my Government, and in making them pay towards the publick Taxes, to the full of what the Law requires from them: Nothing being more reaſonable, than that they, who by their Principles and Practices, incourage (if not actually foment) ſuch Diſturbances ſhould doubly contribute to the Charge of quieting them; and ſecuring the Kingdom's Peace; and ſhould know themſelves, on all ſuch Occaſions, to be reſponſible for the many Inconveniencies that may enſue. Which Two Paragraphs will, I hope, juſtify what I have taken Notice of to your Lordſhips.

† This was plainly levell'd againſt the Lord Treaſurer.

My LORDS,

I do not forget the Obligation I am under to a noble Lord, and therefore ſhall now ſhew your Lordſhips, That notwithſtanding the French King failed in his late Attempt upon us, yet he has more Incouragement to renew it, than he had at firſt, to undertake it: And, My Lords, I think a great deal that I have ſaid to your Lordſhips, proves it. Is it not a great Incouragement to him, to ſee, notwithſtanding ſo many Friends that he has amongſt us, all the Methods that we have hitherto hitherto taken, have ſignify'd ſo little to diſcover any of them? And that thoſe Methods have not been taken, that might, perhaps, have ſignified more towards a Diſcovery, and have been made uſe of at other Times; I mean, Promiſes both of Pardon and Reward. Does he not ſee, how eaſily he can ſhake the main Pillar that ſupports all our Commerce? I mean, the BANK. Was it not in danger of breaking? And has it recover'd the Blow to this Day, that he gave it? For, My Lords, if Men cannot be Maſters of their own Money, which they truſt with any body, upon no other Reaſon, but that they may command it again in any Caſe of Neceſſity, without being look'd upon as ſuſpected Perſons; I believe, Men will be ſo wiſe, as to ſecure both their Money, and themſelves too, from any ſuch Danger.

There is another Encouragement which he has, My Lords; and that is, the weak and defenceleſs Condition of Scotland; the Deficiency of Force, and ill State of your Gariſons there, at the Time of the Invaſion, notwithſtanding the certain Accounts and Knowledge we had of it. What, My Lords, will no Alarm awaken us? Will the Scales never fall off from our Eyes? Muſt ſome Men's mighty Services, prevent our looking into others great Miſcarriages? And muſt this poor Nation be eternally ſawn aſunder, by the Struggles of contending Parties? My Lords, I hope it is not thought, that I have been thus urgent with your Lordſhips, from any Fears of perſonal Danger: I am content to take my Lot with others, as it falls, whatever it be: But I am afraid, leſt her Majeſty ſhould be dethron'd, whilſt ſhe lives; and that the Deſtruction of Popery and Slavery, whilſt we are ſpeaking Peace to our ſelves, ſhould ſuddenly, like a Flood, break in upon us?

My LORDS,

If your Lordſhips have any Intention of looking into this Matter, I ſhall make your Lordſhips a Motion, which, perhaps, may give us ſome Light: It is, indeed, a complex one, and rather a Schedule of Papers: It is, That her Majeſty will pleaſe to order, that there may be laid before this Houſe, At what Time her Majeſty received the firſt Account of the intended Invaſion? What Orders were thereupon iſſued into Scotland, with relation either to the Forces, or Gariſons? What was the Number of Regular Troops and Forces there, at the Time of this Intelligence? What was the State of the Gariſons there, at that Time? What Augmentation was made, or Forces ſent thither, from the Time of the Intelligence, to the Time of the Invaſion? What Orders have been given with relation to the Gariſons, and when, both before and ſince the Invaſion, from the Time of the firſt Intelligence?

The Lord Haverſham having ended his Speech, ſeveral other Peers ſpoke, tho' with more Temper, to the ſame Purpoſe: Whereupon the Houſe appointed a Committee, to inquire into the State of the Nation, in relation to the intended Invaſion; and order'd an Addreſs to be preſented to her Majeſty, to deſire that the Papers concerning that Affair, might be laid before them; which was readily comply'd with.

Papers relating to the Invaſion call'd for.

On the 22d of January, the Commons reſolved to addreſs the Queen, for a Liſt of the Ships of War that were employ'd upon Account of the late intended Invaſion, under the Command of Vice-Admiral Byng, and Rear-Admiral Baker; and of the Names of the Captains who were employ'd in that Expedition; and what Journals had been deliver'd in, relating to the ſame: As alſo for ſuch Treaties, or Agreements as had been made, in relation to Contributions: Which Papers were laid before the Houſe, according to their Deſire. The * ſame Day, the Houſe unanimouſly reſolved, "That the Commons of Great Britain being truly ſenſible, not only of the great "and eminent Services perform'd by his Grace the Duke of Marlborough the laſt "ſucceſsful Campaign, ſo much to the Honour of Great Britain, and Advantage of "all Europe; but alſo of the indefatigable Zeal he perſever'd in, for the Service of "the Common Cauſe abroad, while he might, with Reaſon, expect to be received with "all the Marks of Honour and Satisfaction at home; did, with a juſt Regard to "his glorious Actions, return him the Thanks of the Houſe; and order'd their "Speaker to tranſmit the ſame to his Grace." This being done accordingly; the Duke of Marlborough return'd an Anſwer, dated from Bruſſels, February the 13th, 1709, importing, "That he was extreamly ſenſible of the great Honour which "the Houſe of Commons had done him, in the Vote the Speaker had been pleaſed "to tranſmit to him by their Order: That nothing could give him more Satisfa-"ction, than to find the Services he endeavour'd to do the Queen and his Country, "ſo acceptable to the Houſe of Commons: And he begg'd the Favour of the "Speaker to aſſure them, he ſhould never think any Pains or Perſeverance too "great, if he might (by God's Bleſſing) be inſtrumental in procuring a ſafe and "honourable Peace, for her Majeſty, and his Fellow-Subjects.

This Motion being ſeconded, and back'd by ſeveral young Members, was unanimouſly carried, and a Committee was appointed to draw up the ſaid Addreſs; which being agreed to, and the Lords having given * their Concurrence to the ſame, was, on the 28th of January, preſented to her Majeſty, by the Lord Chancellor, on the Part of the Houſe of Peers, and by the Speaker of the Commons, on the Part of their Houſe. The Queen was not a little ſurpriz'd at this unexpected Addreſs; to which ſhe return'd an Anſwer, importing, That the frequent Marks of Duty and Affection, ſhe had received from both Houſes of Parliament, muſt needs be very acceptable to her: That the Proviſion ſhe had made for the Proteſtant Succeſſion, would always be a Proof, how much ſhe had at Heart the future Happineſs of the Kingdom: But that the Subject of this Addreſs was of ſuch a Nature, that ſhe was perſwaded they did not expect a particular Anſwer. Nevertheleſs, the Commons, the next † Day, voted their Thanks to her Majeſty, for her Anſwer.

The Commons being extreamly puzzled about Ways and Means to raiſe the Supply, readily * accepted of this Propoſal; and addreſs'd the Queen, That ſhe would be pleaſed to iſſue a Commiſſion under the Great Seal, for taking Subſcriptions for enlarging the Stock of the Bank of England: Which Commiſſion being iſſued out accordingly, and the Books for taking in Subſcriptions open'd (at Mercers-Hall, London) on the 22d of February, about Nine of the Clock in the Morning; the whole

A pregnant and memorable Inſtance this, both of the great Wealth of the Britiſh Nation, and of their Affection to, and entire Confidence in the preſent Settlement! It is obſervable, that, at this very Juncture, the French Court had a Project for Erecting a Royal Bank, for Circulating their Mint Bills; but that Deſign was ſoon found to be impracticable, by reaſon of the great Scarcity of Money in that Kingdom, and the almoſt entire Ruin of their publick Credit; which, undoubtedly, was one of the ſtrongeſt Motives that inclin'd the French Court to entertain ſerious Thoughts of Peace.

On the other hand, Mr. Wortley Montague made, the ſame Day, a Motion, for the bringing in a Bill for the naturalizing Foreign Proteſtants; and, in a ſet Speech, ſhew'd the Advantages that would accrue to the Nation by ſuch an Act: Alledging, amongſt other Particulars, "the Example of the King of Pruſſia, "who had not only invited, but furniſh'd Abundance of French Refugees, with "Means to ſettle in his Dominions; whereby he had fertiliz'd an almoſt barren "Country, improved Trade, and vaſtly increas'd his Revenue:" Adding, "That "if Foreigners were induced to ſettle under a Deſpotick Government, where they "found Protection and Encouragement; they would, undoubtedly, be the more in"clin'd to bring their Effects, and (at leaſt) their Induſtry into Great Britain, "where they would ſhare the Privileges of a Free Nation." Mr. Compton, and ſeveral other Members, back'd Mr. Wortley Montague's Motion: And Mr. Campion ſaying only, "That if ſuch a Bill were brought in, there ought to be a Clauſe inſert"ed in it, for obliging ſuch Foreigners, as ſhould be willing to enjoy the Be"nefit of that Law, to receive the Sacrament according to the Uſage of the Church "of England;" the Houſe order'd the ſaid Bill to be brought in, and appointed Mr. Wortley Montague, Mr. Gale, the Lord William Powlet, Mr. Nevil, Sir Joſeph Jekyll, Sir Peter King, Mr. Lowndes, Mr. Attorney-General, and Mr. Sollicitor-General, to prepare and bring in the ſame.

Addreſs for an Account of Penſions paid to Members of Parliament.

* Feb. 5.

Mr. Wortley Montague moves for a general Naturalization.

A Bill for naturalizing foreign Proteſtants order'd to be brought in.

Whilſt this Bill was depending, a Paper was printed, and induſtriouſly diſperſed, importing, 1ſt, "That the Conflux of Aliens, as would probably be the Effect of "ſuch a Law, might prove dangerous to our Conſtitution; for theſe would owe Alle"giance to their reſpective Princes, and retain a Fondneſs for their native Coun"tries; and therefore whenſoever a War ſhould break out, might prove ſo many "Spies and Enemies. And beſides, under this Pretence, the profeſs'd Enemies of our "Eſtabliſh'd Church and Religion, might flock over, with Deſign to effect its O"verthrow. 2dly, That a General Naturalization might (undoubtedly) ſpread an "univerſal Diſguſt and Jealouſy throughout the Nation; particularly, in thoſe Cities "and Towns that are Places of Manufacture: There having been many Com"plaints and Commotions in London, and elſewhere, on Occaſion of Foreigners. "3dly, That the Deſign of inviting Multitudes of Aliens to ſettle here, might "prove, in Time, a further Miſchief; for they would not only be capable of Vo"ting at Elections, but alſo of being choſen Members of Parliament; have Admiſ"ſion into Places of Truſt and Authority; which, in Proceſs of Time, might en-

Reaſons againſt a general Naturalization.

A. D. 1708/9.

" danger our ancient Polity and Government, and, by frequent Intermarriages, go " a great way to blot out and extinguiſh the Engliſh Race. 4thly, That anciently, " Naturalizations by Act of Parliament were ſeldom or never made, but upon ſpecial " Reaſons, and particular Occaſions: And tho' ſome Acts have given Encouragement " to Foreign Merchants, and Weavers, to ſettle here; it was, when our Weaving- " Trade, and other Manufactures, were inconſiderable, to the Advancement they " have ſince attain'd: And that, from the Settlement of the great Cuſtoms in Ed- " ward the Firſt's Time, in all Acts of Parliament for Subſidies ſince paſs'd, Ali- " ens had always been charged with an Increaſe of Cuſtoms above Natives, and a " Diſcrimination kept up between them; as was particularly remark'd by the " Learned Chief-Juſtice Hale, in a Tract againſt a general Naturalization. 5thly, " That it was more than probable, that the greateſt Number that would come over, " would be of poor People; which would be of fatal Conſequence with reſpect to the ma- " ny poor induſtrious Families, who would thereby be reduc'd to the uttermoſt " Streights: It being evident, that no Hands were wanted to carry on our Manu- " factures, from the great Quantities that lay on Hand, their Cheapneſs, and the " Lowneſs of Wages now given. What then would be the Effect of ſuch an Ad- " dition? For theſe Aliens would altogether ſettle in Places of Manufacture; there " being no Inſtances of any of the late Refugees betaking themſelves to the Spade, " Plough, or Flail. And it would be a very great Charge to thoſe Pariſhes wherein " they ſhould ſettle: There being now great Numbers of French, who for want of " Work were reliev'd, and, in great meaſure, maintain'd by the Queen's Bounty, " and Charity of their Churches, and other well-diſpoſed Perſons, who, when natu- " ralized, would have recourſe to their own reſpective Pariſhes for an Allowance. " 6thly, That a general Naturalization would, in effect, defeat the Patent of the Act " of Navigation, which had always been eſteem'd to conduce to the Intereſt of the " Nation, by the Incouragement and Increaſe of Engliſh Mariners, and Advance of " Trade. 7thly; That hereby, in Proceſs of Time, Aliens would be advanc'd in " Riches, and her Majeſty's Subjects impoveriſh'd: For thoſe beneficial Trades, Buy- " ing and Selling by Commiſſions, Remittances, and Exchanges of Money, would, " in great meaſure, be engroſs'd by Foreigners, by reaſon of their many Friends " and Relations abroad. About the ſame Time, the City of London having * petition'd the Commons, that they might be heard by their Council againſt the ſaid Bill; and their Requeſt being granted, their Lawyers † chiefly inſiſted on the XIth of the before-mention'd Reaſons; but upon Examination it was found, that the Duties of Package and Scavage did not, of late, yield above Twenty Pounds per Annum, moſt of the Foreign Merchants being already naturaliz'd. The Majority of the Houſe eaſily diſcern'd the Captiouſneſs of the other popular Arguments; being throughly convinc'd, both by their own Obſervation, and the Reaſons alledg'd, both within and without the Walls, That (as the Preamble of the Bill ſet forth) the Increaſe of People, is a Means of advancing the Wealth and Strength of a Nation: Which Maxim, the Fundamental of ſound Politicks, was abundantly verified, not only in Pruſſia, Holland, and other Proteſtant Countries, which had vaſtly increas'd in Riches, by the French Refugees ſettling there; but principally in Great Britain, where, by the Induſtry of the ſaid Refugees, ſeveral new Manufactures had been ſet up, and others improv'd, to the great Advancement of Trade, and the total turning the Balance thereof, to the Prejudice of France, and Benefit of this Nation. "That beſides the Improvement "of Commerce, the French Refugees had greatly contributed towards the Support "of the Revolution Settlement, by putting the beſt Part of their own Subſtance, and "of their Friends and Relations Abroad, into the publick Funds: (Of which they "had a freſh Inſtance, in their ſubſcribing near Five Hundred Thouſand Pounds "into the Bank of England.) Inſomuch that, by a modeſt Computation, the Re-"fugees were reckon'd to have above Two Millions Sterling in the Government. "That as they could not be ſuppos'd to have brought one half of that "Money into England, ſo it was Prudence to divert the Thoughts they might have "upon the Concluſion of the War, of carrying their vaſt Gains Abroad, (which "would very much leſſen the current Caſh and Credit of Great Britain,) by "granting them the Advantages and Privileges enjoy'd by her Majeſty's Natural-"born Subjects; which would not only engage them to ſettle here, but likewiſe "bring over ſuch of their Friends and Relations, as might hope to inherit their "Eſtates: That the French Refugees had, at all Times, in their ſeveral Stations "and Capacities, given ſignal Proofs of their Love for our happy Conſtitution, and "of their Zeal and Affection for the Government: And, in particular, ſuch of "them as had Military Employments, which they had diſcharg'd, both in the late "and preſent War, with diſtinguiſhing Bravery and Conduct. That this War had "already conſum'd ſuch a vaſt Number of Men, that it was highly neceſſary to ſup-"ply that Loſs, by inviting Foreigners to come over, whether the War continued, "which would ſtill increaſe the Scarcity of Men; or whether it was drawing to a "Period, in which Caſe, a great Number of Hands would be requiſite to carry on "the Manufactures. And, in ſhort, that all the Objections againſt a Naturalization, "were grounded upon this falſe Suppoſition, That Foreigners would ever continue, and "be look'd upon as ſuch: Which was ſufficiently confuted by paſt and daily Expe-"rience." Fpon the whole Matter, it was reſolv'd, That the ſaid Bill be committed to a Committee of the whole Houſe, who were impower'd to receive a Clauſe, for preſerving the Rights of the City of London: Which was accordingly inſerted in it, but afterwards left out, upon a juſt Conſideration, That moſt of the French Proteſtant Merchants ſettled in the ſaid City, being already naturaliz'd by private Bills, were thereby exempted from paying the Duties of Package and Scavage; and that the Jews, Foreign Papiſts, and other Traders, who could not enjoy the Benefit of this Act, were ſufficient to anſwer the Yearly Sum at which the ſaid Duties had been farm'd out. On the laſt Day of February, a Motion was made, and the Queſtion put, That it be alſo an Inſtruction to the Committee of the whole Houſe, to continue the ſame Proviſion as was made by the Statute of King James the Firſt, Cap. 11. which being carried in the Negative, the Commons, in a Grand Committee, went through the ſaid Bill; and Two Days ‖ after, order'd it to be engroſs'd. This Bill being paſs'd the Houſe of Commons, and ſent up to the Lords, the City of London follow'd it thither, and were there alſo heard by their Council, but with no better Succeſs; for the ſame Reaſons that had ſway'd the Commons.

ſince the Commencement of the preſent WAR, and what Proceſs had iſſued againſt ſuch as had not made up their Accounts.

On Friday, the 25th of February, the Lord Haverſham open'd in the Houſe of Lords, the Account of the Scotch Invaſion, in the following Speech.

The Lord Haverſham opens the Account of the Scotch Invaſion in the Houſe of Lords, Feb. 25.

My LORDS,

THE Temper of this Houſe, with Relation to your Inquiry into the intended Invaſion, ſince your Addreſs to her Majeſty to have the Papers laid before you, and ſince they have been upon your Table, is ſo very viſible, I need not take Notice of it, but ought rather to aſk Forgiveneſs for my ſelf, that I ſhould dare ſo much as to mention that Matter once more to your Lordſhips. Nor ſhould I do it, were it not from an abſolute Neceſſity and Juſtice which I think is due to my ſelf, and thoſe Lords who did me the Honour to ſecond the Motion I made, for addreſſing her Majeſty for theſe Papers: For to me, it ſeems too much like Fear, or Guilt, to ſit down tamely under any Reflection a Man has in his Power to wipe off; and there are ſome which will, perhaps, hereafter be reproached with. One is, that thoſe Lords who made you this Motion, never ſo much as look'd into the Papers they call'd for; or have thought on, or mention'd that Matter ſince; perhaps they will ſay ſo too, that they never intended it ſhould come to any thing; that it was only a Cover to hide ſome Deſign they had under it; nay, I do not know but they may go ſo far, as to ſay, that, under hand, they were trying how an Act of Grace would reliſh, ſhould ſuch a Thing be offer'd? I know my ſelf ſo innocent, as in our preſent Circumſtances, I ſhould not give my Conſent to it, for I ſhall always think, that when Horſes are Skittiſh, Vicious and Headſtrong, let whoſo will be upon their Back, it is fit they ſhould never be without a good ſtrong Curb in their Mouth: And as to theſe Papers, My Lords, I have look'd into them, and thoſe who have done ſo, cannot, in my Opinion, but think of them: But that your Lordſhips may not have my Word for this, I will, with your Lordſhips Leave, take Notice of ſome Particulars that are in them: and that you may be certain of the Truth of what I obſerve, I beg your Clerks may read, for Vouchers, the Papers themſelves, as they ſhall be call'd for.

It will not, I preſume, be denied me, that upon the 23d of February, Mr. Boyle receiv'd certain Intelligence, that the intended Armament at Dunkirk was deſign'd for Scotland; there had been ſeveral Advices before, of great Preparations making, and by the great Quantity of Fire-Arms, it was judg'd to be for ſome Land Deſign. The States were apprehenſive, and acquainted her Majeſty, by their Miniſter, with it; and Scotland had been in ſeveral Intelligences named, but I do not find there was a certain Account, 'till that of the 23d of February, to Mr. Boyle.

The Queen, in her Letter of the 25th of February, to the Council of Scotland, thinks it neceſſary to acquaint them with it, and that ſhe does expect they ſhould do their utmoſt for the Protection of her Subjects, and Preſervation of the publick Peace: That nothing, on her Part ſhould be wanting: That ſhe had given Orders, that ſome of her Troops in Flanders ſhould be ready to embark, in Caſe the Embarkation at Dunkirk ſhould go on: And that her Troops in England and Ireland were ſo diſpoſed, as to give what Aſſiſtance might be neceſſary; And in the mean Time authorizes and impowers them, the Privy-Council, to give ſuch Orders as were proper, to put her Forces. Forts and Gariſons there, in the beſt Order.

This then being allow'd, the Firſt Queſtion is, What Number of Forces, effective regular Troops, I mean, were in Scotland, at this Time, that is, the 23d, or 25th of February, 1708? I can't but obſerve to your Lordſhips, that there has been a great deal of Care taken, to conceal this from us, although this very Account was particularly aſk'd for by your Addreſs; yet in all that great Bundle, there is not one Paper from whence we can learn the Number: I was therefore forced to get the beſt Light and Intelligence I could, elſewhere, and have very good Authority for what I am going to ſay, and do affirm to your Lordſhips, that the regular Forces in Scotland, upon the 25th of February, 1708, were not above One Thouſand Five Hundred Men. If I am miſtaken, I hope ſome Lord here will ſet me right, and take upon him to ſay what the real Number was at that Time.

And ſince there was but One Thouſand Five Hundred Men, it is certain that was not a Number or Strength that could be thought, by any Man, ſufficient to ſecure and protect the Kingdom, againſt the Invaſion that threatned it; and the Ferment that was then in the Nation, was ſuch, that I do not find they durſt ſo much as truſt their Militia with their own Defence. We are, therefore, in the next Place to conſider, what additional Strength, or Augmentation, theſe handful of Men had, or what Aſſiſtance, either from the Forces from Oſtend, or thoſe from Ireland, or Engliſh Troops from hence?

As to Augmentations or Additions, I find there was little or nothing done, as to that Part: The Parliament, indeed, had, on the 20th of December, 1707, raiſed the Eſtabliſhment of the Forces in Scotland, from Two Thouſand Eight Hundred Thirty Four, to Five Thouſand Nine Hundred Thirty Two; but it appears by a Letter from the Earl of Leven, to the Earl of Mar, of the 7th of March, that little Notice had, as yet, been taken, of what the Parliament had done; for in that Letter to the Earl of Mar, he intreats him again to mind the Eſtabliſhment, and let him know, if he ſhall give Encouragement to any who ſhould be willing to take Arms to join them, and ſays further, he hoped, at leaſt, that ſo much of the Levy-Money as is due ſince the 24th of December, will be given now; for that would buy ſome Horſes, and Levy ſome Men: So that by this Letter it appears, there was no Money given to Levy Men, or increaſe the Forces in Scotland, though there was Three Thouſand Six Hundred Men wanting at that Time, and had been ſo, ever ſince the Parliament had voted the Eſtabliſhment in December: And though our Danger, at that Time, from the want of them, was ſo very great and evident, which ſeems very aſtoniſhing. Nor does it appear that any Directions, or Money for this or any other Service, 'till the Invaſion was over, was order'd here 'till the 12th of March; and then, indeed, on the 13th, the Earl of Mar writes from hence to the Earl of Leven, That my Lord Treaſurer had order'd the People of the Cuſtoms and Exciſe, to anſwer the Earl of Leven with Money for Proviſions, and other neceſſary Charges; and further ſays, That my Lord Marlborough told him, that very Morning, which was the 13th, that the Scotch Eſtabliſhment would be ended that Day; he knows not how they have made it, or if they have alter'd any Thing that we are concern'd with St. John, or if any Thing be omitted, but he hoped they have not.

to

'Tis very true, her Majeſty, in her Second Letter of the 8th of March, to the Council of Scotland, recommends to them to give preſent Directions to put her Forts, Gariſons, and Magazines there, in a good Poſture of Defence, and ſays, That what ſhall be expended towards theſe Ends by their Warrants, ſhall be repaid; for which ſhe has already given Orders. What thoſe Orders were, or to whom given, is not to be found among the Papers; but it is very evident, that there was no Order for one Farthing of Money, to anſwer either the Orders of the Council, or the Earl of Leven to the neceſſary Charges out of any Branch of the Revenue, or otherwiſe; for in a Letter of the Earl of Leven to the Earl of Mar, of the 13th of March, he has theſe Words, which will likewiſe ſhew the Condition of the Nation at that Time: My Lord, ſays he, I leave it to your Lordſhip to conſider my Circumſtances: Here I am, not one Farthing of Money to provide Proviſion, or for Contingencies, or Intelligence, none OF THE COMMISSIONS yet ſent down, few Troops, and thoſe almoſt naked; it vexes me ſadly to think I muſt retire towards Berwick, if the French land on this Side the Firth. And that you may not have his Lordſhip's ſingle Word for it, the Lord Advocate confirms very much the Truth of this, in his Letter of the 11th of March, to the Earl of Mar; for after he had ſaid, that he was order'd to lay before her Majeſty the inclos'd Information for the Caſtle of Edinburgh, and a particular Account of what it wants, to put it in Caſe of Defence; and alſo the Caſtles of Sterling, Dumberton, and Blackneſs, to ſhew their preſent Condition, and Want they are in, and that he had formerly ſent a Memorial of Mr. Slezer's for a Train of Artillery; all which he hopes will be confirm'd: He adds, I believe, ſays he, there was never a Country more deſtitute, and defenceleſs, than we are; nor have we ſo much as a Treaſury, or any Money for incident Charges; ſo that I muſt again, by the Council's Order, lay theſe Things before your Lordſhip; and that, at leaſt, ſome Order may be given, whereby neceſſary Expences may be defray'd. And the Earl of Mar's Letter of the 13th, from hence is the firſt Account we have of any Money that was order'd for Scotland: By all which it plainly appears, that notwithſtanding the Orders the Queen mentions in her Letter, of the 8th of March, the Council had not a Shilling for neceſſary Expences on the 11th; nay, not ſo much as one Penny order'd 'till the 13th; and as to the Eſtabliſhment, notwithſtanding all the preſſing Inſtances, that was not ſettled 'till after the Invaſion, as appears by the Earl of Mar's Letters of the 12th and 13th of March.

This, My Lords, is the true State, as appears from the Papers themſelves given in, relating to the Force of that, I had almoſt ſaid, deſerted, but I may ſay, defenceleſs Nation; few Men, and thoſe almoſt naked, Three Thouſand Six Hundred Men wanting of the Eſtabliſhment, voted by Parliament for the Year 1708/9, near Three Months before; no Levy-Money, no Eſtabliſhment ſettled, no Commiſſion ſent down, not a Shilling order'd by the Miniſtry, out of any Branch of the Revenue, or otherwiſe, to the Privy-Council, or Earl of Leven, for neceſſary Expences, or to buy Proviſion, or for Contingencies or Intelligence, and all this, in a Time of the utmoſt Danger.

In the next Place, I ſhall ſhew your Lordſhips, when Scotland was in this defenceleſs Condition, what Aſſiſtance they had from Oſtend, England and Ireland. As to the Tranſports that were to come from Oſtend, though all the Diſpatch was made that could be made, they did not arrive at Tinmouth Bar, 'till Ten Days after the Enemy were ſeen upon the Scotch Coaſt; ſo that the Diſpute, if there had been any, would have been over, and the Enemy, in all human Probability, would have been Maſters both of Edinburgh, the Caſtle, and all that was in it, before they could come up to their Aſſiſtance. And the very Orders to (Rear-Admiral) Baker, are ſo extraordinary, a Man cannot but take Notice of it. For after that he is required and directed to make the beſt of his way to Tinmouth Bar, with her Majeſty's Ships under his Command, and the Tranſport Ships with Troops; which he brought with him from Oſtend, &c; there is a further Order in theſe Words, but in regard there are ſeveral diſmounted Troops on board the Tranſports, you are to ſend a Veſſel with them to Harwich, if you can conveniently, their Horſes being now in Eſſex; ſo that inſtead of taking the Horſes to Tinmouth, the diſmounted Troops are firſt to be ſent to Harwich, to their Horſes, and from thence to proceed to Scotland, which, one would think, were a very round about Way.

And as to our Troops from hence, which were to aſſiſt them, the ſeveral Regiments of Horſe, Dragoons, and Foot, had not their Orders to hold themſelves in a Readineſs to March, 'till the 11*th of* March. The next Day, Orders were given for them to augment, and on the 14*th, they were order'd to march* Northward, which was, certainly, too long a Delay, conſidering what a March it is from hence to Edinburgh; yet this was all the Readineſs they were in to aſſiſt them.

But there is one Thing, which is moſt amazing, and I muſt again deſire, if I am wrong in Fact, that ſome Lord here, who, I am ſure can, will ſet me right.

The Queen, as I ſhew'd to your Lordſhips, in her Letter of the 8*th of* March, which your Clerk juſt now read, told the Council of Scotland, our Troops from Ireland, which we mentioned in our laſt, are ready to imbark in Tranſport-Ships, provided in thoſe Places with all Neceſſaries for that Service. And yet, it does appear plainly, that there was no Tranſports provided at that Time here; nor were any Tranſport Ships order'd in Ireland; nay, the very Orders to provide Tranſports, were not given by my Lord Sunderland, 'till the 12*th of* March, here, nor by my Lord Lieutenant for Ireland, for the Troops to be in a Readineſs to be tranſported 'till the 13*th; and then my Lord* Sunderland ſends an Order to the Commiſſioners of Tranſports, telling them, That it is her Majeſty's Pleaſure, that they forthwith take up Shipping for the Tranſportation of Six Hundred Horſe, that are to embark at the White-Houſe, between Carrigfergus and Belfaſt: And 'tis left, ſays he, to your Diſcretion to hire theſe Ships, either at Whitehaven, Leverpool, or Cheſter, as you can do it with moſt Expedition and Conveniency. And upon the 13*th, his Lordſhip ſends another Letter, acquainting them,* That they are to provide aboard thoſe Ships, Hay and Oats, ſufficient to ſerve Six Hundred Horſe for a Fortnight, and as many Water-Caſks as may be neceſſary to carry Water: Particulars that were, it ſeems, forgot in the firſt Orders: And in an Extract of the Earl of Pembroke's Letter to the Lords Juſtices of Ireland, of the 13*th, he tells them,* I do not in the leaſt doubt, but that your Lordſhips will iſſue proper Orders for one Regiment of Horſe, and Two of Dragoons, to be provided with all Neceſſaries, ready to imbark, whenever there ſhall be Occaſion for them: And it is her Majeſty's Opinion, that the Regiments under the Command of Lieutenant-General Langſton, Major-General Echlyn, and Lord Tunbridge, ſhould be on this Service: And I am of Opinion, that it will be for the Service of the Queen, to have theſe Three Regiments move with all convenient Speed, and take their Quarters in and about Belfaſt, and Carrigfergus, that they may be in a Readineſs to imbark: I deſire your Lordſhips to give Directions to the proper Officers, to provide and get ready Hay, Oats and Water, for at leaſt a Fortnight.

And here, if we conſider that theſe Letters were dated the 12*th and* 13*th of* March, from hence, that they were to go to the Commiſſioners of Tranſports here, and to the Lords Juſtices in Ireland; that after theſe Tranſports were to be agreed for, and Hay, Oats, and Water to be provided, and the Three Regiments order'd to march, what Time this would take up? It ſeems very evident, that her Majeſty was not truly acquainted with the Danger ſhe was in; that ſhe thought theſe Things were in a Readineſs, which were not; and that the Orders ſhe had given had not been obſerved, as ſhe concluded they were; and in the laſt Place, that theſe Three Regiments muſt arrive in Scotland very late.

But there's one Thing more ſo very new, and without Precedent, that it cannot but be very aſtoniſhing; which is, that in the Earl of Leven's Inſtructions of the 4*th of* March, in that Part where he is order'd Ireland for Aſſiſtance, there is a Blank left, as to the Perſon to whom he is to write; the Words are theſe, You are, upon the firſt Appearance of any Squadron of French Ships upon the Coaſt, to ſend to Ireland, to advertiſe him thereof, who has Orders to ſend Troops to your Aſſiſtance; and yet, as was juſt now prov'd, both from my Lord Sunderland's Letter to the Commiſſioners of Tranſports, and from

from my Lord Lieutenant's to the Lords Juſtices, there was not ſo much as Orders given for any Tranſports here, 'till the 12th, not any ever in Ireland, nor were the Three Regiments directed to move, in order to embarking, till the 13th.

I confeſs, when I read this, I thought it was a Miſtake of the Tranſcriber, 'till I ſaw theſe Words in the Earl of Leven's own Letter of the 7th of March, to the Earl of Mar; I deſire you, ſays the Earl of Leven, to ſend down the Name of the Perſon I am to write to in Ireland, if there be Occaſion; and muſt ſtill intreat your Lordſhip, that Orders be ſent for ſome Horſe and Dragoons to imbark. And again, in his Letter of the 13th, where he has theſe Words to the Earl of Mar, he repeats the ſame Thing; Pray endeavour to get Orders ſent ſtraight to Ireland, for the Officers there to imbark, for you know I have no Perſon's Name to whom I ſhould write. This convinces me, beyond what any Man can ſay, that his Lordſhip did not know to whom to write; for ſure his Lordſhip would not repeatedly affirm, what was not Fact; and whoever conſiders that there was no Orders lodg'd any where for any Perſon from Ireland, upon Advice from the Earl of Leven, of the Appearance of the Enemy, to follow his Direction, and haſten to his Aſſiſtance; nor any Orders at all for Tranſports there; nor any Directions here for Tranſports, 'till the 12th, muſt, I think, be convinc'd, that this Blind in the Inſtructions did not happen by Chance, but was a premeditated and deſign'd Omiſſion.

I would not forget any Care that was taken, and therefore muſt take Notice, that on the 27th of February, there was a Hundred Barrels of Powder order'd to be ſent from Berwick to Edinburgh; but the Earl of Leven was not writ to about it, 'till the 2d of March, which was Four Days Delay. And the Order it ſelf was ſo very prepoſterous, I had almoſt ſaid ridiculous, (much like that of Baker's) that it had full as well have been omitted; for inſtead of ordering the Store-Keeper of Berwick immediately to carry a Hundred Barrels of Powder to Edinburgh, they ſend an Order to one Mr. James Robb, Deputy Store-Keeper of Edinburgh, to get Carts, and go with them to Berwick, and take Three Hundred Barrels of Powder, and bring it to Edinburgh. And Mr. Grieue, Store-Keeper of Berwick, to the Board of the Ordnance, writes a Letter, dated March 10. $170\frac{7}{8}$, hither, that Robb was come to Berwick, and the Carts would be there that Night. And I appeal to a Lord, who cannot but know, whether the Powder came to Edinburgh before the Danger was paſt, and the French off our Coaſt? And whoever will reflect, that the Earl of Leven's Letter, dated here the 2d of March, was to go to Edinburgh; that then at Edinbugh, Carriages are to be taken up for the Powder, then they are to go to Berwick, and from Berwick they are to return again to Edinburgh, will find it could hardly be there ſooner.

The next Thing I ſhall take Notice of to your Lordſhips, is the State of the Gariſons. The Parliament had given, the 20th of December, the Sum of Thirteen Thouſand Ninety Eight Pounds, Seventeen Shillings and Two-pence, for the Gariſons of North-Britain, for the Year 1708. But I cannot but think your Lordſhips will be greatly ſurpriz'd, when you find in what a wretched Condition they were. I'll give your Lordſhips but an Inſtance or Two, the reſt are much in the ſame State.

(Here his Lordſhip gave an Account of the Condition of the Caſtle of Sterling, Blackneſs, and Dumbarton.)

I need not, My Lords, I think, make any Obſervations upon the Caſtles, after your Lordſhips have ſeen the wretched State of them; and therefore, in the laſt Place, ſhall only take Notice to your Lordſhips, that after the Invaſion was over, there were Eſtimates made, what it would coſt to put the Fortifications of Scotland in good Repair. The Total, as appears by your Schedule, amounts to Twenty Three Thouſand One Hundred Fifty Six Pounds, of which there could be but Three Thouſand Pounds laid out this Year; and yet there has been but poor One Thouſand Five Hundred Pounds expended upon that Service this Year, as appears by your Paper.

I will not trouble you farther: I think this Matter is now very plain before your Lordſhips; I could wiſh I had not ſaid one Word of Truth, in what I have ſaid to you; but the Vouchers ſhew it to be ſo; and if all this be true, 'tis a very ſtrange, a very ſurprizing, and a very aſtoniſhing Truth.

I ſhall not move any Thing to your Lordſhips farther, in this Matter: I believe there has been enough now ſaid, to juſtify thoſe Lords for moving this Inquiry, and ſhall add but this Word; That if there be no greater Care taken for the future, than there was at this Time, of ſuch imminent Danger, it will be the greateſt Miracle in the World, if, without a Miracle, the Pretender be not placed upon that Throne.

This is the Subſtance of what was obſerv'd by the Lord Haverſham; tho' there happen'd ſome Interlocutories between him and another Lord: And ſome Obſervations were made upon the Papers, as they were read. The Duke of Buckingham, and ſeveral other Peers, ſpoke to the ſame Purpoſe: Whereupon it was order'd, that that important Affair be conſider'd the Tueſday following, in a full Houſe. Accordingly, cordingly, on the Firſt Day of March, their Lordſhips debated the Dangers to which this Kingdom had been expoſed, by the Pretender's Attempt to land in Scotland with French Forces; and thereupon reſolved to addreſs her Majeſty, "That "ſhe would be pleas'd to cauſe an Account to be laid before them, of the Stores, "Gariſons, and Fortifications in that Part of the United Kingdom; as alſo of its "Revenues ſince the Union, and of the Diſtribution of the Equivalent-Money." At the ſame time, their Lordſhips order'd the Judges attending their Houſe, to bring in a Bill for improving the Union of the Two Kingdoms; to make the Laws concerning Treaſon, and the Tryals thereupon, the ſame throughout the United Kingdom, and to inſert therein a Clauſe for aboliſhing all Torture.

Debates and Reſolutions of the Houſe of Lords, relating to the Invaſion, and the Condition of Scotland, March 1.

The ſame Day, on Occaſion of ſome Overtures of Peace lately made abroad by France, and of the Arrival of the Duke of Marlborough; who, after a dangerous Paſſage from Oſtend, (where he embark'd the 25th of February) came to London the 1ſt of March, whilſt their Lordſhips were ſitting; and who was generally believ'd to have brought over with him the Propoſals made by the Enemy; my Lord Somers, Preſident of her Majeſty's Privy-Council, moved, "That an Ad-"dreſs be preſented to the Queen, That her Majeſty would be pleaſed to take care, "at the Concluſion of the War, that the French King might be obliged to own her "Majeſty's Title, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion; that her Majeſty's Allies might be "Guarantees of the ſame; and that the Pretender might be removed out of the "French Dominions:" Which Motion was unanimouſly approved, and a Committee thereupon appointed to draw up the ſaid Addreſs. This done, their Lordſhips order'd the Lord Chancellor to return the Thanks of their Houſe to his Grace the Duke of Marlborough, for the eminent Services perform'd by his Grace the laſt Campaign. Accordingly, his Grace having, the next Day, taken his Seat in the Houſe of Peers, the Lord Chancellor return'd him the Thanks of that Illuſtrious and Auguſt Aſſembly, in the following Words:

The Duke of Marlborough arrives at London, March 1.

Motion made by the Lord Somers, for an Addreſs againſt the Pretender, approved.

My Lord Duke of Marlborough,

"I Have the Honour to be again commanded by this Houſe, to give your Grace "their moſt hearty and unanimous Thanks, for the great and eminent Services "you have perform'd this laſt Campaign; particularly to her Majeſty and her Kingdoms, and in general, to all the Allies.

Thanks of the Houſe of Peers return'd to the D. of Marlborough, March 2.

"When I laſt obey'd the like Commands, I could not but infer from your Grace's "former Succeſſes, we had ſtill moſt reaſonable Expectations, you could not fail to "improve them.

"I beg Leave to congratulate your Grace, that the Obſervation then made, has "proved (as it was, indeed, intended) perfectly true.

"I hope, I ſhall not be thought to exceed my preſent Commiſſion, if, being thus "led to contemplate the mighty Things your Grace has done for us, I cannot "conclude without acknowledging, with all Gratitude, the Providence of GOD, in "raiſing you up to be an Inſtrument of ſo much Good, in ſo critical a Juncture, "when it was ſo much wanted.

To this Compliment, his Grace made the following Anſwer:

My LORDS,

"I Hope, you will do me the Juſtice to believe, there are very few Things could "give me more Satisfaction, than the favourable Approbation of my Service by "this Houſe.

The Duke's Anſwer.

"And I beg Leave to aſſure your Lordſhips, it ſhall be the conſtant Endeavour "of my Life, to deſerve the Continuation of your good Opinion.

The ſame Day, the Lords ſent down their Addreſs to the Commons, for their Concurrence: Whereupon Mr. Secretary Boyle repreſented, "That the Britiſh Na-"tion having been at a vaſt Expence of Blood and Treaſure, for the Proſecution of "this neceſſary War, it was but juſt they ſhould reap ſome Benefit by the Peace: "And the Town of Dunkirk being a Neſt of Pirates, that infeſted the Ocean, and "did infinite Miſchief to Trade, he therefore moved, That the Demoliſhing of its "Fortifications and Harbour, be inſiſted upon in the Addreſs:" Which, with that Amendment, was unanimouſly approved, and carried back to their Lordſhips by Mr. Secretary Boyle. The Lord Chancellor, on the Part of the Peers, and the Speaker of the Commons, on the Part of the Commons, having attended the Queen with the ſaid Addreſs; her Majeſty told them, That ſhe was of the ſame Opinion with her Two Houſes of Parliament, in the ſeveral Particulars of that Addreſs; as ſhe had alſo been in all the other which they had made on the ſame Subject; aſſuring them, no Care ſhould be wanting on her Part, to attain the Ends they had deſired. On the 4th, 5th, 7th, and 8th of March, the Commons came to ſeveral Reſolutions on Motion made by Mr. Secretary Boyle, for demoliſhing Dunkirk, approved March 2.

Ways and Means to raiſe the Supply, particularly the yearly Fund to be ſettled, purſuant to the Propoſition of the Bank of England. A. D 1708.

Some Time before, a Bill had been brought into the Houſe of Commons, for the Exportation of Tobacco, and other Commodities and Manufactures of the Growth and Product of Great Britain; the Deſign of which was, to exchange Tobacco for French Wines: But the Portugueze Ambaſſador having, by a Memorial, repreſented to her Majeſty, and by Word of Mouth, to ſeveral Members without Doors, That ſuch a Bill was contrary to the Alliance between her Majeſty and the King his Maſter; and it being conſider'd, beſides, that ſuch an Exchange would redound to the Advantage of France, and to the Benefit of Five or Six Perſons in Great Britain only; after the Bill had been twice read, and committed to a Committee of the whole Houſe, the Queſtion was put, on the 9th of March, That the Houſe ſhould then reſolve it ſelf into the ſaid Committee? Which being carry'd in the Negative, the Bill was diſmiſs'd, by putting off the Conſideration of it for a Month: And, on the other hand, a Bill was order'd to be brought in, for the more effectual prohibiting the Importation of French Wines, and all other Commodities of the Growth and Product of France.

Bill for exchanging Tobacco for French Wines dropt; and a Bill order'd, prohibiting the Importation of French Commodities, March 9.

The next * Day, the Commons took into Conſideration the Papers relating to the deſign'd Invaſion of Scotland, and the Proceedings thereupon; and againſt the Lord Griffin, and others taken in Rebellion; and relating to the Perſons taken upon Suſpicion, as alſo to the Gariſons in Scotland: Whereupon the Houſe reſolved, "Firſt, That Orders were not iſſued for the marching of the Troops in England, "until the 14th Day of March, it being neceſſary for the Security of her Majeſty's "Perſon and Government, that the Troops in this Part of the Kingdom, ſhould "not march into Scotland, 'till there was certain Intelligence, that the Enemy in-"tended to Land in that Part of the united Kingdom: Secondly, That timely and "effectual Care was taken, by thoſe employ'd under her Majeſty, at the Time of "the intended Invaſion of Scotland, to diſappoint the Deſigns of her Majeſty's "Enemies, both at home and abroad; by fitting out a ſufficient Number of Men "of War, ordering a competent Number of Troops from Flanders, giving Directi-"ons for the Forces in Ireland to be ready for the Aſſiſtance of the Nation, and by "making the neceſſary and proper Diſpoſitions of the Forces in England." However, it was obſerved, by a Perſon who did * ſome Time after publiſh an Account of the Scotch Invaſion, as it was open'd by the Lord Haverſham, in the Houſe of Lords, on the 25th of February, 1708/9, (in the Speech before-mention'd); "That "the † ſame Papers being laid before the Houſe of Commons, purſuant to their "Addreſs, produc'd the like Obſervations there; and that the Scotch Gentlemen "concurr'd with the Engliſh, in blaming the Conduct of the Miniſtry, affirming it "was ſuch, as gave great Encouragement to the Enemies of the Government, "while its Friends look'd on their Country to be perfectly given up; which, they "ſaid, was their general Senſe. In the Houſe of Commons, (ſays the Author be-"fore-mention'd, for I only copy his Words) ſome Obſervations were alſo made upon "the Impriſoning many Perſons in Scotland at that Time; ſeveral Lords and Gen-"tlemen, of the beſt Quality and Eſtates, were apprehended and ſeized, by virtue "of Warrants ſent from hence, for Suſpicion of Treaſon, and treaſonable Practi-"ces: Tho' it does not appear, from the Papers, there was any Cauſe to ſuſpect "them; nor that any of their Countrymen (who were the propereſt Perſons to be "adviſed with on this Occaſion) were conſulted in it. For the Earl of Mar, in "his Letter to the Earl of Leven, March the 9th, writes, That he, with the Dukes "of Queenſberry and Montroſs, the Earls of Loudoun and Seafield, were ſummon'd "to the Cabinet; and were told there, That ſince both Houſes had, for ſecuring "ſuſpected Perſons, ſuſpended the Habeas Corpus Act, it was fit Perſons in Scotland "ſhould be apprehended: And a Liſt was read to them, which they took down in "Writing, and Warrants were ready drawn. This was certainly a very extraordi-"nary way of proceeding; and the more extraordinary, becauſe the greateſt Part "of the Lords and Gentlemen taken up by thoſe Warrants, had given undoubted "Teſtimonies, ever ſince the Revolution, (in which, ſome of them had been very "active and inſtrumental) of their Fidelity and good Affection to the Govern-"ment. They had taken all Oaths, that have been enjoin'd for its Security: They "had ſat in Parliament; and ſome of them had been in Offices and Imployments "of great Truſt, in the Reign of King William, and of her Majeſty. Others, un-"der the like Circumſtances, were taken up by Warrants, bearing date the 29th of "March, when the Danger was over; which made the Scotch Gentlemen very free "in declaring, that the taking them up could be for no other Reaſon, than to influ-"ence the approaching Elections to Parliament; and for their Diſaffection to the "Intereſts ſome Courtiers then promoted, rather than for their Diſaffection to her

There was, " indeed, ſome Evidence of High-Treaſon pretended againſt Five Gentlemen, ta- " ken up by Warrants from the Privy-Council of Scotland; but that, ſuch as the " Lord Advocate writes, neither he, nor the other Advocates employ'd for her Majeſty, " did think would convict them; and therefore he humbly offer'd it as their Opinion, that " it would be more for the Honour and Service of her Majeſty, and of her Government, " that they ſhould not be proſecuted. The Earl of Sunderland, in his Anſwer, ac- " quainted him, He had laid his Memorial before her Majeſty, who was well ſatisfied " with what he had done, in procuring Evidence againſt the Priſoners: And tho' poſſibly, " upon their Tryal, the Evidence might not be ſufficient to convict them by the Law of " Scotland, yet, conſidering all the Circumſtances of that Affair, and the Noiſe it had " made in the World, her Majeſty thought it abſolutely neceſſary for her Service, that it be " carry'd as far as it would bear. Accordingly, they were brought upon their " Tryals, and acquitted. That in the Clauſe for preventing, for the future, the Seizing, " Arreſting, or Impriſoning of publick Miniſters, it ſhould be made criminal to " offer them any Inſult, or ill Treatment. III. That their Equipages, Goods, and " other Effects, of what Nature ſoever, ought likewiſe to enjoy the ſame Pro- " tection with their Perſons and Servants; and not be ſeized, or ſtopt, on any " Pretence. IV. That their Houſes ought to be accounted and declared Sanctuaries; " and no Bailiffs, or other Officers of Juſtice, allow'd to enter the ſame. V. And " that Foreign Ambaſſadors, and other Miniſters, ought to enjoy the ſaid Privi- " leges, from their firſt coming into Great Britain, till they are out of her Ma- " jeſty's Dominions; even after they have had their Audience of Leave, as long " as they retain their Characters." The Subſtance of this Memorial being communicated to the Committee, to whom that Bill was referr'd, they inſerted the firſt Amendment in the Preamble, but did not think proper to mention the other Particulars: And Mr. Compton having, on the 12th of March, reported the ſeveral Amendments made to the Bill, the Houſe added a Clauſe, " That no Perſon ſhould " be proceeded againſt, for having arreſted the Servant of an Ambaſſador, or " publick Miniſter, by Virtue of this Act, unleſs the Name of ſuch Servant be " firſt regiſtred in the Office of one of the Principal Secretaries of State, and by " ſuch Secretary tranſmitted to the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex; who ſhall " hang up the ſame in ſome publick Place in their Offices, &c. And order'd the Bill to be engroſs'd. The Foreign Miniſters having alſo procur'd a Copy of this laſt Clauſe, held another Aſſembly at the Baron de Spanheim's Houſe; at which the Earl of Sunderland aſſiſting, they repreſented to him, " That the exacting Liſts of " Foreign Miniſters Servants, was a Thing unpractis'd in other Courts, and liable " to ſeveral Inconveniencies: And deſir'd beſides, That the Lord Chamberlain of " her Majeſty's Houſhold might be added to the Number of the Perſons appointed " by

On the 14th of March, the Commons, in a grand Committee, came to ſeveral Reſolutions in Favour of the Inhabitants of Nevis and St. Chriſtophers, who had ſuffer'd by the late Invaſion by the French; and, a few Days after *, reſolv'd to grant the Sum of One Hundred and Three Thouſand Two Hundred and Three Pounds, Thirteen Shillings and Four-pence, for the Uſe of ſuch Sufferers as ſhould reſettle, or cauſe to be reſettled in their Plantations in the ſaid Iſlands. Some Days before †, the Lords Commiſſioners, impower'd by the Queen, gave the Royal Aſſent to ſeveral publick and private Bills; and on the 24th of March, the Commons took into Conſideration the Report from the Committee, to whom it was referr'd, to examine the Accounts which had been laid before the Houſe, of what Ships had been employ'd as Cruizers, and Convoys, over and above the Ships for the Line of Battel, and for Convoys to remote Parts; and alſo the Eſtimate of the Debt of her Majeſty's Navy, as it ſtood on the Heads mention'd in the ſaid Eſtimate, the 30th of September, 1708, whereupon it was reſolv'd, " That an Addreſs be preſented to her
" Majeſty, that ſhe would be pleaſed to give Directions to the proper Officers, to

" ent. And, Ordered, That the Commiſſioners of the Navy do lay before this Houſe
" the Cauſes of the Increaſe of the Debt of the Navy: But no Anſwer was return'd to that Addreſs. On the 28th of March, the Lords ſent down to the Commons a Bill, Intituled, An Act for improving the Union of the Two Kingdoms, which having been Twice Read, was referr'd to a Commitee of the whole Houſe: And on the 5th of April, the Commons order'd, " That the ſaid Committee be impower'd to receive
" Clauſes, for aſcertaining what Offences ſhould be adjudg'd High-Treaſon, or Miſ-
" priſion of High-Treaſon; the Method of Proſecution and Tryal, and the For" feitures and Puniſhments of ſuch Offences, throughout the united Kingdom of " Great Britain, in ſuch Manner, as might be moſt conducive to the Security of her
" Majeſty's Perſon and Government, the Succeſſion, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, in the " Proteſtant Line, and for the Safety of the Subjects, and alſo for the attainting
" the Pretender." Then the Commons, in a grand Committee, took the ſaid Bill into Conſideration, which occaſion'd a warm Debate, the Scotch Members making ſeveral Speeches againſt the Clauſe for rendring their Countrymen, in Caſes of Treaſon, liable to the ſame Forfeitures as the Engliſh, contrary to the ancient Laws of Scotland: This Debate being put off 'till the 7th of the ſame Month, the Scotch Members, who were ſupported by the Tory Party, prevail'd ſo far, that ſeveral Amendments were made to the Bill, whereby the Nature of it was wholly chang'd: For inſtead of ſubjecting the Scotch to the Engliſh Laws concerning Treaſons, it was, on the contrary, provided, That no Attainder for Treaſon ſhould extend to the diſinheriting of any Heir, nor prejudice the Right or Title of any other, than the Offender, during his Life, throughout the united Kingdom: Which Amendment was, the next ‖ Day, reported, and agreed to by a Majority of One Hundred and Sixty Four Voices, againſt One Hundred and Twelve. The Bill thus alter'd, being ſent back to the Lords, their Lordſhips, who, in this Bill, had nothing in View, but to give a farther Security to the preſent Government, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, did, by the Lord Somers's wiſe Motion, allow the forementioned Amendment, in relation to Scotland, from the 1ſt of July, 1709; And in England only, after the Deceaſe of the pretended Prince of Wales, and at the end of Three Years, after the immediate Succeſſion to the Crown, upon the Demiſe of her Majeſty, ſhall take Effect, as the ſame ſtands limited, by ſeveral Acts of Parliament. On the 20th of April, the Lord Chief-Juſtice Holt, and Mr. Baron Lovell, carried a Meſſage from the Lords to the Commons, " That the Queen had been pleas'd to ſend to their Lordſhips a Bill, Intituled, An
" Act for the Queen's moſt Gracious, General, and Free Pardon, which their Lordſhips
" had humbly accepted, and paſs'd, and to which they deſir'd the Concurrence of
" the Commons:" Whereupon the latter read the ſaid Bill, paſs'd it, and ſent it back to the Lords by Mr. Sollicitor-General. But 'tis obſervable, that this Indulgence was not receiv'd with that univerſal Satisfaction, which uſually attends Bills of that Nature; the leaſt penetrating rightly perceiving, that it was chiefly intended to ſcreen ſome Men in Power from future Inquiries. The next ∴ Day, the Lords Commiſſioners, empower'd by the Queen, gave the Royal Aſſent to Twenty Two Publick, and One and Thirty Private Bills: And afterwards, a Speech of the Lord Commiſſioners was deliver'd to both Houſes by the Lord Chancellor, as followeth:

The Lords Commiſſioners Speech to both Houſes of Parliament.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

BEing now, by the Queen's Directions, to put an End to this Seſſion, we have it in Command from her Majeſty, to aſſure you, her Majeſty is extreamly ſenſible of the Zeal and Affection you have ſhown for her Service, and the Good of her People, and of the Prudence and Diſpatch with which you have compleated the important Buſineſs of this Seſſion.

The Vigor and Firmneſs of your Proceedings have already had a very good Effect on Affairs Abroad; and there is ground to Hope, that, by God's Bleſſing on her Majeſty's Endeavours, this will every Day appear more and more evident.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

We are to return you, in particular, her Majeſty's Thanks, for your having provided ſo timely, and effectually, the Supplies found neceſſary to the Proſecution of this War, with an Augmentation of thoſe Forces, which, in Conjunction with our Allies, have, by God's Aſſiſtance, procured us the preſent Advantages over the common Enemy.

Your Chearfulneſs in giving ſuch large Supplies, at this Juncture, and the ready Advances which have been made for their being effectual, with ſo little Burden to the People, ſhew, you perfectly underſtand how to make a right Uſe of our paſs'd Succeſſes, and that nothing is too difficult for ſo dutiful and affectionate Subjects, acting in Defence of ſo good a Cauſe.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

Her Majeſty, through the whole Courſe of her Reign, having been deſirous to ſhew all poſſible Inſtances of Goodneſs and Clemency to her Subjects, hath now, for the ſtrengthning the Union, and quieting the Minds of all her Subjects, throughout the united Kingdom, thought fit to grant them an Act of Grace, and free Pardon, in a more full and beneficial Manner, than hath been formerly uſed; not doubting but all her People will make a right Uſe of, and ſuitable Returns, on their Part, for ſo extraordinary an Indulgence.

Her Majeſty having alſo been graciouſly pleaſed to give the Royal Aſſent to the ſeveral Bills you have preſented during this Seſſion, commands us to obſerve to you on that Occaſion, that the Life and Benefit of all Laws, how wiſely ſoever they are framed, do chiefly conſiſt in a due and regular Execution of them; and therefore to exhort you, that when you return to your Countries, you would think it indiſpenſably your Duty, to ſet a good Example towards an impartial and ſteady Obſervation of the many good Laws which have been enacted, (eſpecially ſince the late Revolution) and which fall within your Province to execute. It being but too evident, that the Defect at preſent attending us, is not ſo much the want of new Laws, as the Neglect, and diſregarding thoſe already made.

The Parliament Prorogued.

After this, the Lord Chancellor declar'd, That it was her Majeſty's Royal Will and Pleaſure, that this Parliament ſhould be prorogued to the 19th Day of May next.

Great Froſt.

The Severity of the Winter Seaſon was very remarkable this Year: For it began to freeze the Night of Chriſtmas Day with great Violence, and not long after fell great Snows: Thoſe who compared the great Froſt in $168\frac{3}{4}$, with this, obſerv'd, That the firſt was generally a bright one, and continu'd upwards of Two Months, without Interruption; but the latter, moſtly dark, and with ſome Intervals, laſted a Month longer; during which, many Cattle, eſpecially Sheep, and Volatiles of the Air, periſh'd. The Thames was frozen over, and on the 3d of January, People began to erect Booths, and ſet up Tents on the Ice. It was alſo obſerv'd, that the Summer that ſucceeded the Froſt in $168\frac{3}{4}$, was exceeding Hot and Dry, affording in general, great Plenty of Things neceſſary for human Life; but this proved very near as comfortleſs as the Winter that preceded, by Reaſon of the Coldneſs and Moiſture of the Air, pouring almoſt continual Rains on the Earth, which, as it retarded the Maturity of its Fruits, ſo, in many Places, occaſion'd a thin Harveſt, and this a Scarcity and Dearth of Corn. The Great Froſt was general in Europe, but moſt ſeverely felt in France; where, in moſt Places, the Fruit-Trees were kill'd, and the Corn frozen in the Ground, which occaſion'd a dreadful Calamity and Deſolation in that Kingdom. One Thing more is worth Obſervation, That this Froſt was not near ſo ſevere in the North, as in the South Parts of Great Britain.

Audiences of the Venetian and Portugueze Miniſters.

On the 23d of January, Signior Cornaro, Ambaſſador in Ordinary from the Republick of Venice, had a private Audience of her Majeſty, to condole the Death of the Prince, and preſented a Letter, on that Occaſion, from the Senate. The ſame Day, Dom Louis D' Acunha, Envoy Extraordinary from the King of Portugal, had alſo a private Audience of her Majeſty, to condole the Death of his Royal Highneſs from his Maſter, who, as ſoon as he receiv'd the Notification, retir'd, for Four Days, from publick Buſineſs, not ſigning any Paper, according to the Rule of his his Court, and directing his Mourning to be as for a King of Great Britain. Four Days * after, Robert Lord Lexington, was ſworn of her Majeſty's Privy-Council; and Thomas Smith, Eſq; one of the Clerks in Extraordinary of the ſame. The Queen having been pleas'd, upon the Arrival of the Two young Muſcovite Princes, to diſtinguiſh them as near Relations to his Czariſh Majeſty, by giving Order for their being receiv'd and entertain'd at her Charge, and attended by her Officers: The ſaid Princes, to ſhew the grateful Senſe they had of her Majeſty's particular Favours to them, deſired to be admitted to an Audience, to which they were accordingly introduced by Mr. Secretary Boyle, on Sunday, the 23d of January. They made their Compliments to her Majeſty in Latin, expreſſing, with great Reſpect, the true Senſe of Gratitude with which they acknowledged, and ſhould always remember, the ſingular Marks of Kindneſs, which her Majeſty was pleaſed to heap upon them. And at the ſame Time, that they congratulated her Majeſty upon the ſignal Succeſs of her Victorious Arms, they wiſhed her a long and proſperous Continuation of the ſame. To which her Majeſty made Anſwer, in a moſt gracious Manner, That ſhe had ſo much Eſteem and Friendſhip for his Czariſh Majeſty, that ſhe could not but be very well pleaſed to ſee any ſo nearly related to him in her Kingdoms, and have an Opportunity of ſhowing her Kindneſs and Diſtinction to them. Moreover, her Majeſty thanked them for their Congratulations and good Wiſhes, and was pleaſed to ſay, ſhe would endeavour to make their Stay here as agreeable to them, as ſhe could. Beſides this Compliment paid to the Czar of Muſcovy, in order to ſooth his Reſentment of the Affront lately offer'd to his Ambaſſador, an Information was try'd at the Court of Queen's-Bench, Weſtminſter, the 14th of February, before the Lord Chief-Juſtice Holt; for the Queen, againſt Thomas Morton, Iſaac Spiltumb, Andrew Slan, Edward Young, and Ten others, for meeting, conſulting, and conſpiring to arreſt and impriſon that Miniſter, for which they were all found Guilty, (excepting Young) ſaving the ſpecial Matter of the Privilege of Ambaſſadors, to be argued before the Judges the next Term. There were preſent in Court, the Earl of Sunderland, Mr. Secretary Boyle, the Lord Haliſax, and ſeveral other Perſons of Quality. Some Days † before, the Queen in Council, was pleas'd to declare, "That the publick Buſineſs increaſing, her Majeſty had thought fit to appoint a Third Secretary of State of Great Britain; but "that her Majeſty intended, nevertheleſs, to continue the Foreign Affairs, for the "preſent, in the Courſe of Diſpatch they were now in." Thereupon James Duke of Queenſberry and Dover, was ſworn into that Office; and, at the ſame Time, John Duke of Argyle, was ſworn of her Majeſty's Privy-Council. The 13th of the ſame Month, the Marquis Viali, Envoy Extraordinary from the Republick of Genoa, had a private Audience; the next ‖ Day, the Baron Rantaan, Envoy Extraordinary from the King of Denmark, a publick one of her Majeſty, to condole the Death of his Royal Highneſs the Prince: And on the 3d of March, his Grace, the Duke of Marlborough, and John Duke of Roxburgh, were ſworn of her Majeſty's Privy-Council. Not long after, the Majors-General Cadogan, Mordaunt, and Palmes, were made Lieutenants-General; and ſeveral Brigadiers advanc'd to the Rank of Majors-General; particularly Brigadier Ogilby, who was appointed to ſerve in Portugal, in the Room of Major-General O-Farrel, deceas'd.

By this Time, an Affair of great Importance was in Agitation at the Hague. The French Court having, in the Year 1708, miſcarried in all their Projects; and their Finances being, in a manner exhauſted, they began to entertain very ſerious Thoughts of Peace. Hereupon, about the beginning of the Year 1709, they ſent the Preſident de Rouillé, to make private Overtures to the States-General, who, upon his Arrival at Antwerp, appointed Monſieur Buys, Penſionary of Amſterdam, and Monſieur Vander-Duſſen, Penſionary of Gouda, to have a Conference with him at Moerdyke. Upon the Report of what paſs'd in this Interview, their High-Mightineſſes permitted that French Miniſter to come to Woerden, a Place between Leyden and Utrecht, that he might be nearer at Hand for the intended Negotiation; and then the Deputies of the States had another Conference with him, wherein he made ſome looſe Offers and Propoſals towards a general Peace; which, however, he refus'd to deliver in Writing. The States-General, being ſhy of making any Steps in ſo important an Affair, without the Participation of their Allies, gave immediate Notice of theſe Advances to the Emperor, and Queen of Great Britain: Whereupon Prince Eugene, who, ſome ∴ Time before, was gone to Vienna, to give the Emperor a verbal Account of the laſt Campaign, and lay before him the Meaſures concerted for the next, return'd from thence to Bruſſels, on the 27th of March, N. S. with full Powers from his Imperial Majeſty; and on the 8th of April, came to the Hague, where the Duke of Marlborough arriv'd the next Day from England. Thoſe Two Princes, in a long Conference with the great Penſionary Heinſius, Meſſieurs Buys and Vander-Duſſen, and other Deputies of the States, debated the Overtures made on the Part of France, which being thought unſufficient to be the Ground of a Treaty of Peace, Orders were given for carrying on the warlike Preparations with all poſſible Diligence, in order to purſue the late Advantages with the utmoſt Vigor: The Duke of Marlborough, as the Report went, having ſaid on that Occaſion, That the Peace was to be treated of in France, the next Summer, by One Hundred and Fifty Thouſand Plenipotentiaries. The States Deputies having acquainted Monſieur Rouillé, That his Overtures were not ſatisfactory, he ſent to Verſailles for New Inſtructions; which did not a little puzzle the French Court: For, as on the one Hand, they were reſolved not to give up the whole Monarchy of Spain, which the Confederates inſiſted upon; ſo, on the other, the great Difficulties they labour'd under, which were much increas'd by the general Scarcity of Corn, and other Proviſions, occaſion'd by the extraordinary Severity of the laſt Winter, made it neceſſary for them to buoy up the ſinking Spirits of the People, with Hopes of a ſpeedy End of the War, thereby to ſuppreſs their loud, tumultuous Clamours for BREAD and PEACE. Hereupon Mr. Rouillé's Expreſs was immediately ſent back with Directions to that Miniſter, to amuſe the Allies with a ſeeming Compliance with all their Demands; but not to ſign any Thing that ſhould be drawn up in Writing. The Great Penſionary having, by Order of the States, made Report to the Duke of Marlborough, of what paſs'd at the Conference, which Meſſieurs Buys and Vander-Duſſen had with the French Miniſter, ſince the Return of the laſt Courier from France, his Grace reſolv'd to return to Great Britain, to inform the Queen of the Progreſs made in this weighty Negotiation: And, accordingly, his Grace embarking near the Brill, on the 30th of April, N. S. made Margate the next Night; and, on the 2d of May, arriv'd in London.

The Marquis de Torcy comes to the Hague, May 6. N. S.

In the mean Time, the French Court, to give their Artifices the greater Air of Sincerity, diſpatch'd to Holland the Marquis de Torcy, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. Upon his Arrival at the Hague, he went to pay a Viſit to the Great Penſionary, who told him, he could not confer with him, without Leave of the States; but their High-Mightineſſes having thought fit that the ſaid Penſionary, and the Deputies, who had been appointed to receive the Propoſals of Monſieur Rouillé, ſhould meet the Marquis, and hear what he had to offer: They had, accordingly, an Interview with him the next Day. The Reſult of it being communicated to the States of Holland, the great Penſionary acquainted that French Miniſter, that they could not return him any Anſwer, 'till they knew the Sentiments of the Queen of Great Britain, by the Return of the Duke of Marlborough, who, embarking at Margate, on the 15th of May, N. S. in the Morning, met with contrary Winds, and did not reach the Hague, 'till the 18th, in the Morning. The firſt Thing his Grace did, was to confer with Prince Eugene, who, Six Days before, arriv'd there from Bruſſels, whither he was gone to make the neceſſary Diſpoſitions for the opening of the Campaign; and upon his Return, in his Conferences with the great Penſionary, had the Satisfaction to receive new Aſſurances, That no private Conſiderations ſhould ever prevail with the States to ſeparate from the General Intereſt and Scope of the Grand Alliance.

The Duke of Marlborough, and the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, who went to Holland with his Grace, as Ambaſſador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the Queen of Great Britain, having given immediate Notice of their Arrival, to the Preſident of the States, and to the Grand Penſionary, thoſe Two Gentlemen went to confer with, and afterwards made their Report to the Aſſembly of the States-General. Towards the Evening, the Marquis de Torcy went alone to the Duke of Marlborough's Lodgings, and had a Conference of above Two Hours with his Grace, and the Lord Townſhend. The 19th, in the Morning, that French Miniſter paid another Viſit to the Duke of Marlborough, and both together went to Prince Eugene's Apartment, where they ſtaid ſome Time. In the Evening, thoſe Two Princes went to the Grand Penſionary, who acquainted them with the Reſolution of the States-General, not to accept the Offers made by the French Miniſters, or to take one Step farther, but in Concert with all the Allies. On the 20th, in the Morning, their Highneſſes, and the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, return'd the Viſit they had receiv'd from the Marquis de Torcy, who preſented to them the Preſident de Rouillé, who ſtill then had conferr'd with no other Miniſters, but Meſſieurs van Buys, and Vander-Duſſen.

The Marquis de Torcy play'd his Part very dextrouſly, and held out ſome Days upon half Promiſes, and faint Denials: But the Steadineſs and good Harmony with which Prince Eugene, the Duke of Marlborough, the Great Penſionary, and the other Confederate Miniſters, acted in this important Affair, put him off his Shifts and Changes. The French Miniſter carried the Amuſement ſo far, that the 20th, in the Morning, being appointed for a Conference, he went thither with Monſieur de Rouillé, and declared, that their Maſter conſented to the demoliſhing of Dunkirk; to to let the Prince of Wales withdraw out of his Dominions; and other Articles inſiſted on by the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries: As likewiſe, to renounce all Pretenſions to the Spaniſh Monarchy; and to yield ſuch Places, as ſhould be thought neceſſary for the Barrier demanded by the Dutch; as, Furnes, Ipres, Menin, Tournay, Liſle, Condé, and Maubeuge. With reſpect to the Empire, the French Miniſters offer'd to reſtore all Things, as they were ſettled by the Treaty of Ryſwick, and to demoliſh the Fortifications of Straſburgh: But the Allies inſiſting on ſome other Articles, namely, the Reſtitution of Upper and Lower Alſace to the Empire, Monſieur de Torcy declared, He had no Power to make any farther Conceſſions; broke up the Conference, and ſent to the Penſionary, to deſire Paſſes to return home. However, upon Second Thoughts, and, as they pretended, at the Deſire of Monſieur Petkum, Reſident of Holſtein, the French Miniſters conſented to put off their Departure: And on the 21ſt, Monſieur de Torcy went alone to the Great Penſionary, to agree about another Conference, which was held at Six a Clock in the Evening; and notwithſtanding the French Miniſters had declared the Day before, that they could not enlarge their Offers, they now propoſed to ſurrender Straſburgh, in its preſent Condition. The Allies not being ſatisfied with the Propoſals made in this Conference, another was appointed for the 22d in the Morning; which proved likewiſe unſucceſsful: Whereupon the French declar'd, that they were reſolved to go away. The better to perſwade their being in earneſt, they ſent again to the Great Penſionary for Paſſes, and took their Leave of Prince Eugene, the Duke of Marlborough, and the Miniſters of Neutral Princes; but the States having, the ſame Evening, ſent them their Paſſes, and the Great Penſionary intimated to them, by Order of their High Mightineſſes, that they were not hereafter to expect any Paſsport for their Return to the Hague; and conſidering, on the other hand, how unconcern'd the Miniſters of the Allies were at the Threats of their Departure, they were eaſily prevail'd with to ſtay, at the Deſire (as they ſtill pretended) of ſome Neutral Miniſters: And the better to colour the Matter, they * ſent an Expreſs to the Court of France, for new Inſtructions. The 23d, in the Morning, another Conference was held from Nine a Clock in the Morning till about Two in the Afternoon; wherein they begun to ſet down ſome Articles in Writing, and agreed to meet again about Six in the Evening. The ſame Afternoon, Count Zinzendorf, the Emperor's Plenipotentiary, arrived at the Hague; and went immediately with Monſieur Heems, the Imperial Miniſter, to pay a Viſit to Prince Eugene and the Duke of Marlborough; with whom, together with the Great Penſionary, Count Gallas, and the Lord Townſhend, the French Miniſters had another Conference, in relation to the Security of the Execution of the Points agreed upon: But tho' this Conference laſted from Six till Eleven of the Clock in the Evening, yet nothing was concluded in it. The 24th, in the Morning, the French Miniſters had another Interview with the Deputies of the States; who gave an Account of what paſs'd in it to the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene: And, the ſame Evening, there was another Meeting; wherein they reſumed the Debate relating to the Security of the Performance of the Articles agreed on, particularly the Evacuation of the Spaniſh Dominions. For this, the Allies demanded ſeveral cautionary Towns; but the French refuſed to give any, inſiſting, "That the Engagement "the Moſt Chriſtian King offer'd to enter into, to recal his Troops from Spain, "and his Promiſe to give no manner of Aſſiſtance to King Philip, was a ſuffi- "cient Security; ſince that Prince, being thus forſaken by his Grandfather, "would be obliged to quit Spain; and the rather, becauſe the Spaniards, in ſuch a "Caſe, would certainly declare for King Charles." This occaſion'd warm Debates; but at laſt it was agreed, That France ſhould deliver up ſome Places in the Netherlands, that were to be Part of the Barrier, before they enter'd upon the general Negotiations of Peace. On the 25th and 26th, there was no Interview with the French Miniſters; but the Duke of Marlbrough, Prince Eugene, the Lord Townſhend, and Count Zinzendorf, had ſeveral Conferences with the Great Penſionary, and the Deputies of the States; wherein they acquainted the new Imperial Plenipotentiary, with what had been tranſacted ſince the Beginning of this Negotiation, and agreed on the further Demands to be made to the French Miniſters. A Conference being held the 27th in the Morning, at which Count Zinzendorf aſſiſted for the firſt Time, thoſe Demands were communicated to Meſſieurs de Torcy and Rouillé, who deſir'd ſome Time to conſider of them: But the Duke of Marlborough having ſent 'em word, that he and Prince Eugene had determin'd to ſet out for Flanders within Two Days, they promis'd to return an Anſwer at Six in the Evening, in another Conference, which laſted till Two a Clock in the Morning. After many Diſputes, the French ſeem'd to comply with all the Preliminary Articles inſiſted on by the Confederates; which being order'd to be fairly drawn drawn in Writing, and afterwards examined, (in a Conference held the 28th, about Ten a Clock in the Morning) another Meeting was appointed in the Afternoon, in order to ſign them.

During the Courſe of this memorable Negotiation, the Generality were of Opinion, That the French, preſs'd by the Neceſſity of their Affairs, and the Hand of Heaven, (which viſibly lay heavy upon them) acted upon a ſincere Bottom: And their Candor appear'd to be the more real, when the Marquis de Torcy (a Perſon of a fair Character, and ſolid Judgment) was ſent into Holland, under the plauſible Pretext of being perfectly inſtructed in the ſecret Mind of the King his Maſter: So that it was the common Opinion, that Chriſtendom would ſoon be bleſs'd with univerſal Peace. But thoſe Politicians, who reflected on the preſent Conſtitution of France, and the ſteady Maxims on which their Monarch had ſo vaſtly enlarged his Dominions, could not be induc'd to believe, that his Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty would abandon his Grandſon; in which Opinion they were eaſily confirm'd; when they conſider'd, that while a French Miniſter in Holland ſeem'd to agree to the ſurrendring of the Spaniſh Monarchy, King Philip caus'd the Prince of Aſturias, his ‖ April 7. N. S. Son, to be ‖ ſolemnly acknowledged as preſumptive Heir to the Crown, by the Deputies of the Spaniſh Provinces. About the ſame Time, the French publiſh'd a Letter from King Philip to his Grandfather, importing, "That he neither repin'd "at, nor found fault with, his Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty's Thoughts of abandoning "him, conſidering the preſent Condition of his Affairs; and he would never forget "the Obligations his Majeſty had laid upon him, in making his utmoſt Efforts, to "ſettle and maintain him on the Throne of Spain: But that he deſired his Ma"jeſty, not to ſtipulate any Thing concerning him in any Treaty; being firmly "reſolv'd, as long as there remained one Spaniard faithful to him, rather to periſh, "than to relinquiſh a Monarchy to which he had ſo good a Title: Concluding, "That if his ill Fortune ſhould ever reduce him to the Neceſſity of leaving Spain, "he would imbark himſelf, with his Royal Conſort and Children, and retire ei"ther to Peru, or Mexico; from whence his Enemies would not find it an eaſy Mat"ter to drive him." On the other hand, "The French gave out, that their Mo"narch had order'd one of his Miniſters to notify to the Court of St. Germains, "That he might, perhaps, be obliged to deſire the (late) Queen of England, and "the Prince her Son, to withdraw from his Dominions; but that, to what Place "ſoever they ſhould retire, his Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty would ſtill continue to ſupport "them, and even increaſe the Subſidies he had conſtantly given them.

The Suſpicion many entertain'd, that the Negotiation at the Hague, was only a politick Amuſement on the Part of France, in order either to create Jealouſies and Diviſions among the Allies, or to make them remiſs in their warlike Preparations, whilſt the French carried on theirs with all poſſible Diligence: Or, if neither of theſe could be effected, to let the French Nation ſee, that 'twas none of their Monarch's Fault, if they did not yet enjoy the Bleſſings of Peace: This Suſpicion, I ſay, was not a little increas'd, when it was publickly known, that, after the Imperial, Britiſh, and Dutch Plenipotentiaries had ſign'd the Articles Preliminary, the French Miniſters refuſed to ſet their Hands to them, pretending they had no Directions to do it. However, to put ſtill a Gloſs upon the Matter, the Marquis de Torcy told the Allies, That he would immediately ſet out for Paris, to lay the whole Tranſaction before the Moſt Chriſtian King, and endeavour to procure his Ratification: With a Promiſe to Prince Eugene, That he would acquaint him with his Majeſty's Reſolution, by the 4th of the next Month. With this Compliment, he took his Leave of the Confederate Miniſters, and that very Afternoon left the Hague; where the Preſident de Rouillé, who open'd the firſt Scene of this Negotiation, was to continue ſome Time longer, in order to put off the Unravelling of the Play, as long as the Sagacity of the Spectators would allow. The whole French Legerdemain was ſoon after manifeſted: Tho' it muſt be own'd, that the Marquis de Torcy was punctual in his Promiſe to Prince Eugene; who having, on the 30th of May, ſet out for Bruſſels, received there (on the 4th of June) a Letter from that Miniſter, importing, "That his Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty having examin'd the Project of Peace, "found it impoſſible for him to accept it; and therefore had ſent Orders to the "Preſident de Rouillé, to notify the ſame to the Potentates engaged in this War; and "it was to be hop'd, that more favourable Times would preſent, for the eſtabliſhing "a Peace ſo neceſſary for all Europe, and, conſequently, ſo much deſir'd by eve"ry body.

The French Miniſters refuſe to ſign the Preliminaries.

The French King rejects the Preliminaries.

The Meſſenger who brought this Letter to Prince Eugene, arriv'd the next Morning at the Hague, where People were in the Height of Expectation of the French King's Ratification of the Preliminaries: But, to their great Diſappointment, the Preſident de Rouillé having, the † ſame Day, had a Conference, at the Great Penſionary's with

with the Imperial and Britiſh Plenipotentiaries and the Deputies of the States, he acquainted them, "That the moſt Chriſtian King could not ratify ſome Articles agreed "to in the Conferences held with Monſieur de Torcy, and concluded the 28th paſt; "and that in particular, he excepted againſt the 10th, 11th, 28th, 29th, and 37th. "That as to the 10th Article, his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty agreed to it, as far as it "concern'd the Poſſeſſion of Alſace, according to the literal Senſe of the Treaty of "Munſter; but inſiſted, that Landau ſhould be reſtor'd to him; and as an Equivalent, "offer'd Old Briſac, both which Places were yielded up to France by the ſaid Treaty "of Munſter. That the moſt Chriſtian King could not conſent to the demoliſhing "of Hunningen, New Briſac, and Fort Lewis; but agreed to all the other Part of the "11th Article. That the 28th, relating to the Places yielded to the Duke of Savoy, "was entirely excepted againſt, and referr'd to a farther Diſcuſſion. That his Ma"jeſty diſliked alſo the whole 29th Article, whereby the Emperor's Proceedings "againſt the Electors of Cologn and Bavaria were approv'd; but would have the "ſame referr'd to the Negotiations of a general Peace; with this Proviſo, that the "Upper Palatinate, and the Dignity annex'd thereto, ſhould not be confirm'd to the "Elector Palatine; and that the Intereſts of the Electors of Cologn and Bavaria ſhould "be ſettled in the Preliminaries. And in the laſt Place, That his moſt Chriſtian "Majeſty excepted againſt the 37th Article, whereby Two Months only were al"low'd for the delivering up of the Spaniſh Monarchy, which Term he would have "enlarg'd; but conſented to recall his own Troops from Spain within that Time." A. D. 1709.

Theſe Difficulties, ſtarted by the Court of France, having been communicated by Monſieur de Rouillé; Count Zinzendorf, the Duke of Marlborough, the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, and the Penſionary Heinſius, had, immediately after, a Conference among themſelves, wherein it was reſolv'd, That no Alterations could, or ought to be admitted in the Articles Preliminary, eſpecially in thoſe excepted againſt by France, which were the moſt eſſential: And, at the ſame time, it was agreed, to ſignify to Monſieur de Rouillé to depart in Four and Twenty Hours. But on the 6th of June (N. S.) in the Morning, that Miniſter made a Viſit to the Duke of Marlborough, and propos'd another Conference, which was held that Night, and in which nothing material was tranſacted, except, that the Allies declared to Monſieur de Rouillé, That they would not recede from any of the Articles agreed to; and if his Maſter did not think fit to comply therewith, the Allies would not think themſelves bound by the ſaid Articles, or reſtrain their Pretenſions to the Contents thereof after the 15th of that Month, the Time allow'd by the ſaid Articles. The French Miniſter anſwer'd, He had no Orders to make any farther Declaration; whereupon he receiv'd a Second Intimation, forthwith to depart the Hague, where Mr. Horatio Walpole, Secretary to the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries, returned that Evening, with the Queen of Great Britain's Ratification of the Preliminaries. The Great Penſionary having, on the 8th of June, (N. S.) reported to the Aſſembly of the States, Monſieur de Rouillé's Declaration, That his Maſter could not accept the Preliminaries, and excepted chiefly againſt thoſe before-mention'd, their High Mightineſſes conſider'd, That the ſaid Articles were concerted with the Marquis de Torcy and Monſieur de Rouillé; put into Writing with their Aſſent; and by the Marquis de Torcy himſelf carried to the King of France, in order to be ſigned and ratified; That they were actually ſigned on the Part of the Emperor, Great Britain, and Holland, and had been ratified by her Britannick Majeſty: And judging, that nothing ſhort of theſe Preliminaries could ſecure the General Peace, and prevent a dangerous, expenſive, and lingring War in Spain; they thereupon * came to a Reſolution, to proſecute the War with all poſſible Vigor; expecting and promiſing themſelves, that the High Allies would make the ſame Efforts on their Part. 'Tis, however, remarkable, that this Reſolution was, in great meaſure, owing to the powerful Sollicitations, and dextrous Management of the Duke of Marlborough; ſeveral Members of the States General being of Opinion, that ſome Expedient might have been found to qualify the Hardſhip, and yet attain the End of the 37th Article of the Preliminaries, which was the main Difficulty. And, indeed, that very Night, the Preſident de Rouillé being preſs'd to declare, whether he had any ſecret Orders tending to Peace, he owned, "That if the Allies would content themſelves with the 5th Article, in re"lation to Spain, without inſiſting on the others, relating to the delivering up that "Monarchy in Two Months, he thought his Maſter might be induced to depart from "the other Exceptions, about Alſace and the Duke of Savoy." But the Miniſters of the Allies did not think fit to recede from any one of the Articles that had been agreed on, to ſecure the Evacuation of Spain, and ſo the ſame Evening a Paſſport was ſent to Monſieur de Rouillé, for his ſafe Return home. Accordingly, on the 9th in the Morning, he ſet out from the Hague, to embark at Rotterdam for Antwerp, from whence he continued his Journey to Paris. The ſame Morning all the Miniſters of the High Allies being deſired to meet in a Congreſs, Monſieur Van-Eſſen, Preſident of of the ſecret Affairs, and the Great Penſionary, "communicated to them the Re- "ſolution of the States General before-mention'd; gave them a full Account of all "the Steps that had been made in the Negociations, particularly ſince the French "King had refus'd to agree to the Preliminaries; and deſired them to acquaint their "Principals with theſe unfair Proceedings of France, and exhort them to join their "beſt Efforts againſt an Enemy, who could never be brought to Reaſon, but by "Force." Count Zinzendorf took the Opportunity to tell the Deputies of the States, "That the Empire, the Emperor, and King Charles III. would, doubtleſs, expreſs "their Satisfaction for the great Firmneſs and Conſtancy their High Mightineſſes "had manifeſted in the Courſe of the Negotiations." The Duke of Marlborough gave the ſame Aſſurances on the part of the Queen of Great Britain; as did alſo the reſt of the Miniſters on the part of their reſpective Maſters; and all ſignify'd to the Great Penſioner, how much the High Allies were oblig'd to him, and ſatisfy'd with the Prudence and Wiſdom he had ſhewn in the Negotiations; which, contrary to the Expectation of the Enemy, would prove a new Cement to the Grand Alliance, and an Argument to convince the Allies, That the War was to be proſecuted, till France was reduc'd to the Neceſſity of ſubmitting to ſuch Terms as the Allies would preſcribe. The States of Holland and Weſt-Frieſland having met on the 13th, ratify'd the Preliminary Articles, concluded with the Miniſters of France, without Regard to their Maſter's having refus'd to ſign them: After which, the Aſſembly unanimouſly reſolv'd to carry on the War with the utmoſt Vigor; and the States General directed, that a ſecond Edict ſhould be publiſh'd, to prohibit the Tranſportation of Corn to the Enemy's Country. But while the Generality of People in Great Britain, Holland, and Germany, expreſs'd their Reſentment againſt the Inſincerity and inſidious Proceedings of France, that Court made a politick Uſe of the very Articles Preliminary, which were made publick in ſeveral Languages by the Allies: For, in order both to raiſe among the People an Indignation againſt thoſe exorbitant Demands, and encourage them to bear, with leſs Impatience, the Burden and Calamities of the War, the French King cauſed Circular † Letters to be written to all the Governors of his Provinces, the Archbiſhop of Paris, and other Prelates of France.

Mr. de Chamillard in Diſgrace.

The breaking off of the Negotiation of Peace was ſoon attended with the Diſgrace of Monſieur de Chamillard, the French King's prime Miniſter, and even with ſome Coldneſs towards Madam de Maintenon, who were both ſaid to have given larger Inſtructions to the Preſident Rouillé and the Marquis de Torcy, than either his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty intended, or were thought proper by the young Princes of the Blood. On the other hand, it is obſervable, that while the Terms of Peace were debating, both the French Court, and the Pope, were uſing all imaginable Endeavours to draw off the Duke of Savoy from the Grand Alliance; the Diſcovery of which was owing to his Royal Highneſs's Miniſter at the Hague, and came very opportunely to expoſe the Double-Dealing of the Court of France, who had the Modeſty to reject the very Article of the Preliminaries, by which the Allies ſtipulated a Barrier for the Duke of Savoy; and, at the ſame Time, were offering much greater Advantages to his Royal Highneſs, to induce him to leave the Peace of Europe to their Mercy: But theſe Artifices were defeated by the Penetration and Firmneſs of Prince Eugene and the Duke of Marlborough, who treated the Peace as they manag'd the War; and, by their cool Temper and open Conduct, baffled the Stratagems both of the French Miniſters and Generals. 'Tis certain that the French, who propoſed to divide the Allies, by ſetting on Foot a Negotiation of Peace, were themſelves caught in the Preliminaries; which were ſo wiſely contriv'd for the particular Satisfaction of each of the Confederates, and the common Security of them, that they became the more firmly united by this very Tranſaction.

Endeavours uſed by France to draw off the Duke of Savoy, inſufficient.

On the other hand, the High Allies, juſtly incens'd at the unfair Proceedings of France, reſolv'd to improve their late Advantages, by a vigorous Proſecution of the War. In order to that, the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene having aſſembled their Army, march'd towards the Enemy, then encamped in the Plain of Lens, under the Command of Marſhal de Villars; but finding them ſo advantagiouſly poſted, and their Camp ſo ſtrongly fortify'd, that it was impoſſible to attack them without infinite Diſadvantage and Hazard, the Confederate Generals reſolved to lay Siege to the important City of Tournay, the Conqueſt of which, notwithſtanding its ſtrong Fortifications, appeared the more eaſy, becauſe the French General, on the Approach of the Confederate Army, had, unadviſedly, very much weaken'd that Gariſon. On the 27th of June, N. S. the Place was inveſted. The Trenches were opened the Night between the 7th and 8th of July, and the Siege was proſecuted with ſo much Vigor, that on the 28th the Gariſon demanded to capitulate for the Town, which they ſurrender'd on the 30th.

The next Day, the Marquis de Surville, the French Governor, was entertain'd at Dinner by Prince Eugene; and in the Afternoon retired into the Citadel, which his Garison had already entred, to the Number of about Five Thousand Men. At the same Time, the Enemy's Sick and Wounded, to the Number of Eight Hundred, march'd out, to be conducted to Douay; and the Earl of Albemarle, who was appointed Governor of Tournay, took Possession of the Town. The Time agreed to, for evacuating the same, expiring that Night, the Allies began to work on the Approaches of the Citadel: Count Lottum continuing in the Command of his Attack, with Four Lieutenants Generals, Four Majors-General, as many Brigadiers-General, Thirty Battalions, and Ten Squadrons, including the Garison of the Town. On the 1st of August, about Six in the Evening, the French began the first Act of Hostility, and fired from the Citadel with Cannon and Small-shot, upon Count Lottum's Trenches, and Batteries; from whence they were immediately answer'd, and the Fire continu'd very hot on both Sides the whole Night. The same Day the Dispositions were made for a Second Attack; the New Lines of Circumvallation about the Citadel almost finish'd, and Orders given for levelling those about the Town. In the mean Time, the Marquis de Surville having propos'd to the Confederate Generals, the appointing of Two Persons, to treat about the Surrender of the Citadel, the Princes of Savoy and Marlborough nam'd the Sieur de Lalo, Brigadier in the British Troops; and the Marquis de Surville, the Marquis de Ravignan, a Brigadier in the French Service, who having conferr'd together, drew up and subscrib'd an Agreement for that Purpose. The * same Day the Marquis de Ravignan set out for the French Court, from whence he was to come back the 8th, with the King's Ratification: But on this Occasion, the French gave a fresh Instance of their Insincerity; and manifested to the World, that their Proposals for delivering up the Citadel of Tournay, were but an Artifice to gain Time, and, if possible, to amuse the Allies. For the King of France refus'd to ratify those Articles, unless, at the same Time, a general Cessation of Arms in the Netherlands, 'till the 5th of September, should be agreed on, which the Allies peremptorily rejected. Hereupon the Siege was carried on with all possible Vigor; and though the Confederate Troops met with great Difficulties in their Attacks, by reason of the vast Number of the Enemy's Mines, yet, on the 31st of August, the Garison beat the Chamade, desiring to Capitulate. Hostages being thereupon exchang'd on both Sides, Monsieur Dolet, and the Marquis de Ravignan, both Majors-General, and Four other Officers, came out of the Citadel, and Major-General Hondorff, with Five Officers more, on the Side of the Confederates, were sent thither. Monsieur Dolet, and his Company, were brought to the Earl of Albemarle's House, where the Duke of Marlborough, and the Prince of Savoy being met, to receive their Proposals, they deliver'd a Project of a Capitulation, consisting of Eleven Articles, to the Effect following; "First, That the Chapel should not be "made Use of, for the Exercise of any other Religion, but the Roman-Catholick. "Secondly, That the Marquis de Surville, Monsieur de Mesgrigney, and all the General "Officers, and others, should march out, with Arms and Baggage. Thirdly, That "the Commissaries of War, and other such like Officers, with their Clerks, Papers, &c. should be conducted along with the Garison. Fourthly, That they "should have Twelve Pieces of Cannon, and Six Mortars, with Ammunition for "Twenty Charges, and Horses and Waggons, and other Necessaries for that Purpose, to be furnish'd by the Besiegers. Fifthly, That the Garison should march "out, with the other usual Marks of Honour. Sixthly, That they should have Four "cover'd Waggons. Seventhly, That the Prisoners should be return'd on each Side, "and no Deserters stopp'd. Eighthly, That Waggons, Horses, and all Things requisite, should be furnished, for carrying the Garison, together with their Baggage. Ninthly, That the General Officers, and all others of the Garison, should "have Leave to remove their Effects, either in the Town or Citadel, in Two "Months after the Capitulation. Tenthly, That the Sick and Wounded should be left "in Tournay, to be taken Care of 'till their Recovery, and then sent away to the "nearest Towns in the French Dominions. Eleventhly, and Lastly, That the Hostages on both Sides should be return'd, after the Execution of the Capitulation." Monsieur Dolet, and the other French Hostages, having made these Offers, the Duke of Marlborough, and the Prince of Savoy, thought fit to insist on having the Garison Prisoners of War, as well for the Honour of the Arms of the Allies, as in Return for the French King's having refus'd to agree to the former Capitulation; whereupon the Hostages were re-exchanged. The Batteries of the Allies having begun to play again very warmly on the Citadel, the Earl of Albemarle came, the 2d of September, N. S. about Nine in the Evening, to the Confederate Camp at Orchies, to inform the Princes of Savoy and Marlborough, that soon after they left Tournay, that that very Morning, Monſieur de Surville had deſired Leave to ſpeak to his Lordſhip; and that having been in Conference with him, his Lordſhip had receiv'd his Propoſals for the Surrender of the Citadel, and deſired their Highneſſes Orders thereupon, with which the Earl return'd about Ten; and the next Morning, about break of Day, ſent Word back, that the Gariſon was at laſt willing to ſurrender upon ſuch Terms as ſhould be allow'd them. Hereupon their Highneſſes immediately came to Tournay, and ſign'd the Articles of Surrender with the Marquis de Surville, by which all the Officers and Soldiers were to retain only their Swords and Baggage, and leaving their Colours and Arms behind, were permitted to return to France, upon Condition that they ſhould not ſerve, until they were actually exchang'd againſt the like Number of Officers and Soldiers of the Allies; and thoſe whom the French ſurpriz'd at Varneton, in the beginning of the Campaign, were immediately to be ſent back. According to this Capitulation, the Gariſon deliver'd a Gate of the Citadel the 3d of September, in the Afternoon, and march'd out the 5th, to be conducted to Condé. Two Days before, (Sept. 3.) the Army under Prince Eugene, and that under the Duke of Marlborough, decamp'd from Orchies, paſs'd the Scheld, then joined in their March, and encamp'd the 4th at Brifoul; the Hereditary Prince of Heſſe Caſſel, who was detach'd the Third, in the Morning, with Four Thouſand Foot, and Sixty Squadrons, encamping at ſome Diſtance. The 5th, the Troops continu'd their March, notwithſtanding a violent Rain. The Prince of Heſſe paſs'd the Haiſne, in the Afternoon, and the Grand Army encamp'd at Sirault, within a League of that River. The 6th, in the Morning, the Army was again in Motion, and in the March, the Duke of Marlborough receiv'd Advice that the Prince of Heſſe having made the Diſpoſitions for attacking the French Lines, from the Haiſne to the Sambre, Three Regiments of the Enemy's Dragoons, had abandon'd the ſame. The French deſign'd, it ſeems, to defend thoſe Lines: For the Chevalier de Luxemburgh, with a great Detachment, arriv'd ſoon after, to ſuſtain the Regiments of Dragoons, and was follow'd by the Mareſchal de Villars, in Perſon; but ſeeing that their Troops had quitted that Poſt, they march'd back to Quievrain, whither the whole French Army march'd from their Lines behind the Scarpe. On the other Hand, the Prince of Heſſe having taken Poſſeſſion of the other Lines, encamp'd with his Right to Jenappe, and his Left to Trimiers, whereby Mons was in a manner block'd up; and the Army under the Duke of Marlborough, encamp'd at Havre; and that under Prince Eugene, at St. Denis. On the 7th of September, the Mareſchal de Boufflers arriv'd at the French Camp, and making his Compliment to the Mareſchal de Villars, told him, he came to ſerve him as his Aid de Camp. The ſame Day, about Noon, the Duke of Marlborough receiv'd Advice, that the French were marching to attack the Body, under the Command of the Prince of Heſſe, whereupon Orders were given to the Army to decamp from Havre, and leave their Baggage behind, and their Tents ſtanding. The Army having made a Halt on the Hills of Eelian, where the Prince of Heſſe had his Quarters, the Generals receiv'd there further Intelligence, that the French had not paſs'd the Defilées of Waſme, but were encamp'd between the Sern and Kievrain; whereupon the Confederate Army continued in that Camp the following Night, in order of Battel. The Duke of Marlborough being, at the ſame Time, inform'd, that the Gariſon of Mons conſiſted only of Nine weak Spaniſh, and Two Bavarian Battalions, beſides the Dragoons of Paſteur, his Grace conjectured, that Monſieur de Villars's chief Deſign, was to oblige the Confederates to draw all their Forces into the Plain, between Eelian and Frameries, that he might have an Opportunity to throw Reinforcements into Mons; to prevent which, his Grace ſent ſome Troops towards St. Guiſain. The 8th, Prince Eugene, and the Duke, ſpent the whole Day in viewing the Ground between the Two Armies; and the 9th, in the Morning, the French made a Motion, as if they would march towards Boſſu: But the Duke of Marlborough being advanc'd, with ſome other Generals, to take a narrow View of their Army, they ſoon perceiv'd that the Motion of the Enemy's Left, was only a Feint to cover the March of their Right; which filed off, at the ſame Time. The Duke, being unwilling to loſe a Minute's Time, order'd his Army to march by his Left; by which Motion the Two Armies came ſo near, a little after Two, that they Cannonaded one another 'till the Evening. They continued all the Night in the ſame Situation, the French being poſted behind the Woods of La Merte, and Taiſniere, near Taiſniere and Malplaquet, where they intrench'd themſelves the 10th; and the Confederate Troops lay, with the Right near Sart and Bleron, and the Left on the Edge of the Wood of Lagniere, the Head-Quarters being near the Center, at Blaregnies. The Prince of Savoy and Marlborough, in concert with Meſſieurs Goſſinga and Hooft, the States Field-Deputies, having reſolv'd to attack the French, notwithſtanding their advantageous Poſts and Intrenchments, Orders were ſent to the Troops, that had been employ'd in the Siege of Tournay, to join the Grand Army, which they did the ſame * Night: And, that very Evening, Lieutenant-General Dedem, with a Detachment from the Blockade of Mons, took St. Guiſlain, Sword in Hand, making the Gariſon (to the Number of Two Hundred Men) Priſoners of War.

* Sept. 10. N. S. St. Guiſlain taken. Battel of Blaregnies, or Malplaquet, Sept. 4. N. S.

The Troops that came from Tournay, having (on the 11th of September, in the Morning) taken their Poſt in the Right Wing of the Confederate Army, over againſt the Wood of Sart, where the Enemy's Left was poſted; Prince Eugene, the Duke of Marlborough, and the Dutch Field-Deputies, rode together along the Line, between the Two Armies; and ſeveral Men were, in their Preſence, kill'd by the Enemy's Cannon-Shot. A little after Eight a Clock, (the Signal for the Attack being given by a Diſcharge of Fifty Pieces of Cannon, and the Cannonading continuing very briſk on both ſides) Prince Eugene advanc'd with his Right into the Wood of Sart; and Thirty ſix Battalions of that Wing, commanded by General Schuylenburgh, the Duke of Argyle, and other Generals, and Twenty two other Battalions, under the Command of Count Lottum, attack'd the Enemy with ſuch Bravery, that notwithſtanding the Barricadoes of fell'd Trees, and other Impediments they met in their way, they drove the French out of their Intrenchments in the Woods of Sart and Taiſniere. General Withers, with Nineteen Battalions, attack'd the Enemy in another Intrenchment, beyond the Woods of Taiſniere and Great Blagniere, with the like Vigor and good Succeſs. Thirty ſix Dutch Battalions, commanded by the Prince of Naſſau-Friezeland, (or Prince of Orange) and Baron Fagel, who attack'd the Enemy's Right, poſted in the Wood of La Merte, and in an Opening, cover'd with Three Intrenchments, met with greater Reſiſtance, and loſt Abundance of Men, before they could penetrate into the firſt Intrenchment. As they were marching on to the Second, they were charged with a great deal of Vivacity by the Enemy, and obliged to retire to their former Poſt: Whereupon the Duke of Marlborough order'd Lieutenant-General Withers to march, with the Body under his immediate Direction, to ſuſtain them; but, upon further Notice that the Lieutenant-General was actually engaged with the Enemy, and that all Things went well on the Right, his Grace thought fit rather to preſs on the Advantages there, than to hazard a new Motion towards the Left, in the Heat of the Action. As ſoon as the Enemy's Left began to give Ground, and draw off their Cannon, the Duke of Marlborough commanded the Earl of Orkney, with Fifteen Battalions, to attack their Intrenchments in the Plain; with Directions, if he ſucceeded, to poſt himſelf there, and cover the Horſe as they ſhould file off thro' the Woods into the Plain, in order to charge the Enemy's Cavalry, which were there drawn up. This was executed with ſuch Vigor and Succeſs, that, after a ſhort Diſpute, the Enemy quitted thoſe Intrenchments; which gave the Horſe an Opportunity to enter them: And tho' the firſt Squadron, led by the Prince of Heſſe, had much ado to form themſelves, and were put into ſome Diſorder by the French King's Houſhold-Troops, yet being immediately rally'd by the Duke of Marlborough, and ſuſtain'd by the Squadrons of Prince Eugene's Army, they advanc'd together into the Plain, and charg'd the Enemy's Cavalry; who being ſoon broke and defeated, their whole Army fell into Diſorder, and made off towards the Plain of Bavay, leaving ſome Cannon behind them. General Vinck having, with the Horſe, ſurrounded ſeveral Battalions of the Enemy's Right, ſummon'd them to ſurrender Priſoners of War; but the French being cover'd by a Moraſs, made their Retreat along the Edge of a Wood. Three Regiments of Daniſh Cavalry falling, at the ſame Time, on the Enemy, made a terrible Slaughter among them; till the French, having gain'd a Second Wood, found Means to eſcape. Eighteen Squadrons being detach'd to endeavour to cut them off in their Retreat towards Quievrain, met their whole Left Wing on this ſide the little River Quaiſnean, conſiſting of about a Hundred Squadrons, commanded by Mareſchal de Boufflers in Perſon; and perceiving only at firſt the Enemy's Rear, poſted at the Corner of a Wood, the Dragoons made up to them, and drove them without Reſiſtance; but Colonel de la Lippe, and a Cornet, advancing too far, were taken, without being perceived by their own Men. The Wood being forc'd, the Eighteen Squadrons advanced into the Plain; but perceiving before them the Enemy's whole Left Wing, in Three Columns, (one of which retreated in good Order, the other Two in ſome Confuſion) they made a ſhort Halt, and were ſomewhat ſurprized, to ſee the Enemy face about, and draw up in Order of Battel. However, this ſmall Body of the Confederate Horſe kept their Ground, and poſted themſelves upon an Eminence, with the Wood of Elonge on their Right, expecting to be attack'd; but they immediately perceived, that the Enemy made a Stand, with no other Deſign than to paſs a Gutter, that was in their way to a Defilée leading to Bavay, which they gain'd before the Allies (who purſued them full Gallop) could come up with them. The latter follow'd the Chaſe as far as the Village of Quievrain, where the French having poſted a Brigade of Foot, and, at the ſame Time, ſome of their Squadrons poſting themſelves on an advantageous Ground, the Confederates thought fit to give over the Purſuit; and ſo the Enemy paſs'd the Rivulet, and march'd unmoleſted to Bavay. The reſt of their broken Army retired in great Confuſion, ſome to Mawbeuge and Valenciennes, and others to Condé, leaving the Allies in Poſſeſſion of the Field of Battel, with Sixteen Pieces of their Cannon, Twenty Colours, Twenty ſix Standards, and other indiſputable Marks of Victory: Not to mention Abundance of Priſoners; ſome of whom were taken in the Action, others in the Purſuit, and the far greater Number (the next Morning) in Bavay, and other neighbouring Places; either Wearineſs, or their Wounds, not permitting them to follow the Groſs of their Army, which having that Night paſs'd the Rivulet of Renelle, encamp'd with their Right at Queſnoy, extending their Left towards Valenciennes. When the Battel was over, the Confederate Generals, viewing the advantageous Poſts from whence they had driven the Enemy, were themſelves amazed to ſee what Difficulties they had ſurmounted: And indeed, all the Troops, Officers and Soldiers, ſhew'd, in this obſtinate Action, as great Reſolution, Intrepidity and Firmneſs, as were ever known in theſe latter Times, or ſtand recorded in ancient Story. The French, either ſpirited by their Intrenchments, or animated by the Shame of their former Defeats, defended themſelves with unexpected Bravery, from Half an Hour paſt Eight in the Morning, till Half an Hour paſt Two in the Afternoon; but were, at laſt, forc'd to yield to the ſuperior Courage and good Fortune of the Allies; whoſe Generals, Prince Eugene, the Duke of Marlborough, Count Tilly, and the Prince of Naſſau, were, during the whole Fight, continually at the Head of the Troops in the hotteſt of the Fire. Monſieur Goſlinga, one of the Field-Deputies, did alſo animate the Soldiers by his Example, and was ſo near Danger, that he had a Horſe ſhot under him, and one of his Attendants wounded. Great Numbers fell in this bloody Action; the Allies frankly owning, that they had above Eighteen Thouſand either kill'd or wounded. Among the firſt, were ſeveral Officers of Diſtinction; particularly, General Count Lottum; General Tettau, of the Pruſſians; Count Oxenſtiern, Lieutenant-General; the Lord Tullibardine, Eldeſt Son to the Duke of Athol, and Colonel of a Regiment of Foot in the Service of the States. Among the wounded, were, Prince Eugene of Savoy, ſlightly on the Head; as was alſo Brigadier May, in the ſame Place: Lieutenants-General Spar, Wackerbaert, and Hamilton; and the firſt mortally: Brigadier Croonſtrom, Count Oxenſtiern's Adjutant, dangerouſly; and Monſieur Duyts, Adjutant to the Prince of Orange. His Highneſs himſelf had Two Horſes kill'd under him, but eſcap'd unhurt; as did alſo the Duke of Argyle, tho' he received ſeveral Muſket-ſhots thro' his Cloaths and Perwig. To be more particular as to the Britiſh Troops: Brigadier Lalo, a French Refugee, in great Favour and Eſteem with the Generals; Sir Thomas Pendergraſs, Colonel of a Regiment of Foot; Colonel Rivet, of the Guards; Colonel Cranſtone, Lieutenant-Colonel Arundel, and Lieutenant-Colonel Bethel, were reckon'd among the ſlain. Lieutenant-General Webb, in the Beginning of the Action, received a very dangerous Wound, by a Muſket-Ball that lodg'd it ſelf near the Groin: Lieutenan-Colonel Ramſey, Major Laſhley, and Major Row, dy'd of their Wounds; but Lieutenant-Colonel Farmer, Major Chivers, and ſeveral other of inferior Rank, ſurvived theirs.

The Allies gain the Victory. See the Appendix, N°. IX.

The French were very induſtrious in leſſening and concealing their Loſs to the Publick: But ſome private Accounts from their Army, own'd, that they had about Five Hundred and forty Officers kill'd on the Spot, and One Thouſand and Sixty eight wounded; beſides Three Hundred and one taken Priſoners: And the Number of their private Men, kill'd, wounded, or taken, was modeſtly computed at Fifteen Thouſand. Among their ſlain, were Meſſieurs de Courſillon, de Chemerault, Palavicini, de Lautrec, de Greberges, de Moret, and Sheldon, Lieutenants-General; Count de Bourk, Meſſieurs de Rouleau, de Rochebonne, and de Tournefort, Majors-General; Count d' Agennes, Meſſieurs de Coaſquin, and de Stakenberg, Brigadiers: The Duke of St. Agnan; and Meſſieurs de Schaweſtein, de Salis, de Seignelay; the Chevalier de Croy, de Teligonde, de Molezun, Fitzgerald, de Barentin, St. Laurent, and the Duke of Charoſt. Among the wounded, was the Mareſchal de Villars himſelf; who, in the Heat of the Battel, receiving a Shot in the Knee, was obliged to leave the Command of the French Army to the Mareſchal de Boufflers; the Duke de Guiche; the Chevalier de St. Joris; Meſſieurs de Conflans, de Beaufremont, de Savigne, de Cranſat, de Morneſiers, de Opeide, de Refuge, d' Albergotti; the Princes de Lambeſſe, and de Mombaſon; Meſſieurs de Brillac, de Tournemine, de Renty, de Berville, d' Antel, and de St. Hilaire. Upon the whole Matter, thoſe who judg'd impartially of this Battel, Judgment of this Battel.

Battel, were of Opinion, that, all Things conſider'd, the Allies gain'd, indeed, a very remarkable and glorious Victory, but that they paid too dear for it: And, on the other hand, that tho' the French were beaten from their fortified Camp, and loſt the Field of Battel, yet they retriev'd Part of their former Reputation: But then their not attempting, afterwards, to relieve Mons, as it expos'd their Impotence, ſo did it make it appear, that their Loſs was much greater than they pretended. It was obſerv'd, that this Battel was fought the ſame Day on which Prince Eugene gain'd the famous Victory over the Turks at Lenta, on the River Tibiſcus in Hungary, in the Year 1697, whereupon enſued the Treaty of Carlowitz.

The Confederate Army returns to the Camp at Belian.

The Action of Blaregnies being over, the victorious Army was order'd to encamp a little beyond the Field of Battel, which was cover'd with the Bodies of Men dead, dying, and wounded; and on the 12th of September, (N. S.) they returned to their old Camp at Belian; Prince Eugene taking his Quarters in the Village of Quarignan, the Duke of Marlborough his in the Abbey of Belian, and Count Tilly his in the Village of Port Quenoy. The ſame Day, the Allies were buſy in burying their Dead, and removing their wounded Men; and there having been a great many of the French Officers and Soldiers left wounded on the Field of Battel, and in the adjacent Houſes, the Duke of Marlborough gave Notice to the Mareſchals de Boufflers and Villars, that he would permit them to ſend a Number of Waggons to fetch them off; and order'd Lieutenant-General Cadogan with 200 Horſe to meet at Bavay ſuch a General Officer as they ſhould ſend, with a like Number, to ſettle the Manner, and take the Paroles of Honour of the Officers that they carried off, with the Number of the private Soldiers, to be afterwards accounted for upon an Exchange. Accordingly, they ſent the Chevalier de Luxemburgh, a Lieutenant-General, with whom General Cadogan having concerted every thing, he return'd to the Camp, and left an Officer and Commiſſary to take a Liſt of all that ſhould be found; and two Days were allowed the Enemy for burying the Dead, and bringing off the Wounded, as they deſired.

On the 15th of September, N. S. a publick Thankſgiving was devoutly obſerv'd through the whole Confederate Army; and the next Day, Eighteen Battalions, that had ſuffer'd moſt in the Action, were ſent to ſeveral Places to recruit themſelves; and their room was ſoon after ſupply'd by Twenty Four Battalions, drawn from Gariſons. The Confederate Generals having reſolv'd to lay Siege to the important Town of Mons, the Capital City of Hainault, and the late Reſidence of the Elector of Bavaria; Lieutenant-General Cadogan, with Monſieur Vegelin, went on the 18th to Bruſſels, to haſten the March of the Artillery and Ammunition Waggons, and to make other neceſſary Preparations for that Enterprize. Some Days before, Count Bergheyck, and the Duke of Alba, by Order of King Philip their Maſter, wrote a joint Letter to the Duke of Marlborough; to which the Count added a Note, importing * That if the Queen of Great Britain, by means of his Highneſs's good Offices, ſhould think it for the Intereſt of the Nation to have Regard to it, he was provided with Powers from the King his Maſter, to explain himſelf more particularly, to ſuch Perſon, and in ſuch a Place, as his Highneſs would pleaſe to appoint. The Duke of Marlborough did not think fit to have, at that Time, any private Conference with that Miniſter; but as the latter happen'd to be in Mons, when the Allies inveſted † the Town, he was, on the 21ſt of September, allow'd to have an Interview with his Grace, who granted him Paſſports for himſelf, and ſeveral Ladies and Perſons of Diſtinction, who went out of the Place. The Prince of Orange and Naſſau, who was appointed to command the Siege, having made the neceſſary Diſpoſitions, the Trenches were open'd the 27th of September, and the Attacks carried on with ſo much Vigor, notwithſtanding the Badneſs of the Weather, that on the 20th of October the Gariſon beat a Parley, and the next Day ſurrender'd the Town on honourable Terms. Not many Days after, both Armies went into Winter-Quarters.

The Confederate Arms were not this Year attended with the like Succeſs every where. The Campaign on the Upper Rhine began very late; and the Army of the Empire being, as uſual, weak and unprovided with Neceſſaries, General Thungen, who commanded it when it was firſt aſſembled at Mulhbergh, was not in a Condition either to carry on the Deſign of invading Burgundy, which was timely diſcover'd and diſappointed by the French, or to undertake any thing elſe. Nor was the Elector of Brunſwick, afterwards, more fortunate; for his Electoral Highneſs having detach'd Count Merci, with a ſtrong Body of Troops, to make an Irruption into Upper Alſace, that General was, on the 26th of Auguſt, N. S. totally defeated by Count de Borgh, and oblig'd to repaſs the Rhine, and retire to Friburgh, with part of his Horſe, the reſt, with moſt of his Foot, having been either killed or taken Priſoners. The Germans having paſſed through the Territories of Baſil to invade Alſace, the French Ambaſſador in Swiſſerland expoſtulated with the Diet of the Cantons, Campaign on the Rhine, inconſiderable.

A. D. 1709.

Cantons, assembled at Baden, about the Violation of their Neutrality, and even threatned those of Basil, with the Effects of his Master's Resentment: But the laudable Helvetick Body took such effectual Measures for the Security of that Canton, and of their Frontiers, that the French did not think this a proper Juncture to increase the Number of their Enemies; and so contented themselves with seizing upon the Corn and Revenues belonging to those of Basil, in Alsace.

Campaign in Piedmont and Dauphiné, likewise inconsiderable.

The Campaign in Piedmont and Dauphiné, fell also, this Year, much short of Expectation; the Duke of Savoy refusing to go into the Field, by reason the Imperial Court started some Difficulties about Vigevano, and other Dependencies of the Milanese; which, by Agreement, were made over to his Royal Highness. The Court of Vienna insisted to have the Controversy adjusted by Commissaries; but this was oppos'd by the Duke of Savoy, who pretended, there was no need of such a lingring Negotiation, to find out the literal Sense of the Treaty concluded with him by the Emperor; and thereupon, made pressing Instances with the Queen of Great Britain, and the States General, who stood Guarantees of that Treaty, for the punctual Performance of it. The Maritime Powers considering with what Firmness and Constancy the Duke of Savoy had adher'd to the Grand Alliance, and what Zeal for the Common Cause he had lately shewn, in rejecting the advantagious Offers, that were made him on the part of France, to decoy him to a separate Peace; espoused his Royal Highness's Interest with Warmth. But the Emperor insisting on a Reference to Commissaries, the Duke of Savoy persisted in his Resolution, not to go into the Field, and left the Command of the Army to Velt-Mareschal Thaun, who, on the 7th of August, went from Turin to Suza, and made the necessary Dispositions to march over Mount Cenis. On the other hand, the Duke and Mareschal of Berwick, who commanded the French Army in Dauphiné, had, by this Time, caused strong Intrenchments to be cast up, to cover Briançon, the Place most threatned by the Confederates; and to defend some other important Posts: So that all Count Thaun was able to do, was only to oblige the French to abandon their Lines at St. Maurice; drive them from those at Fessons; defeat a small Body at Conflans; and make himself Master of the inconsiderable Town and Castle of Annecy; after which, for want of Provisions, he was forc'd to repass the Alps, and march into Piedmont towards the End of September. It is to be observ'd, that the Duke of Berwick gain'd the more Glory, in disappointing the Designs of the Allies, because, at this very Time, part of his Troops were employ'd in suppressing, in the Vivarez, an Insurrection of the Camisars, and other Malecontents, who, on the 19th of August, N. S. maintain'd a sharp Encounter with the French King's Troops: But on the 23d of the same Month, they were entirely defeated, within some Leagues of Vernoux; and about Fifty of them being taken Prisoners, with their chief Leader Abraham, the latter was broke alive upon the Wheel; Twenty three others hang'd at several Places; Six or Seven sent to the Gallies, and the rest committed to Prison.

Campaign in Portugal.

The Spanish and Portugueze Armies having taken the Field towards the End of April, many Days did not pass before they came to an Engagement; for on the 7th of May, N. S. being both encamp'd on the Caya, and the Spaniards making a Motion, with a Design either to forage the adjacent Country, or to insult the Confederates; the Portugueze General, contrary to the Earl of Galway's Opinion, pass'd the River with all their Horse, most of the Foot, and some Field Pieces, which they fired, with good Execution, on the Enemy. Hereupon the Mareschal de Bay, who commanded the Spaniards, charg'd the Portugueze Horse of the Right Wing; who immediately wheel'd about, and fled, without firing one Shot, which gave the Spaniards an Opportunity of seizing the Portugueze Canon. In order to recover these, and to favour the Retreat of the Body of Foot, which had repuls'd the Enemy Three Times, with great Firmness and Resolution, the Earl of Galway brought up himself Pearce's Brigade, consisting of the Two British Battalions of Barrymore and Stanwix, and one of the Spaniards lately rais'd; but these Troops not being sustain'd by the Portugueze Horse of the Left, who fled like those of the Right, they were intercepted, and obliged to surrender Prisoners of War; and with them Major-General Sankey, the Earl of Barrymore, Brigadier Pearce, and the Conde de San Juan, a Portugueze General. The rest of the British Foot, under the Command of the Marquis de Montandre, perform'd Wonders, and, with the Portugueze Infantry, made a handsome and orderly Retreat, with the Loss of about a Hundred and fifty Men; so that excepting the Prisoners, and other Marks of Honour, the Spaniards had no Reason to boast of their Victory. The Earl of Galway, who had a Horse shot under him, very near escaped being taken; but having found Means to get away from the Enemy, with Major Bladen, his Secretary, and a few other Officers, his Lordship rode about Four or Five Miles, and, at last, reach'd the Confederate Army, which that Night came to Aronches, and the next Day went to encamp at Elva. The Marquis de Bay having refresh'd refreſh'd his Troops, advanc'd towards the Confederates; but the Earl of Galway took ſuch advantageous Poſts along the Guadiana, that the Spaniards durſt not attempt, either to paſs that River, or to beſiege Olivenza, into which Place the Britiſh General found Means to introduce Supplies of Proviſions: And the Heats coming on, both Armies went into Quarters of Refreſhment; nor did any Thing worth Notice happen, on that ſide, in the Autumn Campaign. A. D. 1708.

The Gariſon of the Caſtle of Alicant, which was block'd up about the Beginning of December, 1708, held out with great Reſolution all the Winter, notwithſtanding the Severity of the Weather, the Scarcity of Proviſions, and the Diſturbance they receiv'd from the Enemy's Bombs. The Spaniards, finding all other Means ineffectual to reduce that important Fortreſs, reſolved, at laſt, to blow it up, by a great Mine; the ſeveral Chambers whereof being prepar'd, with incredible Labour and Induſtry, the Chevalier d' Hasfeldt cauſed Twelve Hundred Barrels of Powder to be lodg'd in them; ſummon'd the Governor to ſurrender; and the better to determine him to it, gave him Leave to ſend out Two of his Officers, to ſee the Condition of the Mine. This was readily accepted: But upon the Report of Mr. Pages, an Ingineer, (who, with another Officer, was appointed to view the Mine) Major-General Richards, the Governor, held a Council of War, wherein it was reſolved, not to ſurrender. Hereupon the Enemy ſprung their Mine, with more Noiſe than Effect; ſince only a ſmall Part of a Baſtion was blown up, and a Ciſtern ſpoil'd. However, it unfortunately happen'd, that Major-General Richards, and Col. Syburgh, out of a fond Curioſity, going to a Place near the Mine, at the very Time they knew it was to be ſprung, (contrary to the Advice of ſome Officers, who yet follow'd them, to avoid the Imputation of Fear) were blown up, and buried in the Ruins, with Lieutenant-Colonel Thornicraft, Major Vignolles, and Twenty Nine or Thirty other Officers, or private Men. Notwithſtanding this Accident, Lieutenant-Colonel d' Albon, of Syburgh's Regiment, being the ſurviving Commander, reſolv'd to hold out, as long as he had any Proviſions; and to make theſe laſt the longer, reduc'd his Men to half Allowance. By this Time, King Charles being inform'd, That the Gariſon was reduc'd to great Extremities, a Council of War was held at Barcelona, to conſider of the moſt proper Means to relieve that Place; the Reſult whereof was, That Lieutenant-General Stanhope ſhould embark for Port-Mahon, to confer with Sir George Byng on that Subject. That General being return'd (the 12th of March, N. S.) to Barcelona, embark'd again on the 18th, on Board Sir Edward Whitaker, who was arriv'd there, with Three Thouſand Five Hundred Men from Naples. Theſe Troops were order'd upon this Expedition; and then ſailing for Port-Mahon, they took there on Board, Four Hundred Men more; and on the 11th of April, ſail'd for Alicant: But a ſtrong Eaſterly Wind forcing them to anchor in the Bay of Denia, the Enemy ſuſpected their Deſign, and made the neceſſary Preparations to prevent its Execution. On the 15th, the Fleet arriv'd in Sight of Alicant; but the Weather continued ſo tempeſtuous, that the Ships could not come near the Shore; and beſides, Don Pedro de Ronquillo, had, by that Time, aſſembled Seven Thouſand Men, caſt up Intrenchments, and erected Batteries, to oppoſe the Landing of the Confederate Troops. However, ſome Men of War were order'd to get as near the Shore as poſſible, and fire upon the Enemy's Intrenchments, which they did, with ſome Execution; but were much annoy'd by the Enemy's Batteries, eſpecially by one of Four Forty Two Pounders, which kill'd ſome Men, and did ſome other Damage on board the Dunkirk. The General and Admirals ſeeing the Impoſſibility of relieving the Caſtle, reſolv'd, in a Council of War, to endeavour to ſave ſo brave a Gariſon from being made Priſoners of War: And accordingly, General Stanhope ſent a Boat on Shore with a Flag of Truce, and an Officer, with a Letter for Don Pedro de Ronquillo, offering to ſurrender the Caſtle of Alicant upon honourable Terms. This Propoſal being accepted, and Hoſtages exchang'd, ſeveral Articles were demanded, and moſt of them granted. Purſuant to the Capitulation, the Gariſon, which was reduced to Five Hundred Men, march'd out, * with Two Pieces of Cannon, and all other Marks of Honour, embark'd on Board the Fleet, and were landed in Minorca, to refreſh themſelves.

General Stanhope having laid a Deſign to ſurprize Cadiz, either by Means of a ſecret Correſpondence he had in the Place, or merely upon the Encouragement of the Weakneſs of the Gariſon; concerted Meaſures for that Purpoſe with Sir George Byng, on Board whoſe Squadron he embark'd at Port-Mahon, with Two Regiments of Foot; and about the middle of Auguſt, ſail'd for Gibraltar. Here he expected to be join'd by the Forces, which, about the ſame Time, embark'd at Portſmouth, on board a Squadron, commanded by Rear-Admiral Baker, conſiſting of one Battalion of Scotch Guards, the Regiments of Foot of the Lord Tyrawly, Brigadier Whetham, Colonel Gore, Colonel Boles, Colonel Capel, Colonel Munden, Colonel Dormer, Dormer, and the Earl of Rochford's Dragoons: But this Squadron being long detain'd on the Coaſt of England, by contrary Winds, inſomuch, that they did not make the Coaſt of Portugal, 'till the beginning of October, the Spaniards, in the mean Time, being apprehenſive of General Stanhope's Deſign, made Detachments from Eſtremadura, for the Security of the Coaſt of Andaluſia; and the Seaſon being too far advanc'd to undertake any Thing on that Side, that General return'd to Port-Mahon; thence to Barcelona; and not long after ſail'd for Italy, from whence he came over to England, by the way of Germany, and Holland. On the other hand, Rear Admiral Baker having, on the 10th of October, ſent a Man of War to Liſbon for Orders, the Earl of Galway gave him Directions to ſail directly for Barcelona, with the Forces he had on Board. The Court of Portugal, who expected that theſe Troops would have ſtaid in that Kingdom, having expoſtulated with that Earl, about their being ſent to Catalonia, his Lordſhip took that Opportunity to complain of the ill Proviſion that was made for the Subſiſtence and Accommodation of the Britiſh Regiments in Portugal; ſaid, that nevertheleſs, her Britannick Majeſty would take Care to recruit thoſe Forces; and if the Court of Portugal would be as diligent in raiſing the Men for Six Regiments of Dragoons, in the Pay of Great Britain, which Levies were at laſt reſolv'd upon, the Portugueze Army would then be in a Condition to act offenſively. He added, that the Forces on Board Rear-Admiral Baker, would be of far greater Service in Catalonia, even with reſpect to Portugal it ſelf, by giving a ſtrong Diverſion to the Enemy; which Argument had certainly a great Weight with it: For the Portugueze were ſenſible, that General Stanhope's bare coming to Gibraltar with Two Regiments, had occaſion'd the weakning of the Spaniſh Forces in Eſtremadura, and diſabled them from undertaking any Thing on that Side, in the Autumn Campaign.

Campaign in Catalonia.

The Rejoicings made at the Court of Madrid, upon the eaſy and inconſiderable Victory gain'd by the Marquis de Bay in Eſtremadura, and on the Birth of a Second Son to King Philip, were ſoon daſh'd, both by the Death of that young Prince, and their Misfortunes on the Frontiers of Catalonia: For General Staremberg having paſs'd the Segra, without Oppoſition, the Night, between the 26th and 27th of Auguſt, N. S. made himſelf Maſter of Balaguer and Ager; and in the firſt of thoſe Places, took Nine Hundred Men Priſoners: The Mareſchal de Bezons having refus'd to ſecond the Conde d' Aguilar, who was for attacking the Allies. Upon Notice of theſe Tranſactions, King Philip ſet out Poſt from Madrid, and being diſpleaſed with Monſieur de Bezons Conduct, wrote to him a ſharp Letter about it; but when he came to the Army, that General juſtify'd himſelf, producing the French King's Orders for not hazarding his Troops. King Philip, not judging it adviſeable to attempt the attacking of Count Staremberg in his advantageous Poſt near Balaguer, return'd to Madrid, where Cardinal Portocarrero died ſome Days before, to the great Regret of that Prince, and his Partizans. Not long after, Count Staremberg having put a ſtrong Gariſon into Balaguer, repaſs'd the Segra, and ſo both Armies went into Winter Quarters.

Battel of Pultowa, where the Swedes are entirely defeated.

Beſides the Tranſactions before-mention'd, relating to the Grand Confederacy againſt France; this Year will alſo be memorable to Poſterity, for many other ſignal Events, particularly the Battel fought on the 8th of July, N. S. near Pultowa, between the Swedes and Muſcovites, wherein the latter gained a compleat Victory; and Three Days after, Prince Menzikoff, being come up with the broken Remains of the Swediſh Army near Perewoloczna, not far from the Banks of the Boriſthenes, obliged them to ſurrender Priſoners of War. The Day before, the King of Sweden, who was wounded in the Foot, was prevail'd with to conſult his Safety, by croſſing that River, which he did with General Mayerfeld, ſome other Officers, and about Three Hundred of his Life-Guards, and ſo got ſafe to Oczakow, from whence he retired to Bender, in the Turkiſh Territories, where he met with a kinder Entertainment than he might have found among ſome Chriſtian Princes. The entire Defeat of the Swedes occaſion'd great Alterations in the North: For King Staniſlaus having thereby loſt his Principal, or, indeed, his only Support, King Auguſtus put out a Manifeſto, aſſerting his Right to the Crown of Poland, and ſoon after march'd into that Kingdom, where he had an Interview with the Czar. On the other hand, the King of Denmark improv'd this fair Opportunity to revenge the Injuries and Affronts he pretended to have receiv'd from the Swedes; and having alſo publiſh'd a Manifeſto, wherein he ſet forth his Reaſons for declaring War againſt them, he invaded the Province of Schonen, about the middle of November. Finding no Reſiſtance at his Landing at Helſingburgh, he fix'd there his Head-Quarters; but the cold Seaſon not permitting him to undertake the Siege of Landſcroon, he diſpos'd his Troops into Winter-Quarters, and on the 4th of December, N. S. return'd to Copenhagen. Some Time after, the Danes having taken the Field, made ſome Progreſs greſs in Schonen; but the Regency of Stockholm having, by this Time, ſent a good Body of Troops into that Province, the Swedes obliged the Enemy to retire under the Cannon of Helſinburgh; where, on the 10th of March, N. S. 1710, they attack'd them with ſo much Bravery and Fierceneſs, that the Danes were almoſt totally defeated; and not being able to maintain themſelves at Helſinburgh, abandon'd that City, the Night between the 15th and 16th of that Month; went on board their Ships, and ſail'd for Elſinore; leaving behind them their Horſes, and ſome Proviſions and Baggage, which they had not either Time, or Conveniencies to carry off. Sir Philip Meadows, Junior, the Queen of Great Britain's Envoy Extraordinary at Vienna, having honourably diſcharg'd that Employment for ſome Years, took his Audience of Leave of the Emperor, on the 23d of July, N. S. and ſoon after ſet out for Holland, in his way Homeward; with ſome Mortification, that his Endeavours in Favour of the Reform'd of Sileſia, had ſtill prov'd uneffectual. The Britiſh Miniſters at Hamburgh were more ſucceſsful in their Mediation to compoſe the Troubles of that City, and with great Prudence, not only remov'd the Difficulties that obſtructed the Imperial Commiſſion, but procur'd an Abatement of the great Expences, and heavy Burdens, laid on the Inhabitants of that City.

Sir P. Meadows leaves the Court of Vienna.

The Britiſh Miniſters at Hamburgh conſult the Good of that City.

As ſoon as the Campaign in the Netherlands was at an End, the French Court thought fit to make new Advances towards the ſetting again on foot a Negotiation of Peace: In order to which, Signior Foſcarini, the Venetian Ambaſſador, who (about this Time) came to Holland, took a Turn incognito to Amſterdam, to feel the Pulſe of the Burgomaſters of that City. On the other hand, Monſieur Petkum, Reſident of the Duke of Holſtein at the Hague, who had been (under-hand) employ'd the laſt Winter in the Negotiations of Peace, and had ſince continued to hold a Correſpondence with the Marquis de Torcy, made new Overtures on the Part of France, and deſired Paſſes for their Commiſſioners to come to the Hague; which having been taken into Conſideration by the Imperial, Britiſh, and Dutch Miniſters, and the Report of their Conferences communicated to the States-General, their High-Mightineſſes refuſed the Paſſes; but conſented, that Monſieur Petkum ſhould go to the French Court, purſuant to their Deſire, to know what further Offers they had to make? Accordingly, that Miniſter ſet out for Paris, about the Middle of November; as did, not many Days after, the Duke of Marlborough for London, and Prince Eugene for Vienna. Monſieur Petkum was received at the French Court with more Reſpect than is uſually paid to a Miniſter of ſuch an inferior Rank; and, with an affected Parade and Oſtentation, undoubtedly with Deſign to make their famiſh'd and murmuring People believe, that Peace was at hand; and not without ſome vain Inſinuations, that the Allies themſelves had ſent him to make Propoſals towards it; tho' 'tis certain, he had no ſuch Power, or Direction from the Allies. After he had for ſome Days conferr'd with the Marquis de Torcy, and the other French Miniſters, and received a Preſent for the Trouble and Charge of his Journey, he was * ſent back to the Hague, with an Anſwer, or Meſſage, importing in Subſtance, "That it would be impoſſible for the King of France to execute the "Thirty ſeventh Article of the Preliminaries, even altho' his Majeſty might re- "ſolve to ſign the ſame. That the other Articles were propos'd by the Allies, Six "Months before, to prevent, by a Suſpenſion of Arms, the Events of the Cam- "paign, and which might change the Diſpoſitions towards Peace: And that Rea- "ſon being now over, becauſe the Winter-Seaſon did naturally eſtabliſh a Ceſſation "of Arms, without any Agreement in Writing; that therefore, without mention- "ing any more the Preliminary Articles, the Three Months of that Winter might "be employ'd, for Treating and Concluding a Peace. That tho' the Form of "thoſe Articles were ſuppreſs'd, yet the (French) King would preſerve the Sub- "ſtance of them, and treat on the Foundation of the Conditions to which he had "conſented, for the Satisfaction of the Emperor, England, and Holland, and their "Allies; tho' he had declared, that thoſe Conditions ſhould be void, if they were "not accepted during the Negotiation at the Hague. That his Majeſty was ready "to reſume the Negotiations, on the ſame Foot; and ſend his Plenipotentiaries "to ſuch a Place as ſhould be agreed on, to begin to confer with thoſe of the "Allies, on the Firſt Day of January. And if this Propoſal were accepted, the "Sieur Petkum might forthwith return, for ſettling the Paſſes, and other Formali- "ties, for the Place and Manner of meeting." The States-General having maturely conſider'd both the Anſwer and the Report of their Deputies thereupon, came to the following unanimous Reſolution; viz. "That the Sieur Petkum, who, at the "Deſire, and upon the repeated Inſtances of France, was permitted (with the Con- "ſent and Knowledge of the High Allies) to go for France, to ſee if any Ex- "pedient

It being manifeſt, that the Court of France deſign'd once more to gain Time, and amuſe the Allies with a ſpecious Negotiation; the Queen of Great Britain, by the prevailing Advice of the Duke of Marlborough, not only re-turn'd a favourable Anſwer to the Letter of the States General, but reſolved likewiſe to exhort all the Allies to a vigorous Proſecution of the War; thoſe, in particular, who (during the whole Courſe of it) had been moſt backward in ſeconding her Ma-

A. D. 1709.

Concluding, " That he had the Satisfaction to acquaint his Excellency, That " the Queen had no ſooner Notice that the Two young Muſcovite Princes, the " Relations of his Majeſty, were arrived in this Kingdom, but ſhe gave " Orders for their Reception, with that particular Diſtinction and Reſpect, " which was due to their high Birth." To this Letter the Muſcovite Ambaſſador wrote an Anſwer from the Hague, importing, in Subſtance, " That the " Propoſal Mr. Secretary Boyle had tendered to the Parliament of Great Britain, " by the Queen's Inſtructions, in order to get a Law enacted, for the Secu- " rity and Maintenance of the Sacred Privileges of Ambaſſadors, and other Fo- " reign Miniſters reſiding in her Majeſty's Court, was, indeed, a very proper Means " to diſſipate the Fears with which they were ſeiz'd, ſince the Inſult that was made " on a Miniſter of the firſt Rank: But that nothing carried leſs Appearance of the " Satisfaction which his Czariſh Majeſty required; ſince the definitive Reſolution " was ſtill wanting, and he was referr'd to the particular Laws of the Country; ſo " that the Buſineſs was protracted, from Time to Time. That if it were in the " Queen's Power to conſult the Parliament about the enacting of a new Law, " touching the Immunity of Foreign Miniſters, and to prevent the Outrages which " might hereafter be offer'd to them; could not due Meaſures have been taken, at " the ſame Time, for the Reparation of the paſt Affront, which (according to " Mr. Secretary's Letter) was deteſted by the Queen, and the whole Britiſh Na- " tion? That 'twas a very eaſy Matter to do it, in Caſe her Majeſty had the leaſt " Inclination to hold an amicable Correſpondence with his Czariſh Majeſty, as his " Czariſh Majeſty was diſpos'd to do with her, and to maintain the Law of Nati- " ons in its Vigor, as the whole Univerſe did; which ought to be the rather ex- " pected from the Queen, ſince ſhe had formerly contributed very much to the Pre- " ſervation of the ſame, by firmly demanding of the Republick of Venice, Satiſ- " faction for the Violence offer'd to the Earl of Mancheſter, her Ambaſſador, al- " though the Inſult was only made upon his Barque, and Domeſtick Servants: So " that the Senate, notwithſtanding the moſt ancient Laws of the Republick, was " prevail'd upon to follow the Law of Nations, by ſatisfying the Ambaſſador af- " ter the manner he deſired and demanded. That Mr. Secretary Boyle had deſired, " by the ſame Letter, that the Ambaſſador ſhould acquaint his Czariſh Majeſty " with the Delay of the Courts of Judicature, which hinder'd this Affair from be- " ing brought to an Iſſue, although it might have been conveniently adjuſted in the " Space of Six Months: But as his Letter contain'd nothing definitive, he was " concern'd it was not in his Power to comply with his Deſires. That he was the " more incapable of doing it, in regard that he had receiv'd his Czariſh Majeſty's " poſitive Reſolution upon the Buſineſs, as alſo later Orders, earneſtly to preſs for " the Queen's Anſwer to his Maſter's Letter, and a Categorical Determination, " whether the Law of Nations, with reſpect to the other Powers, would be ob- " ſerv'd, or not? That as to the Honours that had lately been done, by the Queen's " ſpecial Command, to Two young Noblemen, who were taken for Muſcvite Prin- " ces, related to his Czariſh Majeſty, and were now at London, he declared, that " his Majeſty reckon'd none but the Imperial Hereditary Prince, within the Verge " of his Auguſt Houſe: That theſe were Two young Lords of illuſtrious Birth, who " had the Honour of being a-kin to him, and were travelling incognito to ſee the " World: But his Czariſh Majeſty did not deſire that they ſhould be defray'd by " any Power; that they had wherewithal to bear their own Charges; and if, with- " out their Maſter's Order, they thought fit to accept of Lodging, or any Thing " elſe of that Nature, they were to be accountable for it." Several other Letters paſs'd between the Muſcovite Ambaſſador, and Mr. Secretary Boyle, and Mr. D' Ayrolle, the Britiſh Secretary at the Hague; but it having been found impracticable in England, to inflict any legal Puniſhment on thoſe who had offer'd the Affront to the Ambaſſador, it was, at laſt, reſolv'd, and agreed, between the Muſcovite and Britiſh Courts, that her Britannick Majeſty, by way of Satisfaction, ſhould make ſolemn Excuſes for the Inſufficiency of our former Laws, in that Behalf. In order to that, Mr. Charles Whitworth, her Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary to the Czar, was, on this Occaſion, veſted with the Character of her Ambaſſador Extraordinary, Commiſſioner, and Plenipotentiary; and being, on the 8th of February, (O. S.) $17\frac{09}{10}$, introduc'd to his publick Audience, with great Solemnity, he made a Speech to the Czar, ſuitable to the Occaſion, " Inſtantly deſiring, in the Name " of the Queen, that his Imperial Majeſty might vouchſafe to accept of that Ex- " cuſe with the uſual Fraternal Affection; and not to impute, either to her Maje- " ſty, or the Britiſh Nation, an Action, of which ſome diſorderly Perſons were the " Authors: But that entirely putting the ſame in Oblivion, his Imperial Majeſty " might again generouſly continue his high Affection to the Queen, and her Sub-

After this Speech, the Ambaſſador deliver'd to the Czar a Letter from the Queen, to the ſame Purpoſe; which his Czariſh Majeſty deliver'd into the Hands of Count de Golofkin, Great Chancellor of his Empire, and was pleas'd to make the following Anſwer in his own Tongue: " It was but requiſite,

The Czar's Anſwer.

" ſaid he, that her Majeſty, the Queen, ſhould have given us Satisfaction, by pu-" niſhing the Criminals, conformably to our Demands, in the moſt rigorous Man-" ner, as is the Cuſtom in ſuch Caſes, throughout the Univerſe: But ſeeing her " Majeſty has order'd you to make Excuſes in the Quality of her Ambaſſador Ex-" traordinary, conferr'd upon you expreſly for this Purpoſe, and to remonſtrate, " that her Majeſty could not inflict ſuch a Puniſhment upon them, becauſe of the " Defect, in that Particular, of the former eſtabliſh'd Conſtitutions of her Kingdom; " and that with the unanimous Conſent of the Parliament, her Majeſty has caus'd a " new Act to be paſs'd, to ſerve as a Law therein, for the future: We accept all this " for a Proof of the Affection her Majeſty has for us, and for ſufficient Satisfaction; " and we will give Orders to our Miniſters, to ſettle entirely this Affair with you " in a Conference. The next Day, the Ambaſſador came to the Houſe of Count de Golofkin, and in a Conference with him, and other Ruſſian Miniſters, this troubleſome Affair was terminated; and the ancient Friendſhip, and good Correſpondence between the Two Crowns renew'd, on Condition that the following Articles, which were ſtipulated, ſhould be perform'd: viz. " That his Czariſh Majeſty, Em-

Agreement made between the Britiſh Ambaſſador, and the Czar's Miniſters.

" peror of Great Ruſſia, would ſend Orders to Mr. de Matueof, his Ambaſſador Ple-" nipotentiary at the Hague, to notify, proviſionally, by a Letter to her Majeſty, " the Queen of Great Britain, that Mr. Charles Whitworth, being veſted with the " Character of her Ambaſſador Extraordinary, Commiſſioner, and Plenipotentiary, " expreſly and purpoſely to make Excuſes, on Occaſion of the Affront in Queſtion, " had perform'd that Commiſſion; and that his Majeſty, having regard to the In-" ſtances of her Majeſty, the Queen, had been pleas'd to accept the ſaid Excuſes, " made in her Name, for Satisfaction of the Outrage done at London, to the Am-" baſſador of his Czariſh Majeſty; with an Intention thereby to ſhew the high Va-" lue he put upon the Friendſhip of her Britannick Majeſty, and on the Continu-" ance of that Friendſhip, and in hope of the like Return on her Part, on Occa-" ſions wherein his Czariſh Majeſty might be concerned; and that in Conſequence " hereof, his Czariſh Majeſty was willing to forget the Criminal Proceedings of the " Authors and Accomplices of the ſaid Affront, and deſired her Majeſty, the Queen, " to be pleas'd to order them to be diſcharg'd from the Proceſs iſſued againſt them, " and from the Sentence pronounc'd, and the Penalties to which they were con-" demn'd for the ſaid Inſult. 2. That his Czariſh Majeſty having a juſt Regard " to the faithful and ſignal Services which his ſaid Ambaſſador, who was inſulted, " had perform'd, and in a gracious Remembrance of the laudable Zeal of his de-" ceas'd Father, his Excellency, Mr. Artemon Sergiciewiez de Matueof, firſt Mini-" ſter and Boyarin, in the Reign of his Czariſh Majeſty's Father, and Grandfather, " of Glorious Memory, who, in exhorting Rebels to Obedience, crown'd his faith-" ful and important Services with his Blood, ſhed by the Mutineers: He could not, " but (in token of his Favour, and of his great Good-will towards him) demand, " after his own Satisfaction, the particular Satisfaction of his Miniſter; namely, " the Reparation of his Honour, and that of his Family, by the Expedient of a " Letter from her Majeſty, the Queen; and the Reimburſement of all the Coſts " and Damages which he had been obliged to be at, and to ſuffer, on Account of " the ſaid Affront. 3. That his Czariſh Majeſty would give Orders to his ſaid Am-" baſſador, to demand his Letter of Recredence, which he refus'd to accept, when " he left London, as well as the uſual Preſent, and the Yatch which her Majeſty " caus'd to be offered to him, and this by Reaſon of the aforeſaid Affront. 4. And " that all above ſpecified, being executed, his Czariſh Majeſty would acquaint her " Majeſty, the Queen, that he was content with the foreſaid Satisfaction, by a " Letter which ſhould be delivered to the Ambaſſador, Mr. Whitworth.

Having taken a View of all the moſt material Tranſactions Abroad, during the Year 1709, let us now attend the principal Domeſtick Occurrences in the ſame Space of Time. Upon the Petitions of the Companies of Silk-Weavers in London and Canterbury, humbly repreſenting, " The deplorable Condition to which they " were reduced, by Reaſon of the general Mourning, for the Continuance where-" of, no Time was limited:" An Order was made * in Council, importing, That her Majeſty did not require or expect, that any of her Subjects, (except only her own Ser-vants, and ſuch as had Acceſs to her Royal Perſon) ſhould continue to obſerve the preſent

About this Time, Sir John Holland, Baronet, was appointed Comptroller of her Majeſty's Houſhold, in the Room of Sir Thomas Felton, Baronet, deceas'd; and, on the 15th of April, Charles Earl of Carliſle was ſworn of her Majeſty's Privy-Council. About a Month after, † the Britiſh Parliament being met, was further prorogu'd to the 23d of June; and towards the latter end of May, Sir John Leake was conſtituted Rear-Admiral of Great Britain. On the 13th of June, Count Cuſtein, Envoy Extraordinary from the Emperor, who was lately come over to condole the Death of Prince George, in the Abſence of Count Gallas, had his Audience of Leave of her Majeſty; as had alſo, on the 19th, Major-General Haguen, who came Envoy Extraordinary from the Duke of Wolfembuttle, for the ſame purpoſe. Some time before, * Don Joſeph Diaz, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from the Emperor of Morocco, had likewiſe a private Audience of the Queen; and Count Bergami, Envoy Extraordinary from the Duke of Modena, and Monſieur de Sand, Envoy Extraordinary from the Duke of Mecklenburg, had ‖ their reſpective Audiences of Leave.

The young Marquis du Queſne, Son to Monſieur du Queſne, Envoy from the Proteſtant Cantons of Swiſſerland, to the States General, being ſent hither, with Recommendatory Letters from the King of Pruſſia, the Elector of Hanover, and the Duke of Marlborough, to ſollicit her Majeſty's powerful Interpoſition, in favour of the Proteſtants of France, in the enſuing Treaty, had, on the 12th of June, his firſt Audience of her Majeſty, being introduc'd by the Earl of Sunderland. He was very graciouſly receiv'd by her Majeſty, who, after he had made his Compliment, was pleaſed to tell him, That tho' ſhe had already given particular Inſtructions to her Plenipotentiaries about that Matter, yet ſhe would be glad to receive and countenance (a) any Memorials he ſhould think fit to preſent, relating thereunto. Some Days after, the Earl of Sunderland preſented to the Queen the following Addreſs of the French Churches in London.

Monſieur du Queſne has Audience of the Queen, who expreſſes herſelf in favour of French Proteſtants.

MADAM,

Addreſs of the French Churches in London.

" Our Brethren in Foreign Nations ſent Deputies to beſeech your Majeſty's Pro-

" Your Majeſty's great Piety has prevented any preſent Petition from us; your
" Majeſty having, in Imitation of Providence, whoſe Inſtrument you are, granted

" moſt particularly recommended by your Majeſty, to your Miniſters in the Treaty " of Peace.

" May Heaven continue to bleſs your Arms, proſper your great Deſigns, and " long preſerve your Royal Perſon for the Tranquility of the Church, the Happi-

Poor Palatines and other Germans come over into Great Britain.

By this Time, another ſort of Refugees did more immediately employ the Queen's Compaſſion, and beſpeak her Royal Beneficence, and the Charity of the Britiſh Nation: For, about the beginning of the Month of May, great Numbers of Palatines, Swabians, and other Germans, moſt of them Lutherans, being driven from their Habitations, either by the oppreſſive Exactions of the French, or the Deſolation of their native Country, occaſion'd by the Calamities of the War, began to come over

(a) Accordingly, the Marquis du Queſne preſented Three Memorials; the firſt of which ſhew'd, both from Hiſtory, and the Laws of Nations, that a Sovereign Prince or State may interpoſe, as to Matters of Religion, in another Prince's Dominions: The Second proved, That all Proteſtant Princes are particularly oblig'd to eſpouſe the Cauſe of the Reformed in the Kingdom of France: And the Third, was to beg her Majeſty's Recommendatory Letter to the States General, in favour of the French Proteſtants, which her Majeſty readily granted.

into England; inſomuch, that by the middle of June, they were increas'd to Six thouſand five hundred and twenty, Men, Women, and Children; among whom were Schoolmaſters, Huſbandmen, Vine-Dreſſers, Herdſmen, Wheelrights, Smiths, Weavers, Carpenters, Maſons, Bakers, Coopers, Brewers, and other Handicrafts-Men. It was never certainly known upon what Motives, and with what Views, theſe People were brought over: But 'tis certain, that being come into Holland, with deſign to go for the Engliſh Plantations in America, upon an Invitation of ſome of their Countrymen, who were reported to be there in a thriving Condition, they were furniſh'd with Shipping to come over into England, by Mr. d' Ayrolle, the Britiſh Secretary at the Hague, by Direction from thoſe at the Helm. Being deſtitute of all Neceſſaries, they muſt inevitably have periſh'd, had not the Queen, out of her Royal Bounty, firſt order'd a daily Allowance to be diſtributed to them; and, at the ſame time, a ſufficient Number of Tents to be deliver'd out of the Tower, for their encamping on Black-Heath, near Greenwich; and in a large Field near Camberwell; and afterwards, upon the Petition of the Juſtices of the Peace for the County of Middleſex, granted a Brief for the Collection of the Charity of all well-diſpoſed Perſons, within the ſaid County. Not many Days after, her Majeſty order'd, that this Brief ſhould be extended to, and put in Execution, within the whole Kingdom of Great Britain; and, at the ſame time, appointed ſeveral Perſons, in the moſt eminent Stations, to be Truſtees and Commiſſioners, for receiving, and diſpoſing of the Moneys to be collected by virtue of that Brief, for the Subſiſtence and Settlement of the Poor Palatines. The kind Reception and Entertainment which theſe diſtreſſed Refugees found here, having been noiſed abroad, and encouraged many other Germans to leave their deſolate Habitations, in order to follow their Countrymen, their Numbers increas'd ſo faſt, that the Commiſſioners were puzzled, either how to ſubſiſt, or diſpoſe of them. Hereupon, her Majeſty's Secretary at the Hague was directed to put a Stop to their coming over; and becauſe a conſiderable Number of German Roman Catholicks had come along with the Proteſtants, ſuch of them as did not think fit voluntarily to change their Religion, were, at the Queen's Expence, ſent back to Holland, where, thro' unexampled Generoſity, her Majeſty order'd a Sum of Money to be diſtributed to them, towards their Charges in their Journey homewards. As for the Palatines who ſtaid behind in Great Britain, a few of them were entertained in private Families; others diſpoſed of to the ſeveral Pariſhes, who were allowed a certain Sum for each of them; others ſent to Ireland; others to Carolina; and the greateſt Part to New York, under the Direction of Commiſſary Dupré, who, with them, ſailed for that Country about the beginning of April 1710, together with Colonel Hunter, Governor of that Country. But, 'tis to be obſerv'd, that being a lazy, uninduſtrious People, above Two Thirds of them periſh'd in few Years.

On the 23d of June, the Britiſh Parliament was further prorogued to the 6th of October; and on the 30th of that Month, (June) the Queen, with her Court, removed to Windſor; where the Marquis de Queſne had his Audience of Leave a few Days after †: And Francis Manning, Eſq; Secretary to Mr. Stanyan, the Queen's Envoy Extraordinary in Swiſſerland, was appointed her Majeſty's Secretary to the Republick of the Griſons. On the 16th of July, the Marquis Viali, Envoy Extraordinary from the Republick of Genoa, had his private Audience of Leave: And the ſame Day, the Earl of Dorſet and Middleſex, took Poſſeſſion of the Office of Conſtable of Dover Caſtle, and Lord Warden of the Cinque-Ports, with great Solemnity.

By this Time, the Earl of Wharton, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, being arrived * at Dublin, receiv'd the Compliments of the Magiſtrates, and of the Univerſity of that City; and on the 5th of May, open'd the Seſſion of the Parliament of that Kingdom. Some Days having been ſpent, by both Houſes, in drawing up, and preſenting both condoling and congratulatory Addreſſes, the Commons order'd ſeveral Heads of Bills to be brought in, and, on the 12th of May, readily voted a Supply, which they afterwards ‖ ſettled at the Sum of Seventy Five Thouſand Pounds. Two Days * after, the Commons unanimouſly reſolv'd, that an Addreſs be made to her Majeſty, " Setting forth the fatal Conſequences of reverſing the " Outlawries of Perſons attainted of Treaſon, for the Rebellions in 1641, and 1688; to " which Addreſs the Queen afterwards return'd a gracious Anſwer." On the 10th of the ſame Month, the Lord-Mayor, Recorder, and Aldermen of Dublin, waited on the Lord Lieutenant, and preſented him with his Freedom of that City, in a Gold Box; and on the 22d, his Excellency went to the Parliament-Houſe, with the uſual State, and gave the Royal Aſſent to the Act, for the better ſecuring to her Majeſty, the Payments of ſuch Duties as ſhould be granted to her Majeſty, this Seſſions of Parliament. The next Day, the Commons appointed a Committee to draw up an Addreſs to her Majeſty, " That ſhe would be graciouſly pleaſed to interpoſe, that for the " Incouragement of the Linnen-Manufacture in that Kingdom, the Term for Ex- " porting Linnen-Cloth to the Plantations might be enlarg'd." The Lords, as well as the Commons, having (on the 28th of June) adjourn'd to the next Day, the Feaſt of St. Peter and St. Paul; John, Lord Biſhop of Rapho, enter'd his Proteſt; " Becauſe he conceiv'd it is againſt the Laws of the Church, and a late Act of " Parliament, to do Buſineſs on a Holy-Day; which might hinder Divine Worſhip, " Prayers and Sacraments, Sermons or Homilies, or Catechiſms; leſt it ſhould be " a Robbery of God, as well as Tythes and Offerings." On the 29th, the Lords ſignified to the Biſhop, that unleſs he withdrew his Proteſt, they would commit him: And that Prelate being obſtinate, and refuſing to do it, their Lordſhips reſolved to commit him Priſoner to the Caſtle; and accordingly, he was taken into the Cuſtody of the Gentleman-Uſher of the Black-Rod. After this, the Lords adjourn'd to the 28th of July next; as did likewiſe the Commons; in Expectation of the Return of the Heads of Bills prepared by the Houſe, and ſent into Great Britain.

The Parliament adjourn'd.

The Parliament met again on the 28th of July; but, at the Deſire of the Lord Lieutenant, the Houſes adjourn'd themſelves to the 5th of Auguſt; when ſome of the Bills, that had been approved by the Privy-Council of Great Britain, were laid before the Commons, and read. The ſame * Day, the Lower Houſe of Convocation was in a very high and hot Debate, occaſion'd by a Queſtion about the Power of adjourning; of which the Lord Lieutenant being inform'd, his Excellency ſent immediate Orders to prorogue the Convocation to the 5th of October next, to their great Surprize and Mortification. 'Tis to be obſerved, that tho' Dr. Brown, who was then Chairman of the Committee, was (ſome Time after) promoted to the Biſhoprick of Cork, upon the Merit of having ſent the Lord Lieutenant early Notice of what paſſed in the Lower Houſe; yet, upon the Change of the Miniſtry, he was the moſt violent of all the Iriſh Prelates, againſt the Earl of Wharton, and the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, (who promoted him,) and indeed, againſt the whole Whig-Party; to whom he render'd himſelf ſtill more obnoxious, by his diſcountenancing the drinking to the pious and glorious Memory of King WILLIAM the Third. In order to that, he wrote ſome Tracts ſo unbecoming the Dignity of the Mitre, and ſo little anſwering the Purpoſe, that King William's Memory was, afterwards, more frequently drunk to than ever, with an additional Mark of Contempt to the Biſhop of Cork; and the Sacredneſs, which he conceitedly imagin'd to be tack'd to the drinking of Commemoration-Healths, became univerſally exploded.

* Aug. 5.

The Convocation ſuddenly prorogued.

Dr. Brown, afterwards Biſhop of Cork, obnoxious to the Whigs.

On the 12th of June, the Commons read (a Second Time) the Bill for granting to her Majeſty an additional Duty on Beer, Ale, Strong-Waters, Tobacco, Callicoes, Linnens, and other Goods and Merchandizes; and there being ſome ſmall Alterations made in England, in the ſaid Bill; viz. inſtead of Four Arſenals for Arms in the Four Provinces of this Kingdom, it was alter'd to, One Arſenal, to be in Dublin; and the Words [for providing Arms for the Militia] were left out, and the Words [for the Queen's Services in this Kingdom] put in. Theſe Alterations offended ſome of the Commons; and a Debate ariſing, it laſted till paſt Six in the Evening; when the Queſtion being put, " That the Bill be committed? It was carry'd in the " Affirmative, by a Majority of One Hundred and Forty ſeven Voices, againſt " Fifty nine." Several of the Courtiers were againſt paſſing the Bill; and, among the reſt, Sir Richard Levings made ſeveral Speeches againſt it; but was oppoſed by John Forſter, Eſq; Recorder of the City of Dublin. Eight Days after, the Commons reſolved; " 1. That it appear'd to them, that ſeveral Popiſh Titular Biſhops, " and Regular Clergymen of the Church of Rome, were lately come into that King- " dom, and exerciſed within the ſame foreign Juriſdiction; and continued the Suc- " ceſſion of the Romiſh Prieſthood, by ordaining great Numbers of Popiſh Clergy- " men. 2. The Commiſſioners appointed by her Majeſty, in England, for the Settlement of the poor Palatines, having (according to the Deſire of the Government of Ireland) ſent thither Five Hundred Families of theſe Refugees; the Commons, in a Grand Committee, † took their diſtreſſed Condition into Conſideration, and came to the following Reſolutions: " 1ſt, That her Majeſty, in ſending over a Proportion of Proteſtant Palatines " into this Kingdom, had very much conſulted the Strengthening and Security of " the Proteſtant Intereſt in Ireland. 2dly, That it would very much contribute to " the Security of this Kingdom, that the ſaid Proteſtant Palatines be incouraged and " ſettled therein. 3dly, That the Houſe be moved, humbly to addreſs her Ma- " jeſty, that ſhe would be graciouſly pleaſed to direct the allowing and diſtribu- " ting of Five Thouſand Pounds, annually, for Three Years, towards the Support " and Settling of the ſaid Proteſtant Palatines in this Kingdom. 4thly, That the " ſaid annual Sum of Five Thouſand Pounds, which ſhould be allow'd and diſtri- " buted by her Majeſty among the Palatines, ſhould be made good to her Majeſty, " in the next Aids that ſhould be granted to her Majeſty by Parliament." Theſe Reſolutions being (the next ‖ Day) reported, were agreed to by the Houſe; and, Three * Days after, the Commons waited on the Lord Lieutenant, with an Addreſs to that Purpoſe. On the 30th of the ſame Month, the Lord Lieutenant went to the Houſe of Peers, with the uſual State; and the Commons attending, their Speaker, preſenting the Money-Bill, made a handſom Speech to his Excellency; who having given the Royal Aſſent to ſeveral publick and private Acts, particularly, An Act for explaining and amending an Act, intituled, An Act to prevent the further Growth of Popery; his Excellency made a Speech to both Houſes; and then the Lord Chancellor, by his Command, prorogued both Houſes of Parliament to the 13th of March next. The Doctor anſwer'd, He was apprehenſive, he had ſpoken ſome bold Truths, which might diſpleaſe ſome People: Notwithſtanding which, the Lord-Mayor undertook to propoſe to the Court of Aldermen, that they ſhould return the Doctor Thanks for his Sermon, and deſire him to print it; which he did accordingly: But tho' that Motion was rejected by a Majority, yet the Doctor, looking upon the Incouragement already given him by the Lord-Mayor,

The Parliament of Great Britain meets, Nov. 15.

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

"IT is a great Satisfaction to me, that I am able to give you ſo good an Account of the Progreſs of the War ſince the laſt Seſſion of Parliament.

"In the Beginning of this Year, our Enemies made uſe of all their Artifices, to "amuſe us with falſe Appearances, and deceitful Inſinuations of their Deſire of "Peace, in Hopes that from thence Means might be found to create ſome Diviſions, "or Jealouſies among the Allies: But they were intirely diſappointed in their "Expectation; and ſuch Meaſures were taken upon that Occaſion, as made it im-"poſſible for them long to diſguize their Inſincerity. The Operations of the War "were not delay'd; and the Campaign, which, notwithſtanding the Backwardneſs "of the Seaſon, immediately follow'd, has been, at leaſt, as glorious for the Allies, "as any of thoſe which have preceded it.

"GOD Almighty has been pleas'd to bleſs us with a moſt remarkable Victory, "and with ſuch other great and important Succeſſes, both before and after it, that "France is thereby become much more expoſed and open to the Impreſſion of our "Arms, and, conſequently, more in need of a Peace, than it was at the Beginning "of this Campaign.

"However, the War ſtill continuing, I find my ſelf obliged again to deſire you, "Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, to grant me ſuch Supplies, as you ſhall judge "neceſſary for the aſſiſting our Allies in all Parts, and the vigorous Proſecution of "our Advantages; that we may put the laſt Hand to this great Work, of reducing "that exorbitant and oppreſſive Power, which has ſo long threaten'd the Liberties "of Europe.

"I aſſure you, that all you give, ſhall be carefully apply'd to the Uſes of the "War, if it continues, or to the leſſening of the Debts it has neceſſarily occaſion'd,

"in

A. D. 1709.

" in caſe of a Peace ; which, tho' the many Wants and Diſtreſſes of our Enemies " may naturally lead us to expect, yet our own late Experience may fully convince " us, is not to be depended upon, any other way, than by being in a Condition to " compel them to ſuch Terms, as may be ſafe and honourable for all the Allies.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" I think it proper to take notice to you, that the great Dearth and Scarcity un- " der which our Neighbours abroad have ſuffer'd this Year, begins to affect us, in " ſome meaſure, at home, by the Temptation of Profit in carrying out too much " of our Corn, while it bears ſo high a Price in foreign Parts.

" This occaſions many Complaints from the Poor ; for whoſe Sake, I earneſtly " recommend to you, to take this growing Evil into your Conſideration ; having " not neglected any Thing, on my Part, towards the remedying of it, that the Law " would allow.

" I cannot conclude, without obſerving to you, of what great Advantage it will " be, at this Time, to the End we all propoſe to our ſelves, that the greateſt Diſpatch " be given to the neceſſary Preparations for carrying on the War.

* Nov. 17. Addreſs of the Lords to the Queen.

Two Days * after, the Lords waited on the Queen with an Addreſs, expreſſing their Joy, to ſee her Majeſty's Royal Perſon upon her Throne, after the great Misfortune which deprived them of her Preſence, during the laſt Seſſion of Parliament ; as alſo, their Thanks for her Speech, whereby it appeared how readily her Tenderneſs for her People, inclined her to hearken to Propoſals of Peace, how wiſely and ſteddily ſhe proceeded in the firſt Steps of the Treaty, and how juſtly ſhe reſented the Artifices and Inſincerity of the Enemy, by the vigorous Proſecution of the War : Which ſoon made it appear, That Peace was the Choice of her Moderation, and muſt prove the only Refuge of her Enemies; Concluding, with Congratulations on the continued Succeſs of her Arms, and thoſe of her Allies, under her General, the Duke of Marlborough, whoſe Conduct was worthy of the chief Command, in ſo juſt a War, and his Valour equal to the Bravery of her Troops; and aſſuring her Majeſty of their utmoſt Support to carry on the War, 'till France was compell'd to ſubmit to the Terms of a ſafe and laſting Peace. Their Lordſhips having order'd the Lord High-Chancellor to return Thanks to the Duke of Marlborough, his Lordſhip, at his Grace's firſt Appearance in that Auguſt Aſſembly, this Seſſion, made him a Compliment, importing, " That he was commanded by the Lords, to " give his Grace the Thanks of that Houſe, for his continued and eminent Ser- " vices to her Majeſty, and the Publick, during the laſt Campaign : Of which, no- " thing could be greater ſaid, than what her Majeſty, (who always ſpoke with the " utmoſt Certainty and Exactneſs) had declared from the Throne ; that it had " been, at leaſt, as glorious, as any which had preceded it : But that this Repeti- " tion of the Thanks of that Auguſt Aſſembly, had this Advantage of the former, " that it muſt be look'd upon, as added to, and ſtanding on, the Foundations al- " ready laid in the Records of that Houſe, for the preſerving his Memory freſh to " all future Times. So that his Grace had alſo the Satisfaction of ſeeing this ever- " laſting Monument of his Glory, riſe every Year much higher. Concluding, with " wiſhing, That GOD might continue, in a wonderful Manner, to preſerve ſo in- " valuable a Life, that he might not only add to that Structure, but finiſh all, with " the Beauties and Ornaments of an honourable and laſting Peace. To this his " Grace reply'd, That he look'd upon it as the greateſt Mark of Honour he could re- " ceive, that their Lordſhips were pleaſed to take Notice of his Endeavours to ſerve the " Queen, and his Country ; And he begg'd Leave to do Juſtice to all the Officers " and Soldiers, who had ſerv'd with him ; it not being poſſible for Men to ſhew " more Zeal for her Majeſty's Service, or greater Bravery than they had " done.

Thanks return'd by the Lords to the Duke of Marlborough.

His Grace's Anſwer.

Proceedings of the Commons. † Nov. 15.

The firſt Thing the Commons did, was † to vote a Congratulatory Addreſs to the Queen, upon the continued Succeſſes of the laſt Campaign, with Aſſurances of granting ſpeedy and effectual Supplies for carrying on the War : After which, in order to ſilence the Duke of Marlborough's Enemies, who charg'd him with having wantonly, and unneceſſarily ſacrificed the Lives of many Thouſands, to raiſe his own Reputation, the Houſe came to an unanimous Reſolution, That the late Victory obtain'd by his Grace the Duke of Marlborough, and the other great and important Succeſſes of the laſt Campaign, were ſo remarkable, that this Houſe thought it ſelf obliged to expreſs, how ſenſible they were of the Honour and Advantage which this Kingdom, and the whole Confederacy, had receiv'd by his eminent Services : And that Mr. Comptroller, Mr. Secretary Boyle, Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Onſlow, Lord Coningſby, Mr. Nevil, Lord William Powlet, Mr. Craggs, Mr. Compton, Mr. Walpole, Mr. Dolben, Sir Charles Hedges, Lord Lumley, and Sir Charles Cox, ſhould give his Grace the Thanks of this Houſe, and congratulate his Grace's Safety, and Return to Great Britain. Theſe Gentlemen having, on the 22d of November, waited on the Duke with the ſaid Reſolution, his Grace re-

They vote Thanks to the Duke of Marlborough.

turn'd

turn'd them an Anſwer, importing, " That it was a great Honour and Satisfaction " to him, that the Houſe of Commons was pleaſed to take ſo much Notice of his " Endeavours to ſerve his Queen, and his Country: And that he could not be juſt " to all the Officers and Soldiers who had ſerv'd with him, unleſs he took this Oc- " caſion to aſſure the Commons, that their Zeal and Affection for the Service, " was equal to the Courage and Bravery they had ſhewn during this whole " War.

The Commons made good their Aſſurances to the Queen: For having taken into Conſideration the ſeveral Accounts and Eſtimates relating to the Navy, Land-Forces and Subſidies, they had hardly ſat one Month, before they had granted all the neceſſary (a) Sums for the next Year's Service, amounting to Six Millions, One Hundred Eighty Four Thouſand, Four Hundred Sixty Six Pounds, Seven Shillings. They not only gave this vaſt Sum with great Unanimity and Chearfulneſs, but with equal Zeal and Application, conſider'd of Ways and Means to raiſe the ſame: And having voted a Land-Tax of Four Shillings in the Pound, and continued the Malt-Tax for one Year longer, they reſolved to lay additional or new Duties on Coals, Culm, and Cinders, and Dwelling-Houſes, for the Term of Two and Thirty Years; to make up a Fund of One Hundred Thirty Five Thouſand Pounds, to raiſe Fifteen Hundred Thouſand Pounds, by way of a Lottery, of which the Lord Treaſurer cauſed a Scheme to be publiſh'd. Some Days before, the Commons took * into Conſideration, that Part of the Queen's Speech, relating to the Exportation of Corn; and order'd a Bill to be brought in, to prohibit the Exportation of Corn, Malt, Meal, Flower, Bread, Biſcuit, Starch, Low-wines, and Spirits drawn from malted Corn; and reſolved to preſent an Addreſs to her Majeſty, " That ſhe " would be pleas'd to order an Embargo to be forthwith laid upon all Ships laden " with Corn, to be exported to Foreign Parts:" Which Order her Majeſty gave † in Council accordingly. Three Days ‖ after, the Commons order'd a Bill to be brought in, to regulate the Price and Aſſize of Bread. And, on the 2d of December, upon a Motion made by Mr. Hungerford, (who, in the former Seſſion, had procured the Act againſt laying of Wagers) they order'd a Bill to be brought in, to prevent all immoderate and exceſſive Gaming. The Commons made ſuch Diſpatch in the Bill for a Land-Tax, and for prohibiting the Exportation of Corn, Malt, &c. that the ſame being ready by the 10th of December, the Queen came that Day to the Houſe of Peers, with the uſual Solemnity, and the Commons attending, her Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to thoſe Two Acts, and to a private Bill. Two Days  after, upon the Petition of ſeveral Bookſellers, a Bill was order'd to be brought in, for ſecuring to them the Properties of Books, bought and obtain'd by them: The Title of which Bill, in order to give it an eaſy Paſſage through both Houſes, was thus alter'd; a Bill for the Encouragement of Learning, by veſting the Copies of printed Books, in the Authors, or Purchaſers of ſuch Copies.

By this Time, the Commons were enter'd upon an Affair, that made a great Noiſe in the Beginning, and proved moſt fatal in its Conſequences: I mean, the cenſuring the Sermon preach'd by Dr. Sacheverel, at the Cathedral Church of

A. D. 1709.

St. Paul, on the laſt Gunpowder-Treaſon-Day; and which, as was hinted before, in open Defiance to the Court of Aldermen, and, indeed, to the whole Whig Party, he cauſed to be printed, with this diſtinguiſhing Title, THE PERILS OF FALSE BRETHREN, both in Church and State. But before we begin the Narrative of this important Tranſaction, it ſeems abſolutely neceſſary to ſet before the Reader's Eyes, the Portrait of the Perſon who is to make the principal Figure in it. Dr. Henry Sacheverel, was a Man of a large, ſtrong Make, and good Symmetry of Parts; of a livid Complexion, and audacious Look, without Sprightlineſs: The Reſult and Indication of an envious, ill-natured, proud, ſullen, and ambitious Spirit. He was deſcended of a Family, which, in one of its Branches, made a conſiderable Figure in Derbyſhire: But his Grandfather, John Sacheverel, and his Brother Timothy, who were both bred Miniſters in St. John's College in Oxford, having, during the Troubles, adher'd to the Diſſenters, were both ſilenced, ſoon after the Reſtoration; and John being taken at a Meeting, ſuffer'd Three Years Impriſonment, which occaſion'd his Death. His eldeſt Son, by his firſt Wife, was bred in King's College in Cambridge; entertain'd Notions and Inclinations quite oppoſite to his Father's Principles; and was Miniſter of St. Peter's Church in Marlborough: But leaving his Widow, and a numerous Family, in very low Circumſtances, his Son Henry, was indebted for his firſt Education at the publick School in Marlborough, to the Beneficence of Mr. Edward Hearſt, his Godfather, who, by a joint Conſent with his Wife, adopted him as his Son. After he had made ſome tolerable Improvements in human Learning, he was, by Mrs. Hearſt, ſent to the Univerſity of Oxford, and admitted into Magdalen College, where he had not been long, before he diſcover'd his turbulent, violent, and imperious Temper, by his diſreſpectful Behaviour to his Superiors, and his Inſolence to his Equals. Pride ſhew'd itſelf, likewiſe, early in him, in this Inſtance: When he came to be ordain'd by Dr. Lloyd, then Biſhop of Litchfield and Coventry, and afterwards of Worceſter, that Learned Prelate charging him with falſe Latin, the preſuming young Man, ſtiffly defended it, 'till the Biſhop was forc'd to ſend for Books out of his Study, to convince him. The Biſhop having aſk'd him ſome Queſtions in Divinity, and finding him very raw and ignorant, he refuſed to ordain him then, and ſet him a Time of Study, to be better prepared and qualified: But though, upon the Recommendation of the Biſhop of Oxford, he was, afterwards, admitted into Holy Orders, by the other Biſhop, with particular Marks of Favour, yet, nevertheleſs, he ungenerouſly traduced that pious and learned Prelate, in a Libel, call'd, The Character of a Low-Churchman. Nor was his Malice and Ingratitude leſs conſpicuous, with reſpect to the famous Dr. Burnet, Biſhop of Sarum, whom he reviled and vilify'd in ſeveral Writings, although his Mother was principally oblig'd to his Lordſhip, for her Admiſſion into an Hoſpital, or College, erected and endowed for diſtreſſed Widows, of which his Lordſhip was one of the Truſtees. The inveterate Hatred he bore to thoſe Two bright Luminaries of the Church of England, was upon the Score of their firm Adherence to the Revolution Principles: For though ſoon after the Queen's Acceſſion, he preach'd * a Sermon before the Univerſity of Oxford, in which he defended her Majeſty's Title to the Crown, and juſtify'd her entring into a War with France and Spain; yet 'tis certain, that while he reſided, either at his ſmall Living in Staffordſhire, or in the Univerſity, he fell in with the moſt furious of the High-Church, and Jacobite Party; made ſcurrilous Reflections on the Death of King William, and the Hanover Succeſſion; and when Queen Anne took the Low-Church Party into Favour, he could not forbear calling her a Waxen Queen: Whereby he either alluded to, or gave the Hint of the tacit Jeſt that was paſs'd upon her at Oxford, by thoſe who put her Motto of SEMPER EADEM, in the Vane of a Weather-Cock. About this Time, he commenc'd Doctor of Divinity: And this Degree adding Spirit to his Party-Rage, and Inveteracy againſt the Diſſenters, he preach'd ſeveral Sermons at Oxford, Litchfield, Leiceſter, Derby, and other Places, wherein he endeavour'd to diſaffect and inflame the People againſt the preſent Adminiſtration. Having, through the Lenity of the Government, once eſcap'd a Proſecution, his Friends adviſed him to be quiet, forewarning him, that his fiery, indiſcreet Zeal would, one Time or other, bring him into great Trouble. But all Admonition was loſt upon him: His Ambition ſuggeſted to him the Reſolution to make himſelf famous, at any Rate; and, Eroſtratus like, rather to ſet the whole Nation in a Flame, than not to be talk'd of. With this noble Deſign, he came up to London, and by Means of ſome Friends, who judg'd him to be a proper Tool for the Leaders of their Party, having attain'd the Pulpit of St. Paul, on the Solemn Day of the Gunpowder Treaſon, he there boldly deliver'd his Favourite Itinerant Sermon, which had the intended Effect; and gave no ſmall Offence, not only to the Diſſenters, but alſo to all the Aſſerters of the late Revolution; againſt whoſe Principles, that Piece of Pulpit Oratory, was equally levell'd.

His Character.

levell'd. The latter, both in private Diſcourſe, and in ſeveral printed Papers, loudly complain'd of the wild and unaccountable Efforts of reſtleſs Spirits, to divide and embroil the Nation, under the beſt and mildeſt of Governments; that 'twas Matter of very melancholy Reflection to obſerve, great Numbers of thoſe, who either thro' a Surfeit of Liberty, or a Deſire of Change, were, like the Iſraelites, for returning into Egypt, and bringing upon their own, and the Necks of others, that Yoke, which neither they nor their Fathers were able to bear. " That Dr. Sacheverell, in his Dedication of his " Sermon to my Lord-Mayor, condemn'd Appeals to the People, as the only Judges " of Right and Wrong, as Rebellious:" Whereas, had he conſulted our Ancient Hiſtorians, he might have found, that the People, either by themſelves, or their Repreſentatives, were the dernier Reſort of Juſtice and Dominion. That this Right of the People was not only evident from the Firſt Book of Samuel, and many other unanſwerable Inſtances of Scripture; but from the very Nature of the Thing, and all Notions of Sovereign and independent Government: For if every Sovereign Government had not a dernier Reſort within themſelves, they muſt be dependent ſomewhere or other; and no Controverſies betwixt Princes and their Subjects, could be determin'd without an Appeal to a Foreign Judicature; which deſtroys all Notions of Sovereignty, unleſs we place it in an univerſal Monarch. That as God never appointed any ſuch, we have no Way left to decide ſuch Controverſies, but by the Body of the People, or their Repreſentatives, as was practis'd by GOD's own People, the Jews, according to his own Direction, without referring them to the eldeſt of Adam's, or Noah's Line, who muſt certainly have had the Right of Dominion, had it been founded on Primogeniture, by a Divine Law, as the Doctor contended. That the Church (which, according to the 19th Article of the Church of England, is the Congregation or Body of the Faithful) are by themſelves, or their true Repreſentatives, Judges of Religious Matters, according to the Canon of the Scriptures, as is evident from Art. 20. and Canon 139, and from the Practice of our Anceſtors, as was unanſwerably prov'd by Selden, in his Hiſtorical and Political Diſcourſe of the Laws and Government of England. That our Progenitors acted in this according to the Apoſtolical Practice and Pattern; for in the Firſt Oecumenical, and Unerring Synod, held at Jeruſalem. (Acts 15. Ver. 4, 6, 12, 22, and 23.) the Multitude, the whole Church, was preſent, and join'd with the Apoſtles in their Decree about Circumciſion, Idolatry, Fornication, Things ſtrangled, and Blood. That our Conſtitution in Church and State, for which the Doctor pretended ſuch Zeal, was attack'd by none ſo violently, as by himſelf, and thoſe of his Principles; who, under Pretence of ſupporting it, did actually undermine it; which made him, and his Party, liable to all the Anathemas with which he threaten'd others: For, inſtead of the falſe Charge which he brought againſt Moderate Churchmen, and thoſe he call'd Fanaticks, whom he would have to be united Friends and Brethren of the Papiſts, he made it evident that he himſelf, and his Faction, were juſtly chargeable with it, and that they fell in with the Deſigns of thoſe who were for a Popiſh Prince, and a French Government; whereas the Moderate Churchmen, and Diſſenters, had given undeniable Proofs of their unbiaſs'd and ſteady Zeal and Affection to the Government, during the laſt and preſent Reign. That no Man in his Senſes could believe, that ſuch Men, as Doctor Sacheverel, were Friends to her Majeſty's Government, and the Conſtitution, who aſſerted the abſolute Illegality of reſiſting Princes on any Pretence whatſoever; That all the World knew her Majeſty her ſelf, and her late Royal Conſort, join'd thoſe that took Arms againſt her Father, out of a Senſe of a ſuperior Obligation they were under to GOD and their Country; whoſe Religion, Laws and Conſtitution, that unhappy Prince had openly invaded, and deſign'd totally to ſubvert. That if Reſiſtance be unlawful, on any Pretence whatever, her Majeſty was guilty of an unnatural Rebellion, and an unjuſt Uſurpation, by ſuffering her Claim to be inſerted in the Claim of Right, and by actually entring upon the Government according to it, upon the Death of thoſe, who by that Intail had the Precedency; contrary to her Father's Will, who came with an Army to repoſſeſs himſelf of the Government of which he had been depriv'd, and who had provided another Heir for his Dominions, with a Deſign to exclude her late and preſent Majeſty, and all his other Proteſtant Relations. " That 'twas im- " pudent in the Doctor to aſſert, The Subjects Obligation to an abſolute and uncon- " ditional Obedience to the ſupreme Power in all Things lawful, when the Repreſenta- " tives of the Kingdom, both in Convention and Parliament, juſtify'd the depo- " ſing of the late King James, becauſe he acted contrary to his Coronation Oath, " eſtabliſh'd by Acts of Parliament, Time out of Mind, as the original Contract " and Baſis of our Government: That his Subterfuge of reſtraining our unconditonal " Obedience to Things lawful, would ſtand him in no Stead, ſince he diſcover'd his " Hypocriſy, by declaring againſt Reſiſtance, on any Pretence whatſoever, which takes " in Things unlawful, as well as lawful. That 'twas in vain for the Doctor to have " Recourſe to the ancient Doctrine, or Practice of our firſt Proteſtant Church, for " an Apology for his ſlaviſh Principles; ſince every one knew, that the Biſhops " and Clergy in Queen Elizabeth's Time, gave Money to her Majeſty to ſupport " the

" the Proteſtants of France, Holland, and Scotland, who had taken Arms againſt the " Tyranny of their reſpective Sovereigns. That our Biſhops were the chief Per- " ſons who ſollicited Queen Elizabeth, not only to deprive Queen Mary of Scots of " the Succeſſion, but likewiſe to take away her Life, though to the Plea of her be- " ing preſumptive Heir to the Crown of England, ſhe added, that of her being a " Sovereign, and independent Princeſs, as Queen of Scotland; and with the Biſhops " both Houſes of Parliament concurr'd. That by this it appear'd, That the Do- " ctrine of Non-Reſiſtance on any Pretence whatſoever, was not the Characteriſtick of the " old Proteſtant Church of England; nor was it ſo in the Reigns of King James the " Firſt, or King Charles the Firſt, ſince both thoſe Princes aſſiſted the Germans and " French, who had taken Arms againſt their oppreſſive Sovereigns, and ſent Forces " to join them. That the ſlaviſh Doctrine of Paſſive Obedience, firſt broach'd by " Archbiſhop Laud, was unanſwerably confuted by Archbiſhop Abbot: That Arch- " biſhop Williams took Arms againſt King Charles the Firſt, and the Body of the " Clergy concurr'd with the Parliament, who waged War againſt that Prince, for " levying Money without their Conſent, &c. though Eight in Ten of them were " Church of England-Men, as appear'd by their ready Conformity to the Church of " England, upon the Reſtoration. That if at any Time it cou'd be ſaid, that Non- " Reſiſtance, in the Doctor's Senſe, was the Characteriſtick of our Church, it muſt " have been in King Charles the Second's Reign; and yet 'twas plain, by the Pro- " ceedings of that very Parliament, which enacted the ſlaviſh Clauſe againſt Reſi- " ſtance on any Pretence whatever, that they did not underſtand it in the Senſe of the " Doctor, and his Brethren; for they themſelves oppos'd that Prince to his Face; " impeach'd his Miniſtry for acting contrary to Law, and adviſing him to arbitra- " ry Meaſures; condemn'd his Toleration by his diſpenſing Power; preſs'd for a Redreſs " of the Nation's Grievances, and Security from Popery, and Popiſh Counſels, and " remonſtrated againſt his Alliance with France, and his evil Counſellors. That " 'twas likewiſe well known, how vigorouſly they proſecuted the Popiſh Plot, though " they knew the Court to be in it; and that the Commons paſs'd a Bill of Exclu- " ſion againſt the Duke of York, and ſent it up to the Houſe of Lords, where the " then Biſhops had ſo far degenerated from their Predeceſſors in Queen Elizabeth's " Time, that they threw it out. And that the ſame Parliament continu'd ſo vigo- " rous in oppoſing the Popiſh and arbitrary Meaſures of the Court, that the King, " at laſt, thought fit to diſſolve them. That when King James the Second came " to the Crown, and that his Prieſts had a mind to ſhare the fat Benefices with " our Clergy, the latter then forgot their Paſſive Obedience ſo much, that they " preach'd and writ againſt the King's Adminiſtration, refus'd to read his Decla- " ration of Indulgence, and both Clergy and Laity concurr'd in the REVOLU- " TION. That Archbiſhop Sancroft himſelf, with ſeveral other of the Golden " Candleſticks, as the Seven Petitioning Biſhops were then call'd, invited the Prince " of Orange to take the Adminiſtration upon him, and the Archbiſhop went to the " Tower in Perſon, to demand the Keys of King James's Lieutenant, and put them " into the Hands of the late Lord Lucas. That the Doctor advanc'd, That the " Prince of Orange ſolemnly diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance in his Declara- " tion, when the contrary ſo manifeſtly appears by the very Words of it, (Decla- " ration 1. Art. 21.) where he declares, That he brought with him a Force ſufficient, " by the Bleſſing of God, to defend him againſt the Violence of King James's Evil Coun- " ſellors; and that the Declaration itſelf (Art. 25.) invites the whole Nation to " join with the Prince in the Execution of his Deſign, againſt all ſuch as ſhould " oppoſe him?" Several other Objections and Complaints were rais'd, both againſt Dr. Sacheverel's political Notions, and his fiery Zeal againſt the Diſſenters; and on the other Hand, there were not wanting thoſe, who in their Diſcourſes, and Writings, ſtrenuouſly maintain'd his Doctrine of Paſſive Obedience, by the Authorities of great Numbers of eminent Divines, both Engliſh and Foreigners. Theſe Diſputes having rais'd a dangerous Ferment in the Nation, there ſeem'd to be a Neceſſity to inquire into the Cauſe of that growing Evil; yet, nevertheleſs, 'twas the common Opinion, That had Dr. Sacheverel only attack'd the Diſſenters, and the Revolution Principles, in general, he might have eſcap'd a publick Cenſure; but having directly levell'd his Bolts againſt the Lord Treaſurer, whom he ſaucily mention'd by his Nick-Name of VOLPONE, there could not be wanting thoſe, who, to curry Favour, would vindicate the Prime Miniſter. The forwardeſt of theſe, was John Dolben, Eſq; Son to the late Archbiſhop of York, a Man of bold Spirit, Member of Parliament for Leſkard in Cornwall, who having laviſh'd away the beſt Part of a conſiderable Fortune he got in the Weſt-Indies, obtain'd a Penſion from the Court, and became an entire Dependant on the Treaſurer. This Gentleman having, on the 13th of December, complain'd to the Commons of Two printed Books, the one enti-

Several Paragraphs in the Epiſtle Dedicatory, to George Sacheverel, Eſq; High Sheriff of the County of Derby, preceding the firſt mention'd Book; and alſo ſeveral Paragraphs in the latter Book, were read; and thereupon Sir Peter King, Recorder of the City of London, and ſome other Members, made Speeches againſt the Audaciouſneſs of Dr. Sacheverel, who had advanced Poſitions diametrically oppoſite to the Revolution-Principles; to the preſent eſtabliſh'd Government; and to the Proteſtant Succeſſion; and, conſequently, tending to foment Factions and Diviſions, and ſtir up Rebellion. Thoſe who favour'd the Doctor's Cauſe, being ſomewhat ſurprized, ſtood at a Gaze; and no Member offering to ſpeak in his Defence, it was Reſolv'd, " That a Book, entitled, The Communication of Sin; " being a Sermon preach'd at the Aſſizes held at Derby, Auguſt 15. 1709; and a " Book, entituled, The Perils of Falſe Brethren both in Church and State; ſet forth in a " Sermon preached before the Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens " of London, at the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, on the Fifth of November 1709. Purſuant to this Order, Dr. Sacheverel repair'd, on the 14th of December, to Weſtminſter, in the Coach of Dr. Lancaſter, Vice Chancellor of the Univerſity of Oxford, and Rector of St. Martins in the Fields, who accompanied him to the Court of Requeſts, where they found above a Hundred other eminent Clergymen, moſt of whom thought themſelves attack'd in the Perſon of their Brother; and therefore came to that Place, both out of Curioſity to know his Fate, and, as much as lay in their Power, to defend his Cauſe. The Commons being inform'd, that Dr. Sacheverel and Henry Clements attended, the Firſt was called in, and at the Bar examin'd " touching the Two Ser- " mons complain'd of the Day before to the Houſe, where he own'd the Preaching, " the Directing of the Printing, and the Publiſhing the Sermon preach'd the Fifth " of November 1709, at the Cathedral Church of St. Paul; and the Dedication of " it." At the ſame time, he acquainted the Houſe with the Encouragement † he had receiv'd from the Lord-Mayor of London for the Printing the ſaid Sermon; and own'd " alſo, that the Epiſtle Dedicatory to the Sermon preach'd at the Aſſizes of " Derby, the Fifteenth of Auguſt 1709. was agreeable to that which he put to the " Impreſſion of that Sermon, which he directed to be printed and publiſh'd." The Doctor being withdrawn, the Lord-Mayor, a Member of the Houſe, was aſk'd, Whether he had commanded Dr. Sacheverel to print this Sermon, as he ſuggeſted in the Dedication of it, and had juſt now inſinuated? But the Lord-Mayor diſowning, that he ever deſired, ordered, or encouraged the Printing of that Sermon; another Member ſaid, they ought to give more Credit to a Member of that Houſe, than to one who had preach'd ſuch Sermons. A Queſtion being after propos'd, " That Dr. Henry " Sacheverel be impeach'd of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, he was call'd in again, " and aſk'd, if he had any thing to offer to the Houſe?" The Doctor ſtanding to what he had ſaid before, without expreſſing the leaſt Conſciouſneſs of having done amiſs, he was directed to withdraw; and then the Houſe Reſolv'd, That the ſaid Dr. Henry Sacheverel be impeach'd of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors: And order'd, " 1. That Mr. Dolben ſhould go to the Lords, and at their Bar, in the Name of all " the Commons of Great Britain, impeach the ſaid Dr. Sacheverel of High Crimes " and Miſdemeanors, and acquaint the Lords, that this Houſe would, in due Time, " exhibit Articles againſt the ſaid Dr. Henry Sacheverel. 2. That a Committee be " appointed to draw up Articles of Impeachment againſt the ſaid Dr. Henry Sache- " verel; which was done accordingly, with Power to ſend for Perſons, Papers, and " Records, and to ſit de Die in Diem." Then Henry Clements was call'd in, and having own'd the Printing and Publiſhing the ſaid Two Books, which he ſaid he had from Dr. Sacheverel, he was directed to withdraw, and no further Notice was taken of him: But it was order'd, That Dr. Henry Sacheverel be taken into the Cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms. The Commons having proceeded thus far, in order to puniſh an indiſcreet Preacher, ſome Members took from thence Occaſion to ſpeak in favour of another Divine, whoſe Principles were more agreeable to the Sentiments of the

The ſame Day, Mr. Dolben, accompanied by a great Number of Members, went to the Houſe of Lords, and at their Bar impeach'd Dr. Henry Sacheverel of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, in the Name of the Commons of Great Britain; acquainting their Lordſhips, that the Commons would, in due Time, exhibit Articles againſt the ſaid Dr. Henry Sacheverel; and that he was in Cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms, ready to be deliver'd to the Gentleman-Uſher of the Black Rod, when the Lords ſhould pleaſe to give Order therein. And then both Houſes adjourn'd till Monday the 9th of January following.

The Proceedings againſt Dr. Sacheverel occaſion'd various Reflections and Speculations; caſt a Damp on the uſual Rejoicings of the Chriſtmaſs Holy-Days; and increaſed the Jealouſies and Animoſities between the Two Parties of High-Church and Low-Church to ſuch a Degree, that all Freedom of Converſation was baniſh'd; and inſtead of it Diſputes and Quarrels, at leaſt, Coldneſs and Shyneſs, ſucceeded, amongſt the moſt intimate Acquaintance and neareſt Relations. The Preamble to the Articles being read accordingly, and a Motion made by the Doctor's Friends, That the ſaid Report be recommitted; the ſame occaſion'd a very warm Debate, wherein Mr. Robert Harley, Mr. Bromley, Mr. Ward, and ſome others, made ſeveral Exceptions to the Matter and Form of the ſaid Articles. Mr. Harley, in particular, either not foreſeeing what Advantage he was, afterwards, to draw from this Proſecution, or rightly judging, that the Courtiers would grow the more eager upon it by his Oppoſition: Mr. Harley, I ſay, inſiſted on the leaving out the Word Seditious; alledging a fatal Precedent in the Reign of King

It being late, Candles were order'd to be brought in; and the Houſe having agreed to the ſaid First Paragraph, proceeded to the Examination of the Articles, which being ſeverally read, one by one, were (upon the Queſtion ſeverally put thereupon) agreed to be the Articles to be exhibited againſt Dr. Henry Sacheverel. The next Day, the engroſs'd Articles being read, Mr. Dolben was order'd to carry the ſame to the Lords; which he did accordingly, accompany'd by a great Number of Members. That Queen* Elizabeth was deluded by Archbiſhop Grindal, whom he ſcurrilouſly call'd a falſe Son of the Church, and a perfidious Prelate, to the Toleration of the Genevian Diſcipline: And that it was the Duty of Superior Paſtors, to thunder out their Eccleſiaſtical Anathemas againſt Perſons intitled to the Benefit of the ſaid Toleration; and inſolently dared, or defied any Power on Earth to reverſe ſuch Sentence. 3dly, That the Church of England was in a Condition of great Peril and Adverſity under her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; and, in order to arraign and blacken the Vote or Reſolution of both Houſes of Parliament, approved by her Majeſty, (mention'd in the Preamble, and importing, That the Church of England was in a ſafe and flouriſhing Condition, under the Queen's Adminiſtration) he did ſuggeſt the Church to be in Danger; and, as a Parallel, mention'd, That the Perſon of King Charles was voted to be out of Danger, at the ſame Time that his Murderers were conſpiring his Death; thereby wickedly and maliciouſly inſinuating, That the Members of both Houſes, who paſs'd the ſaid Vote, were then conſpiring the Ruin of the Church. 4thly, That her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, both in Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Affairs, tended to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution; and that there were Men of Characters and Stations, in Church and State, who were falſe Brethren; and did themſelves weaken, undermine, betray, and did incourage and put it in the Power of others, who were profeſs'd Enemies, to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment: And charged her Majeſty, and thoſe in Authority under her, both in Church and State, with a general Male-Adminiſtration: And, as a publick Incendiary, he perſwaded her Majeſty's Subjects to keep up a Diſtinction of Factions and Parties; inſtill'd groundleſs Jealouſies, fomented deſtructive Diviſions among them, and excited and ſtirr'd them up to Arms and Violence. And that his ſaid malicious and ſeditious Suggeſtions might make the ſtronger Impreſſions upon the Minds of her Majeſty's Subjects, He, the ſaid Henry Sacheverel, did wickedly wreſt and pervert divers Texts and Paſſages of holy Scripture. After the exhibiting of theſe Articles, the Serjeant at Arms attending, the Commons deliver'd Dr. Sacheverel to the Deputy-Uſher of the Black Rod; And their Lordſhips having read the ſaid Articles, order'd that a Copy of them ſhould be given to the Doctor, who, on the 14th, was admitted to Bail. Dr. Lancaſter and Dr. Bowes were his Sureties: And being now at Liberty, he conſulted learned Council in the Law, and ſome eminent Divines, and, with their joint Aſſiſtance, drew up an Anſwer; wherein he either deny'd the falſe, malicious, and ſeditious Poſitions and Suggeſtions, charg'd upon him in the Articles before-mention'd, or endeavour'd to juſtify, palliate and extenuate, what he had advanc'd in his Sermons: Concluding with this ſatyrical Exclamation; "Hard is the "Lot of the Miniſters of the Goſpel, if when they cite the Word of GOD in their "general Exhortations to Piety and Virtue, or in their Reproofs of Men's Tranſ-"greſſions, or where they are lamenting the Difficulty and Conflicts with which "the Church of Chriſt, whilſt Militant here on Earth, muſt always ſtruggle; the "ſeveral Texts and Paſſages by them cited, ſhall be ſaid to have been by them meant "of particular Perſons and Things; and ſhall be conſtrued in the moſt criminal "Senſe, and be made, by ſuch Conſtruction, one Ground of an Impeachment for "High Crimes and Miſdemeanors!" Feb. 2. Report of the Committee about Dr. Sacheverel's Anſwer.

On the 2d of February, Mr. Dolben reported from the Committee, to whom the Anſwer of Dr. Henry Sacheverel was referr'd, That they had conſider'd the ſame, and find there were contained therein many Things, not warranted by the Courſe of Proceedings upon Impeachments, foreign to the Charge, unbecoming a Perſon impeach'd, and plainly deſign'd to reflect upon the HONOUR of the HOUSE: And did humbly ſubmit to the Judgment of the Houſe their Opinion; That for avoiding any Imputation of Delay to the Commons, in a Caſe of ſo great Importance, a Replication be forthwith ſent up to the Lords, maintaining the Charge of the Commons, and that the Committee had accordingly prepared the ſame; which he read in his Place, and, with the Report, deliver'd in at the Table. The Replication being read a ſecond Time, occaſion'd ſome Debate, in which ſome of the Doctor's Friends inſinuated, That it were adviſable to leave this Offender to the ordinary Courſe of Juſtice. But this wholeſom Counſel coming from the Enemy's Quarter, the Courtiers were deaf to it; and, like Men infatuated to their own Ruin, deliberately ſet fire to the Mine, by which they were to be blown up. Thus the Queſtion being put, it was carry'd by a Majority of One Hundred and Eighty two Voices, againſt Eighty eight, that the Replication before-mention'd be the Replication of the Houſe, and engroſſed; importing,

Feb. 3. Replication of the Commons.

" That the Commons having conſider'd the Anſwer of Henry Sacheverel, " Doctor in Divinity, to the Articles of Impeachment exhibited againſt him, " did obſerve, that there were many Things in it not warranted by the Courſe of " Proceedings upon Impeachments, foreign to the Charge of the Commons, un- " becoming a Perſon impeach'd, and plainly deſign'd to reflect upon the Honour " of the Houſe of Commons in this Proceeding; for which they might demand " their Lordſhips immediate Juſtice: But that the Commons being ſenſible, that " the Nature of the Crimes whereof he ſtood impeach'd, and the Neceſſity of " bringing him to a ſpeedy and exemplary Puniſhment, requir'd, that all Occaſi- " ons of Delay ſhould be avoided; And not doubting that their Lordſhips would, " in due Time, vindicate the Honour of the Commons, and the Juſtice of their " Proceeding; the Commons did aver their Charge againſt the ſaid Henry Sache- " verel to be true; and that the ſaid Henry Sacheverel was guilty in ſuch man- " ner as he ſtood impeach'd: And that the Commons would be ready to prove " their Charge againſt him, at ſuch convenient Time as ſhould be appointed for " that Purpoſe." The next † Day, Mr. Dolben carried the Original Anſwer of Dr. Sacheverel, and the Replication of the Commons, to the Lords; who, on the 4th of February, ſent a Meſſage to the Commons, That their Lordſhips had appointed the Thurſday following, (being the 9th of that Month) at Eleven a Clock in the Forenoon, for the Tryal of Dr. Henry Sacheverel, at the Bar of their Houſe; and that their Lordſhips would take care, that there ſhould be Conveniencies made there for the Managers of the Commons, at the Tryal upon the Impeachment againſt him. Hereupon the Commons reſolv'd, That MANAGERS be appointed, to make good the Articles of Impeachment againſt Dr. Henry Sacheverel; and order'd, that the Committee, to whom it was referr'd to draw up the ſaid Articles, be the ſaid MANAGERS: Viz. Sir John Holland, Comptroller of her Majeſty's Houſhold; Mr. Secretary Boyle; Mr. Smith, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Sir James Montagne, Attorney-General; Robert Eyre, Eſq; Sollicitor-General; Robert Walpole, Eſq; Treaſurer of the Navy; Sir Joſeph Jekyl, Mr. Lechmere, Mr. Dolben, Sir Thomas Parker; Sir Peter King, Recorder of the City of London; Sir John Holles; the Lord William Powlet, the Lord Conirgsby; Mr. Spencer Cowper, Mr. William Thompſon, Lieutenant-General Stanhope, Lieutenant-General Mordaunt, Mr. Compton, and Sir David Dalrymple. It was afterwards debated, and the Queſtion put, Whether the Houſe, in a Body, or in a Committee of the whole Houſe, ſhould be preſent at the Tryal? Which was carried for the Committee of the whole Houſe, by a Majority of One Hundred Ninety Two Voices, againſt One Hundred and Eighty: And the Doctor's Friends having, on this Occaſion, been the ſtronger, Mr. Bromley, one of the moſt eminent amongſt them, was ſent to the Houſe of Lords, to acquaint their Lordſhips with that Reſolution; and to deſire that a convenient Accommodation might be prepared for the Commons. Mr. Bromley having, on the 6th of February, carried this Meſſage to the Lords, their Lordſhips, the ſame Day, ſent a Meſſage of their own to the Commons, to acquaint them, That they had order'd the Lords with White Staves, humbly to move her Majeſty, that ſhe would be pleas'd to give Order for a Place to be prepared in Weſtmin-

† Feb. 3. Meſſage from the Lords to the Commons, about Dr. Sacheverel's Anſwer.

Managers appointed by the Commons.

A. D. 1709-10.

Weſtminſter-Hall for their Lordſhips, to proceed upon the Trial of Dr. Sacheverel; and on the 8th of February, the Lords ſent another Meſſage to the Commons, importing, That her Majeſty had given Order, that a Court be prepared in Weſtminſter-Hall for that Purpoſe, which would take up ſome Time; and therefore the Tryal could not be at the Time appointed; but that as ſoon as the Place was prepar'd, the Commons ſhould have Notice of it. The next Day Dr. Sacheverel made his Appearance at the Bar of the Lords Houſe, but he was told that his Tryal was put off, and that he ſhould have timely Notice when it ſhould come on. In the mean Time, the Doctor's Friends, both in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and in moſt Places in the Country, were extreamly buſy; and in their private Meetings drank his Health, and happy Deliverance.

The Day of Tryal put off, Feb. 9.

On the 20th of February, the Lords ſent a Meſſage to the Commons, to acquaint them, that their Lordſhips had appointed Monday, the 27th of that Month, for the Tryal of Dr. Henry Sacheverel. Whereupon the Commons appointed a Committee to go and ſee what Conveniencies and Accommodations were made in Weſtminſter-Hall, for the Committee of their Houſe, and the Managers. On the 24th and 25th, they made ſeveral Orders, relating to that Affair, and all Things being prepar'd, on the 27th of February, about Twelve a-Clock in the Morning, the Lords, in their Formalities, went down to the Court in Weſtminſter-Hall, where a vaſt Number of Spectators had been admitted. The Managers of the Commons, and the Committee of their whole Houſe, having taken their reſpective Places, and Dr. Sacheverel been brought to the Bar, Sir James Montague, Attorney-General, ſpoke firſt in behalf of the Commons of Great Britain, ſhewing the Reaſons of this Proſecution, which was not intended againſt the Function, but againſt a particular Perſon. He was ſeconded by Mr. Lechmere, who enlarg'd upon the Nature, and aggravated the Enormity of the Crimes for which Dr. Sacheverel ſtood impeach'd: After which the Doctor's Epiſtle, prefix'd to the Sermon he preach'd at the Aſſizes held at Derby, was read; as were alſo ſeveral Paragraphs of the Sermon preach'd at the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, on which the Articles of Impeachment were grounded; and then the Lords adjourn'd the Tryal to the next Morning. Accordingly, on the laſt Day of February, the Lords being ſat at the uſual Hour, the Commons having taken their Seats, and the Queen being come incognito to a Box, prepared for her Majeſty near the Throne, Sir Joſeph Jekyl, one of the Managers for the Commons, to make good the firſt Article of Impeachment, ſpoke to this Effect:

Dr. Sacheverel's Tryal begins, Feb 27.

My LORDS,

Sir Joſeph Jekyl's Speech about Paſſive Obedience.

" THE Commons cannot but think it hard, that in this Aſſembly of the Britiſh Nation, after more than One and Twenty Years Enjoyment of the " Advantages ariſing by the late HAPPY REVOLUTION, it ſhould be neceſſary to " plead in Vindication of it. They, who ſhare in the Legiſlature with your Lord- " ſhips, have put themſelves in the Nature of Suitors to you, againſt this Offender, " in whom your Lordſhips will ſee the Reverſe of a true Engliſh Subject. If the " Juſtice of the Revolution be eſtabliſh'd, the Toleration will be rejoic'd in by ſome, " and grievous to none: But if the Juſtice of that Foundation be queſtion'd, every " Thing built upon it is, in ſome Degree, ſhaken; and an Opportunity given for " Diſputes, never to be ended, but by a total Subverſion of our Government and " Conſtitution. From what Quarter is it, that all the Obſtruction and Oppoſition " to the late King, and to her Majeſty, has come? Upon the Succeſſion depends our " preſent Happineſs, and future Hopes; and yet this Criminal at the Bar, has not " thought fit once to go out of his Way, as to mention it in his Anſwer. Can " the Pretender have any Hopes, but in Avoidance of that Law? Can it be thought " proper to preach this Doctrine in the Reign of the Beſt of Princes, which can be " of no Uſe but to the Worſt? The right ſtating the Caſe of Reſiſtance at the Revolution, will be a Means of ſettling Men's Minds in the Love of Order and Regularity, which is the great End and Deſign of the Law to ſecure. It is a fundamental Rule, that the Law is the only Meaſure of the Prince's Authority, and the People's Submiſſion to it. There is nothing plainer, than that the Senſe of the Law muſt be found out by the Law it ſelf; and that Religion has nothing to do on that " Occaſion, but to enforce the Obedience from the Conſideration of higher Rewards, " and future Puniſhments. My Lords, it may be aſſerted, that the People have an Intereſt and Right to the Law and Conſtitution: This is a Principle ariſing from the " Nature of Civil Society: And this Right the Nation aſſerted and recovered out of " the Hands of thoſe, who had diſpoſſeſs'd them of it. There are, to this Purpoſe, Two famous Inſtances in the Knowledge of the preſent Age, the Reſtoration, and the Revolution. By both theſe great and happy Events, the Regal Power,

A. D. 1709.

" and the Rights of the People were recovered; and it's hard to ſay, in which the " People had the greateſt Intereſt, they having an Advantage by every Prerogative of " the Crown. Our Conſtitution was recovered, at the Time of the Reſtoration, when " the whole was violated; and the Caſe of the Revolution is equal to it: Our great- " eſt Privileges, even that on which all others depend, viz. of giving our Conſent " to the making new Laws, or repealing old ones, was taken away, and a Diſpen- " ſing Power ſet up, in too many Inſtances to be repeated. As the Nation agreed to " the Diſeaſe, ſo likewiſe did they in the Remedy, by which the whole Frame of " the Government was entirely reſtored: A remarkable Proof of the excellent Tem- " per the Nation was in at that Time.

My LORDS, ſaid Robert Eyre, Eſq; Sollicitor-General, who ſpoke next to the ſame Article:

The Sollicitor-General's Speech.

" The Prayers appointed by Authority to be uſed on the 5th of November, regard " a double Deliverance from the Gunpowder-Treaſon Plot; but this Criminal has con- " demn'd Reſiſtance in all Caſes whatſoever. He takes notice of the Revolution, on- " ly to give it up. He allows that to be true, which every Man, and he himſelf, " knows to be falſe. He ſays the late King diſown'd, and diſclaim'd, all manner of " Reſiſtance; and that to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt odious Colours upon " his late Majeſty, which the Commons apprehend to be a full Proof of the Aſſer- " tion in the firſt Article: For Reſiſtance was the neceſſary Means uſed to bring about " the Revolution: And it carries a high Reflection upon our Great and Glorious De- " liverer, to ſay he diſclaim'd all Reſiſtance, whilſt he was actually engag'd in it, " for the Reſettlement of our Conſtitution, and to preſerve us from Popery, and Ar- " bitrary Power, which was the whole Deſign of his Labours, through his moſt Glori- " ous Reign.

" The Commons had Reaſon to hope, after ſo many Year's Enjoyment of all the " Happineſs of a Freeborn People, and at a Time when the Subjects of this King- " dom enjoy'd their full Liberties, under the Queen's moſt excellent Adminiſtration; " no Perſon would have been ſo wicked, as to have caſt any Reflection upon the " Means whereby theſe Bleſſings were obtained and continued to us.

" But ſince all theſe Enjoyments cannot ſatisfy, or ſettle the reſtleſs and turbu- " lent Spirits of the Enemies of the Revolution: The Commons think it their indiſ- " penſible Duty to the Crown, and to their Country, to demand your Lordſhips " Judgment on this important Subject; which is the more neceſſary at this Time, " becauſe it is plain and obvious, that ſince the late Attempts made by the Pretender, " theſe Principles have been eſpouſed with more than ordinary Warmth and Zeal; and the " Commons apprehend it can have no other Tendency, but to blacken the Revo- " lution, and weaken the preſent Settlement. Your Lordſhips will not only conſi- " der, with Regard to her Majeſty, but to the preſent Settlement of the Proteſtant " Succeſſion, that if the Reſiſtance of the Revolution was not Legal, that Act of Set- " tlement can have no greater Force, than an Act paſs'd under an Uſurper: And the " Commons think it of the greateſt Conſequence to maintain it at this Time, " when her Majeſty's moſt implacable Enemies, the Friends of the Pretender, can ad- " vance his Title on no other Pretence, but that of Hereditary Right. The Com- " mons therefore, out of the Allegiance they owe, and ſhall ever pay her Majeſty, " and to guard her Throne againſt every Inſinuation of thoſe that are for the " Pretender, think themſelves oblig'd to lay theſe Things before your Lordſhips; " eſpecially conſidering of what Conſequence the Reflections now caſt upon the " Revolution, may be to this Kingdom hereafter.

My LORDS, ſaid, Sir John Holland, who ſpoke next:

Sir John Holland's Speech.

" The preſent Conſideration is of the greateſt Importance: No leſs than whether " your Lordſhips, and ſo many of the Commons of Great Britain, who took up " Arms at the Revolution, were really Rebels; and whether our late glorious Deli- " verer was an Uſurper; or not? The Criminal was aware of this juſt Objection, " which appears by his Endeavours, on ſecond Thoughts, to make us believe, that " by Reſiſtance he meant Conqueſt, which he could not expect to hear of, without " the utmoſt Reſentment of the Commons. It is an unaccountable Preſumption, that " he could imagine ſo mean a Subterfuge ſhould prevent your Lordſhips Juſtice, " which the Commons aſk in this Caſe for his Reformation, and an Example to " others. The Commons would, by no Means, be underſtood, as if they thought " the People were to be Judges, when, and how far, they are to obey? We agree, the " Laws of Obedience, both Divine and Human, are very expreſs and poſitive; but " Neceſſity will always make a juſtifiable Exception. So much depends upon the Revo- " lution, that the Commons are highly jealous of the Honour of it. Twenty Years " it has been ſettled, but it is not ſo long ſince the PRETENDER, and his Adhe- " rents, endeavour'd to invade it; and when they ſhall hear that the Revolution is

" branded

" branded in Sermons, as is now uſual, it may have Conſequences ſo ill, that we " hope it ſhall not now be done with Impunity.

Mr. Robert Walpole ſpoke next, in theſe Words:

Mr. Walpole's Speech.

My LORDS,

" I Doubt not but your Lordſhips have obſerved, how injurious the Doctrines now " in Queſtion may be to the Kingdom, and how loudly they call for your Lord- " ſhips Juſtice. When Mercenary Scribblers are employ'd by a Party to vent their " Malice, it may be fit to leave them to the Courſe of Common Juſtice: But when " the Trumpet is ſounded in Sion; when the Pulpit takes up the Cudgels, and gives " the ALARM: When theſe BITTER AND POISONOUS PILLS " are gilded over with the ſpecious Name of Loyalty, and People are brought to " ſwallow them up for their SOULS and CONSCIENCES Sake; the Com- " mons cannot but think it high Time to put a Stop to this growing Evil: And they " cannot apprehend, but that the juſt Reſentment they have ſhewn on this Occaſion, " will meet with Applauſe from all thoſe that are ſincere Friends to her Majeſty " and her Government, and to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, as is eſtabliſh'd by Law; " and therefore, I do not wonder to ſee her Enemies concern'd at this Tryal. The " very Being of our preſent Government, is the RESISTANCE that was neceſſarily uſed " at the REVOLUTION: And it is a moſt ſurprizing Aſſurance, That " while the Enemies of our State are ſtriking at the Root of All, they ſhould be " able to paſs themſelves upon the World for either. To recommend themſelves to the " Queen, they find fault with that REVOLUTION, without which ſhe never would " have been a QUEEN, and We the moſt miſerable of People. If Reſiſtance be " in no way ſafe to be allow'd, then all the great Privileges enacted in the Petition " of Rights, are meer Pretences. Reſiſtance is no where enacted to be legal, but ſub- " ject to all Laws in being, under the higheſt Penalties: The Doctrine of unlimited " Paſſive-Obedience is calculated for abſolute Power: But it cannot be an Advantage, or " Security, to her Majeſty, who neither wants, nor deſires it. What can the Meaning " of this Attempt be, but to prepare the People to be ready to embrace a Govern- " ment, in which it is like to be expected from them?

Gen. Stanhope's Speech.

Sir John Holles ſpoke next, on the ſame Argument; and, next to him, General Stanhope made a remarkable Speech, full of manly Oratory, and deliver'd with Spirit and Vehemence. He ſaid, among other Things, " That if Dr. Sacheverel had " preach'd his Sermon in a Conventicle of diſaffected Perſons, maintain'd by ſome " deluded Women, no Notice ſhould have been taken of ſo nonſenſical and incoherent " a Diſcourſe: But that True Son of ——— the Church, that INSIGNIFICANT " TOOL of a Party, having preach'd this Sermon at a Place where it might do " great Miſchief, by creating Jealouſies, and reviving old Animoſities in the City " of London, the Fountain-Head of the Supplies which the Nation ſo readily con- " tributed towards this neceſſary War, his Offence deſerv'd the ſevereſt Animad- " verſion. That if his Poſitions were true, the Queen was no more than an Uſur- " per; neither Houſe of Parliament had an Authority to ſit; all their Proceedings " were illegal; and all the Blood and Treaſure that had been ſpent ſince the Revo- " lution, were ſpent in an ill Cauſe; which would ſully the Glories of a Reign, that " exceeded thoſe of Queen Elizabeth: For the latter had only the Felicity to defend " the Nation againſt the Power of Spain; whereas her Majeſty's Arms triumph'd " over the united Force of France and Spain." He added, " That another Divine [naming Dr. Atterbury, who happen'd to be then at the Bar, behind Dr. Sacheverel] " had likewiſe, ſome Time before, preach'd a Latin Sermon at St. Paul's, wherein " he aſſerted the Doctrine of Paſſive Obedience; but that in that very Sermon he " contradicted himſelf: For he allow'd, that there may be ſome difficult and extra- " ordinary Caſes, wherein St. Paul could be no longer our Guide; and then we muſt " conſult the wiſe Politicians, and the Learned in the Laws:" And thereupon General Stanhope quoted Grotius, who (in his famous Treatiſe, De Jure Belli & Pacis) mentions Caſes, wherein the People may oppoſe and reſiſt Tyrants, and aſſert their Liberties.

Some of the Spectators obſerv'd, That Dr. Sacheverel, who had appear'd unconcern'd while the other Five Managers were ſpeaking, turn'd pale, and was diſorder'd, when he had found himſelf treated with Scorn and Contempt by General Stanhope: Who having made an End of his Speech, and of the Commons Proof of the Firſt Article; the Duke of Buckingham moved, That Dr. Sacheverel might be heard in his Defence, Article by Article: But this was oppoſed by the Lord Somers, who alledg'd, That it was againſt the uſual Method, to hear a Defence, before the whole Accuſation be open'd; and that the ſame would prolong this Tryal, which was like to be tedious enough of it ſelf. Hereupon the Lords adjourn'd

A. D. 1709. to their Houſe; where the Duke of Buckingham's Motion being taken into Conſideration, and the Queſtion put, it was carry'd in the Negative: And their Lordſhips being return'd to the Court in Weſtminſter-Hall, Sir Peter King, the Lord William Powlet, and Mr. Cowper (Brother to the Lord Chancellor) ſpoke, to make good the Second Article. After this, Mr. Thompſon roſe up, in order to ſpeak to the Third; but it being late, the Earl of Wharton moved for adjourning to the next Morning; which was done accordingly.

Third Day of the Tryal. On the 1ſt of March, the Court being ſat, and the Queen preſent, (as the Day before) Mr. Thompſon made a fine elaborate Speech, to make good the Third and Fourth Articles; and Mr. Compton, the Lord Coningsby, Mr. Dolben, Sir Thomas Parker, Mr. Secretary Boyle, and Mr. Smith, Chancellor of the Exchequer, ſpoke to the ſame Purpoſe. Sir Thomas Parker, and Mr. Dolben, among the reſt, made long and fine Speeches: And the latter, in the Heat of his Diſcourſe, having ſaid, Theſe Falſe Brethren, [pointing to the Bar, where ſome Clergymen ſtood, behind Dr. Sacheverel] the Lord Haverſham took notice of that Expreſſion, which he look'd upon as a Reflection on the whole Order; interrupted Mr. Dolben, and moved, that he ſhould explain himſelf. Hereupon the Lords adjourn'd to their Houſe, where they had a very long Debate: But, at laſt, Mr. Dolben being ſent to, and aſk'd by the Lord Chancellor, what he meant by that Expreſſion? "He ſaid, he had uſed the "Plural Number for the Singular, and only meant the Priſoner at the Bar:" With which Explanation the Lords were ſatisfied; and being return'd to Weſtminſter-Hall, Mr. Dolben made an end of his Speech; and the other Managers having likewiſe been heard, the Court adjourn'd to the next Day.

Tumults in London. Before we proceed on the Tryal, we muſt take notice of the Tumults that were occaſion'd by it. Either Dr. Sacheverel's Friends, or the Enemies to the Government, had induſtriouſly infus'd a Notion into the Minds of the People, that the Church of England was attack'd thro' his Sides; ſo that many well-meaning Perſons, truly concern'd for its Proſperity, could not forbear expreſſing their good Wiſhes for his Deliverance: And this Concern, both for the Church, and the afflicted Aſſertor of its Rights, was almoſt univerſal among the fair and tender-hearted Sex; whoſe natural Compaſſion might, in many, be increas'd by the Fame of the Comelineſs of the Doctor's Perſon; which was propagated by ſeveral Prints of his Picture, publickly ſold in the City and Suburbs. On the other hand, publick Prayers had, in ſeveral Chapels, been put up, for the Deliverance of a Brother under Perſecution, from the Hands of his Enemies: All which render'd the Doctor ſo popular, that when he went firſt to Weſtminſter-Hall, in a Friend's Chariot, great Numbers of the Mobility attended him thither, and conducted him back to his Lodgings in the Temple, with loud Huzza's and Acclamations: And it was obſerv'd, That the Queen going that very Afternoon to the Houſe of Lords, to give the Royal Aſſent to ſome Bills, a great Multitude of People gather'd about her Majeſty's Sedan, crying out, God bleſs your Majeſty, and the Church: We hope, your Majeſty is for Dr. Sacheverel.

Dr. Sacheverel grows very popular.

* Feb. 28. The next * Day, the Mob was ſtill more numerous, and louder, about Dr. Sacheverel's Coach; and, in the Height of their petulant Zeal, oblig'd all Perſons they met, to pull off their Hats to him, and abus'd thoſe that refus'd to comply; among whom, there happen'd to be ſome Members of both Houſes of Parliament. The ſame Evening, the Rioters went to the Preſbyterian Meeting-Houſe of Mr. Burgeſs, in a Court near Lincolns-Inn-Fields, of which they broke the Windows, and committed ſeveral other Outrages and Diſorders. On the 1ſt of March, their Fury increaſing with their Numbers, they advanc'd to greater Enormities, and even to Overt-Acts of Rebellion: For, after they had attended upon Dr. Sacheverel, as uſual, they repair'd to the Meeting-Houſe before-mention'd, broke it open, pull'd down the Pulpit, Pews, Benches, Wainſcot, Sconces, Caſements, in ſhort, all that was combuſtible; and having carry'd all theſe Materials into Lincolns-Inn-Fields, made a Bonefire of them, with repeated Cries of HIGH-CHURCH and SACHEVEREL. About the ſame Time, other Parties of the Mob demoliſh'd and deſtroy'd ſeveral other Meeting-Houſes; particularly, thoſe of Mr. Earl, in Long-Acre; of Mr. Bradbury, in New-ſtreet, Shoe-Lane; of Mr. Taylor, in Leather-Lane; of Mr. Wright, in Black-fryars; and of Mr. Hamilton, in Clerkenwell. They alſo batter'd and plunder'd the Houſes of ſeveral Diſſenters; threaten'd to pull down the Houſes of the Lord Chancellor, Earl of Wharton, Biſhop of Sarum, Mr. Dolben, and other Managers for the Houſe of Commons againſt Dr. Sacheverel; and talk'd of deſtroying Mr. Hoadley's Church, and Houſe; Salters-Hall, Mr. Shower's, and other Meeting-Houſes in the City; and even of attacking the Bank of England, of which the Directors thereof being apprehenſive, they took the neceſſary Precautions for its Security, and ſent to Whitehall for Aſſiſtance. Upon the firſt Notice of theſe Diſorders, the Earl of Sunderland, Principal Secretary of State, made his Report to the Queen; who who commanded his Lordſhip forthwith to ſend her Horſe and Foot-Guards to diſperſe the Mob; and the Earl repreſenting the Danger of leaving her Majeſty's ſacred Perſon unguarded at that Time (it being between Ten and Eleven a-Clock at Night) her Majeſty couragiouſly anſwer'd, God would be her Guard. The Earl being returned to his Office at the Cockpit, where were alſo the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Newcaſtle, and ſome other Noblemen, his Lordſhip ſent for Captain Horſey, an Exempt, who then commanded the Guard; and order'd him to mount immediately, and go and diſperſe the Mob. The Captain making ſome Scruple to obey the Orders, unleſs he were relieved; alledging, He was the Queen's Body-Guard, and muſt be anſwerable for any Accident that might happen: He was told, it was the Queen's expreſs Command; and both the Earl and the Lord Chancellor repreſenting the Danger of Delays, he acquieſc'd, upon a Promiſe, that the Secretary ſhould give him his Orders in Writing. The Captain only aſk'd, Whether he was to Preach or Fight the Mob? If the firſt, He deſired ſome better Speaker might be ſent along with him; if the latter, Fighting was his Trade, and he would do his beſt. To this the Earl reply'd, He muſt uſe his Judgment and Diſcretion, and forbear violent Means, except in Caſe of Neceſſity: And as the Captain was going out, my Lord Sunderland whiſper'd him, and bid him ſend a Party to the Bank. Before the Horſe and Foot-Guards could reach Lincolns-Inn-Fields, the Officers had Notice that the Mob which had gathered there, was returned to Drury-Lane, where they were making another Bonefire with the Utenſils of Mr. Earle's Meeting-Houſe; whereupon the Guards bent their March that Way. At their Approach, moſt of the Mobility fled before them; and only one of their Ring-Leaders, George Purchaſe by Name, (a Bailiff, who had before been a Life-Guard-Man, but was diſmiſſed upon ſome Miſdemeanor) offered to make a Stand, with a few of the moſt reſolute of his Followers, crying out for High-Church and Dr. Sacheverel. From Drury-Lane, the Guards marched towards the City, and met with ſome Oppoſition near Fleet-Ditch, from the Mob that were rifling the Meeting-Houſe in Black-Fryers; but having cut and ſlaſh'd ſome of the moſt Daring, and ſecured ſome others, the reſt were ſoon ſcattered; and the Guards patrolling all Night, prevented any further Miſchief. It was ſuggeſted, that theſe Tumults were not only carried on by the raſcally Multitude, but that there were many Gentlemen in Diſguiſe amongſt them; and that the Rabble were further encourag'd, by Money thrown to them by Men of Figure out of their Coaches: But of this no legal Proof having been made, Hiſtory cannot record it for Truth. One Thing is certain, and very remarkable, That a young Man, an Apprentice to a Linnen-Draper, and Heir to a good Eſtate, who was at the pulling down of Mr. Burgeſs's Meeting-Houſe, was overtaken by Divine Juſtice in the very Act, and killed by the Fall of a Caſement. On the 2d of March, the Horſe and Foot-Guards at Whitehall and St. James's were doubled; and the Trained-Bands of Weſtminſter under Arms, in divers Poſts, where they continued as long as Dr. Sacheverel's Trial was depending; which both leſſen'd the Number of the Mutineers (many of the Trained-Bands being Men of low Degree, hired by ſubſtantial Houſekeepers) and kept the reſt in Awe. The ſame Day, the Commons reſolv'd " to addreſs her Majeſty, that ſhe would be graciouſly pleaſed to take effectual Mea- " ſures to ſuppreſs the preſent Tumults, ſet on foot and fomented by Papiſts, Non- " jurors, and other Enemies to her Majeſty's Title and Government; and to iſſue her " Royal Proclamation, promiſing a Reward to ſuch as ſhould diſcover and ſeize thoſe " Incendiaries as had been the Occaſion of the late Tumults and Diſorders." This Addreſs having been preſented to the Queen that Afternoon, her Majeſty returned an Anſwer, importing, " That ſhe was extreamly ſenſible of the great Care and Con- " cern of the Houſe of Commons for the Publick Peace upon this Occaſion; and as " her Majeſty had a juſt Reſentment at thoſe tumultuous and violent Proceedings, ſo " ſhe would take immediate Care for ſuppreſſing them, and would loſe no Time in " endeavouring to find out the Authors and Abettors, in order to bring them to " Puniſhment, according to the Deſire of this Houſe," The Commons were ſo well pleaſed with this Anſwer, that they unanimouſly reſolv'd to preſent an Addreſs to her Majeſty, importing, " That out of a deep Senſe of the repeated Inſtances of " her Majeſty's unparallel'd Goodneſs, they begg'd Leave to return their moſt hearty " Thanks for her moſt gracious Anſwer to their Addreſs; and for her effectual Care in " ſuppreſſing thoſe rebellious Tumults, which were ſet on foot and fomented by Papiſts, " Nonjurors, and other Enemies to her Majeſty's Title and Government, in Defiance of " the juſt Proſecution of the Commons againſt Dr. Henry Sacheverel. And they humbly " beſought her Majeſty to believe, that as this Proſecution proceeded only from the in- " diſpenſible Obligation which her faithful Commons looked upon themſelves to lie " under, not to ſit ſtill and patiently ſee the Juſtice of the late Happy Revolution, " and the Glory of their late Royal Deliverer reflected upon; her Majeſty's un-

Guards ordered to diſperſe the Mob.

Addreſſes of Commons againſt Tumults.

A. D. 1712.

" doubted Title ſtruck at; her Adminiſtration, by which ſo many Bleſſings were " derived upon them, endeavoured to be rendred odious to the People, and repre- " ſented as deſtructive of the Church and Conſtitution; the preſent Eſtabliſhment " and Proteſtant Succeſſion undermin'd; the Reſolutions of Parliament treated with " Contempt; the Governors of the Church, and her Majeſty, as Supreme, aſpers'd " and vilify'd; the Toleration expoſed, as Wicked; and Sedition inſolently in- " vading the Pulpit: So the Maintenance of her Majeſty's Right, the Safety of " her Perſon, the Quiet of her Government, the Continuance of their Happineſs " under her excellent Adminiſtration, the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line, the Sup- " port and Honour of the Church of England as eſtabliſhed by Law, with that Tole- " ration which was by Act of Parliament allow'd to Proteſtant Diſſenters, ſhould be " their conſtant Care and Concern: And they would, upon all Occaſions, venture " all that was dear to them in Defence of ſuch ineſtimable Bleſſings." Sir Thomas Parker having, on the Fourth of March, reported this Addreſs to the Houſe, it was moved, That in the Firſt Paragraph it might be ſuggeſted, That the rebellious Tumults were ſet on foot and fomented by Republicans, as well as by Papiſts and Nonjurors, as was mention'd therein: But the Queſtion being put, That the ſaid Addreſs be recommitted, it paſs'd in the Negative, by a Majority of 270 Voices againſt 116; and it was order'd, That the ſaid Addreſs be preſented to the Queen, which was done accordingly the ſame Day. The Day before, a Proclamation was publiſh'd for ſuppreſſing the Tumults, purſuant to which, ſeveral Perſons, who had been active in the late Riots, were apprehended, and committed to divers Priſons; particularly George Purchaſe, the Bailiff; Daniel Damaree, one of the Queen's Watermen; and Francis Willis, a Footman: Which Three were, ſome time after, try'd for High-Treaſon; but though the Two Firſt were ſentenc'd to die, yet neither of them ſuffer'd.

Several Perſons concern'd in the Tumults apprehended.

The Debating, Voting, and drawing up of the Addreſſes concerning the Tumlts, took up ſo much Time, that it was about Two a-Clock in the Afternoon before the Commons went into Weſtminſter-Hall, to attend the Trial of Dr. Sacheverel; who, that † Day, was brought thither in a Sedan, followed by a few of the young Rabble. Having taken their Places, Mr. Lechmere ſumm'd up what himſelf, and the reſt of the Managers, had alledg'd before, to make good the Articles of Impeachment: Which done, Sir Simon Harcourt, (formerly Attorney-General) one of Dr. Sacheverel's Council, addreſſing himſelf to the Lord Chancellor, ſaid, he was ready to ſpeak in the Doctor's Defence; but having to anſwer to a great Charge, he had a great deal to ſay; and doubted, whether their Lordſhips would have the Patience to hear him out that Day: Whereupon the Lords adjourned to the next, at the uſual Hour. Accordingly, on the 3d of March, both Houſes being come into Weſtminſter-Hall, and the Queen preſent, Sir Simon Harcourt made a fine elaborate Speech in Defence of Dr. Sacheverel, as to the Firſt Article of Impeachment: Alledging, amongſt other Things, " That the Doctor had advanced nothing reflecting upon, " or derogating from the late Revolution; and as for the Doctrine of Paſſive-Obe- " dience and Non-Reſiſtance, which he had aſſerted, that he had taught it as he learnt " it from the Goſpel, the Homilies, and the Writings of above Twenty Arch- " biſhops and Biſhops, ſome of whom ſat as his Judges with their Lordſhips, and " other Eminent Divines of the Church of England; ſome of whoſe Sermons, in " which the ſaid Doctrine was enforc'd in as large Extent, as he had maintained it, " had received the Thanks of her Majeſty, and of both Houſes of Parliament, and " had been printed at their Deſire." Mr. Dodd, Mr. Dee, Mr. Phipps, and Dr. Henchman, a Civilian, who were alſo Council for Dr. Sacheverel, ſpoke likewiſe in his Juſtification, as to the Firſt Article; after which, Sir Simon Harcourt ſaid, That having a great many Quotations to produce, they had, to ſave Time and Trouble, cauſed Extracts to be taken out of ſeveral Books; and hoped their Lordſhips would be ſatisfied as to the Faithfulneſs of the ſaid Extracts, by the Oath which the Tranſcribers were ready to take; and which being adminiſter'd to them, their Lordſhips adjourned to the next Day, when Dr. Sacheverel produced abundance of Quotations, in Vindication of the Doctrine of Paſſive-Obedience. It is obſervable, that ſome Paſſages out of a Sermon preach'd before the Lords on the Thirtieth of January, $1\frac{699}{700}$. by John Sharp, preſent Lord Archbiſhop of York, having been quoted among the reſt, the Managers for the Houſe of Commons, who knew the Tenor of that Sermon to be rather againſt, than for Dr. Sacheverel, deſired that ſome Paſſages in it might be read, which was done accordingly, particularly the following.

Dr. Sacheverel's Trial purſued.

† March 2. Mr. Lechmere ſums up the Proofs of the Four Articles of Impeachment.

Sir Simon Harcourt pleads for Dr. Sacheverel.

March 4. Quotations in Favour of Dr. Sacheverel.

" It is ſaid, That Preachers ought not to meddle with theſe Points, becauſe they " are not competent Judges of them: They do not know the Meaſures and Limits " of Loyalty and Diſloyalty, of being good and bad Subjects: Theſe depending al- " together upon the Conſtitution of the Government we live under, the determi- " ning of them belongs to the Civil Courts, and not to their Profeſſion. To this I

Some Paſſages out of the Archbiſhop of York's Sermon quoted Pro and Con.

A. D. 17[2/10].

" anſwer, That in all thoſe Inſtances, wherein this Argument falls under the Cog-
" nizance and Determination of Parliaments, or Judges, or Lawyers, we do not pre" tend to meddle with it; and if any Man do, let him anſwer for himſelf. All " that we pretend to, is to preſs the plain, general, indiſpenſible Duty of Obedi-
" ence to Laws, and of Peaceableneſs and Subjection to the Higher Powers, which Chriſt,
" and his Apoſtles, have every where taught in the Bible. If, indeed, a Preacher
" ſhould, in the Pulpit, preſume to give his Judgment about the Management of " publick Affairs; or to lay down Doctrines, as from Chriſt, about the Forms and " Models of Kingdoms or Commonwealths; or to adjuſt the Limits of the Prero-
" gative of the Prince, or of the Liberties of the Subjects in our preſent Govern" ment: I ſay, if a Divine ſhould meddle with ſuch Matters as theſe in his Ser" mons, I do not know how he can be excuſed from the juſt Cenſure, of meddling
" with Things that nothing concern him. This is, indeed, a practiſing in State-
" Matters, and is uſurping an Office that belongs to another Profeſſion, and to Men
" of another Character. And I ſhould account it every whit as indecent in a " Clergyman, to take upon him to deal in theſe Points, as it would be for him to " determine Titles of Land in the Pulpit, which are in Diſpute in Weſtminſter-
" Hall.

" But it is ſaid further, That Preachers cannot engage in theſe Arguments, but they " will, of neceſſity, ſide with ſome Party or Faction among us: Now they ſhould have " nothing to do with Parties or Factions. To this I anſwer, That to be on the Side " of the eſtabliſh'd Government, and to endeavour to maintain that, is not to be a " Favourer of Parties and Factious. But they are the Factions, they are the Setters up,
" or Abettors of Parties, who endeavour to deſtroy, or unſettle, or diſparage, or in
" the leaſt to hurt and weaken the Government, and the Laws, as they are eſta-
" bliſh'd, let the Principles upon which they go, or the Pretences they make, be " what they will. So that a Miniſter, by preaching Obedience and Subjection, doth
" not in the leaſt make himſelf of any Party; but, on the contrary, he ſets him-
" ſelf againſt all Parties: And ſo he ought to do. For his Buſineſs is, to be on the " Side of the Government, as it is by Law eſtabliſh'd; and as vigorouſly as in " him lies, in ſuch ways as are proper for his Function, to oppoſe all thoſe that " would either ſecretly undermine it, or openly aſſault it: In a word, all thoſe
" that would make any Change or Innovation in it, (by whatever Names they are " diſcriminated) by any other Means or Methods, than what the Law of the Land,
" and the Nature of the Conſtitution doth allow.

" Put them in Mind, ſays St. Paul, Titus, Chap. iii. v. 1. to be ſubject to Princi-
" palities and Powers, to obey Magiſtrates: In the one Phraſe, ſeems to be intimated
" the Duty of Active Obedience to the Laws and Orders of Governors: In the other
" Phraſe, our Submiſſion, (or Paſſive Obedience) where he cannot obey. As for the " Buſineſs of Active Obedience; all that is needful to be ſaid, for the clearing of it,
" may be comprized in theſe Four following Propoſitions: Firſt, That the ſtanding
" Laws of every Country, are the Rules of the Subject's Obedience, and not meerly
" the WILL of the Prince. Where, indeed, the Legiſlative, and the Executive Power,
" are both in one Hand, (as it is in thoſe we call Abſolute Monarchies) the Will of " the Prince ſtands for Law: But where People are ſo happy, as to live under a
" Legal Eſtabliſhment, as ours is, there the publick Laws muſt govern, and ſteer
" their Actions, and not the Prince's private Pleaſure. So that though the King can " do no Wrong, (as the Maxim is) yet the Subject is anſwerable for every Thing
" he doth againſt Law, even when he doth it by the King's Command. Secondly,
" Whatever Laws are made by juſt Authority, whether in Civil Matters, or in Mat" ters relating to Religion; if they be not contrary to God's Laws, the Subject is " bound in Conſcience to obey them, even though he apprehends they are innocent.
" Nay, I ſay further, (which is my Third Propoſition) that even where we doubt of " the Lawfulneſs of their Commands, we are bound to obey, ſo long as we only doubt
" of their Lawfulneſs, but are not perſuaded that they are unlawful. For certainly " the Authority of our Governors ought to over-rule any Man's private Doubts.
" There is all the Reaſon in the World that it ſhould do ſo: And there is no good " Reaſon to be urged to the contrary. But Fourthly, and Laſtly; if the Matter be " out of Doubt; if a Man be really convinc'd, that the Thing which Authority
" commands him, is not lawful in itſelf, but is contradictory to the Laws of God:
" In that Caſe, he muſt not do the Thing commanded; on the contrary, he is bound " to forbear the Practice of it.

" As for Subjection, as that Word implies patient Submiſſion to our Governors,
" where we cannot actively comply with what they require of us, this is that Do-
" ctrine of Paſſive Obedience, which, of late, had ſo ill a Sound among many of us:
" But, I dare ſay, for no other Reaſon, but becauſe it may have been by ſome miſ-

" repre-

" repreſented. For where-ever it is rightly underſtood, it can give Offence to none " but ſuch as are really diſaffected to the Government; and do deſire Alterations. " That there is ſuch a Submiſſion due from all Subjects, to the ſupreme Authority of " the Place where they live, as ſhall tie up their Hands from oppoſing or reſiſting " it by Force, is evident from the very Nature and Ends of Political Society: " But then, after I have ſaid this, Care muſt be taken, that this general Doctrine be " not miſapply'd in particular Countries. Though Non-Reſiſtance, or Paſſive Obedi- " ence, be a Duty to all Subjects, and under all Governments, yet it is not expreſ- " ſed the ſame way in all Places; but both the Objects, and the Inſtances of it, " do vary in different Nations, according to the different Methods of their Go- " vernment.

" To ſpeak this as plainly as I can: As the Laws of the Land are the Meaſure " of our Active Obedience; ſo are alſo the ſame Laws the Meaſure of our Submiſſion. " And as we are not bound to obey, but where the Laws and Conſtitution require " our Obedience, ſo neither are we bound to ſubmit, but as the Laws and Conſtitu- " tion do require our Submiſſion. Taking now this to be the true ſtating of the " Doctrine of Paſſive Obedience, as I verily believe it is, I do not ſee what Colour of " Reaſon can be offered againſt it. Sure I am, the common Pretence, that it " tends to introduce Tyranny, and Arbitrary Government, and to make People Slaves, " is quite out of Doors. For, you ſee, it makes no Princes Abſolute, where, by " the Conſtitution, they were not ſo before. Nor doth it deſtroy any Liberty of " the Subjects, that they were before in Poſſeſſion of. All that it doth, is to pre- " ſerve and ſecure the National Settlement in the ſame Poſture, and upon the ſame " Foot, in and upon which it is already eſtabliſh'd. And this is ſo true, that there " is not a Commonwealth in the World ſo free, but that theſe Doctrines of Non- " Reſiſtance, and Paſſive Obedience, muſt for ever be taught there, as neceſſary even " for the Preſervation of their Liberties. After the reading of theſe, and other Quotations, which took up Five or Six Hours, the Lords adjourn'd to the Monday following.

March 6. Sir Simon Harcourt having, by this Time, been return'd Member of the Houſe of Commons for Cardigan, Dr. Sacheverel was thereby depriv'd of his further Aſſiſtance; ſo that on the 6th of March, the other Four Gentlemen that were his Council, only ſpoke in his Defence, as to the Second and Third Articles of Impeachment, and produced a great many other Quotations. The next Day, the Queen being preſent, they made an end of what they had to alledge in his Behalf; after which, Dr. Sacheverel having deſired and obtained Leave to ſpeak for himſelf, he addreſs'd himſelf to the Lords in the following Manner.

My LORDS,

Dr. Sacheverel's Speech.

" THE Defence made by my Council has been ſo Full, and Particular, and the Tryal it ſelf " drawn out into ſo Great a Length, that I ſhould not add to your Lordſhips Trouble, by " ſaying any Thing for my ſelf, did I not think, that in ſuch a Caſe, as This, (wherein the Do- " ctrine of Our Church, the Dignity of That Holy Order, to which I belong, and even the Common " Intereſt of Chriſtianity it ſelf, are ſo nearly concern'd) it becomes me not to be altogether " ſilent.

" For, My Lords, it has been own'd by ſome of the Managers for the Honourable Houſe of Com- " mons, that tho' I am the Perſon Impeach'd, yet My Condemnation is not the Thing principally " aim'd at. I am, it ſeems, an Inſignificant Tool of a Party, not worth Regarding; the avow'd De- " ſign of my Impeachment is, by the Means of it, to procure an Eternal and Indelible Brand of In- " famy to be fix'd, in a Parliamentary Way, on All thoſe, who maintain the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, " and to have the Clergy directed what Doctrines they are to Preach, and what not. And therefore, as " Inſignificant as I am in my ſelf, yet the Conſequences of my Tryal, (if rightly repreſented to " your Lordſhips, by ſome of thoſe Gentlemen) are of the higheſt Moment and Impor- " portanee.

" Since I am the unfortunate Occaſion of bringing theſe Matters in Judgment before your " Lordſhips, it will behove me, I think, after what has been pleaded in my Behalf by my Coun- " cil, Learned in the Law, to ſay ſomewhat alſo for my ſelf, in order to clear the Innocence of my " Intentions, and remove that Load of Guilt and Infamy, which may be laid upon me, ſhould " your Lordſhips determine, (as I truſt in God, you will not) that the Articles of Impeachment " exhibited, have been made Good againſt me.

" With your Lordſhips Permiſſion then, I ſhall lay before you, ſome few general Remarks, which, " in my humble Opinion, may be added to what my Council have already obſerv'd, concerning " the Methods taken by the Managers for the Honourable Houſe of Commons, to prove and ſupport " the Articles of their Charge. And ſhall then, with your Lordſhips Leave, ſay ſomewhat ſeverally " to the Articles themſelves, which may ſerve to remind your Lordſhips of what my Council before " offer'd more at large, and with Greater Advantage.

" My Lords, the Charge brought againſt me in theſe Articles, is of a very high and heinous " Nature; and had it been as clearly made out, as it has been ſtrongly affirmed, it would juſtly " have expos'd me to a very ſevere Sentence. But the more Heinous the Charge is, the more " Evident, and undeniable, I ſhould think, the Proof ought to be.

" And how, My Lords, has this Charge been ſupported in the ſeveral Articles of it? By Plain, " Direct, and Expreſs Paſſages produc'd, and read to your Lordſhips out of my Sermon; or by In-

" tendments,

A. D. 1709-10.

" tendments, Unneceſſary Implications, and ſtrain'd Conſtructions; by laying intire Sentences before " your Lordſhips, and Relying upon what was manifeſtly contain'd in them; or by piecing broken " Sentences, and Conjoyning diſtant and independent Paſſages, in order to make me ſpeak, what I " never Thought of?

" I am unacquainted, My Lords, with the Methods of Legal Proof, and little thought I ſhould " have had this Occaſion of Enquiring into them. But, as far as I am able to comprehend any " Thing of this Nature, I ſhould think, that there cannot be a Clearer Indication, that I am not " Guilty of having Aſſerted what I am Charg'd by the ſeveral Articles to have ſaid, than that ſo " many Hours Learning, and Eloquence, have been employed in Proving me to have ſaid it. Had " I really affirm'd thoſe Propoſitions for which I am accus'd, my Sermons being before your Lord- " ſhips, the Places wherein ſuch Propoſitions were directly contain'd, might have been referr'd " to, and Read, with the ſame Eaſe as my Council referr'd to the Paſſages contain'd in the ſeve- " ral Writings, and Sermons of the Reverend Fathers, and other Eminent Divines of our Church, where- " in they Taught the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, in the ſame Extent as I maintain'd it, or in " Terms much ſtronger.

" Theſe Paſſages, produc'd by my Council, were barely Read to your Lordſhips: No Argument, " no Colours were us'd, becauſe None were neceſſary to prove what Propoſitions were laid down in " thoſe Paſſages: Whereas to Prove me Guilty of having Aſſerted what is ſaid to my Charge, " after my Sermon and Prefaces were Read to your Lordſhips, much Art, and Induſtry, were us'd, " to perſuade your Lordſhips, that ſuch Aſſertions were really contain'd in them.

" My Lords, when my Words were Capable of Two Senſes, the Worſt, and moſt Invidious, tho' " at the ſame Time, the moſt ſtrain'd, and unnatural Conſtruction, has been always made of " them. Nay, when my Words were ſo Plain and Expreſs, that it was impoſſible to put any " Criminal Gloſſes, or Colours upon them, I have been accus'd of Meaning the Direct contrary to what " I have ſaid: And when I preſs'd the Duty of Allegiance to the Queen, your Lordſhips were told, " that it was moſt certain I meant the Pretender.

" To Aggravate my Guilt, I have been accus'd, not only for what I am ſuppos'd to have " ſaid, but for what I am allowed not to have ſaid: Not only for what I have taken Notice of " in my Sermons, but for what I have paſs'd by Unobſerv'd: I have been Charg'd with Negative " Crimes; as if what I omitted to ſay, had been omitted with Deſign, and my Silence it ſelf were " Criminal.

" Theſe, My Lords, are the Methods that have been made uſe of, to prove me Guilty of " Crimes, which, if Prov'd, might affect my Liberty and Fortune; no favourable Allowances have " been made to a Miniſter of the Goſpel, Diſcharging the Duty of his Function, and Rebuking " Vice and Irreligion, with an Honeſt and well-meant Zeal, but ſometimes, perhaps, carrying " him into Expreſſions too open and unguarded. I could add, My Lords, if ſuch a Complaint " might not be thought Improper, from one in my Circumſtances, that, in the Courſe of my Accuſa- " tion, I have been ſtil'd a Criminal, and Treated as ſuch, by ſome of theſe Honourable Gentlemen, " with a Degree of Scorn, and Indignity, from which I hop'd my Sacred Profeſſion, my Preſent un- " happy Condition, and a Regard to this Solemn and Awful Judicature, might have ſcreen'd " me.

" But, My Lords, I lay aſide all Complaints of this Nature, and with your Lordſhips Leave, " ſhall proceed to make ſome few, ſhort Obſervations, upon the ſeveral Branches of the Charge " exhibited againſt me.

" I am Charg'd, My Lords, in the firſt Article, with having maintain'd, That the Neceſſary " Means us'd to bring about the late Happy Revolution, were odious and unjuſtifiable; in Proof of " which it has been urg'd, that I have in General Terms aſſerted, the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance, " to the Supreme Power, upon any Pretence whatſoever. My Lords, The Reſiſtance in that Paſſage, " by me condemn'd, is no where by me applied to the Revolution, nor is it Applicable to the Caſe " of the Revolution, the Supreme Power not being then Reſiſted.

" My Lords, I neither expreſly apply'd my Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance to the Caſe of the Revo- " lution, nor had I the leaſt Thoughts of Including the Revolution under my General Aſſertion. I " Expreſs'd This Doctrine in the ſame General Terms, in which I found it deliver'd by the Apoſtles " of Chriſt. I Taught it, as I had Learnt it, from the Homilies of our Church, and as I was In- " join'd to teach it, by the Articles of our Religion. I us'd no other Language, than what had been " us'd by our firſt Reformers, by a Continued Series of Right Reverend Prelates, and other Celebrated " Divines, now with God, and by many of thoſe Venerable Fathers, before whom I ſtand, and what " is perfectly agreeable to the Laws and Statutes of this Realm. I had little Reaſon to appre- " hend, that I could ever have been accus'd by the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, to your " Lordſhips, as a Criminal, or as an Aſperſer of the Memory of the late King, for Preaching this " Doctrine, when others, who Preach'd the ſame Doctrine, in the ſame Terms, before Their " Late Majeſties, before Our Preſent Gracious Sovereign, (whom, I pray God, long to Preſerve) be- " fore each Houſe of Parliament, before This very Houſe of Commons, have met with Publick Appro- " bation: But ſince it is my ſingular Misfortune to be accus'd, for what others Receiv'd Thanks, in " ſome Inſtances convey'd to Them, by ſeveral of the Managers Themſelves, I do, with all humble " Confidence, rely upon your Lordſhips Juſtice; not doubting but that the Learned the Judges, if " thought Neceſſary to be conſulted, will Declare, what I have in this Caſe aſſerted, to be War- " ranted by Law, and the Right Reverend the Biſhops, will affirm it to be the Doctrine of the " Goſpel.

" The Doctrine I preach'd, being the Doctrine of the Homilies of Our Church, not expreſs'd only " in a Few particular Paſſages of thoſe Homilies, but perfectly agreeable to the whole Tenor, the " main Scope and Deſign of them; and thoſe Homilies being eſtabliſh'd by the Thirty Nine Articles, " as containing Godly and wholeſome Doctrine, and thoſe Articles being confirm'd by the 13th of Queen " Elizabeth, and that Statute being made Perpetual, and Fundamental to Our Conſtitution, by " the Late Act of Union; I leave it to your Lordſhips to conſider, how far the Condemnation of " Me, on the Account of That Doctrine, may affect, and ſhake the preſent Frame of the Britiſh " Conſtitution, in Church and State, and tend to diſſolve the Union of the Two Kingdoms.

" My Lords, upon the Second Article, I would humbly pray your Lordſhips to conſider, that I " have no where in my Sermon, ſhewn any the leaſt Diſlike of the Indulgence granted by Law to " Diſſenters; that, on the contrary, I have declared My Approbation of it, in the moſt expreſs Terms " imaginable, which I beg Leave once more to repeat to your Lordſhips, out of my Sermon

A. D. 1709.

" preach'd at St. Paul's. I would not (I there ſay) be Miſunderſtood, as if I intended to caſt the " leaſt Invidious Reflection upon that Indulgence, which the Government hath Condeſcended to give them; " which, I am ſure, all Thoſe, who Wiſh well to our Church, are ready to grant to Conſciences truly Scru- " pulous; let them enjoy it in the full Limits the Law hath Preſcrib'd.

" My Lords, This then was, and ſtill is, my ſincere Opinion, nor am I conſcious that I have ut- " tered one Word Inconſiſtent with it. I have, indeed, Blam'd, and, perhaps, with ſome " Warmth, and Earneſtneſs, Blam'd the Abuſes, which Men of no Conſcience, have made, of the " Legal Exemption, granted to Conſciences truly Scrupulous: Nor could I think that thoſe Reprehen- " ſions of Mine, would have drawn upon me the Diſpleaſure of any ſincere Chriſtian, which " were levell'd againſt Hypocrites, Socinians, Deiſts, and ſuch as, under the Umbrage of That Act, " which permits Proteſtant Diſſenters, and thoſe only, to ſerve God, every Man in his own Way, " think themſelves at Liberty to be of no Proteſtant Congregation, of no Religion at all. I will far- " ther ingenuouſly Own to your Lordſhips, that I had in my Eye, ſome Abuſes made of That Act " by the Diſſenters themſelves; who, I am told, do (both Paſtors and People) rarely obſerve the " Qualifications preſcrib'd by that Act; and who Erect Seminaries for Educating Youth in Princi- " ples oppoſite to the Doctrine, Diſcipline, and Worſhip of Our Church; whereas, That Act was in- " tended for the Eaſe of Thoſe, whoſe Minds, through the unhappy Prejudices of Education, " were already eſtranged from the Church; not, as I humbly conceive, to Indulge Men in taking " the moſt effectual Methods to Propagate and Perpetuate their Schiſm.

" My Lords, of any Favours to Diſſenters Granted, or Intended by the Law, I have no where " Complain'd; of Toleration, a Word unknown to Our Laws, and Implying, as I am inform'd, " much more than Our Lawgivers deſign'd, if I have ſaid any Thing offenſive, I may, I hope, " reaſonably preſume, that it will not be Judg'd by your Lordſhips, in any Wiſe, to reflect on " that Act of Exemption, which I have ſpoken of in Terms, no ways, I think, misbecoming a good " Subject, or betraying any want of Chriſtian Moderation. Nor, is there, My Lords, any want of " it, I conceive, in affirming that this Act, which relieves ſome Diſſenters from Legal Puniſhments, " to which they were before obnoxious, hath not any ways alter'd the Nature of Schiſm, or ex- " tinguiſh'd the Obligations to Church Communion; which is an Evangelical Duty, incumbent on all " Chriſtians, by the Rules of the Goſpel, Antecedent to all Secular Laws, and can, by no Human " Power, be diſpens'd with. If the Church of England, My Lords, impoſes no unlawful Terms of " Communion, as ſhe certainly does not, then all Separatiſts from her Communion, will, notwith- " ſtanding the Indulgence, continue to be guilty of Schiſm; the Conſequence of which Guilt, may " ſtill reſt upon their Souls, however it may ceaſe to affect their Bodies or Eſtates. For as no Hu- " man Law can render that Lawful, which God hath forbidden, ſo neither can it make that void, " which God hath commanded.

" My Lords, I am accus'd under this Head, of maintaining, that it is the Duty of Superior Pa- " ſtors, to Thunder out their Eccleſiaſtical Anathemas againſt Perſons Intituled to the Benefit of the Tolera- " tion; I hope, it hath evidently appear'd to your Lordſhips, that I advance no ſuch Poſition. Sure " I am, that my Words do not in themſelves carry ſuch a Meaning, nor does the Connexion of my " Diſcourſe require that Senſe, or eaſily admit it. Schiſmaticks, My Lords, are not the only Per- " ſons, againſt whom Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures may be denounc'd; the Works of Darkneſs, which I " referr'd to, as fit to be Reprov'd, in that Part of my Sermon, where I ſpeak of theſe Cenſures, " are of the ſame kind with thoſe mention'd by the Apoſtle, whoſe Words I produc'd, all Lewd " and Immoral Practices, againſt theſe, My Lords, and againſt Hereſies, and Blaſphemies, (a black " Catalogue of which has been diſplay'd before your Lordſhips) I thought the Anathemas of the " Church would be well employ'd; ſuch Anathemas, I doubt not, My Lords, would be ratified in " Heaven, and would, therefore, by any Power on Earth, be Irreverſible.

" As to Archbiſhop Grindal, tho' I may ſeem to have us'd ſome undue Aſperity of Expreſſion " concerning him, yet I charg'd him with nothing, but what I had good Grounds for, from our " Hiſtorians: It hath been made appear to your Lordſhips, that, on the Account of his Remiſneſs " in Church-Government, he liv'd and dy'd under the high Diſpleaſure of Queen Elizabeth; and " whether therefore he, or that Glorious Queen, ſhall bear the Blame of his Diſgrace and Suf- " ferings, is, with all Humility, ſubmitted to your Lordſhips.

" I hope, My Lords, I ſtand clear in your Opinions, of the Charge advanc'd againſt me, in " the Two Firſt Articles; and as my own Conſcience acquits, ſo I truſt your Lordſhips will acquit " me of whatever is laid to my Charge in the Third.

" My Lords, I neither have ſuggeſted, nor do in my Conſcience believe, that the Church is in " the leaſt Peril, or Adverſity, from her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; ſo far am I from any ſuch " Thoughts, that I am entirely ſatisfied of her being a moſt Affectionate Nurſing-Mother to it. " But, I hope, I may ſay without Offence, that the Church may be in Peril from other Cauſes, " without any Reflection upon her Majeſty's Government, or any Contradiction to her Royal Procla- " mation, and the Reſolution of both Houſes of Parliament, Four Years ago. If the Church be in " Danger, when the Chriſtian Religion is evidently ſo, I hope it will be thought no Crime to ſay " it has ſcarce ever been in greater Danger than it is now, ſince Chriſt had a Church upon Earth. " For beſides that Deluge of Prophaneneſs and Immorality, which over-ſpreads the whole Kingdom; " beſides the Variety, and growing Strength of thoſe Schiſms, which weaken and divide us, and of " thoſe Heterodox Opinions, and damnable Hereſies, which are daily Publiſh'd and Propagated among " us: I verily believe, that never were the Miniſters of Chriſt ſo abus'd and vilify'd, never was " the Divine Authority of the Holy Scriptures ſo arraign'd and ridicul'd, never were Infidelity, and " Atheiſm it ſelf ſo Impudent and Barefac'd; never were ſuch horrid Blaſphemies printed in any " Chriſtian State, from the Foundation of Chriſtianity, to this Day.

" Out of the many Inſtances of this kind, which, being ready at hand, I could have produc'd " to your Lordſhips, I have ſelected a few only; but thoſe ſuch, as, I am perſuaded, your Lordſhips " could not hear without Horror and Aſtoniſhment. Pardon me, My Lords, if my Apprehenſion " of the ſad Conſequences we may expect from ſuch crying Abominations, have forc'd from me " ſome Expreſſions, which, upon a leſs Occaſion, might ſeem too harſh and vehement. A Man " that dreads no Danger from ſuch unparallel'd Iniquities, that do as it were call down GOD's ſeve- " reſt Judgments upon that Poor Church and Nation, wherein they are openly and daringly commit- " ted, muſt be dead in his Love for his Country and Religion. If I have diſclos'd ſuch a frightful " and deteſtable Scene of Impiety, which, by reaſon of your Lordſhips High Stations, and Great Em- " ployments, might poſſibly lie Undiſcover'd to your Sight before; I ſhall think my ſelf Happy,

" whatever ſhall befal me, if I may, by GOD's Grace, become the mean Inſtrument, of putting a " ſtop to that Overflowing of Ungodlineſs, and Blaſphemy, which as yet no Laws, no Proclamations, " how well ſoever deſign'd, and how often ſoever repeated, have been able to Reſtrain.

" Nor ought I, My Lords, to forget, tho' it was forgotten by the Honourable Managers, another " Ground of Danger, ariſing to this Church from the Attempts of Popiſh Emiſſaries, by me menti- " on'd, I hope without the leaſt Offence, in my Sermon at St. Paul's; where I ſay, It were high- " ly to be wiſh'd, that thoſe Excellent Laws, made for the Defence and Security of the Church, were at pre- " ſent put ſtrictly in Execution; for the Roman-Catholick Agents and Miſſionaries, that ſwarm about " this great City, as 'twere in Defiance and Contempt of them, were never more Buſy in making Proſe- " lytes to their Superſtition and Idolatry, and Perverting and Debauching Her Majeſty's Subjects in every " Corner of our Streets. I have not, My Lords, been call'd upon to prove the Truth of this Paſſage; " nor has it been reckon'd among the falſe Inſinuations I have made, that the Church is in Danger. " I pray GOD, the Church may be in no Danger upon any of theſe Accounts. Her Majeſty, your " Lordſhips, and the Commons, have indeed provided againſt theſe Dangers, by wholeſom Laws; and " I hope, I did not exceed the Limits of my Function, when, being call'd to preach before Magi- " ſtrates, I exhorted them to prevent theſe Dangers, by putting thoſe Laws ſtrictly in Exe- " cution.

" Juſt had been the Indignation of the Honourable Houſe of Commons, juſt would be your Lordſhips " moſt ſevere Reſentment, if by any Parallel by me drawn, I had inſinuated that the Members of " both Houſes, who paſs'd the Vote concerning the ſafe and flouriſhing Condition of the Church, had been " then Conſpiring its Ruin: I have already purg'd my ſelf from this Imputation, by obſerving, that " the Parallel, aſcrib'd to me, implies, that they who Voted King Charles the Firſt to be out of " Danger, and thoſe who conſpir'd his Death, were the very ſame Perſons; whereas, it is certain, " they were not: For, My Lords, the Vote about the King's Safety, was paſs'd by Lords and Com- " mons a Year and half before his execrable Murther; which had been contriv'd by the Army, " and was perpetrated by a pretended Ordinance of a ſmall Remnant of the Houſe of Commons, (not a " Tenth Part of the whole) after the Reſt of the Members had been impriſon'd, or ſecluded; and without " the Concurrence of the Houſe of Peers, who totally rejected it. You have had, My Lords, a very diffe- " rent Repreſentation of this Fact, made by one of the Learned Managers; But this, My Lords, is " the real Truth, as recited in the Act of Parliament for the Attainder of the King's Murtherers; and " is an Evidence, that I could not poſſibly mean, by any odious Parallel, to inſinuate, that the " Members of both Houſes, who paſs'd the Vote concerning the Safety of the Church, were then " conſpiring its Ruin.

" I humbly crave your Lordſhips Patience yet a little further, whilſt I ſpeak to what is alledg'd " in the Fourth Article; which charges me with many Crimes of a very High and Flagrant Na- " ture; none of which have been endeavour'd to be prov'd upon me, otherwiſe than from ſup- " poſed Suggeſtions, and undetermin'd Expreſſions: And I muſt ſtill, with your Lordſhips Leave, humbly " inſiſt upon it, that where the Expreſſions are doubtful, there the favourable Senſe is always to be " preferr'd.

" My Lords, Theſe Things being humbly offer'd to the Conſideration of your Lordſhips, I hope, " that what I have already ſuffer'd, as a ſuppos'd Criminal, will be Thought ſufficient Puniſhment for " one, who has offended againſt no Law yet in Being. It muſt be thought no little Grief, and " Vexation to any ingenuous Man, to be brought to this Bar, under the leaſt Suſpicion of ſuch " Crimes as are laid to my Charge; but for a Perſon of my Function to have an Accuſation of this " Nature alledg'd againſt him, ſo heinouſly reflecting upon his Holy Character, is ſuch a foul Blot, " as, tho' his Innocence ſhould at laſt be clear'd by your Lordſhips, upon the moſt undeniable Evidence, " muſt leave a Scar upon his Good Name; which is to all Men dear, but much more ſo to thoſe, " whoſe whole Capacity of doing Good in the World, principally depends upon it.

" To the great Misfortune of falling under the Diſpleaſure of that Honourable Houſe, I might add, " that of a long and cloſe Confinement, and of an Expence no ways proportion'd to my Circumſtances. " For, My Lords, if I have committed any Faults or Errors in Expreſſion, yet, as I inſiſt up- " on my Innocence, with reſpect to all the high Crimes laid to my Charge, ſo I muſt inſiſt upon all " the Doctrines which I have taught, as being agreeable to the Word of God, and to the Doctrine of " our moſt excellent, and truly Apoſtolical Church, and which we of the Clergy are oblig'd, both by " Subſcription and Oath, to acknowledge and defend. And how hard are our Circumſtances, if we " muſt be puniſh'd in this World for doing that, which, if we do not, we ſhall be more heavily " puniſh'd in the next? What a Condition are we in, if we are commanded to cry aloud, and " ſpare not, to exhort, rebuke, in Seaſon, and out of of Seaſon, on the one Hand; and Proſecuted, Im- " priſon'd, Ruin'd, on the other? If this be our Caſe, who indeed is ſufficient for theſe Things? And " how truly may we of the Miniſtry, above all Men Living, apply to our ſelves thoſe Words of " the Apoſtle, If in this Life only we have Hope in Chriſt, we are, of all Men, moſt miſerable: But " our Comfort is, that our Hope in Chriſt is not only in this Life. For my own Part, it mat- " ters not what becomes of me, nor is my Deliverance, or Ruin, of any Moment to the World; " or, if it be, I am ready not to be bound, but to die, could I by that, do Service to my Queen, my " Church, or my Country; neither count I my Life dear, ſo that I might finiſh my Courſe with Joy, and " the Miniſtry which I have receiv'd of the Lord Jeſus. But may God ſo direct your Lordſhips, that " through me a Wound may not be given to the Doctrines of the Scriptures, and of the Church, " which Chriſt hath purchas'd with his own Blood.

" And ſo, with all Humility and Reſignation, I ſubmit my ſelf to your Lordſhips Judgment; " be it what it will. The Auditors variouſly affected by Dr. Sacheverel's Speech.

This ſtudied, artful, and pathetick Speech, deliver'd with maſterly Aſſurance, made various Impreſſions on the Hearers; for though it deeply affected the Fair Sex, and even drew Tears from ſome of the moſt tender-hearted, yet it had a contrary Effect with others. Among the reſt, a Lady, to whom the Doctor had ſhewn his Sermon before he preach'd it, and given her a Key to it, by pointing out to her the ſeveral Reflections, upon the Revolution, King William, the Miniſtry, and the Lord Treaſurer; when ſhe heard his ſolemn Recantation in his Speech, could not forbear crying out with Aſtoniſhment, the greateſt Villain under the Sun! And, indeed, his Appeals to the Great God, and the Supreme Tribunal, for his ſincere Affection to the Revolution, and the Hanover Succeſſion, and his Abhorrence of any Reflection upon the Government, if compared with his Sermon, cannot but raiſe the higheſt Indignation: For all that the moſt extenſive Charity can do in this Caſe, is, to chuſe which Side of a glaring Contradiction we will believe, the Sermon, or the Speech; unleſs we admit, for an Excuſe, that the latter was not of the Doctor's compoſing; but was, as the Generality believ'd, the joint Work of Dr. Atterbury, Dr. Smallridge, and Dr. Friend, ſupervis'd and corrected by Sir Simon Harcourt and Mr. Phipps.

A. D. 1713.

We may here take Notice, that Sir John Holt, Knt. Lord Chief Juſtice of the Queen's-Bench, happening to die † in this critical Juncture, the Treaſurer, and the Earl of Sunderland, were very preſſing with the Queen to advance to that important Station, Sir Thomas Parker, who, on all Occaſions, and in particular during the Courſe of Dr. Sacheverel's Tryal, had given ſhining Proofs of his Abilities, and of his firm Adherence to the Revolution Principles: And tho' the Queen was, by this Time, inclining to the oppoſite Party, yet ſhe knew not how to deny them this Favour; but, it ſeems, reſolved, that it ſhould be the laſt. We may here alſo take Notice, that Sir Thomas Littleton, Treaſurer of the Navy, being dead on the laſt New-Year's-Day, the Miniſtry thought fit, ſome time after, to advance to that important Poſt, Robert Walpole, Eſq; a Gentleman of very bright Parts, whoſe Place of Secretary at War was given to Mr. Adam Cardonel, the Duke of Marlborough's Secretary; which, however, was thought ſomewhat ſtrange and impolitick. About the ſame Time, upon the Death * of Algernoon Capel, Earl of Eſſex, the Earl Rivers was made Conſtable of the Tower of London in his Room; but the Diſpoſal of the deceaſed Earl's Regiment of Dragoons, contrary to the Queen's Intentions, was highly reſented; and, in the End, proved fatal to the Miniſtry.

To proceed, neither of the Two Houſes of Parliament ſat on the 8th of March, as being the Anniverſary Feſtival of her Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne; but on the 9th, the Lords proceeded further on the Tryal, the Queen being preſent; and Four of the Managers for the Houſe of Commons, (Sir Joſeph Jekyl, Mr. Sollicitor-General, Mr. Lechmere, and Sir Peter King) replied to Dr. Sacheverel's Defence, as to the Firſt and Second Articles. The next ‖ Day (the Queen ſtill being preſent) Mr. Cowper, Mr. Thompſon, and Sir Thomas Parker, replied to what had been alledg'd in the Doctor's Juſtification, as to the Third and Fourth Articles; and ſpoke ſo fully to the Matter, that General Stanhope, who was likewiſe ready to reply, did not think it neceſſary to add any thing to it. Sir Thomas Parker, in particular, made a very notable Speech, full of ſtrong Arguments, and manly Oratory, wherein he chiefly endeavour'd to prove, That Dr. Sacheverel had wreſted and miſquoted ſeveral Texts of Scripture; and was, in ſome meaſure, guilty of Perjury, ſince in his Speech, he proteſted, with the moſt ſolemn Imprecations and Appeals to the Searcher of all Hearts, to witneſs, that he had no Intention to aſperſe the Memory of the late King, to traduce the late happy Revolution, to arraign the Reſolutions of both Houſes of Parliament, or to defame her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; which was as plain as at Noon-Day, both from the Tenor and expreſs Words of his Sermon. Sir Thomas Parker having made an end of his Speech, the Earl of Nottingham ſaid, he had ſomething to propoſe; whereupon the Earl of Sunderland moved, that the Lords ſhould adjourn to their Houſe, which they did accordingly; and there the Earl of Nottingham ſtarted an unexpected Queſtion, viz. Whether in Proſecutions, by Impeachments for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, by Writing or Speaking, the particular Words, ſuppoſed to be criminal, are neceſſary to be expreſly ſpecified in ſuch Impeachments? After ſome Debate, the Lords reſolved to conſult the Judges, who very readily deliver'd their unanimous Opinion, that according to Law, the Grounds of an Indictment or Impeachment ought to be expreſly mention'd in both. Thoſe who were for puniſhing Dr. Sacheverel, were not a little ſurpriz'd at this unforeſeen Difficulty, which was of no leſs Conſequence, than to baffle and annul the whole Proſecution, and to make it neceſſary for the Commons to begin anew, which they could not expect to have Time to do. But it being ſuggeſted, that the Judges had deliver'd their Opinion according to the Rules of Weſtminſter-Hall, and not according to the Uſage of Parliaments, the Lords, on the 11th of March, reſumed the Debate upon the Queſtion ſtarted by the Earl of Nottingham, (the Queen being preſent); and, at laſt, reſolv'd, That in Impeachments they were to proceed according to the Laws of the Land, and the Law and Uſage of Parliaments; and appointed a Committee to ſearch the Journals of their Houſe for Precedents,

"1. Becauſe we conceive the Law of the Land is as much the Rule of Judicature, "as it is in the inferior Courts of Juſtice; and ſince by the Opinion of all the "Judges, in all Proſecutions by Information or Indictment, for Writing or Speak-"ing, the particular Words ſuppoſed to be criminal, muſt be expreſly ſpecified in "ſuch Information or Indictment; and that this is the Law of the Land, confirm'd "by conſtant Practice, we conceive, that there is the ſame Reaſon and Juſtice for "ſpecifying in Impeachments the particular Words ſuppoſed to be criminal; for, "otherwiſe, a Perſon who is innocent, and ſafe by the Law, out of Parliament, "may, nevertheleſs, be condemn'd in Parliament.

"For we conceive, that ſome Reaſons of Law and Juſtice, why the Words ſup-"poſed criminal muſt be ſpecified in Informations and Indictments, may be, that "the Party accuſed, may certainly know his Charge, and be thereby enabled to "defend his Innocence; that the Jury may know it too, and be enabled thereby the "better to apply the Evidence given by the Witneſſes to the Matter of ſuch Charge; "and that the Judges themſelves may the better judge of the Nature of the Crimes, "and of a Puniſhment adequate to it, which, in Caſes of Miſdemeanors, which are "indefinite and innumerable, muſt extreamly vary, according to the Heinouſneſs "of the Offence; and finally, That the Houſe of Lords, upon Complaint to them, "may alſo judge, whether the Fine, which is uſually one of the Puniſhments for "Miſdemeanors, do not exceed the Demerit; eſpecially ſince by the Bill of Rights, "exorbitant Fines are declared to be illegal; which Reaſons ſeem to be fully as "ſtrong in the Caſe of Impeachments, as in Indictments and Informations; for "the particular Words are as neceſſary to enable the Lords to determine uprightly "and impartially, as the Jury or Judges; and as neceſſary for the Defence of the "accuſed here, as in the Courts below; and if there were to be a Difference, it "ſeems more neceſſary in this high Court; for the weightier the Proſecution is, the "more need has an unfortunate Man of Indulgence, and all lawful Favour; and "ſurely there cannot be an heavier Load upon a Man, than an Accuſation by all the "Commons of Britain.

"We do not remember any Precedent inſiſted on for the Maintenance of this Re-"ſolution, ſave only the Caſe of Dr. Manwaring, which, we conceive, could not "warrant this Reſolution; for, Firſt, the Words charged upon him by the Com-"mons Declaration, were not compar'd with the Sermons, tho' it was deſir'd; and "conſequently, no Lord could ſay, they were not the Words of the Sermons; and "therefore, upon ſuch Uncertainty, we conceive we could not ground a Poſitive "Reſolution.

" III. But altho' this Precedent were full and expreſs to the Point Reſolv'd; We " humbly conceive, that one Precedent is not ſufficient to ſupport a Law and Cuſtom " of Parliament, nor conſequently a Reſolution, declaring it; for ſurely there is " great Difference between a ſingle Inſtance, and a Law and Cuſtom.

" Since we conceive, that in all the Precedents, at leaſt, all that have appear'd " to us for Four hundred Years, of the Proſecutions in Parliament, the Particular " Words charg'd, have been conſtantly expreſs'd in the Articles, or Declarations of " Impeachments.

Two Days † after, the Queen went incognito to the Houſe of Lords, where a Motion being made to declare, That the Commons had made good the Firſt Article againſt Dr. Sacheverel, a warm Debate aroſe thereupon. That the Doctrine of Paſſive-Obedience, as " preſs'd by the Doctor, was not reconcileable to the Practice of Churchmen; and " his Lordſhip thought it very hard, that when the Archbiſhop might preach up the " Reſiſtance uſed at the Revolution, the Mouths of private Men ſhould be ſtopt. That " if the Revolution were not lawful, many in that Houſe, and vaſt Numbers without, " were guilty of Blood, Murder, Rapine, and Injuſtice; and the Queen her ſelf " was no lawful Queen, ſince the beſt Title ſhe had to the Crown, was her Parlia- " mentary Title, founded on the Revolution." In anſwer to this, the Lord Haver-ſham ſpoke as follows:

† March 16.

Great Debate in the Lords Houſe, about the Firſt Article.

The Earl of Wharton's Speech.

My LORDS,

WHen I conſider where this Impeachment firſt began, I cannot but think the Deſign of it was very good; but whatever it was, in its firſt Intendment, it is very evident, it has already procured very miſchievous Effects; it has created great Diſturbances in private Families, and raiſed a Ferment in the Nation, that will not be laid by your Lordſhips Judgment, let that be what it will. It has been a two-edg'd Miſchief; giving the Church on the one ſide, and the Diſſenters on the other, too juſt Apprehenſion, that they are both in Danger. Nor can this be wonder'd at, when your Lordſhips have been told, by ſome of the Managers, of a pretended Divine Right of the Church, and when it has been more than hinted by the Managers of the Houſe of Commons, That the Clergy ought to be directed by the Civil Power, what Doctrine they ſhould teach: Nay, when they have authoritatively taken upon them to interpret Scripture, and charged it as a Crime upon a Miniſter, that he had wreſted ſeveral Places of it to his own wicked Intentions.

The Lord Haverſham's Speech.

My Lords, After ſo noble a Defence made for the Doctor by his Council, and ſo great and moving an Apology by himſelf, I ſhould not trouble your Lordſhips upon this Occaſion, were it not more in Juſtification of my ſelf, for the Judgment I ſhall give, than for the Sake of the Doctor, whoſe Cauſe, I think, now ſtands in very little need of it.

(a) Sign'd by Jo. Ebor, N. Dureſme, Suſſex, Scarſdale, Plymouth, R. Ferrers, Beaufort, Denbigh, Yarmouth, Rocheſter, Weymouth, Scarborough, W. Ceſtrienſ. Stawell, Conway, Guilford, Lemſter, H. London, Leeds, Thanet, Angleſey, Abingdon, Northampton, Jerſey, North and Grey, Willoughby Br. Craven, Osborne, Howard, Guernſey, Nottingham, Berkſhire.

I was, My Lords, a Sufferer in the late Reigns, as well as others: I was in the Convention-Parliament, and in the Vote of Abdication; and am, at this Day, of the ſame Principle I was then; and yet, notwithſtanding this, I am not aſhamed to ſay to your Lordſhips, that I think my ſelf obliged, in Juſtice, to acquit the Doctor from the Charge brought againſt him in this Article. And tho' this may ſeem ſtrange to ſome of your Lordſhips; yet, I hope, it will not appear ſo very ſtrange, as to ſee Biſhops vote againſt their own Doctrines, and Diſſenters in the Midſt of a Mob that are pulling down Meeting-Houſes; eſpecially after the Reaſons I ſhall offer to your Lordſhips for the Support of my Opinion.

I ſhall not trouble your Lordſhips about the Original of Government, or the divers Forms of it; your Lordſhips heard that learnedly diſcours'd on by one of the Managers of the Houſe of Commons, below: But there is one Thing, My Lords, that, if my Memory ſerves me right, that Gentleman omitted; and it is a Matter too, that I take to be of the greateſt Conſequence to any Government whatſoever; I mean, the Divine Appointment, or Inſtitution of Government it ſelf: From which Appointment it is, that Men are obliged to Obedience to the Magiſtrate, not only for Wrath, or Fear of him, but for Conſcience ſake, for Dread of a future Puniſhment; which is the greateſt Security the Magiſtrate has. And I the rather mention this, becauſe of Notions that ſome People have of late advanced of their own, (and have found their Advantage too in ſo doing) of a Diſcretionary Obedience only; that is, in my Opinion, whilſt the Government is for them, they will be for it, and think themſelves bound to obey no longer. It is not neceſſary to the Proof of this Divine Authority, to fix the juſt Time and Place, when, and where, and how the Knowledge of it was firſt communicated to Mankind; it is enough, that We have it as expreſly, as plainly, and as clearly declar'd, as can be put into Words, that it is ſo.

There is another Thing, My Lords, that, in general, I would mention to your Lordſhips, before I come to the Article it ſelf; which may otherwiſe be the Occaſion of ſome Miſtake in this Debate. We are not now judging according to our own Notions of Politicks, or determining how far Reſiſtance, or Non-Reſiſtance, is lawful: It would be a ſtrange Rule of Judgment, to find any Man guilty, for the Sake of one's private Opinion, and for the eſtabliſhing a Doctrine which he likes, and his Neighbour does not. But the only Queſtion before your Lordſhips, is, Whether, and how far, the Houſe of Commons have made good their Charge againſt the Doctor? And I take the Liberty to ſay plainly to your Lordſhips, that, in my Opinion, they have been very far from making good their Charge againſt him in this Article.

My Lords, To prevent the leaſt Miſtake, I ſhall read the Words of the Article to your Lordſhips, as they ſtand in the Impeachment:

"He the ſaid Henry Sacheverel, in his ſaid Sermon preach'd at St. Paul's, doth "ſuggeſt and maintain, That the neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the ſaid "Happy Revolution, were odious and unjuſtifiable: That his Late Majeſty, in his "Declaration, diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance; and that to impute "Reſiſtance to the ſaid Revolution, is to caſt black and odious Colours upon his Late "Majeſty, and the ſaid Revolution.

The Doctor, in this Article, is charg'd with having maintain'd, That the neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the late Happy Revolution, were odious and unjuſtifiable. To ſupport this, the Commons ſay, That having aſſerted the general Propoſition of the Unlawfulneſs of reſiſting the Supreme Power, and not having excepted the particular Caſe of Reſiſtance that was made uſe of, as a Means to bring about the late Happy Revolution; he does thereby reflect both upon the Means, and upon the ſaid Revolution. In Anſwer to this, there have been Two Things inſiſted upon to your Lordſhips, in Behalf of the Doctor, by his Council: Firſt, That in Caſes of ſuch a Nature as this, the Exception is always imply'd in the general Rule: And there was a very unanſwerable Inſtance brought in Proof of this, at leaſt to moſt of your Lordſhips; it was the Oath of Allegiance to King James: All thoſe that took that Oath, took it in general Words; and yet, ſuch an extraordinary Caſe as the Revolution was excepted, though not expreſs'd by thoſe that took that Oath. The next was, The Doctor, ſay they, would have been juſtly more blam'd, had he mention'd all the Caſes of Exception; which extraordinary Caſes ought to anſwer for themſelves, whenever they fall out.

And though, My Lords, theſe Two be a full Anſwer, yet there are Two Things more, I think, with Submiſſion, may be added to it, which have not as yet been taken notice of.

The First is, My Lords, That the Proof againſt the Doctor is drawn by Conſequences of the Commons own making, which he himſelf diſowns: And I appeal to that Reverend and Learned Bench, who are great Maſters of Controverſy, whether it is not an eſtaeſtabliſh'd Rule amorg all Learned Men, that have the leaſt Spark of Ingenuity, that no Man orght to be charg'd with Conſequences, let them appear to his Adverſary never ſo clearly and undeniably to follow from his Aſſertion, when he himſelf denies thoſe Conſequences? This is ſo known a Maxim, in all Diſputes between Proteſtants and Papiſts, and between Proteſtants themſelves, that it cannot be deny'd. Now, the Doctor himſelf denying, as he does, that he had the leaſt Thought of including the Revolution under his general Aſſertion, or that he apply'd his Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance to that Caſe, cannot, without the higheſt Injuſtice, be charged with Conſequences, which he himſelf utterly denies.

In the next place, it is impoſſible, in my Opinion, to prove, that Reſiſtance was made uſe of as a Means to bring about the late happy Revolution; and conſequently, is not within the Doctor's general Maxim.

Means, My Lords, is a relative Term, and refers to ſome End: And the End and Deſign of the Prince of Orange in coming hither, and of thoſe that join'd him when he was here, being to have the Nation and Rightful Succeſſion ſecur'd by a Free Parliament; it follows, that whatever Force was, at that Time, made uſe of, could not be made uſe of as a Means to bring about an End which was never intended. Far be it from me, My Lords, to leſſen this great Undertaking to deliver us from Popery and Arbitrary Power! And tho' the Glory of that Enterprize is wholly attributed to King William; 'tis certain, Her preſent Majeſty had her Share in it, however that is forgotten: For, give me Leave to ſay, That had not her Majeſty countenanc'd the Undertaking of the Prince of Orange with her Aſſiſtance, in my Opinion, the Succeſs had been very dubious.

Now, is it poſſible, My Lords, to imagine, that it was ever the Deſign of her Majeſty, or thoſe that join'd the Prince of Orange, to take the Crown off of King James's, and put it upon King William's Head?

No, My Lords; the avowed great Deſign was quite otherwiſe, as appears by the Declaration it ſelf, which was read below: It was to reſtore and ſecure our Laws, from the Invaſions that had been made upon them by Arbitrary Power: It was to ſecure that Right, that, all the World knows, the Princeſs had to the Succeſſion of the Crown, and to have every Thing ſettled by a Free Parliament; and not to make a Revolution, by Dethroning King James. This the Prince himſelf owns, when he ſays, in his Declaration, He had no other Deſign in coming hither, but a Free Parliament.

My Lords, I take it to be of moſt dangerous Conſequence, to judge any Man by Suggeſtions and Innuendos: Let what will be ſaid to juſtify it, it ſhall never be the Rule of my Judgment.

Groundleſs Suggeſtions, My Lords, have, within my Memory, been the Pretence of Power, to cover illegal Oppreſſion, with the Shew of Reaſon, to the Publick. I will give your Lordſhips but one Inſtance of it: It was the Caſe of a Reverend Prelate, now in the Houſe; I mean the Archbiſhop of York: His Grace was then Dr. Sharpe only. It was in the Year Eighty Six: There was an Order, directed by way of Letter to the Proteſtant Biſhops, to diſcharge all the Inferior Clergy from Preaching upon controverted Points in Divinity: They thought it ſerved the Deſigns of Popery, then, to direct Miniſters how they ſhould preach; which was, in Effect, to forbid them to defend their Religion. This Precedent was taken from an Order in Queen Mary's Time, ſays the printed Account; when, at the ſame Time, it was attack'd by the Romiſh Prieſts with all the Vigor they were capable of, and the Popiſh Sermons and Diſcourſes were printed by Authority. Notwithſtanding this Order, the Doctor took Occaſion, in ſome of his Sermons, to vindicate the Church of England, in Oppoſition to the Frauds and Corruptions of Popery: But this, by the Court-Emiſſaries, was interpreted much the ſame way as the Doctor's Sermon is now, to be endeavouring to beget, in the Minds of his Hearers, an ill Opinion of the King, and his Government, by inſinuating Fears and Jealouſies, to diſpoſe them to Diſcontent, and to lead them into Schiſm, Diſobedience and Rebellion.

My Lords, When the Homilies and Articles, when ſo many Archbiſhops and Biſhops, and the Univerſities, and moſt of the Foreign Divines too, (eſpecially the Lutherans) have aſſerted the ſame Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power, as Dr. Sacheverel has; I think it the hardeſt Caſe in the World, that this unfortunate Gentleman ſhould be ſingled out, and made a Criminal, and a Kind of Martyr, enduring the Tryal of cruel Mockings, yea, moreover, of Bonds and Impriſonment, for aſſerting the ſame Doctrine. 'Tis true, Beza, and Pareus, and ſome others of the Calviniſts, are of another Opinion; but 'tis known, that Pareus's Commentary on the 13th of the Romans, was burnt at Oxford, by the Order of King James I. for aſſerting that Doctrine.

But there is one Thing, My Lords, ſo aſtoniſhing in this Proſecution, that I cannot but take notice of it: Thoſe who were at Man's Eſtate at the Revolution, know how induſtrious, on the one Side, all that were Friends to King James were, to put his Leaving the Nation then upon the Foot of Force and Reſiſtance; as thinking this the ſtrongeſt and beſt Argument, to juſtify his withdrawing himſelf from his People: They rack'd their Brains,

A. D. 1715.

Brains, to find out Arguments to convince Men, that his Life was manifeſtly in Danger by ſtaying here; and that it was for the Sake of that, and his Liberty, that he was forc'd to withdraw; and that his withdrawing was juſt, being an Act of Neceſſity, and not of Choice.

On the other ſide, thoſe that were Friends to the Revolution, made it their Buſineſs to perſuade the World, that all this was but a Colour and Pretence, and that the Fact was quite otherwiſe: That the Senſe and Conviction King James had of what he had done, prevail'd upon him rather to throw off the Government, than concur with a Free Parliament.

That this was the only Foot they then put it upon; and that it was not then put upon the Foot of Forfeiting the Government by Male-Adminiſtration; if any Man denies, I appeal to the Papers that were then writ, and are now in Print, on this Subject.

This being ſo, it is very ſtrange to ſee ſo great an Alteration in Men's Notions of Things; and that now, after our Conſtitution has maintain'd it ſelf upon this Foot, againſt all Deſigns and Attempts that have been made upon it, for above Twenty Years, thoſe very Men, and that Party, who endeavour'd to place the Revolution then upon King James's voluntary Deſertion, which they call'd Abdication, ſhould now, without any Reaſon given, be for changing that Foundation, and do all they can, to put it upon King James's Foot of Force and Reſiſtance. What, My Lords, are we endeavouring, after Twenty Years, to make King James's Title better now, than any of his Friends could make it then; and not only finding out Arguments they never thought of, but impeaching any that dare ſo much as queſtion the Truth and Force of them? This, My Lords, ſeems very ſtrange.

My Lords, I cannot but take notice to your Lordſhips, of what was ſaid by that Noble Lord who ſpoke laſt; becauſe, to me it appears to be a Matter of the laſt Conſequence to the Honour of her preſent Majeſty. He told your Lordſhips, That the beſt Title her Majeſty had to the Crown, was her Parliamentary Title. I muſt take the Liberty to affirm the quite contrary; and that, in my Opinion, the beſt Title her Majeſty has, is her Hereditary Title: Tho' I deny not, but that the Act of Parliament is a Strengthening and Confirmation of that Title; yet I deny a Parliamentary Title to be the only, or the beſt Title that the Queen has to the Crown ſhe wears. And in ſaying this, I do not fear the malicious Reflections of having a ſquinting Regard to the Title of any Perſon on the other Side of the Water; for, in affirming, (as I now do to your Lordſhips) that her Majeſty is my Rightful and Lawful Queen, by Right of Inheritance, and as ſhe is the Daughter of King James the Second, I do in ſo many Words affirm alſo, that there is no other Perſon the Rightful and Lawful Heir to King James, but Her ſelf. And if the preſent Impeachment of Dr. Sacheverel ſhall have this Effect, (as I hope it will) to convince the Nation of the undoubted Truth of her Majeſty's Right of Inheritance to the Crown, (a Matter now ſo induſtriouſly oppos'd) the Security this will bring to her Majeſty's Perſon and Crown, and to the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line, and the Illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover afterwards, ſhall prevail with me eaſily to pardon any warm and unguarded Expreſſions, that the Doctor may here and there have dropt, and made uſe of in any of his Diſcourſes.

Lord Ferrers.

The Lord Ferrers likewiſe endeavour'd to excuſe the Doctor; alledging, "That "the Revolution was not mention'd in his Sermon: That nothing but plain Matter "of Fact ſhould ground ſuch a ſolemn Accuſation: That if the Doctor were guilty "of ſome fooliſh, unguarded Expreſſions, he ought to have been try'd in Weſtmin- "ſter-Hall: But his Lordſhip doubted, whether, even in the Inferior Courts, there "would be ſufficient Matter to convict him." He was back'd by the Earl of Scar- borough, who ſaid, The Revolution was a nice Point, and above the Law; and moved, That they ſhould adjourn the Debate, and take Time to conſider, before they gave their Judgment.

Dr. Talbot, Biſhop of Oxford.

The Lord Haverſham having reflected on ſome Biſhops voting contrary to their Doctrines; Dr. Talbot, Biſhop of Oxford, took from thence Occaſion to ſpeak on the other ſide. In the firſt place, he laid down Two Premiſes: "1ſt, That Govern- "ment, in general, was, in its Original Inſtitution, deſigned for the Good of the "whole Body: For Men were not form'd into Societies, only to be Subjects of the "arbitrary Wills, the ſlaviſh Inſtruments in the gratifying the ambitious, or other "corrupt Deſigns, of any one, or more Men; but for the Safety and Property of "the whole Community. 2dly, That in the Holy Scriptures, there's no Specifi- "cation of any one particular Form of Government, to which all Nations and "Bodies of Men, in all Times and Places, ought to be ſubject; nor are there ſuch "exact Accounts of the Extent of the Power of the Governor, or the Obedience "and Submiſſion of the Governed, as can reach to all Caſes that may poſſibly "happen. He urged, That the moſt zealous Contenders for the abſolute Power of "the Prince, and unconditional Submiſſion of the Subject, found themſelves up- "on the Fifth Commandment, Honour thy Father and Mother; which they ex-

" pound as comprehending Political, as well as Natural Parents : But that if a Pa" rent, in a Frenzy, Fit of Drunkenneſs, or Paſſion, ſhall attempt to kill his inno" cent Son, the latter may grapple with him, and diſarm him : That the Prime " Law of Nature, of Self-Preſervation, will juſtify the Political Child, the Body of " the People, in defending their Political Life, (that is, their Conſtitution) againſt
" plain and avow'd Attempts of the Political Parents utterly to deſtroy it." He allow'd, " That in all Governments, there is an abſolute Power lodg'd Some" where ; but contended, That with us, that Power is lodg'd in the Legiſlature : To " which Purpoſe, he quoted Sir Thomas Smith, de Republ. Angl. who ſays, That the " Parliament gives Forms for Succeſſion of the Crown. He own'd, That the Executive " Power, with us, is lodg'd with the Prince : That thoſe commiſſion'd by him,
" acting according to their Commiſſion, and within thoſe Laws, with the Execution
" whereof He and they are truſted, are irreſiſtible : That the Perſon of the " Prince is always inviolable ; ſo that nothing leſs than a total Subverſion of " the Conſtitution, can juſtify any forcible Reſiſtance of his Subjects. But that,
" if in a Legal Monarchy, where the Laws enacted by the common Conſent of " Prince and People, are the Meaſures both of his Government, and of their Obedi-
" ence, that limit his Power, as well as ſecure their Rights and Properties ; the " Prince ſhall change this Form of Government into an abſolute Tyranny, ſet aſide
" thoſe Laws, and (when all Applications and Attempts of other Kinds prove un-
" ſucceſsful) if then the Nobles and Commons join together, in Defence of their " ancient Conſtitution, Government and Laws, he could not call them Rebels." On the other hand, his Lordſhip brought in ſeveral Inſtances from former Reigns, to prove the Lawfulneſs of Reſiſtance in certain Caſes ; and ſaid, " That tho' Paſ-
" ſive Obedience be a Duty of perpetual Obligation, in general Terms, yet the " Practice of it, in particular, is temporary, and depends on Circumſtances. That
" the Doctor's preaching that Doctrine, was altogether unſeaſonable, conſidering
" the Queen's Excellent and Legal Adminiſtration, and her Subjects Dutiful Beha" viour ; and therefore, the urging it at this Time, was level'd againſt the Revo- " lution. That if the Revolution was illegal, they ought to repent of it : But as " no Repentance can be ſincere and good without Reſtitution, ſo they ought to bring " in the Pretender : Which he mention'd, only to ſhew the dangerous Tendency " of the Doctor's Aſſertions. Concluding, That he voted againſt him, merely to " deter others ; for he was apprehenſive, that if he were not puniſh'd, our Excellent
" Conſtitution would be entirely loſt." Dr. Hooper, Biſhop of Bath and Wells, who endeavour'd to excuſe Dr. Sacheverel, " allow'd, indeed, of what the Biſhop of Ox-
" ford had advanc'd, about the Neceſſity and Legality of Reſiſtance, in ſome ex" traordinary Caſes ; but was of Opinion, that this ought to be kept from the " Knowledge of the People, who are naturally too too apt to reſiſt ; and that the " oppoſite Doctrine ought rather to be maintain'd and enforc'd. That the Revo- " lution was not to be boaſted of, and made a Precedent ; but we ought to throw a " Mantle over it, and rather call it Vacancy, or Abdication : And that the Original
" Compact were Two very dangerous Words ; not to be mention'd, without a great " deal of Caution. That they who examin'd the Revolution too nicely, were no
" Friends to it : For, at that rate, the Crown would roll like a Ball, and never " be fix'd. Concluding, that there ſeem'd to be a Neceſſity to preach up Non-Re-
" ſiſtance and Paſſive Obedience, at that Time, when Reſiſtance was juſtify'd." The Duke of Argyle, who ſpoke on the other ſide, ſaid, among other Things, That the Clergy, in all Ages, have deliver'd up the Rights and Liberties of the People ; and preach'd up the King's Power, in order to govern him ; and therefore, they ought not to be ſuffer'd to meddle with Politicks. The Earl of Angleſey anſwer'd to this, That Political Sermons were ſometimes neceſſary, and allow'd on the Thirtieth of January, and other Occaſions. As to the Revolution, which was the chief Matter now in Debate, he ſaid, That the Vacancy of the Throne was properly the Thing ; and therefore, the mentioning neceſſary Means, was mere Nonſenſe in the Doctor ; and he would not find him guilty for Nonſenſe : The rather, becauſe the Doctrine of Reſiſtance, which the Doctor had confuted, juſtifies Rebellion, Murder, and all manner of Crimes. The Duke of Leeds, who ſpoke on the ſame ſide, made a very long Speech ; " wherein he own'd, he " had a great Share in the late Revolution ; but ſaid, he never thought that Things
" would have gone ſo far, as to ſettle the Crown on the Prince of Orange ; whom " he had often heard ſay, that He had no ſuch Thoughts himſelf. That they ought to " diſtinguiſh between Reſiſtance and Revolution ; For Vacancy, or Abdication, was the " Thing they went upon ; and therefore, Reſiſtance was to be forgot : For had it not
" ſucceeded, it had certainly been Rebellion ; ſince he knew of no other but Heredi-
" tary Right." Hereupon Dr. Gilbert Burnet, Biſhop of Salisbury, made the following Speech :

The Biſhop of Bath and Wells.

D. of Argyle.

E. of Angleſey.

D. of Leeds.

The Biſhop of Sarum's Speech.

" THE Council for the Priſoner did ſo plainly and fully yield all that any Loyal Subject has ever pre-
" tended to, that in Caſes of extream Neceſſity, SELF-DEFENCE, and RESISTANCE, were law" ful, and that this was the Caſe at the REVOLUTION; that it may not be neceſſary to ſay any " Thing further on this Head, if it had not been that the Evidence they brought, ſeemed to " carry this Matter much farther, and that the Priſoner himſelf allow'd of no Exception, in " Caſes of Neceſſity. And ſince it is grown to be a vulgar Opinion, that by the Doctrine of the " Church of England, all Reſiſtance, in any Caſe whatſoever, without Exception, is con-
" demn'd; I think it is incumbent on me, who have examin'd this Matter long and carefully,
" to give you ſuch a clear Account of this Point, as may as fully ſatisfy you, as it did my
" ſelf.

" I ſerved in the Revolution, and promoted it all I could. I ſerved as Chaplain to the late
" King: I had no Command, and carried no Arms, but I was ſo far engag'd in it, that if I " could ſee that I had gone out of the way in that, (and the many Ups and Downs we have " gone through ſince, has given much Occaſion to reflect on that Tranſaction) I ſhould hold my
" ſelf unworthy to appear longer, either in this Habit, or in this Great Aſſembly: But ſhould
" think my ſelf bound to paſs away the reſt of my Life in Retirement, or Sorrow. There is " nothing more certain in Religion, than that we ought to repent of every Sin we have com" mitted; and that we cannot truly repent, unleſs we repair, and reſtore, as far as it is in our " Power.

" I go now to give you the Account of the Doctrine of our Church, in this Particular. In " the Times of Popery, it was a Tenet, built upon Biſhops ſetting the Crown on the Heads of " Princes, and anointing them, that they held their Crowns of the Church, and at the Pope's " Mercy; who had, for about Five Hundred Years, got into the Claim of depoſing them, and " giving their Dominions to others, in Caſe they were Hereticks, or the Favourers of them.
" But the Reformation being, in its firſt Beginning, protected by the Princes of Germany, by " the Kings of the North, and then by the Kings of England; they came, every where, in Oppo-
" ſition of the Papal Notions, to ſay that Kings had their Power from GOD; not that they had " any diſtinct Authority, beſides the Law of the Land, derived to them from GOD; but becauſe
" by the Laws of God, the Authority of the Law of the Land, was ſecured to them. For when " a different Authority from that of the Law, came to be pretended to, and to be founded on " theſe general Expreſſions, that received here a Parliamentary Cenſure; and it was then de" clared, that the Laws of Religion in the Scripture, did only eſtabliſh the ſeveral Conſtitutions
" and Governments, that were in the different Parts of the World.

" The Occaſion that the Apoſtles had to write what we find in their Epiſtles, with Relation to " the Government, was this: The Jews had a Notion among them, from a Paſſage in Deutero" nomy, that they were only to ſet a King over them, One from among their Brethren, and not a " Stranger. From whence it is, that to this Day, they do not think they are bound in Con-
" ſcience to obey any Magiſtrate, who is not one of their Nation. Now, the firſt Converts of " Chriſtianity being Jews, the Apoſtles took Care that they ſhould not bring this dangerous No" tion with them into the Chriſtian Religion: But they did not meddle to determine where " this Authority was lodg'd; That was to be gather'd out of the ſeveral Conſtitutions: They " did not determine how much was due to the Emperor, and how much to the Senate: And
" though not long after thoſe Epiſtles were writ, the Senate condemned Nero to dye, *More
" Majorum*, to be whipp'd to Death; none of the Chriſtians interpoſed in that Matter. He pre" vented that infamous Death by his own Hands: And the Primitive Chriſtians reckon'd it one " of the Articles of the Glory of their Religion, that their firſt Perſecutor came to ſuch an " End.

" Not long after that, Trajan was fam'd for that memorable Expreſſion, when he deliver'd the " Sword to the Governors of the Provinces, as the Emblem of their Authority, he us'd theſe
" Words, Pro me, Si merear in me: For me, but if I deſerve it, againſt me. That did not wea" ken his Authority: His good Government, with that of his Succeſſors for above Eighty Years, " being the greateſt and happieſt Time the Romans had under their Emperors. This Word was " put on King James the Firſt's Coin in Scotland: It is true, that was during his Minority;
" but when he afterwards changed his Motto, the Coin was not call'd in, but continu'd current " 'till the Union.

" The Primitive Chriſtians had no Laws in their Favour, but many againſt them: So their " patient ſuffering ſo many Perſecutions, according to the Laws of the Empire, under which " they liv'd, was conform to the Doctrine laid down by the Apoſtles. When they came after" wards to have the Protection of Laws, they claim'd the Benefit of them, not without great
" Violence, when they thought an Infraction was made on thoſe Laws: Which broke out " into great Tumults, in many of the chief Cities of the Empire, not excepting the Imperial
" City it ſelf.

" But to proceed with the Hiſtory of our Church: When the Articles of Religion were ſet-
" tled, the Books of the Apocrypha were, indeed, declar'd not to be a Part of the Cannon of the " Scripture, but yet to be uſeful for the Example of Life, and the Inſtruction of Manners. A great " part of theſe are the Books of the Maccabees, which contain the Hiſtory of the Jews ſhaking
" off the Yoke of the Kings of Syria, when they were broke in upon by a total Overthrow of " their whole Law, and an unrelenting Perſecution. Mattathias, a private Prieſt, began the " Reſiſtance, which was carried on by his Children, 'till they ſhook off the Syrian Yoke, and " formed themſelves in a free Government, under the Family of the Maccabees. It were eaſy to " ſhew, that the Jews had been above Four Hundred Years ſubject, firſt to the Babylonian, then
" to the Perſian, and at laſt to the Grecian Empire: So that by a long Preſcription, they were " Subjects to the Kings of Syria. It were eaſy alſo to ſhew, that this Reſiſtance was foretold by
" Daniel, in Terms of high Commendation, and is alſo mention'd in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews,
" as the Work and Effect of their Faith. If then all Reſiſtance to illegal and barbarous Perſe-
" cution, is unlawful; theſe Books contain nothing but a Hiſtory of a Rebellion; and all the " Devotion that runs through them, is but a Cant, and inſtead of reading them as *Examples
" of Life*, and Inſtructions of Manners, we ought to tear them out of our Bibles with De-
" teſtation. I ſhall afterwards ſhew what Uſe was made of theſe Books, not only by pri" vate Writers of our Church, but by what the whole Body in Convocation was about to " determine,

" The next Step to be made, is, to conſider the Homilies: The Second Book of Homilies, " which has the Homilies in it againſt wilful Rebellion, is generally believed to have been com- " poſ'd by Biſhop Jewell, who was, by much, the beſt Writer in that Time. It is certain, he " underſtood the Meaning of them well: Now I will read you Two Paſſages out of his Defence, " of his Apology for the Church of England; from whence we may clearly gather, what his No- " tion of Rebellion was, and that he thought a Defence againſt unjuſt and illegal Violence, was " not Rebellion. In one Place he has theſe Words;

" The Nobles of Scotland neither drew the Sword, nor attempted War againſt the Prince: They ſought " only the Continuance of God's undoubted Truths, and the Defence of their own Lives, againſt their barba- " rous and cruel Invaſions: They remember'd, beſides all other Warnings, their late Dealings at Vaſſy, " where great Numbers of their Brethren were murder'd, being together at their Prayers in the Church, " holding up their innocent Hands to Heaven, and calling upon God. In another Place, he writes, Nei- " ther do any of all theſe, (Luther, Melanchthon) teach the People to rebel againſt their Prince: But " only to defend themſelves by all lawful Means, againſt Oppreſſions, as did David againſt Saul; ſo do the " Nobles in France at this Day, they ſeek not to kill, but to ſave their own Lives.

" Theſe Paſſages ſhew, that he looked on Rebellion to be a violent riſing againſt a Prince ex- " ecuting the Laws, which was the Caſe of the Three Rebellions in England, that they had in " View: That in King Henry the Eighth's, in King Edward's, and in Queen Elizabeth's Time; " where the Papiſts took Arms againſt their Prince, who was executing Laws made in Matters " of Religion, and that with great Gentleneſs. Of the Eleven Paſſages quoted by the Priſo- " ner, out of the Homilies, Five plainly relate only to the coercing the Perſon of the Prince, " in which David is ſet in Oppoſition to thoſe Rebels: Now, though he, indeed, defended him- " ſelf, yet he had a juſt and ſacred Tenderneſs to the Perſon of Saul, when he had him in his " Power, which is certainly Sacred by our Conſtitution. Five of them relate to wicked Prin- " ces: It was never pretended by any, who pleaded for neceſſary Defence, that the bad Life of " a Prince, can be a juſt Cauſe of Reſiſtance: Yet that was then pretended; for King Henry " the Eighth had given too much Occaſion to reckon him a wicked Prince. So there is only one " of all the Paſſages quoted from thoſe Homilies, that relates ſimply to Rebellion in general: " And it has appear'd, what Biſhop Jewell's Senſe of the Matter was. There is alſo a Prayer at " the end of every Diviſion of the Homily againſt Wilful Rebellion, (and, by the By, Wilful was " not put in the Title for nothing) for thoſe oppreſſed by Tyranny in other Parts, that they " might be relieved, and that thoſe who were in fear of their Cruelty, might be com- " forted.

" Let us next look through Queen Elizabeth's long and glorious Reign, and ſee what was the " conſtant Maxim of that Time.

" The Year after the Queen came to the Crown, the War in Scotland broke out between the " Queen Regent, that govern'd by Commiſſion, from her Daughter, then Queen of France, and " the Lords in Scotland. She, to obtain the Matrimonial Crown to be ſent to Francis the Second, " gave Aſſurances for the Exerciſe of the Reformed Religion; but that Point being gain'd, ſhe " broke all her Promiſes, and reſolved to force them to return to the Exerciſes of the Popiſh " Religion: Upon which the Lords of Scotland formed themſelves into a Body, and were called " the Lords of the Congregation. Forces were ſent from France, to aſſiſt the Queen Regent; " upon that Queen Elizabeth entred into an Agreement with the Scottiſh Lords, and ſent an Army " to their Aſſiſtance, which continued in Scotland, 'till all Matters were ſettled by the Pacifica- " tion of Leith: And in a Manifeſto, that I have in my Hands, ſet forth Twenty Five Years after " that, I find her reflecting on that Interpoſition in the Affairs of that Nation with great Satiſ- " faction.

" The Year after this War was ended, upon Francis the Second's Death, Charles the Elcventh, " who was a Child, ſucceeded in France. Edicts were granted in Favour of the Proteſtants: " Theſe were ſoon after broken by the Triumvirate, and upon that follow'd a Series of Wars, " often pacified, but always breaking out again, by Reaſon of the Violence and Cruelty of the " Government. All theſe Wars, 'till Henry the Fourth was ſettled on the Throne, were, in a " Courſe of Twenty Eight Years, that which ſome would call Rebellion, being carried on againſt " Two ſucceeding Kings. Yet the Queen was, in all that Time, ſtill aſſiſting them with Men " and Money.

" In the Year 1568, the Provinces of the Netherlands throw of the Spaniſh Yoke, that was be- " come intolerably ſevere and cruel. The Queen, for ſome Years, aſſiſted them more covertly, " but when the Prince of Orange was kill'd, and they were in danger to be over-run, ſhe took " them more openly into her Protection; and by the Manifeſto, which I have in my Hands, ſhe " publiſhed the Grounds upon which ſhe proceeded. She laid down this for a Foundation, " that there had been an ancient League, not only between the Crown of England, and the " Princes of the Netherlands, but between the Subjects of both Countries, under their Seals, " interchangeably, for all friendly Offices. If this was a good Reaſon for the Queen's giving " Aid to the oppreſſed People of the Netherlands, then if the Caſe had been reverſed, that the " People of England had been illegally and cruelly oppreſſed, it furniſhed the Princes of thoſe " Provinces with as good a Reaſon for aſſiſting them. In this Aſſiſtance given the States, the " Queen perſiſted 'till the end of her Reign; nor was this only by the Court, but both Par- " liaments and Convocations granted her ſeveral Aids to maintain theſe Wars: And in the " Preambles of thoſe Subſidy Acts, the Queen's Proceedings in thoſe Particulars, were highly " approv'd and magnify'd. Bilſon, Biſhop of Wincheſter, and ſeveral other Writers in that " Time, juſtified what ſhe did; and not one, that I ever heard of, cenſured or condemned " it.

" Upon King James's coming to the Crown, the firſt great Negociation was for Peace be- " tween Spain and the United Provinces; which laſted ſeveral Years. The States inſiſted on a " Preliminary, that they ſhould be acknowledg'd Free, Sovereign, and Independent States; the " Spaniards would not yield to this, nor would the States recede from it. Some here in England " began to ſay, they were form'd in Rebellion, and ought not to carry their Pretenſions too " far: Upon that, King James ſuffered a Convocation to meet; and a Book of Cannons, with " Relation to the Supream Authority, was prepar'd; in which, though the Authority of " the Prince, even when he becomes a Tyrant, is carried very far; yet the Caſe of the Maccabees is ſtated; and it was determined, that when a new Government, though begun in a Revolt, is come to a thorough Settlement, it may be own'd as lawful. King James, who was jealous enough of the Regal Authority, yet did not like their carrying thoſe Matters ſo far: He order'd the whole Matter to be let fall ſo entirely, that there is not a Word of it in the Books of Convocation: But Archbiſhop Sancroft found this Collection of Canons at Durham, under Dr. Overall's Hand, which he copied out, and licens'd the Book, a few Days before he fell under his Suſpenſion. I ſoon ſaw that it had a Relation to the Affairs in Holland: For the Dutch delighted to compare their firſt Beginnings to that of the Jews in Antiochus's Time: They compared King Philip to Antiochus Epiphanes, and the Prince of Orange to Judas Maccabeus. But I ſaw much clearer into the Matter, by an original Letter of King James, which a worthy Gentleman ſent me. I knew his Hand well, the Letter is in Print; but I will read ſome Particulars out of it. It is directed to Dr. Abbot, afterwards Archbiſhop of Canterbury. It begun with cenſuring ſome Poſitions concerning a King de Facto: He goes on in theſe Words, My Reaſon of calling you together, was to give your Judgments, how far a Chriſtian, and a Proteſtant King, may concur to aſſiſt his Neighbours to ſhake off their Obedience to their own Sovereign, upon the Account of Oppreſſion, Tyranny, or what elſe you like to name it. In the late Queen's Time, this Kingdom was very free in aſſiſting the Hollanders, both with Arms and Advice; and none of your Coat ever told me, that any ſcrupled about it in her Reign. Upon my coming to England, you may know, it came from ſome of your ſelves to raiſe Scruples about this Matter; yet I never took any Notice of theſe Scruples, 'till the Affairs of Spain and Holland forced me to it. I call'd my Clergy together, to ſatisfy not ſo much me, as the World about us, of the Juſtneſs of my owning the Hollanders at this Time. This I need not to have done, and you have forced me to ſay, I wiſh I had not. He reflects on thoſe, who had a great Averſion to the Notion of God's being the Author of Sin, which plainly points at Dr. Overall, who was the firſt Man of Note among us, that oppoſed the Calviniſts Doctrine of Predeſtination; yet, he ſays, They had gone to the Threſhold of it, by ſaying, that even Tyranny was God's Authority, and ſhould be reverenced as ſuch. He concludes, theſe were edg'd Tools, and that therefore they were to let them reſt. Here is a full Account of King James's Thoughts of this Matter, which was then the chief Subject of Diſcourſe all Europe over. He had Twelve Years before this, ſhewed, on an eminent Occaſion, that he owned the States, when he invited them in the Year 1593, to Chriſten his eldeſt Son, Prince Henry. They were ſenſible of the great Honour done them by it; and though they were then but low, they ſent an Embaſſy, with a noble Preſent of Gold Plate, to aſſiſt on that Occaſion. This Negotiation ſtuck for ſeveral Years, the Spaniards refuſing to own them in expreſs Words: The Temper found was, they were treated with (tamquam) as with Free States; and the Matter went no further at that Time, than a Truce for ſome Years, which was concluded in the Year 1609. This lets us ſee, that the Words in King James's Speech that Year to his Parliament, were not chance Words, that fell careleſly from him. A King leaves to be a King, and degenerates into a Tyrant, as ſoon as he leaves off to govern by Law: In which Caſe the King's Conſcience may ſpeak to him, as the poor Woman to Philip of Macedon, Either govern by Law, or ceaſe to be a King.

" There is another eminent Inſtance towards the End of that Reign, that ſhews what the Senſe of our beſt Divines was in this Matter: When the Archbiſhop of York's Son, and Mr. Wadſworth had changed their Religion in Spain, Wadſworth writ over a bold Defence of that; and, among other Things, charged the Reformation with Rebellion. This was anſwered by one of the beſt Books of that Time, writ by Dr. Bedell, dedicated to the Prince of Wales, who afterwards promoted him to a Biſhoprick. His Words on this Head are full: I will read ſome of them. Do you think Subjects are bound to give their Throats to be cut by their Fellow-Subjects, or to their Prince, at their meer Wills, againſt their own Laws and Edicts? You would know, quo jure, the Proteſtants Wars in France and Holland, are juſtified; Firſt, The Law of Nature, which not only alloweth, but inclineth and inforceth every living Thing, to defend it ſelf from Violence. Secondly, That of Nations, which permitteth thoſe who are in the Protection of others, to whom they owe no more than an honourable Acknowledgment, in Caſe they go about to make themſelves abſolute Sovereigns, and to uſurp their Liberty, to reſiſt, and ſtand for the ſame. And if a lawful Prince, who is not yet Lord of his Subjects Lives and Goods, ſhall attempt to deſpoil them of the ſame, under Colour of reducing them to his own Religion, after all humble Remonſtrances, they may ſtand upon their own Guard, and being aſſailed, reſiſt Force with Force, as did the Maccabees under Antiochus. In which Caſe, notwithſtanding, the Perſon of the Prince himſelf ought always to be Sacred and Inviolable, as was Saul to David. No Commentary is wanted here.

" My Lords, You ſee how this Matter ſtood during King James's Reign. In the Firſt Year of King Charles's Reign, Grotius's Book, de Jure Belli & Pacis, was publiſh'd at Paris, dedicated to the King of France, while France was under the Adminiſtration of the wiſeſt and moſt jealous Miniſter of the laſt Age, Cardinal Richelieu. In that Book, in which he aſſerts the Rights of Princes with great Zeal, yet he enumerates many Caſes, in which it is lawful to reſiſt, particularly that of a total Subverſion: And that Book is now all Europe over, of the higheſt Reputation of any Book that the Modern Ages have produced. In the beginning of King Charles's Reign, a War broke out in France, againſt the Proteſtants; upon which he ſent over Ambaſſadors, by whoſe Mediation a Peace was concluded; but that being ill kept, the War broke out again; and the King thought himſelf bound by his Mediation, to protect the Proteſtants. So in the Second Seſſion of Parliament, 1628, in the Demand of a Supply that the Lord Keeper Coventry made, in the King's Name, theſe Words are to be found, France is ſway'd by the Popiſh Faction; and though by his Majeſty's Mediation, there were Articles of Agreement between that King and his Subjects, that Treaty hath been broke, and thoſe of the Reformed Religion will be ruined, without preſent Help. Upon this the Commons petitioned the King for a Faſt, and deſired the Concurrence of the Lords, who join'd with them in it. The King granted it, and an Office was compos'd ſuitable to the Occaſion; in which, among other Devotions, the Nation was directed to pray for all thoſe, who here, or elſewhere, were fighting God's Battels, and defending his Altars. Thus the whole Body of the Legiſlature did concur for a Faſt for that, which, if this Doctrine is true, was no better than Rebellion; and yet the whole Nation, Clergy and Laity, were requir'd to pray for Succeſs in it.

" But

" But to compleat this View of the Doctrine of our Church, it is to be consider'd, that when " a Year before this, while the Loan, or Benevolence were carried on, some officious Divines " made use of those Expressions of Kings having their Power from God, importing an Authority " of a Nature superior to the Laws of the Land: One of these, Dr. Manwaring, was impeach- " ed, and had a severe Sentence passed on him for it. So I have now made it out, beyond, I " hope, the Possibility of Contradiction, that, for Seventy Years together, from 1558, to 1628, " the Lawfulness of Self-defence, in the Case of illegal and violent Cruelty, was the publick and " constant Doctrine of this Church.

" These were the best and happiest Times of our Church, as is often repeated by the Earl of " Clarendon: From these we ought to take the Standard of our Doctrine.

" I go next to shew what was the common Doctrine for the next Sixty Years, from 1628, to " 1688. I must yield up the first Twelve Years: For upon the unhappy Misunderstanding be- " tween the King and the Parliament, there was a long Discontinuance of Parliaments; then " the late condemned Doctrine was again in Vogue; and nothing was so much heard of, as the " Law of Government that was from GOD, antecedent to all other human Laws: Out of this " sprung illegal Imprisonments, illegal Monopolies, severe Proceedings in the Star-Chamber, but " above all, the Ship-Money. These Things put the Nation in an universal Disjointing and Fee- " bleness. And when an unavoidable Necessity forced that King to call a Parliament, the fatal " Effects of those Counsels broke out terribly. I know many fancy, that the War is to be " charged on the Principles of Self-Defence: They are much mistaken. I had occasion to see " a great way into the Secret of that Time, when I examin'd the Papers relating to the Two " Dukes of Hamilton. I knew a great deal more since, from Two Persons of unquestionable In- " tegrity, who knew the Secrets of that Time, the Lord Hollis, and Sir Harbottle Grimstone; but " all receiv'd a full Confirmation, when I found it agreed perfectly with the noble Account given " the Earl of Clarendon.

" No body dreamt of a War, nor had they any Principles leading to it. But there was an un- " happy Train of Accidents, that hindred Matters from being brought to a Settlement, even " while the King was granting all they could desire. Stories were carried by Persons about both " the King and Queen, or Words let fall, that made them conclude, that there were still ill De- " signs on Foot, against the Laws that were then passed. But that which brought all to a Crisis, " was the Discovery of a Negotiation, to engage the Army to declare against the Parliament. " Whosoever compares the Depositions in Rushworth, with the Account given of that Matter by " the Earl of Clarendon, will see there is a great deal more in the one, than the other is willing " to believe; though he acknowledges they had both Goring's Evidence, and Piercy's Letter with " them. I will not take it upon me to determine, whether they believ'd too much, or the Earl " of Clarendon too little. It is certain they believed all that was in the Depositions, and a great " deal more: For Goring being continued in the Government of Portsmouth, and his Father being " advanced from being a Baron, to be an Earl, and Piercy's being made a Lord, and Master of " the Horse to the Prince of Wales, made them conclude they had suppressed a great deal, in- " stead of saying more than was true. This struck deep in their Hearts, and at last fatally broke " out in the Demand of the Militia, that brought on the War, which, I do own, was plainly a " Rebellion, because a Force was offer'd to the King, not to defend themselves from an unjust In- " vasion, or illegal Grievances, but to extort a new Law from him.

" Thus the true Occasion of the War, was a Jealousy, that a Conduct of Fifteen Years had " given too much Ground for; and that was still unhappily kept up, by a fatal Train of Errors " in every Step that was made. The great Concussion that the War gave the Nation, and the " barbarous Effusion of so much Blood, especially of the Royal Blood of that Blessed King, had, " at last, a happy, though a late Conclusion in the Restoration: And it's no wonder, if such a " Series of Tragical Events, begot a general Horror at the Occasion of them. But then it was, " that had it not been for the Firmness of the Earl of Clarendon to his English Principles, the Li- " berties of the Nation had been deliver'd up.

" It is to his Memory, that we owe our being a free People; for he, with his Two great " Friends, the Duke of Ormond, and the Earl of Southampton, check'd the Forwardness of some, " who were desirous to load the Crown with Prerogative and Revenue. He stopt all this, " which being afterwards odiously represented, brought on him that great and lasting, but ho- " nourable Disgrace. The Earl of Southampton, whose Death went a little before his Fall, and " perhaps hastened it the sooner, said to many about him, that he was a true Protestant, and an " honest Englishman; and that the Nation would feel the Effects of his being removed, when- " soever it might happen.

" That Lord, in the great Settlement after the Restoration, would carry Things no farther, " than to repeal what had been extorted by the Tumults; and in the Matter of the Militia-Act, " and the Oaths relating to it, all was more cautiously worded, than is commonly understood. " To the Word Commission'd by the King, some, indeed, moved, that the Word lawfully might be " added, to make all plain. That was press'd in the House of Commons by Vaughan, afterwards " Lord Chief-Justice of the Common-Pleas. The Attorney-General, afterwards Lord Chancellor " Nottingham, answer'd, That was not necessary; for the Word Commission imported it; since, if " it was not lawfully issued out, to lawful Persons, and for a lawful Reason, it was no Commis- " sion; and the whole House assented to this; yet in the House of Lords, the same Word lawfully, " was press'd to be added by the Earl of Southampton, who was answer'd by the Earl of Anglesey " to the same Purpose, with what had been said in the House of Commons: He, indeed, insisted " to have the Word added, because it would clear all Difficulties with many, who not having " heard of the Sense given in both Houses, might fancy, that any sort of Commission being grant- " ed, it would not be lawful to resist it. He did not prevail; for it was said, That this Explana- " tion being the Sense of both Houses, it would be soon spread and known over the Nation. In " this Sense, it is certain, that it is not lawful to take Arms against any so commission'd by the " King; for that were to take Arms against the King's Commission in the Execution of the " Law, which is certainly a resisting the Ordinance of God, which whosoever do, they shall receive to " themselves Damnation.

" It was no wonder, if after such a War, the Doctrine of Non-Resistance was preach'd and " press'd with more than ordinary Warmth, and without any Exceptions; yet some still kept

" theſe in View; ſo did both Dr. Falkner, and my ſelf; and I know many others had them al" ways in their Thoughts, though they did not think it neceſſary to mention them.

" I found the ill Effects, that the carrying this Matter ſo far, had on the Mind of that unfor" tunate Prince, King JAMES; for in the Year 1673, when he was pleas'd to admit me to much
" free Converſation with him, among many other Things, I told him, it was impoſſible for him
" to reign in quiet in this Nation, being of that Religion; he anſwer'd me quick, Does not
" the Church of England maintain the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance and Paſſive-Obedience? I begg'd
" of him not to depend on that; for there was a Diſtinction in that Matter, that would be found " out, when Men thought they needed it. I now come to tell your Lordſhips, how right I " judged.

" It is true, they paſs'd a very pompous Decree at Oxford, 1683, but you ſhall hear how long " they ſtood to it. In Summer, 1686, the Prince of Orange was pleas'd to receive me into his " Service, with a particular Confidence. Soon after the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion was ſet up,
" and upon ſome Proceedings before that Board, he was deſir'd from England, to break with " King James upon that Head. I oppoſed this, and ſaid, I was convinced that Commiſſion was " againſt Law, and would have ill Effects, but it did not ſtrike at the whole. This was more " warmly preſſed, upon the Proceedings againſt Magdalen College. I ſtill ſtood my Ground;
" and told both Prince and Princeſs, That if a Breach ſhould follow on theſe Matters, I could " not ſerve. When, indeed, the Declaration was publiſh'd a Second Time, with a Reſolution
" to have it carried through; and that many Laws were diſpenſed with at Pleaſure; and Per-
" ſons who were under legal Diſabilities, were made Judges, Sheriffs and Magiſtrates; all whoſe
" Actings were ſo many Nullities: Then I thought here was a total Subverſion of our Conſtitu-
" tion; which from being a legal one, was made precarious, ſubject to meer Will and Pleaſure.
" So I was ready to ſerve in the Revolution.

" Some Days after we came to Exeter, Sir Edward Seymour came thither, and he preſently
" ſent for me: When I came to him, he asked me, Why were we a Rope of Sand, and had not " an Aſſociation? I ſaid, becauſe we had not yet a Man of his Weight to begin the Motion:
" He ſaid, If we had not one by to Morrow, he would leave us before Night. I preſently ſaw a Noble
" Duke, now in my Eye, and acquainted him with this; went to the Prince, who approving of
" it, an Aſſociation was prepar'd, and laid on the Table next Morning; and was after that " ſigned by all who came to wait on the Prince. Three Days after we left Exeter, a Head of a " College came to the Prince, to invite him to come to Oxford, aſſuring him, that the Univerſity
" would declare for him. He went as near it as Abingdon, but then the ſudden Turn of Affairs
" at London, obliging him to haſte up, the Aſſociation was ſent thither, and was ſigned by the " Heads of the Colleges, and many others there; ſome doing it in a particular Warmth of Ex-
" preſſion, and ſaying, that their Hearts, as well as their Hands, went with it. Upon what Diſap-
" pointments, or other Views, I cannot tell, this Contradiction to their famed Decree, Five " Years after it was made, ſeem'd to take another Turn back to it again; and the Notion of a " King de Facto, which is but a ſofter Word for an Uſurper, came in Vogue.

" The Parliament, to prevent the ill Effects of that, ſtudied to ſecure the Government.
" Firſt, By an Aſſociation, and then by an Abjuration. I, who was always againſt every Thing that " might break in upon Conſcience, was for making theſe only voluntary; but they were en" acted, and they were generally taken. A Noble Lord on the Earls Bench, procur'd me the " Sight of a Letter, that went about to perſuade the taking the Abjuration, that he had
" from a Place where he believed it had its Effect; where I found this Diſtinction, that the ab-
" juring any Right whatſoever, that the Pretender might claim, was only meant of a Legal " Right, and that it had no Relation to Birth-Right, or to Divine-Right. This agreed with a " Report that went then current, that a Perſon in a great Poſt, ſent a Meſſage to an honourable " Gentleman, who would not take the Abjuration, that if he had an half Hour's Diſcourſe with " him, he doubted not to be able to convince him, that he might take the Abjuration, without " departing from any of his Principles. Towards the End of the laſt Reign, a bold Attempt " was made on the King's Supremacy, by an Incendiary, who is ſuppoſed to have no ſmall Share
" in this Matter now before your Lordſhips: But the Attack of the Supremacy being liable to a
" Premunire, it was turn'd with much Malice, and manag'd with great Prevarication againſt the " Biſhops; who adhered firmly to their Duty to the King. How great a Disjointing that has " brought on this Church, is too viſible all the Nation over, and it tends to carry on the wicked
" Deſign of diſtracting the Church, and undermining the Government.

" By the Time the Queen was on the Throne, or ſoon after, the Rehearſal began to be ſpread
" over the Nation, Three of them a Week, which continu'd, for Seven Years together, to be " publiſh'd, without Check or Controul: It was all, through one Argument, againſt the Queen's " Right to the Crown; That, though it was diverſified with Incidents and Digreſſions, was kept " always in View. The Clergy were, in many Places, drawn into Subſcriptions for this Paper.
" This look'd like a Deſign long conniv'd at, to have the Queen's Title undermin'd: Beſides
" this, we had a Swarm of Pamphlets every Year, to the ſame Purpoſe, and, as was believ'd,
" writ by the ſame Hand. One ſold at the Door of the Houſe, with the Title of King William's
" Exorbitant Grants, did plainly call him an Uſurper; and ſtarting an Objection againſt the " Queen's poſſeſſing the Throne, gave it this Anſwer, That ſhe did well to keep it 'till ſhe could de- " liver it up to the Righteous Heir. At that Time, there was quick Proſecution of a Paper pub-
" liſh'd, with the Title of The ſhorteſt way with the Diſſenters; and upon that, I brought that " Pamphlet to a great Miniſter, and offer'd to ſhew him the Paſſage in it, to ſee if there ſhould
" be a Proſecution of this order'd. He turned from me; ſo whether he heard me, or not, I " cannot tell: I am ſure, if he ſays he did not, I will believe him. No Proſecution follow'd,
" and the Rehearſal went on. The Clergy, in many Places, met at a Coffee-Houſe, on Satur-
" days, to read the Rehearſals of the Week, which had very ill Effects in moſt Places. I know it " may be ſaid, That the Queen's Learned Council ought to have look'd after theſe Things: But " we all know, that they ſtay 'till they receive Orders from the Miniſtry. The Courſe of that " Treaſonable Paper has been now, for ſome Time, ſtopp'd, ſo we ſee there is ſome Change in " the Miniſtry.

" But to compleat the Inſolence of the Enemies of the Queen, and of the Proteſtant Succeſ-
" ſion, they had the Impudence to give out, Tat the Queen ſecretly favour'd them: And as this,
" we all know, has been long whiſper'd about among us, ſo it was more boldly given out in " Scotland,

" Scotland, which oblig'd one of the Queen's Miniſters in that Parliament, in a Speech that was " printed, to contradict this treaſonable and diſhonourable Suggeſtion: That, as ſome Divines " would have it, that there was in GOD a Secret, as well as a reveal'd Will, and that theſe " might be contrary to one another; ſo they would faſten an Imputation on the Queen, that " while ſhe reveal'd her Will one way, ſhe had a ſecret Will another way; which he ſolemnly " affirmed to be falſe, and highly injurious to the Queen.

" While the Pamphlets and theſe Reports were thus ſet about, Mr. Hoadley thought, that it be- " came him to aſſert the Queen's Title, by juſtifying the Revolution, out of which it riſes. " But what an Outcry was rais'd on this, that one durſt diſturb the Progreſs of a wicked Opini- " on, that was viſibly deſign'd to overturn the Government! And yet he aſſerted nothing, but " what the Council for the Priſoner did all fully and plainly own, that in the Caſes of extream " Neceſſity, an Exception to the Doctrine was to be admitted, and that that was the Caſe at the " Revolution.

" But as theſe Notions have been long let run among us; ſo they have appear'd in a moſt vio- " lent and unguarded Manner, ever ſince the Attempt of the Pretender, and more of late, ſince " the Preliminaries upon the Overtures for a Peace, ſeem to extinguiſh their Hopes. What " Sermons on this Head, are preach'd in this City, at Aſſizes, at Bath, and at many Cathedrals? " Furious Men fit themſelves with ſome hot Sermons, which they carry about from Place to " Place, to poiſon the Nation. This has not only the viſible Effect deſigned by it, of ſhaking " many in their Allegiance to the Queen, and in their adhering to the Proteſtant Succeſſion; " but it has a curſed Effect on many others, on whom this their Deſign does not ſuc- " ceed.

" I am very ſenſible there is a great deal of Impiety and Infidelity now ſpread through the " Nation: This gives every good Mind all poſſible Horror; but I muſt tell your Lordſhips, on " what a great Part of it is founded; for ſince my Converſation with Wilmot, Earl of Rocheſter, " I have had many Occaſions to diſcourſe with Perſons tainted with thoſe wicked Principles. I " do affirm it, that the greateſt Prejudice theſe Perſons have at Religion, at the Clergy, and at " the publick Worſhip of God, is this, that they ſay, They ſee Clergymen take Oaths, and uſe all " Prayers, both Ordinary and Extraordinary, for the Government, and yet in their Actings and Diſcourſes, " and of late in their Sermons, they ſhew viſibly that they look another way; from whence they conclude, " They are a Mercenary Sort of People, without Conſcience.

" I hope there are not many that are ſo corrupted, and ſo ſcandalous: I am ſure I know a " great many that are far otherwiſe, who Preach, Speak, and Act, as they Swear and Pray; " but thoſe who act in another way, are Noiſy and Impudent, and ſo bring an Imputation on " the whole Body; and unleſs an effectual Stop is put to this Diſtemper, it is not poſſible to fore- " ſee all the ill Conſequences that may follow upon it.

" I have, I am afraid, wearied your Lordſhips, but I thought it was neceſſary, once for all, " to enlarge copiouſly on this Argument: And now to come cloſe to the Article, and the Ser- " mon, for I meddle not at all with the Perſon of the Man; whatever general Expreſſions " might very well have been uſed, in ſetting forth Paſſive-Obedience, and Non-Reſiſtance before the " Revolution, becauſe odious Caſes ought not to be ſuppoſed, and therefore are not to be named; " yet ſince Reſiſtance was uſed in the Revolution, and that the late King invited all the Subjects " to join with him, which was in them certainly Reſiſtance; and ſince the Lawfulneſs of the " Revolution is ſo much controverted, the condemning all Reſiſtance in ſuch crude and general " Terms, is certainly a condemning the Revolution: And this is further aggravated from thoſe " Limitations on our Obedience, in an Act paſs'd ſoon after the Revolution, by which, in " Caſe our Princes turn Papiſts, or marry Papiſts, the Subjects are, in expreſs Words, diſcharg'd " from their Allegiance to them. Certainly this puts an End to the Notion of Non-Reſiſtance in " any Caſe, or on any Pretence whatſoever. For theſe Reaſons, I think, the Firſt Article of " this Impeachment, is both well grounded, and fully made out.

Several other Peers, particularly the Duke of Devonſhire, the Lord Chancellor, and the Lords Somers, Halifax, and Mohun, ſpoke alſo in Vindication of the late Revolution; maintain'd, that in extraordinary Caſes, Reſiſtance is neceſſary and lawful; and concluded, that the Commons had made good the Firſt Article. The Archbiſhop of York, the Duke of Buckingham, the Earls of Nottingham and Rocheſter, the Lords Guernſey, North and Grey, and Carmaerthen, and the Biſhops of London, Rocheſter, and Landaff, who ſpoke on the other Side, declared, They never read ſuch a Piece of Madneſs and Nonſenſe as Dr. Sacheverel's Sermon; but did not think him guilty of a Miſdemeanor. After a long Debate, which laſted till paſt Nine in the Eveing, this Queſtion was propos'd, That the Commons had made good their Firſt Article of Impeachment againſt Henry Sacheverel, Doctor in Divinity: And after further Debate thereupon, the Queſtion was put, Whether this Queſtion ſhould be now put? Which being reſolv'd in the Affirmative, Forty eight Lords enter'd their Diſſent, Becauſe they conceived, there were no Reflections therein contained on the Memory of the late King William, nor the Revolution; and that there was no Offence charged therein upon Dr. Sacheverel, againſt any known Law of the Land. Then the main Queſtion was put, That the Commons had made good their Firſt Article of Impeachment; which being alſo reſolv'd in the Affirmative, ſeveral Lords enter'd their Proteſts. † March 17. Debates in the House of Lords about the Second, Third, and Fourth Articles.

The Biſhop of Lincoln's Speech.

The next † Day, the Lords took into Conſideration the Second Article of the Commons Impeachment, and the Biſhop of Lincoln began the Debate with a fine Speech, wherein he gave an Account of the Deſign of a Comprehenſion, ſet on Foot towards the End of King James the Second's Reign, by the late Dr. Sancroft, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and promoted by the moſt eminent Divines of the Church of England; particularly Dr. Patrick, late Biſhop of Ely, and the preſent Archbiſhop of York, and the Biſhops of London and Ely, which was, "To improve, and, if "poſſible, to enforce our Diſcipline, to review and enlarge our Liturgy, by correcting of "ſome Things, and adding of others; and by leaving ſome few indifferent Ceremonies, "in order to reconcile Diſſenters to the Church. That Dr. Sacheverel had made a "ſtrange and falſe Repreſentation of this Deſign, which was again ſet on Foot, and "openly eſpouſed by King William and Queen Mary, but which unhappily miſcar-"ried." And then he proceeded to offer to their Lordſhips ſuch Paſſages (out of Dr. Sacheverel's Sermon) as did plainly and fully make out the Second Article of the Commons Impeachment; concluding, "That ſomewhat ſhould be done to put a Stop "to ſuch Preaching, as, if not timely corrected, may kindle ſuch Heats and Ani-"moſities among us, as may truly endanger both our Church and State. As for the "Preacher himſelf; I am, (ſaid he) very willing to come into any Meaſures of Fa-"vour to him, that are conſiſtent with your Lordſhips Honour and Juſtice, and will "anſwer the Ends of the Impeachment that has been brought before us againſt him.

The Biſhop of Norwich's Speech.

"The Biſhop of Norwich enforced what the Biſhop of Lincoln had ſaid about Tole-"ration; inveighed againſt the Inſolence of Dr. Sacheverel, who had arraign'd Arch-"biſhop Grindall, (one of the moſt eminent Reformers in the Reign of Queen "Elizabeth) as a perfidious Prelate, for favouring and tolerating the Genevian Diſci-"pline; checked his Preſumption, in taking upon him, in his Sermon, to preſcribe "Rules to his Superiors, by telling them when they are to thunder out their Ana-"themas againſt Schiſmaticks; ſhew'd, that the proper Uſe of thoſe ſpiritual Weapons "is, to ſuppreſs Vice, Immorality, and Prophaneneſs, among the Members of the "Church; and that they are altogether uſeleſs to convince Hereticks or Schiſ-"maticks, who are rather to be won by gentle Methods, and Chriſtian Forbearance: "And to that purpoſe, his Lordſhip took Notice of the good Effects of the Tolera-"tion-Act; and mention'd ſeveral Inſtances wherein he had himſelf been inſtrumen-"tal in reconciling Diſſenters to the Church. I ſhall not take upon me (ſaid he in the "Concluſion) to charge the Doctor, or any of his particular Friends, with this "Practice (meaning the late Tumults) as great a Temptation as one is under to do "ſo from ſeveral Circumſtances. And it is not the leaſt, that occurs in his Prayers, "which he has publiſh'd upon this Occaſion, to repreſent, not ſo much to GOD, as "to the World, that he is under Perſecution, when he is proſecuted for offending "againſt the Law, by thoſe, who, in common Juſtice, ought to be thought the "faireſt Accuſers; and before your Lordſhips, who are juſtly acknowledg'd to be the "moſt impartial Judges. However, I will never believe, till I cannot avoid it, "that any Members of the Church of England, who have acknowledg'd the Govern-"ment, much leſs any Clergyman, who has ſo often profeſs'd his Obedience to it in "Church and State, ſhould have been any way acceſſary to thoſe Threatnings that "have been given out, particularly againſt ſuch Biſhops as ſhould happen to con-"demn the Doctor's Proceedings. As far, my Lords, as I have ſeen of this Cauſe, "I am likely to be one of thoſe Biſhops; and tho' I do not pretend to any great "Share of Courage, I am very free to declare to your Lordſhips, that I am in no "compariſon ſo apprehenſive of what may befal my ſelf, for condemning this Per-"ſon, as I am of what will probably befal the Publick, if your Lordſhips ſhould "not condemn him: However, I wiſh he may be treated with all poſſible Modera-"tion; and that the wholſome Severities he recommends in his Sermon, may not be "uſed againſt him. But that is in your Lordſhips Judgment, to which I humbly ſub-"mit it: And only beg Pardon for having detained your Lordſhips ſo long in "giving my Reaſons, why I think the Commons have made good this Second Part of "their Charge." No Peer offering to ſpeak in favour of Dr. Sacheverel, the Queſtion was put, That the Commons have made good the Second Article of their Impeachment, which was reſolv'd in the Affirmative; as was likewiſe, the ſame Queſtion about the Third Article, in relation to which the Lord Halifax made a ſhort Speech, and was anſwer'd by the Lord Ferrers, and the Earl of Nottingham. The Fourth Article occaſioned a longer Debate, which was begun by the Earl of Wharton, in Praiſe of the preſent excellent Adminiſtration: "The Biſhop of Saliſbury ſeconded "him, and ſpoke with Vehemence againſt Dr. Sacheverel; who, by inveighing "againſt the Revolution, Toleration, and Union, ſeem'd to arraign and attack the "Queen her ſelf, ſince her Majeſty had ſo great a Share in the Firſt; and had often "declar'd, that ſhe would maintain the Second; and that ſhe look'd upon the Third "as the moſt Glorious Event of her Reign. That nothing could be more plain, "than his reflecting on her Majeſty's Miniſters; and that he had in particular, ſo "well mark'd out a Noble Peer there preſent, by an ugly and ſcurrilous * Epithet, "(which he would not repeat) that 'twas not poſſible to miſtake him." This ſet the whole Houſe a-laughing, and ſeveral Lords cry'd, Name him, name him; but the Lord Chancellor moderated the Matter, ſaying, no Peer was obliged to ſay but what he thought fit. The Lord Ferrers ſaid ſomething in favour of Dr. Sacheverel; but was anſwer'd by the Earl of Ilay; and then the Lord Haverſham made a ſhort Speech, about that Part of the Fourth Article, wherein Dr. Sacheverel was charg'd with wreſting and perverting divers Paſſages of Holy Scripture. He ſaid in Subſtance, "That no Man on Earth has Authority to interpret the Scripture; which, he "thought, muſt be interpreted by it ſelf; that ſince the Reformation, we had con-"tended againſt the Church of Rome, who pretended to that Authority: And ſhall "we, (added he) allow Infallibility in the Commons, which we deny in the Pope of "Rome? And, in the Concluſion, his Lordſhip repeated his Deſire, that the Reve-"rend Prelates, there preſent, would tell the Houſe, how Dr. Sacheverel could be "charg'd with wreſting the Scripture?" But none of the Biſhops offer'd to ſatisfy him. The Duke of Hamilton having ſaid ſomething in favour of Dr. Sacheverel, he was anſwer'd by the Lord Mohun; to whom his Grace ſmartly reply'd. But tho' the Duke of Buckingham, the Lord Ferrers, the Earls of Scarſdale and Abingdon, and the Lord Carmaerthen, endeavour'd likewiſe to extenuate the Doctor's Offence; yet the Queſtion being put, That the Commons had made good the Fourth Article of Impeachment, it was reſolv'd in the Affirmative. However, Thirty eight Lords enter'd their Diſſent to the Queſtions upon the Second, Third, and Fourth Articles, for the ſame Reaſon given againſt the Queſtion upon the Firſt. Then the Earl of Wharton ſaid, That ſince the Houſe had reſolv'd, That the Commons had made good their Four Articles of Impeachment againſt Dr. Sacheverel, the Lords ought, by a neceſſary Conſequence, reſolve and declare likewiſe, That the ſaid Dr. Sacheverel was Guilty of the High Crimes and Miſdemeanors charg'd upon him: But the Earls of Abingdon and Rocheſter, the Lord-Treaſurer, the Lord North and Grey, and the Lord Ferrers, ſtarting ſome Difficulties, it was propoſed, That the Queſtion to be aſk'd every Lord in Weſtminſter-Hall, ſhould be as follows, viz. "That the Commons having made "good the ſeveral Articles of the Impeachment againſt Henry Sacheverel, Doctor "in Divinity; the ſaid Dr. Henry Sacheverel is Guilty of High Crimes and Miſde-"meanors." After which, the Earl of Nottingham moved for adjourning the De-"bate, which was agreed to.

The Lord Haverſham's Speech.

Accordingly, on the 18th of March, the ſaid Queſtion, and the Order for reſuming the adjourn'd Debate, being read, the Earl of Rocheſter moved, that the Judges ſhould be conſulted in this important Caſe; but no Peer ſeconding that Motion, the Lord Guernſey ſaid, "That the Queſtion, as ſtated, was not fit to be put in Weſt-"minſter-Hall, becauſe it would ſubvert the Conſtitution of Parliament, and pre-"clude the Peers from their Right of giving their Judgment, both of the Fact, as "well as of the Law: For, in this Caſe, ſome Peers might be ſatisfied as to the "Fact, but not as to Law; and if they were to give their Judgment as the Queſtion "was ſtated, their Freedom of Voting would be taken away: Therefore, his Lord-"ſhip moved, That the Firſt Part of the propoſed Queſtion be left out. The Lord North "and Grey, who ſpoke next, ſaid, There was no Neceſſity of putting the Queſtion "in Weſtminſter-Hall, but only acquaint the Commons there, That Dr. Sacheverel "was Guilty in general: For, added his Lordſhip, How can any Peer that thinks him "not Guilty (as for my Part, I don't) ſay in the Face of the Commons, He is not "Guilty, and allow, at the ſame Time, that the Commons have made good their Articles "of Impeachment? Hereupon, the Earl of Wharton ſaid, He wonder'd at the Lord "Guernſey's making that Motion, after the Houſe had come to a Reſolution, that "the Commons had made good their Articles. That the Queſtion, as ſtated by the "Lord Chancellor, did not preclude any Peer from his Right of giving his Judg-"ment; for every Lord was at Liberty to proteſt and enter his Diſſent, if he would "not be convinced by the Majority of the Houſe; and that the Lords being in the "Nature of a Jury, ought to deliver their Opinion, Seriatim. The Lord Ferrers "back'd the Lord Guernſey's Motion; objecting againſt the Preamble of the Queſtion,

" as unneceſſary; and urging, that 'twas only the Majority of the Houſe, and not " the Houſe, that came to a Reſolution, That the Commons had made good their " Impeachments." On the other hand, the Lord Guernſey, in anſwer to the Earl of Wharton, ſaid, " That the Lords were not as a Jury, for every Lord was both a " Judge and a Juror; that ſome Peers might think Dr. Sacheverel guilty of one Part, " and innocent of the other; and yet if they were to give their Judgment as this " Queſtion was ſtated, How could they ſay he was not Guilty, when the Preamble " ſet forth, That the Commons had made good their Impeachment? The Earl of " Wharton replied, That this Objection had been much more proper, before the Houſe " had proceeded ſo far." However, the Earl of Rocheſter having moved, that the Preamble be left out, the Earl of Wharton, and the reſt agreed to it; and thereupon the Lord Chancellor ſtated the Queſtion thus, " That the Queſtion to be put " to each Lord in Weſtminſter-Hall, beginning at the Junior Baron firſt, ſhall be, " Is Dr. Henry Sacheverel Guilty of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors?" The Earl of Nottingham moved, That the Words of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors be left out; and was ſeconded by the Lord North and Grey: But the Earl of Wharton ſaid, " That " what was offered was unfair: For the Commons having impeached Dr. Sacheverel " of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, and the Lords having agreed and reſolv'd, " That the Commons had made good their Impeachment, it neceſſarily follow'd, " that he was guilty of the ſaid Crimes and Miſdemeanors. To moderate the Matter, the Duke of Buckingham propoſed, that the Queſtion be thus altered, Of the Crimes and Miſdemeanors charg'd upon him by the Impeachment; to which the Earls of Wharton and Sunderland readily agreed; but the Earl of Jerſey excepted againſt the Queſtion, as being complex, or complicated. The Lord Guernſey purſued the ſame Objection, for the Reaſon he alledg'd before, viz. " That ſome Peers might think " Dr. Sacheverel guilty of ſome of the Crimes charged upon him by the Impeachment of the Commons, and innocent of the other; and urg'd an Inſtance of an " Indictment containing ſeveral Charges, in which Caſe the Jury is not to anſwer " generally, but particularly to each Offence; becauſe the Judge goes by the Verdict, " and impoſes the Fine accordingly: Therefore his Lordſhip moved, That each Peer " ſhould give his Judgment ſeverally to each Article. To this the Lord Somers anſwer'd, " That the Matter of Fact was already ſettled, tho' every Peer might proteſt and " diſſent; that the Lord Guernſey's Objection, grounded on the Inſtance he brought " in of Indictments, in the Courts below, was very improper; becauſe, as his Lordſhip himſelf had ſuggeſted, the Lords are both Judges and Jury. That as Jury, " they might, in Conſcience, pronounce the Doctor guilty, tho' they thought him " guilty only of One Article only: But that the Lords who did not think him guilty " of all the Four Articles, might, afterwards, as Judges, moderate the Puniſhment. " The Earl of Nottingham replied, That for his Part, he thought Dr. Sacheverel guilty " of no Crime; and moved, that the Particle The, be left out, and the Queſtion " put thus," Is Dr. Henry Sacheverel Guilty of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors charg'd " upon him by the Impeachment? Which was agreed to.

Then it being propos'd, to conſider what Anſwer each Lord ſhould give; the Lord Halifax ſaid, That according to the Uſage of Parliament, the Lords ought to anſwer, Content, or Not Content: But the Lord Ferrers alledg'd, That Content, or, Not Content, was not an adequate Anſwer to the Queſtion: And both the Earl of Nottingham, and the Lord Guernſey, his Brother, urg'd, " That " there were ſeveral Precedents for Guilty, or Not Guilty, upon my Honour; but " did not remember any for Content, or Not Content." The Lord Halifax maintain'd his Aſſertion, and ſaid, He wonder'd the Lord Nottingham did not know there were Precedents for Content, or Not Content; and inſtanc'd in the Lord Somers's Tryal, in which the Lords gave their Judgment that way. On the other hand, the Lord Guernſey inſiſted upon anſwering, Guilty, or Not Guilty; and was ſeconded by the Treaſurer, who ſaid, " That there was a Difference between the Lords " Voting in their Houſe promiſcuouſly, ſometimes in Confuſion, and their giving " their Judgments in Weſtminſter-Hall; and that the Precedent mention'd by the " Lord Halifax, was an extraordinary one, made in an extraordinary Caſe." The Lord Halliſax moving for ſearching the Journals; and the Earl of Wharton, for following Precedents; the Clerk turn'd to, and read the Precedent of the Lord Somers's Impeachment, in which the Peers gave their Judgment, by Content, or Not Content: But the Earl of Rocheſter deſiring that other Precedents might be ſearch'd, and urging, That there was a Difference between the Lords Voting in their Houſe, and in Weſtminſter-Hall; the Duke of Buckingham anſwer'd, " That the Tryal was " the ſame in Weſtminſter-Hall, as if the Lords were in their Houſe; that they re" moved to the Hall, only for the Spaciouſneſs of the Place: And therefore, the " Queſtion ought to be anſwer'd as if they were in the Houſe, Content, or Not Con" tent." To this, the Earl of Clay reply'd, " That Content, or Not Content, was a " very " very improper, and ungrammatical Anſwer, to the Queſtion, Is Dr. Sacheverel " guilty of High Crimes, &c. ? And therefore, either the Queſtion ought to be al- " ter'd, or the Anſwer be, Guilty, or Not Guilty." Then the Lord Ferrers endea- vour'd to ſhew the Inconveniencies that might attend the putting the Queſtion as propoſed, alledging, " That ſome of the Peers there preſent, might hereafter be " impeached, and repent, too late, the having made ſuch a Precedent of giving " Judgment generally." The Earl of Angleſey purſued the ſame Argument, adding, That if the Queſtion was put, and anſwer'd generally, the Majority of the People would not know what the Doctor was condemn'd for : To which the Lord Chancellor readily replied, " That every body would know he was either Guilty, " or Not Guilty of the Crimes charged on him, by the Impeachment of the Houſe " of Commons." But the Earl of Mar inſiſted, " That every Peer ought to be at " Liberty to vote Guilty, or Not Guilty, to every Article ; otherwiſe it might hap- " pen, that the Majority of the Houſe might think Dr. Sacheverel innocent upon " each Article ; yet, by this Method of a general Anſwer, he might be condemned " of all, which ſeem'd inconſiſtent with the uſual Method of Juſtice in that Houſe. The Duke of Buckingham urged, on the ſame ſide, " That ſince the Judgment of " the Houſe, in this Caſe, ought to be a Declaration of the Law, the Condition of " the People would be moſt miſerable, to have Puniſhment for High Crimes and " Miſdemeanors, and not have a Poſſibility of informing themſelves, what the " Crimes thereby puniſh'd were ; which they could not learn from this general De- " termination : And that this Uncertainty being in the Caſe of a Clergyman for " Preaching, it might create ſome Fears in good Men, when they preach ſome Do- " ctrines of the Church of England, particularly that of Non-Reſiſtance." The Earl of Sunderland calling for the Queſtion, the Earl of Angleſey inſiſted on the Inconveniencies of anſwering generally to it : Whereupon the Lord Chancellor, very ſhrewdly, mentioned Four Inconveniencies that might enſue ; viz. " Firſt, That Clergy- " men would know, that to preach againſt the Revolution, was a High Crime and " Miſdemeanor : Secondly, To preach againſt the Toleration : Thirdly, Againſt " the Union : And, Fourthly, That to reflect on the Queen's Miniſters, and ſuggeſt that " the Church is in Danger under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, were likewiſe High " Crimes and Miſdemeanors : Theſe, ſaid his Lordſhip, are the only Inconveniencies " that I can foreſee, will attend this Judgment : Which ironical Turn wonderfully pleas'd the Majority of the Aſſembly. The Earl of Wharton calling then for the Queſtion, the Duke of Shrewſbury ſaid, " That he did not think the Doctor guilty " of the Firſt Article ; tho' he had as great a Share as any Man in the late Revo- " lution, and would ever go as far as any, to vindicate the Memory of our late Glo- " rious Deliverer. That he thought the Church ſafe under Her Majeſty's Admini- " ſtration : But he would not have it made a High Crime and Miſdemeanor, to " ſay, That the Church is in Danger ; becauſe Times might come, when it might re- " ally be in Danger." And, in the Concluſion, his Grace inſiſted on Voting, Article by Article. The Lord Caermarthen, the Earl of Angleſey, and the Earl of Nottingham, did the like : But the ſame being oppoſed by ſome other Peers, the Lord Chancellor did, at laſt, propoſe this Queſtion ; Whether the Anſwer to be given by each Lord, ſhould be Guilty, or Not Guilty only ? Which being reſolved in the Affirmative ; then the main Queſtion was put, whether it ſhould be aſk'd, Is Henry Sacheverel, Doctor in Divinity, guilty of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, charged on him by the Impeachment of the Houſe of Commons ? This was likewiſe carried in the Affirmative ; but Four and Thirty Lords enter'd their Proteſt, importing, in Subſtance, " That the obliging every Lord to anſwer generally, Guilty, or Not Guilty, to a " Queſtion containing all the Articles of his Impeachment, was a Kind of Tacking " upon themſelves, by an unneceſſary joining of Matters of a different Nature, and " ſubjecting them to one and the ſame Determination ; and conſequently, might pre- " judice the Right every Peer had to give a free Affirmative, or Negative ; ſince " whoever thought Dr. Sacheverel guilty of one Part, and innocent of the other, " would be obliged either to approve what he condemned, or condemn what he ap- " proved. 2dly, They conceived, there was at leaſt a Poſſibility, that tho' a Ma- " jority of the Houſe, if admitted to vote to the Articles ſeparately, might think " him innocent upon each Article ; yet, by this Method of a general Anſwer, he " might be condemned of all ; which ſeemed not to be conſiſtent with the uſual " Method of Juſtice, in this Houſe. 3dly, That ſince the Judgment of the Houſe, " in this Caſe, ought to be a Declaration of the Law ; the Condition of the People " would be moſt miſerable, to have Puniſhment inflicted for High Crimes and " Miſdemeanors, and not have a Poſſibility of informing themſelves, what the " High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, thereby puniſhed, are. The Lords give Judgment againſt Dr. Sacheverel.

On the 20th of March, about Three a Clock in the Afternoon, the Lords and Commons having taken their reſpective Seats, and their Lordſhips Houſe being reſumed; the Lord Chancellor declared, That they had agreed upon a Queſtion to be put to each Lord ſeverally: And then his Lordſhip having put the ſaid Queſtion, beginning at the Junior Baron firſt; Sixty Nine (a) Lords declared Dr. Sacheverel Guilty, and Fifty Two (b) only Not Guilty. The Lord Chancellor having caſt up the Votes, declared Dr. Sacheverel Guilty: And the Uſher of the Black Rod having brought Dr. Sacheverel to the Bar, and cauſed him to kneel down, the Lord Chancellor told him, That the Lords having, with their uſual Candor and Equity, examin'd and conſider'd the Articles exhibited againſt him, with the Allegations to make good the ſame, and what had been offer'd by his Council, and himſelf, in his Defence, had found him guilty of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, charg'd upon him by the Commons of Great Britain. Then the Doctor ſtanding up, made a ſhort Speech, importing, " That not having been ſuffer'd to be at their Lordſhips Bar, " while their Lordſhips were giving their Votes, he hoped he might now be per- " mitted to put in a Plea, before their Lordſhips paſs'd Sentence upon him: That " he was adviſed by his Council to offer, Firſt, That by the Opinion of all the " Judges, the particular Words ſuppoſed to be criminal, ought to have been expreſly " ſpecify'd in the Articles of Impeachment againſt him. Secondly, That in the " Title of the ſaid Articles, the ſame were ſaid to be exhibited in the Name of all the " Commons of Great Britain; and yet the Commiſſioners of Shires, who make part of " the Commons of Great Britain, were not mentioned with the Knights, Citizens, and " Burgeſſes in Parliament Aſſembled: Both which he begg'd their Lordſhips to take " into Conſideration." The Lords being returned to their Houſe, conſidered of the Doctor's Plea, and reſolv'd, That the ſame was frivolous; and that they would, the next Day, conſider what Cenſure to paſs upon him. Accordingly, on the 21ſt of March, it being propoſed, " That Dr. Henry Sacheverel be enjoin'd not to Preach " during the Term of Seven Years. Secondly, That for the ſame Term of Years, " he be made incapable of receiving any other Eccleſiaſtical Benefice, than what he " now enjoys. Thirdly, That he be impriſon'd in the Tower for Three Months, and until " he found Sureties for his good Behaviour during the Term of Seven Years, before " the Two Chief Juſtices. Fourthly, That his Sermons be burnt by the Hangman, " at the Exchange, in the Preſence of the Lord-Mayor and Sheriffs." The Houſe took the propoſed Queſtion into Conſideration, Paragraph by Paragraph; and after Debate upon the firſt Paragraph, it being agreed to leave out the Word [Seven], it was propoſed, inſtead thereof, to inſert the Word [Three], which was reſolved in the Affirmative. Then this Queſtion was put, " That Dr. Henry Sache- " verel ſhould be injoined not to Preach during the Term of Three Years?" Which was reſolved in the Affirmative. Then this Queſtion was put, " That Dr. Henry Sa- " cheverel be made incapable of receiving any further Eccleſiaſtical Benefice, during " the ſaid Term of Three Years?" Which was reſolved in the Negative. Then the Third Paragraph propoſed, was, " That Dr. Henry Sacheverel ſhall be impri- " ſon'd in the Tower for Three Months, and until he find Sureties for his good Be- " haviour?" Which not being inſiſted on; the Fourth Paragraph propoſed, was, " That Dr. Sacheverel's Two Sermons be burnt by the Hangman at the Exchange,

" in the Preſence of the Lord-Mayor, and Sheriffs of London and Middleſex; which being reſolv'd in the Affirmative, it was order'd by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Aſſembled, that the Judgment to be paſs'd in the Caſe of Dr. Henry Sacheverel, ſhould be, " That Henry Sacheverel, Doctor in Divinity, ſhall " be, and is hereby enjoined not to Preach, during the Term of Three Years next " enſuing. That Dr. Henry Sacheverel's Two printed Sermons, referr'd to by the " Impeachment of the Houſe of Commons, ſhall be burnt before the Royal-Exchange " in London, between the Hours of Twelve and One, on Monday, the 27th Day of " this Inſtant March, by the Hands of the Common Hangman, in the Preſence of " the Lord-Mayor of the City of London, and the Two Sheriffs of London and " Middleſex. (a)

Sentence paſs'd on Dr. Sacheverel.

As ſoon as 'twas known Abroad, what a mild Sentence the Lords had reſolv'd to paſs on Dr. Sacheverel; which, indeed, rather look'd like an Acquittal, than a Condemnation; and, at the ſame Time, was a ſure Indication of the Impotence of the Whig Party; his Friends made extraordinary Rejoycings upon it; inſomuch that, in the Evening, moſt of the Streets in Weſtminſter, and ſome in the City of London, were full of Illuminations and Bonfires, round which many drank the Doctor's Health, and happy Deliverance, and oblig'd thoſe that paſs'd by to do the like. But theſe Rejoycings being a kind of Inſult upon the Parliament, and occaſioning tumultuous Aſſemblies, the Train'd-Bands of the City, did, in ſeveral Places, diſperſe the Mob, and ſeiz'd on a few diſorderly Perſons, who were committed to Newgate. On the other hand, Notice was taken of many who made theſe unpolitick Bonfires, and one of them happening to be one of the Yeomen of her Majeſty's Guard, he was, a few Days after, diſmiſs'd by her Majeſty's Command. On the 22d of March, the Lords ſent a Meſſage to the Commons, to acquaint them, that their Lordſhips were ready to give Judgment againſt Dr. Henry Sacheverel, if that Houſe, with their Speaker, would come and demand the ſame: Whereupon, it was debated, Whether the Houſe would demand Judgment? Moſt of the Doctor's Friends were for the Negative, hoping that the reſt, who thought the Sentence too moderate, would have join'd with them; which would have ended in the Doctor's Impunity; and, perhaps, occaſion'd a Miſunderſtanding between the Two Houſes: But not above Four or Five Members joining with them, it was reſolv'd, (by a Majority of Forty Seven Voices) that the Commons would demand Judgment of the Lords againſt Dr. Henry Sacheverel. Accordingly, the next * Day, the Commons went up to the Bar of the Houſe of Lords, whither the Doctor being brought, the Speaker, in the Name of all the Commons of Great Britain, demanded Judgment againſt him, which the Lord Chancellor pronounced to him kneeling; after which, the Doctor return'd the Lords his humble Thanks and Acknowledgments for their Clemency towards him.

Rejoycings thereupon.

The Commons being return'd to their Houſe, the Lord-Mayor of London, who was not a little mortify'd at his being, by the Lords Sentence, obliged to aſſiſt at the burning of a Sermon he had approv'd, and the printing whereof (as Dr. Sacheverel aſſerted in the Dedication) he had commanded, deſir'd and mov'd, That he might be excus'd from attending at the ſaid Execution, he being a Member of the Houſe: And a Debate ariſing thereupon, the ſame was put off, 'till the Houſe was inform'd what Anſwer the Lord-Mayor had return'd to the Sheriffs, when they ſhould demand of him, whether he would attend, or not? And ſo that Buſineſs dropp'd. Two † Days before, the Queſtion was put in the Houſe of Commons, That the Thanks of this Houſe be given to the Members who were appointed the Managers of the Impeachment againſt Dr. Henry Sacheverel, for their faithful Management in the diſcharge of the Truſt repos'd in them: Which, after a Debate thereupon, was carry'd in the Affirmative, by a Majority of One Hundred Fifty Seven Voices, againſt One Hundred and Fifteen. And Mr. Speaker gave them (they ſtanding up in their Places) the Thanks of the Houſe accordingly. On the 24th, there was a great Debate in the Houſe of Commons, about a Motion, That an humble Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, that ſhe be graciouſly pleas'd to iſſue her Royal Proclamation, to appoint a Day of publick Faſting and Humiliation, to deprecate the Divine Vengeance, which they had juſt Reaſon to fear, on Account of thoſe horrid Blaſphemies which had been vented, publiſh'd and printed in this Kingdom, notwithſtand-

Thoſe who made and back'd this Motion, being Doctor Sacheverel's Friends, thought thereby, in ſome Meaſure, to juſtify what he had advanc'd in his Sermon, about the Church being in Danger, which, in his Defences, he had aſcrib'd to the Heretical and Blaſphemous Poſitions lately publiſh'd: But ſome other Members, who perceiv'd the Tendency of that Motion, propos'd, that to the ſaid Addreſs the following Words ſhould be added, Many of which Blaſphemies have again, in a moſt irregular, extraordinary, and inſolent Manner, been printed, publiſh'd and diſpers'd, throughout the Kingdom, to the Scandal of all good Chriſtians, by Dr. Henry Sacheverel, during the Courſe of his late Tryal. Thoſe who made the Motion, not liking this Addition, would have dropt the Addreſs; but the others inſiſting, that it ſhould be preſented, the Queſtion was put, and reſolv'd in the Affirmative, by a Majority of One Hundred Forty Four Voices, againſt Sixty Nine. However, when the ſaid Addreſs was, by Mr. Secretary Boyle, preſented to her Majeſty, ſhe was pleas'd to anſwer, That a publick Faſt having been in this Part of the Kingdom, on the 15th of this Month, which was yet to be obſerv'd in North Britain on the 29th, her Majeſty thought it not proper to appoint another Faſt ſo ſoon, but would take it into her Conſideration, at a more convenient Time. The ſame Day *, a Complaint being made to the Houſe of a printed Book, Intituled, Collections of Paſſages referr'd to by Dr. Henry Sacheverel, in his Anſwer to the Articles of his Impeachment, under Four Heads. I. Teſtimonies concerning the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance to the ſupream Powers. II. Blaſphemous, Irreligious, and Heretical Poſitions, lately publiſh'd. III. The Church and Clergy abus'd. IV. The Queen, State and Miniſtry, reflected upon: The Second Edition: Which Book was produc'd, and brought up to the Table, where ſome Paragraphs (under the Head of Blaſphemy, Irreligion, and Hereſy) were read; after which, it was order'd, That the ſaid Book ſhould, the next Day, be burnt by the Hands of the Common Hangman; and that the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex, ſhould aſſiſt the Serjeant at Arms attending the Houſe, in ſeeing the ſaid Book burnt.

But tho' the Proſecution of Dr. Sacheverel, which made ſo much Noiſe, both at home and abroad, ended in the Burning of Two of his Sermons; yet theſe ſmall Flames, new kindled old Animoſities, and ſet the whole Nation in Combuſtion.

While this great Buſineſs, of which we have purpoſely given an uninterrupted View, was depending, ſeveral other Matters were tranſacted in Parliament, of which we ſhall now take Notice. On the 18th of January, the Queen went to the Houſe of Lords, with the uſual State; and the Commons attending, her Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to the Lottery-Bill, entituled, An Act for continuing Part of the Duties upon Coals, Culm, and Cynders; and granting new Duties upon Houſes, having Twenty Windows, or more, to raiſe the Sum of Fifteen hundred thouſand Pounds, by way of a Lottery, for the Service of the Year 1710. Two Days ‖ after, the Books for receiving Subſcriptions to this Lottery, were open'd at Mercers-Hall, and the Crowd was ſo great, that above 600000*l.* were ſubſcribed that Day, and the whole Sum of 1500000*l.* towards the End of March. On the 25th of January, the Commons taking into Conſideration that many of their Members did not, at this critical Juncture, attend the Service of the Houſe, reſolv'd, "That ſuch Members as did abſent themſelves, without the "Leave of the Houſe, were to be reputed Deſerters of their Truſt, and Neglecters of "that Duty they owed to that Houſe, and their Country." Then, after ſome Debate, it was order'd, That Leave be given to bring in a Bill for ſecuring the Freedom of Parliaments, by limiting the Number of Officers (either Military or Civil) in the Houſe; and a Committee was appointed to bring in the ſame. Three Days ∴ after, the ſaid Bill was read a ſecond Time; and the Queſtion being put, Whether it ſhould be committed to a Committee of the whole Houſe? It was carried in the Affirmative, by a Majority of 215 Voices, againſt 154. It is obſervable, that General Stanhope ſpoke for the bringing in of this Bill, to which the Grand Committee †† made ſome Amendments; which being reported  to the Houſe by Mr. Wortley Montague, were agreed to, and the Bill order'd to be engroſs'd. On the 4th of February, the Bill was read the third Time, paſs'd, and ſent to the Lords, who appointed the 9th to take it into Conſideration. The Queen being, on that Day, come incognito to their Lordſhips Houſe, the Earl of Wharton exerted his manly Eloquence, to ſhew that ſuch a Law would be equally derogatory to the Prerogatives of the Crown, and injurious to the Rights of the People; and Two Lords of the contrary Side, (the Lord North and Grey, and the Earl of Scarborough) having already ſpoken againſt the ſaid Bill, it was unanimouſly rejected: To the Court's entire Satisfaction. By this Time, upon ſeveral Petitions of the Mercers in London and Weſtminſter, and other Tradeſmen, a Bill had been brought into the Houſe of Commons, for aſcertaining and limiting the Time of publick Mournings; but, after the Amendments made to the Bill in the grand Committee, were agreed to, the Queſtion being put for engroſſing the ſame, it paſs'd in the Negative, by the Prevalency of the Courtiers.

The Commons, in a grand Committee, having ſeveral Times conſider'd of the Trade to Africa, and heard both the Royal African Company, and the ſeparate Traders, upon their ſeveral Petitions, came, at laſt, to theſe Two Reſolutions. "Firſt, That Forts and Settlements are neceſſary for carrying on, and preſerving "the Trade to Africa. Secondly, That the Trade to Africa be free and open for "all her Majeſty's Subjects, from any Part of Great Britain, or the Plantations; "under ſuch Regulations and Proviſions, as may be for the Preſervation of the "ſaid Trade, and maintaining the ſaid Forts and Settlements:" Which Reſolutions being, on the 9th of February, reported, were, after ſome Debate, agreed to by the Houſe. Some Time after, a Bill was brought in for ſettling the Trade to Africa, and a Clauſe order'd to be added to it, for the inſtructing of the Negroes in the Plantations, in the Knowledge of the Chriſtian Religion: But this Bill was never brought to Perfection; and the only thing the Commons did in Favour either of the Company, or of the Separate Traders, was, to addreſs her Majeſty, That ſuch Ships of War be appointed for protecting the Trade to Africa, as might be neceſſary for the Preſervation and Security thereof. Some Days before, upon a Petition of ſeveral Creditors and Proprietors of principal Money, Annuities, and Shares, in the Mine-Adventure of England, the Commons ordered a Bill to be brought in for the Relief of that Company; and that the Management of the Mines be put in the Hands of Truſtees; which was read the firſt Time on the 18th of March. the Company, having petition'd to be heard by the Houſe, he was, on the Twenty third of March, called in; as were alſo the Council for the Petitioners, and in part heard, relating to the Matters of the ſaid Report. Being withdrawn, a Debate aroſe upon what they had offer'd, which was adjourned to the Twenty fifth; when both Sir Humphrey Mackworth, and the Council for the Petitioners, were heard again; and the further Hearing of them put off to the Twenty eighth, then to the next Day, then again to the Thirtieth, and ſo to the Thirty firſt; when the Commons came to theſe unanimous Reſolutions: "That Sir Humphrey Mackworth, Deputy-"Governor of the Company of Mine-Adventurers of England, was guilty of many "notorious and ſcandalous Frauds, and indirect Practices, in Violation of the Char-"ter granted to the ſaid Company, in Breach of his Truſt, and to the manifeſt "Wrong and Oppreſſion of the Proprietors and Creditors of the ſaid Company. "And that William Shiers, Secretary to the ſaid Company, and Thomas Dykes, their "Treaſurer, were guilty of many notorious and ſcandalous Frauds and indirect "Practices, in Confederacy with the ſaid Sir Humphrey Mackworth." After this, a Bill was order'd to be brought in, to prevent Sir Humphrey Mackworth, William Shires, and Thomas Dykes, their leaving this Kingdom, and their alienating their Eſtates, until the End of the next Seſſion of Parliament: But before this Bill could be brought to Perfection, the Parliament was prorogued.

Both Houſes addreſs the Queen to ſend the Duke of Marlborough to Holland, February 18.

The Commons being inform'd by Sir Gilbert Heathcote, one of their Members, of the Advances made by France towards the renewing a Negociation of Peace, an Addreſs was voted, in which the Lords having concurr'd, the ſame was, by both Houſes, preſented to the Queen on the Eighteenth of February. It imported in Subſtance, "That the Lords and Commons having Reaſon to believe that the Negotiations of "Peace would ſuddenly be renew'd in Holland; and being juſtly apprehenſive of the "crafty and inſinuating Deſigns of their Enemies to create Diviſions among the "Allies, or by amuſing them with deceitful Expectations of Peace, to retard their "Preparations for War; they thought themſelves bound in Duty, moſt humbly to "repreſent to her Majeſty, of how great Importance they conceived it was to the "Intereſt of the Common Cauſe, that the Duke of Marlborough ſhould be abroad at "this Juncture. That they could not but take this Opportunity to expreſs their Senſe "of the great and unparallel'd Services of the Duke of Marlborough; and, with all "imaginable Duty, to applaud her Majeſty's great Wiſdom, in having honour'd the "ſame Perſon with the great Characters of General and Plenipotentiary, who, in their "humble Opinion, was moſt capable of diſcharging Two ſuch important Truſts. "They therefore made it their humble Requeſt to her Majeſty, that ſhe would be "pleaſed to order the Duke of Marlborough's immediate Departure for Holland, "where his Preſence would be equally neceſſary, to aſſiſt at the Negotiations of "Peace, and to haſten the Preparations for an early Campaign, which would ef-"fectually diſappoint the Artifices of their Enemies, and procure a ſafe and honou-"rable Peace for her Majeſty and her Allies." Tho' the Majority concurr'd in this Addreſs, yet many Members, in both Houſes, could not but obſerve how prepoſterous it was, to make the ſame Perſon, in a manner, abſolute Umpire of Peace and War; which came little ſhort of a Roman Dictator. However, the Queen, who ſtill chimed with the Miniſters, told both Houſes, That ſhe was ſo ſenſible of the Neceſſity of the Duke of Marlborough's Preſence in Holland, at this critical Juncture, that ſhe had already given the neceſſary Directions for his immediate Departure; and ſhe was very glad to find, by this Addreſs, that they concurr'd with her in a juſt Senſe of the Duke of Marlborough's eminent Services. With theſe high Compliments, the Duke of Marlborough, the next Day, ſet out for Harwich, and landed in Holland the Seventh of March, N. S. after a very difficult Paſſage, having been Three Days at Sea; and lain from Seven in the Morning till Two in the Afternoon, rowling about Three Leagues off the Shore.

Petition of the French Refugees to the Commons.

On the Twenty third of February, a Petition of Peter Jaquin St. Pierre, Matthew de Gaſtine, Paul Boyer, John Dubourdieu, Peter Silveſtre, &c. in behalf of themſelves, and many other French Proteſtants; as alſo of ſeveral Children, (of French Proteſtants deceas'd) ſettled in her Majeſty's Dominions, was preſented to the Houſe of Commons, ſetting forth; "That the French King had iſſued ſeveral Edicts, De-"crees, and Declarations, whereby all the French Proteſtants, who had fled for "Refuge into her Majeſty's Dominions, on account of their Religion, were declared "and adjudg'd to be outlaw'd, and to have forfeited their Goods and Eſtates, and "excluded from claiming and enjoying any Inheritance in France; which Edicts "and Declarations were put in Execution with the utmoſt Rigor; that, on the con-"trary, many Perſons living in France, did frequently either come into this Kingdom "of Great Britain, or appoint Proxies and Attorneys to claim here, and inherit the "Eſtates of their deceaſed Relations; and being poſſeſs'd of them, did afterwards "return into France with the ſame, to the Prejudice of the other remoter Relations

" of the Deceaſed, ſettled in her Majeſty's Dominions; and were thereby for ever " deprived of ſuch Eſtates as might fall to them, either by Lineal or Collateral " Succeſſion; and therefore the Petitioners pray'd, That Leave be given to bring in " a Bill to preclude the Subjects of the French King, reſiding in his Dominions, from claim- " ing or enjoying any Eſtates of their Relations, dying in her Majeſty's Dominions." This Petition having been read, a Bill was ordered to be brought in thereupon; which Mr. Hampden did accordingly on the Eleventh of March: But upon the private Suggeſtions of ſome eminent French Proteſtants, That this Bill would be more prejudicial, than advantageous to themſelves, and their Fellow-Refugees, who, from time to time, received conſiderable Remittances of Money from their Relations in France, the ſecond Reading of it was put off, and ſo the Bill dropt.

Bill in their Favour dropt.

On the 27th of February, the Queen gave the Royal Aſſent to Three publick, and Two private Bills; on the 13th of March, to Two publick, and Six private; on the 24th, to Six publick, and Two private; on the 5th of April, to Ten publick, and Thirteen private Acts; And on this laſt Day, her Majeſty made the following Speech to both Houſes:

" IT is with great Satisfaction that I come hither at this Time, to return you my " hearty Thanks for the many Marks of Duty and Affection, which you have " given me thro' the whole Courſe of this Seſſion.

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes, April 5.

" And I am to thank you, Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, in a very particu- " lar manner, for the great Diſpatch which you have made, in providing, ſo early " in the Year, ſuch great and effectual Supplies for the Publick Service: This can- " not but make me very deſirous to repeat the Aſſurances I gave you at the opening " of the Seſſion, that they ſhould be very carefully applied to the Uſes for which " you have deſigned them.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" I cannot ſufficiently expreſs to you my great Concern, that you have had ſo " neceſſary an Occaſion of taking up a great Part of your Time, towards the latter " End of this Seſſion.

" I am confident, no Prince that ever ſat on the Throne, has been more really " and ſincerely kind to the Church than my ſelf, nor ever had a more true and " tender Concern for its Welfare and Proſperity, than I have, and always ſhall con- " tinue to have.

" The ſuppreſſing Immorality, and prophane and other wicked and malicious Li- " bels, is what I have always earneſtly recommended; and ſhall be glad of the " firſt Opportunity to give my Conſent to any Laws, that might effectually con- " duce to that End: But this being an Evil complained of in all Times, it is very " injurious to take a Pretence from thence to inſinuate, that the Church is in any " Danger from my Adminiſtration.

" I could heartily wiſh, that Men would ſtudy to be quiet, and do their " own Buſineſs, rather than buſy themſelves in reviving Queſtions and Diſputes of " a very high Nature; and which muſt be with an ill Intention, ſince they can on- " ly tend to foment, but not to heal our Diviſions and Animoſities.

" For my own Part, as it has pleaſed GOD to give Succeſs to my Endeavours " for the UNION of my Two Kingdoms, which I muſt ever eſteem as one of the " greateſt Bleſſings of my Reign; ſo, I hope, his Divine Goodneſs will ſtill con- " tinue favourable, and make Me the Happy Inſtrument of that yet more deſi- " rable Union of the Hearts of all my People, in the Bonds of mutual Affection; " that ſo there may remain no other Contention among you, but who ſhall ex- " ceed the other in contributing to advance our preſent Happineſs, and ſecure " the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

" Finding, by the Advices from abroad, that our Army has not yet taken the " Field, and that the Plenipotentiaries of France are ſtill in Holland; I think it " proper, at preſent, to make the Prorogation but for a very ſhort Time.

Accordingly, the Lord Chancellor, by the Queen's Command, prorogu'd the Parliament only to the 18th of that Month; when they were further prorogued.

The Parliament prorogued.

About the Beginning of May, the Queen was pleaſed to make a Promotion of General Officers: The Lord Shanon, the Marquis de Montandre, Lord Montjoy, Richard Gorges, Nicholas Sankey, Earl of Crawford, Henry Holt, Duke of Northumberland, George Carpenter, George Maccartney, Sir Richard Temple, Lord North and Grey, and the Earl of Stair, were made LIEUTENANTS-GENERAL; Thomas Handaſyde, John Bayne, *Barth. New Overtures of Peace made by France.

It has been hinted before, that upon the vigorous Reſolutions taken in Great Britain and Holland, for the Proſecution of the War, the Court of France thought fit to make new Overtures of Peace. In order to that, the Marquis de Torcy did, on the 2d of January, 1710. N. S. ſend a Project to Monſieur Petkum, Reſident of Holſtein, conſiſting of Five Articles, importing in Subſtance, "1ſt, That immediately "after the ſigning of the Peace, the French King would acknowledge King Charles, "as King of the Monarchy of Spain; and not only withdraw all the Succours he "had given his Grandſon, but alſo forbear ſending him any Aſſiſtance for the "future; and forbid his Subjects to liſt in his Service; and conſent likewiſe, "That no Part of the Monarchy of Spain ſhould ever be united to France. 2dly, "That as for the Emperor and Empire, the French King would reſtore the Town "and Citadel of Straſburgh, and the Town of Briſac; content himſelf with the "Poſſeſſion of Alſace, according to the literal Senſe of the Treaty of Munſter; "yield to the Empire the Town of Landau; raze the Fortifications he had caus'd "to be built on the Rhine, from Baſil to Philipſburgh; and acknowledge both the "King of Pruſſia, and the Elector of Hanover. 3dly, That as to England, he would "acknowledge Queen Anne, and the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line; reſtore Newfoundland, and agree to a mutual Reſtitution of all that had been taken in the "Weſt-Indies on either ſide; demoliſh the Fortifications, and ruin the Harbour of "Dunkirk; and conſent to the Pretender's leaving France. 4thly, That as to the "States-General, he would yield to them, for a Barrier, all the Places ſpecify'd "in the Twenty Second Article of the former Preliminaries; and confirm what "he had offer'd them, with reſpect to their Trade. And, 5thly, As for the "Duke of Savoy, that he was willing to grant the Demands made for him by the "Allies: But then his Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty demanded, that the Electors of Cologne and Bavaria ſhould be reſtor'd to their Eſtates and Dignities." This Project being rejected by the Allies, the French reſolved to make further Overtures; and diſpatch'd a Courier of the Cabinet to the Hague, with a Letter from the Marquis de Torcy to Monſieur Petkum; importing, "That the French King conſented, that the Preliminaries that were concerted the Year before, ſhould be the "Foundation of the future Treaty; and had appointed the Mareſchal d' Huxelles, "and the Abbot de Polignac, his Plenipotentiaries, to treat with the Allies of an "Equivalent for the Thirty Seventh Article, relating to the Evacuation of Spain: "And that thoſe Two Miniſters would meet thoſe of the Allies, either at Antwerp, or any other Place, if the Allies would but ſend them the neceſſary Paſſes. This Courier arriving at the Hague the 2d of February, N. S. his Diſpatches were (the ſame Day) communicated by Monſieur Petkum to the Grand Penſionary; who, having held ſeveral Conferences with the Plenipotentiaries of the Emperor, and Queen of Great Britain, and the Deputies of the States-General, in which Monſieurs Buys and Vanderduſſen aſſiſted; the French Courier was ſent back again on the Thirteenth of the ſame Month, with an Anſwer from Monſieur Petkum, to the Marquis de Torcy's Letter; importing, "That the laſt "Declaration of the Court of France, being in uncertain and ambiguous "Terms; the Allies required, that the French King ſhould declare, in plain "and expreſs Words, that he conſented to all the Preliminaries, except the "Thirty Seventh Article; which done, the Allies would ſend Paſſes to his Miniſters, to treat of an Equivalent for the ſaid Article." Another French Courier being return'd * to the Hague with a ſatisfactory Anſwer, he was ſent back the 23d, with the Paſſes for the French Plenipotentiaries, who being come to Antwerp on the 9th of March, N. S. went on board a Yatch prepar'd for them at Mordyke, where Monſieurs Buys and Vanderduſſen, the States Deputies, ſoon after met them, and had a Conference with them. The next Day they had another, which laſted ſeveral Hours, and then the States Deputies ſet out for the Hague, to make their Report to their High-Mightineſſes, and the French Plenipotentiaries went to Gertruydenbergh, the Place appointed for their Reſidence, and the holding of future Conferences: The French having ſhewn an Unwillingneſs to treat, either at Antwerp, which which had been at firſt pitch'd upon, or in any other Town belonging to the Spaniſh Netherlands, undoubtedly out of Compliment to King Philip. The French Plenipotentiaries had deſir'd, that Monſieur Ietkum ſhould meet them at Antwerp, before they conferr'd with the States Deputies, but the Allies did not think fit to conſent to it, leſt the French Miniſters ſhould inſtruct him how to ſow Diviſions among the Confederates, at this critical Juncture. By this Time, the Duke of Marlborough was come to the Hague, where Meſſieurs Buys and Vanderduſſen, being return'd on the 11th of March, N. S. had, the next Morning, a Conference with his Grace, the Lord Townſhend, and Count Zinzendorf, in the Preſence of the Great Penſionary, and the Deputies of the States, wherein they reported, "That the "French Plenipotentiaries had endeavour'd, in the firſt Place, to perſuade them, "that it was the Intereſt of the Allies to make a ſeparate Peace with France, exclu- "ſive from Spain; and that to render the ſame more effectual, and remove the Um- "brages the Allies ſeem'd to have taken, that the King of France might, under- "hand, aſſiſt his Grandſon, his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty was willing to enter into the "moſt ſolemn Engagements to the contrary, and give cautionary Towns for the "Performance of his Promiſe. That the Deputies of the States anſwer'd, That "theſe Offers of France were not ſufficient; and that the Allies having chiefly un- "dertaken this War, for reſtoring the Monarchy of Spain to the Houſe of Auſtria, "they could not treat with the French King, (who had plac'd his Grandſon on the "Throne of that Monarchy) without ſtipulating, that he ſhould relinquiſh the "ſame; adding, That the High Allies would be very much ſurprized to hear, that "after the preſſing Inſtances the French had made for theſe Conferences, their Ple- "nipotentiaries were come to offer what had been already rejected; and would, "doubtleſs, take it as an Evidence, that their Court was not ſincere, and ſought "only to amuſe the Allies. That Meſſieurs d' Huxelles, and de Polignac, pretended, "they did not know that any ſuch Thing had yet been offer'd; but they were told, "That tho' Miniſters might be allow'd ſometimes to diſſemble, yet this was not a "fit Time to make uſe of that Privilege; and that they ought plainly to ſpeak "their Minds. That thoſe Gentlemen made large Proteſtations of their Maſter's "ſincere Inclination for Peace; that his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty could never be pre- "vail'd upon to enter into a War with his Grandſon, or take any other violent "Meaſures againſt him. That they enlarged on the Affection of the Spaniards for "that Prince; and, at laſt, declar'd, That they ſaw no other Expedient for procu- "ring the Spaniſh Monarchy to King Charles, than to give a Share of it to King "Philip; concluding, That if the Allies would conſent to give him Naples and "Sicily, King Philip might be induced to reſign the reſt to the Archduke: They "urged, That this was the only way for preventing a further Effuſion of Chriſtian "Blood, and, which would ſave the Allies abundance of Trouble, and ſecure to "the Houſe of Auſtria the Monarchy of Spain; whereas the Fortune of the War "being uncertain, it might ſtill happen, that the Allies would be obliged to make "Peace upon other Terms. That the Deputies confuted theſe Reaſons without any "great Difficulty; and having repreſented that ſuch a Partition was contrary to "the Treaties the Allies had amongſt themſelves, and to the whole Tenor of the "Preliminaries, which the French themſelves acknowledg'd for the Foundation of "the Treaty, they declar'd, in expreſs Terms, that they were ſent to hear what "Equivalent they had to propoſe for the Thirty Seventh Article of the Prelimina- "ries, which they excepted againſt; but not to debate upon any other Point: "Whereupon they parted." The ſame Day, to prevent any Jealouſies among the other Miniſters of the Allies, the Deputies of the States communicated to the "Pruſſian Plenipotentiaries what had been tranſacted at Mordyke; and the next † "Day, the ſame was, in a more ſolemn Manner, communicated to all the Mini- "ſters of the Allies, who were deſired to uſe their Intereſt with their reſpective "Maſters, that their Troops might be in a Readineſs to begin the Campaign as ear- "ly as poſſible, as the moſt effectual Means to force the common Enemy to accept "ſuch Conditions, as might ſecure a ſafe and laſting Peace.

Report of Meſſieurs Buys and Vanderduſſen, of their firſt Conferences with the French Plenipotentiaries.

† † March 12, N. S.

On the 18th of March, N. S. an Expreſs from the French Plenipotentiaries arriv'd at the Hague, and the next Day acquainted the Grand Penſionary, that they had received an Anſwer from the Court to their laſt Diſpatches; and deſired, either that they might be permitted to come to the Hague, or that the States Deputies might again confer with them at Gertruydenbergh. The firſt being deny'd, and the latter granted, Meſſieurs Buys and Vanderduſſen, ſet out the 20th for Gertruydenbergh, where, the 21ſt and 22d, they had ſeveral Conferences with the Miniſters of France, who again propos'd a ſeparate Peace, excluſive from Spain; offering, as before, all manner of Security, that the moſt Chriſtian King ſhould not aſſiſt his Grandſon: Which being rejected, they propos'd ſeveral Schemes of Partition of the Spaniſh

Spaniſh Monarchy. They mention'd, in the firſt Place, Naples and Sicily for King Philip: Afterwards, That the Allies would leave him in Poſſeſſion of the Kingdom of Arragon; and laſtly, That he would content himſelf with Sicily, Sardinia, and the Spaniſh Places on the Coaſt of Tuſcany. The Dutch Deputies having told the French Miniſters, that they were ſurpriz'd to hear of no Equivalent for the Thirty Seventh Article of the Preliminaries, as their Court had promiſed, and on which Conſideration alone, the preſent Negotiation was agreed on by the Allies; adding, That they had no Power to treat of any Partition; they took their Leave of the French Plenipotentiaries, who ſent an Expreſs to Verſailles for further Inſtructions. On the other Hand, Meſſieurs Buys and Vanderduſſen, being return'd * to the Hague, made a Report of theſe Conferences to the Great Penſionary, in the Preſence of the Imperial and Britiſh Miniſters, who diſpatch'd Expreſſes to their reſpective Courts, with an Account of the Propoſals made by France, which were alſo communicated to the States of Holland, and other Provinces.

* March 23. N. S.

On the 22d of March, Monſieur Petkum went from the Hague to Gertruydenbergh, but without any Commiſſion on the Part of the Allies, and ſolely at the Deſire of the French Plenipotentiaries; who, not many Days after, having given Notice of the Return of the Expreſs they had ſent to their Court, the Deputies of the States ſet out again, on the 6th of April, for Gertruydenbergh. In theſe new Conferences, the French Plenipotentiaries inſiſted on a Partition of the Spaniſh Dominions, according to the Schemes they had propoſed before; but ſeem'd, however, to depart from what they had advanc'd, in Relation to Sicily and Sardinia, pretending that was by way of Converſation, and demanded either Naples, with the Places on the Coaſt of Tuſcany, or the Kingdom of Arragon, which occaſion'd great Debates. The French Miniſters mention'd afterwards the Article of Security, for the Performance of what ſhould be ſtipulated in the Preliminaries, and propos'd what they expected from the Allies for themſelves; but would not explain their Meaning on the Security to be given by France to the Allies, for the Performance of the Preliminaries. The Deputies of the States being very much diſſatisfy'd with the Plenipotentiaries of France, frankly told them, That the Allies were tir'd with this way of treating, and therefore expected a full and clear Declaration on the part of France, on the Matters already debated, or elſe they would break off all manner of Conference with them. Hereupon Monſieur d' Huxelles, and the Abbot de Polignac, deſir'd Time to ſend another Courier to Verſailles for further Inſtructions: Pretending, That the final Reſolution of their Maſter, depended on that of the Court of Madrid, which was expected about that Time at Verſailles. This dilatory and ſhuffling way of treating, (of which Meſſieurs Buys and Vanderduſſen, made their Report the 10th) confirm'd the general Opinion, that the French had not a real Intention to come to a Peace, even by way of Partition, and that they had no other Deſign in theſe Conferences, than either to divide, or amuſe the Allies: In both which, however, they were equally diſappointed. For Prince Eugene being come to the Hague on the 12th of April, and having, with the Duke of Marlborough, and the Deputies of the States, concerted the Operations of the next Campaign, for the early opening whereof, great Magazines of dry Forage, and other Neceſſaries, had been provided, thoſe Two Generals ſet out the 15th for Tournay; near which Place, the Confederate Forces quarter'd on the Maeze, Brabant and Flanders, were order'd to rendezvous.

† April 21. N. S.

It was by many expected, that the early Succeſs of the Confederate Armies in † paſſing the Lines, and inveſting Douay, would have accelerated the ſlow Paces of the Negotiation at Gertruydenbergh: But Meſſieurs Buys and Vanderduſſen, being again return'd thither on the 24th of April, N. S. at the Deſire of the French Plenipotentiaries, they had the ſame Day a Conference, in which they deſir'd to know, Whether by the laſt Courier, they had receiv'd any further Inſtructions on the Grand Affair, for which they were come into theſe Provinces? The French Miniſters anſwer'd, That they had no other Propoſals to make, but what they had already offered; and told the Deputies, that they had expected the Anſwer of the Allies, on their Propoſals. This Declaration occaſioned ſome warm Debates among them; and the Deputies complained of the Inſincerity of the French Court, telling them in expreſs Terms, That the Miniſters of France, having ſo often and ſo poſitively declared, by Letters and otherwiſe, that their Plenipotentiaries were to propoſe an Expedient for the Thirty Seventh Article; the Allies could not but be ſurprized, that after ſo many Conferences, they ſhould hear nothing from them, but a Propoſal for the Partition of the Spaniſh Monarchy: And ſo the Conference broke up, without any Succeſs. The next Morning, the Deputies of the States went to take their Leave of the French Plenipotentiaries, and inſinuated to them, in general Terms, "That the Armies "being actually in the Field, and no Advances made in the late Conferences to- "wards procuring a General Peace; they thought it was to no Purpoſe to continue "them.

" them." The French Plenipotentiaries alledged, they had made ſeveral Propoſals and Overtures, which, in their Opinion, might have conduced to a General Peace; and that they wonder'd the Allies had made none on their Part, ſince they were not ſatisfy'd with thoſe of France? They deſired alſo the Dutch Deputies to give them their Anſwer or Declaration in Writing, that they might tranſmit it to their Court; but this being denied, the Deputies took their Leaves, and the French Plenipotentiaries diſpatched the Mareſchal d'Uxelles's Secretary to Verſailles. Many were ſtill of Opinion, that the late Succeſs of the Allies, and the Siege of Douay, would have obliged the Court of France to alter their Stile; and it was then ſtrongly reported, That in the Council held at Verſailles, upon the firſt Advice of the Allies paſſing the Lines, there appeared a great Diviſion among the Princes of the Blood: Some inſiſting upon the Neceſſity of Peace, to preſerve France from entire Ruin; and others perſiſting in their former Opinion, That it was better to venture the Fate of another Campaign, than to ſubmit to ſuch ignominious Terms as were inſiſted on by the Confederates.

Again unſucceſsful.

Upon the Report made at the Hague by Meſſieurs Buys and Vanderduſſen of the laſt fruitleſs Conferences, the Imperial Miniſter thought fit to declare, " That the Em- " peror, his Maſter, could not conſent to any Partition of the Spaniſh Dominions; " and therefore propoſed, that the French Plenipotentiaries ſhould be forthwith diſ- " miſſed:" But the Dutch were of a different Opinion, alledging, That ſince the French Miniſters had ſent an Expreſs to their Court, it was but reaſonable to expect his Return, and ſee whether the late Progreſs of the Confederate Arms had cauſed any Alteration in the Meaſures of that Court. Nor was it long before the Allies were ſatisfy'd of the Matter; for the Expreſs being returned on the Third of May, N. S. the French Miniſters wrote, the next Day, the following Letter to Monſieur Petkum.

The Imperial Miniſters declare againſt a Partition.

Gertruydenbergh, May 4.

" WE could wiſh our Conferences had produced a Peace, but as we have no Or- " der to make any other Propoſition than thoſe we have already made, we " patiently expect that the Deputies will come hither, to declare themſelves in a " more open Manner than they have done hitherto, or to give us our Diſmiſſion; or, " at leaſt, that the Great Penſionary will ſend us an Order to be gone.

Letter from the French Miniſter to Mr. Petkum.

This Letter being communicated to the States General, and, by the Penſionary, to the Imperial and Britiſh Miniſters, it was thought fit to impart it to all the Miniſters of the Allies, who met accordingly the 9th of May, and unanimouſly reſolved, that Monſieur Petkum ſhould be deſired to write to the French Plenipotentiaries, That ſeeing they had nothing further to propoſe, and that the Allies had nothing more to ſay than what they had ſaid before, it was to no purpoſe to continue inſignificant Conferences; but that he ſhould avoid to ſpeak any thing of Diſmiſſion, or Order to depart. Monſieur Petkum having writ † a Letter to that Purpoſe, to the French Plenipotentiaries, the latter ſent him, the next Day, an Anſwer, importing, " They were extreamly " concerned to ſee, that notwithſtanding all the Advances the King their Maſter " had made for procuring Peace, the States and the Allies ſo reſolutely refuſed it; and " ſince thoſe Gentlemen had thought fit to break off the Negotiations, they were " preparing to depart." Upon this Declaration, 'twas generally believed, that the French Plenipotentiaries would have ſet out for Paris, for which purpoſe they had cauſed their Baggage to be packed up. But, it ſeems, this political Farce was not yet to be unravelled; for, having on the Fourth of May received another Courier from Verſailles, they gave Notice of it, ſome * Days after, to the Reſident of Holſtein, deſiring, at the ſame time, that the States would once more ſend their Deputies to Gertruydenbergh. Theſe new Conferences met with ſome Difficulties, Count Zinzendorf, the Imperial Miniſter, having inſiſted on his aſſiſting therein: But his Demand having been over-rul'd (by reaſon the other Miniſters of the Allies, particularly the Britiſh, might, with equal Juſtice, have claimed the ſame Privilege) Meſſieurs Buys and Vanderduſſen ſet out the 23d of May, N. S. for Gertruydenbergh. Being returned the 26th to the Hague, they made, the next Day, their Report to the Great Penſionary, in the Preſence of the Imperial and Britiſh Miniſters; importing, " That after many Proteſtations of the moſt Chriſtian King's ſincere Inclination to " Peace, the French Plenipotentiaries had told them, that his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty " had been prevailed upon to recede from the former Demand he had made of Na- " ples, Sicily, Sardinia, and the Places on the Coaſt of Tuſcany; and therefore was " willing that Naples ſhould remain to the Houſe of Auſtria; and that King Philip " ſhould content himſelf with Sicily, Sardinia, and the Places on the Coaſt of Tuſcany. " The Deputies added, that they thought fit thereupon, without granting any Part " of the Propoſals, to aſk the French Plenipotentiaries, What Security they had to

" propoſe to the Allies for the Evacuation of Spain and the Indies, by the Duke of " Anjou, ſuppoſing, that theſe Propoſals of a Partition, ſhould be accepted of? But " that they had declined to give them any ſatisfactory Anſwer: Whereupon the De- " puties had told them, that the Allies being daily more and more convinced, that " the French Court kept up the Negotiation, not out of a ſincere Deſire of Peace, " but only to encourage their Subjects to bear the more patiently the Burthen of " the War, they would be obliged to break off all further Conferences with them, " to remove all Occaſions of Jealouſy amongſt themſelves. And that the French " made great Proteſtations of the Sincerity of their Maſter; and ſaid, they " would ſend him another Expreſs, with an Account of theſe Conferences." The Dutch Deputies having made the like Report to the States of Holland and Weſt-Friezland, they took no final Reſolution thereupon, and thought fit to put it off to another Meeting, to give Time to the French Plenipotentiaries to receive new Inſtructions from their Court, which they did the 6th of June, and immediately writ a Letter to the Reſident of Holſtein, with one incloſed for the Great Penſionary; acquainting him, that having new Overtures to make, they deſired that Meſſieurs Buys and Vanderduſſen would, once again, return to Gertruydenbergh. Hereupon, the Imperial Plenipotentiary renewed his former Pretenſion of aſſiſting at the Conferences; and being again denied, for the Reaſons before-mention'd; and his Orders from Vienna, to inſiſt in his Demands, being poſitive, he ſent an Expreſs to Prince Eugene, for his Highneſs's Opinion, who adviſed him to follow the Example of the Britiſh Miniſters, whoſe Miſtreſs, tho' ſhe contributed more to the War than any other of the Allies, was yet ſo well ſatisfy'd of the Wiſdom and Integrity of the States General, as to truſt to them that Preliminary Negotiation of Peace.

Prince Eugene adviſes the Imperial Miniſter not to inſiſt on his Demands.

Meſſieurs Buys and Vanderduſſen being abſent from the Hague, when the French Courier, ſent to Monſieur Petkum, arrived there, they did not ſet out for Gertruydenbergh, till the 14th of June, N. S. On the 15th and 16th, they had ſeveral Conferences with the French Plenipotentiaries, who declared, " That the King, their Ma- " ſter, receded from the Demand made in the laſt Conference, of the Spaniſh Places " on the Coaſt of Tuſcany; and would content himſelf with Sicily and Sardinia for " King Philip: Adding, that his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty would uſe all poſſible " Means to perſuade his Grandſon to conſent to that Partition; that this required " ſome Time; but if that Prince would not acquieſce in this Propoſal, the moſt " Chriſtian King, tho' he could by no Means declare War againſt his Grandſon, " would, yet, furniſh a Sum of Money towards the Charge of a War to be continued " againſt him, till he had ſurrendred Spain and the Weſt-Indies to the Houſe of Au- " ſtria." This Declaration of the French Plenipotentiaries, being reported to the Grand Penſionary, in the Preſence of the Imperial and Britiſh Miniſters, occaſion'd Two or Three Conferences between them; and confirmed the general Opinion, that the French had no other Deſign, than either to amuſe the Allies, or to decoy them to a ſeparate Peace, excluſive of Spain, where, notwithſtanding their Promiſes to the contrary, they might, under-hand, aſſiſt King Philip, and carry on the War with ſuch viſible Advantages, as might, in the End, tire out, if not exhauſt the principal Members of the Grand Alliance. The Imperial Miniſter was ſtill of Opinion, that ſince the French Plenipotentiaries did not propoſe any Equivalent or Expedient for the Thirty Seventh Article of the Preliminaries, which was the main Intention of the preſent Negotiation, they ought to be immediately diſmiſſed; and therefore moved, that the Reſident of Holſtein, who, on the 21ſt of June, N. S. went to Gertruydenbergh, as he pretended, for ſome private Concerns, ſhould be deſired to ſignify to the ſaid Plenipotentiaries, that the Allies would not conſent to any further Conferences: But it was thought more adviſeable to ſend Mr. Petkum to make the following Declaration on the Part of the Allies, viz. " 1. That the laſt Propoſal " made by the French King, Of contributing a Sum of Money towards the Charges " of the War, to oblige the Duke of Anjou to quit the Monarchy of Spain, and con- " tent himſelf with Sardinia and Sicily, if he would not do it voluntarily, was not " acceptable to the Allies upon ſeveral Accounts; and namely, becauſe this would " produce but a Separate, and not a General Peace, which was the End the Allies " propoſed to themſelves. 2. That the Allies inſiſted to have Spain and the Indies " delivered up, according to the Tenor of the Preliminaries. And, 3. That this " Foundation being laid and agreed upon, the Allies would conſent to continue the " Conferences on other Articles.

New Conferences, June 15, 16. N. S.

The French Miniſters being ſomewhat dilatory in returning an Anſwer to this Home Declaration; Meſſieurs Buys and Vanderduſſen were directed to ſend an Expreſs to Gertruydenbergh. That Expreſs return'd to the Hague the 10th of July, N. S. at Eleven a-Clock in the Forenoon, with an Anſwer; importing, That by virtue of their Powers and Inſtructions, they were always in a Condition to explain the Sentiments of the King their Maſter ; and therefore deſired, that the Deputies would come once more to Gertruydenbergh : Which being communicated to Count de Zinzendorf, and the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, thoſe Miniſters met at the Great Penſionary's ; where, after a long Debate, it was reſolved to ſend back the Dutch Deputies to Gertruydenbergh, with this Inſtruction ; That they ſhould inſiſt upon a plain and poſitive Anſwer to the Articles deliver'd to the Plenipotentiaries by Monſieur Petkum. Meſſieurs Buys and Vanderduſſen ſet out the * next Day, arrived there the 12th of July, and the 13th had a Conference with the French Plenipotentiaries, that laſted about Four Hours, tho' to as little Purpoſe as the former : For the Dutch Deputies inſiſting on the Declaration made on the Part of the Allies, by the Reſident of Holſtein ; the French ſaid, they had no further Inſtructions ; but would ſend another Expreſs to their Maſter, for a final Anſwer, which they would communicate upon the Return of the Courier ; for whoſe Journey, Fifteen Days were allow'd by the Dutch Deputies. The latter being by this Time convinc'd of the Inſincerity of the French, Monſieur Vanderduſſen could not forbear making ſome warm Expoſtulations about it ; to which the Abbot de Polignac reply'd, in very high Terms ; not without reproaching the Dutch with Ingratitude towards the Crown of France, which had been their main Support upon their Defection from Spain : Whereupon the Conference, which prov'd to be the laſt, broke off unkindly. The French Miniſters, finding that their Legerdemain was diſcover'd, had not the Aſſurance to demand another Interview ; but, July the 20th, N. S. wrote a Letter to the Great Penſionary ; wherein they laid before him the Propoſals newly ſtarted, unjuſt, and impoſſible to be executed, which the Deputies made in the laſt Conference ; and complain'd of the ill Treatment they pretended they had received, in Contempt of their Character ; of the injurious, falſe, and ſcandalous Libels, which had been ſuffer'd to be printed and diſpers'd, during their Stay at Gertruydenbergh, to inflame the Minds of thoſe they were endeavouring to reconcile ; and of all the Letters, which they either received or writ, having been open'd, in Breach of the publick Faith. This Letter being communicated to the States-General, their High-Mightineſſes came to a * Reſolution, importing, " That the Contents of it con-

" cern'd not only their State, but likewiſe all the Allies ; and therefore they " thought it their Duty to communicate it to their Miniſters reſiding at the Hague,
" that every Thing might be done in Concert with them, as it had been hither-
" to. That the French Plenipotentiaries rejecting, by their Anſwer, the Propoſi-
" tions made to them, declaring that it was uſeleſs to hold any more Conferences
" upon theſe Propoſitions, and thereby breaking off the Negotiations on that Sub" ject ; nothing more remained to be done on the Part of the High Allies, than to " acquieſce therewith, and to enter into no more Conferences, as long as the Ene" my ſhould continue in ſuch Sentiments. Moreover, the Sieurs Buys and Van-
" derduſſen were, by this Reſolution, required to ſignify the ſame by a Letter to " the French Plenipotentiaries, without entring into a Debate upon the Contents
" of their Letter ; notwithſtanding it might be eaſily confuted, as well with re-
" ſpect to Things, as Words." Accordingly, Meſſieurs Buys and Vanderduſſen returned a ſhort Anſwer to the French Miniſters, importing, " That ſince their
" Court would not give a ſufficient Security for the delivering up of Spain, it " was to no Purpoſe to continue the Conferences :" Whereupon the French Plenipotentiaries † ſet out from Gertruydenbergh, to return home. It was obſerv'd, that about this Time, the French began to talk of Peace with Indifference ; either, as ſome conjectured, in Hopes of a Diverſion in the North, or, which is more probable, from an Expectation, that the Ferment raiſed in England, by the late Tryal of Dr. Sacheverel, would be ſo induſtriouſly fomented and improv'd by their Friends, as to produce a favourable Turn : And, indeed, it was ſoon manifeſt, that by this Time, the Court of France had been tampering with thoſe buſy Heads, who took upon them to overturn the Britiſh Miniſtry, and wholly to change the Face of Affairs in Europe. On the other hand, the States-General were ſo exaſperated by the late Shuffling of the Court of France, that, on the 27th of July, N. S. they came to another vigorous Reſolution, in Confutation of the Letter written by Meſſieurs d' Huxelles and Polignac to the Great Penſionary, and in particular, to ſhew, That the Enemy had departed from the Foundation, on which the Negotiation had begun ; and ſtudied Pretences to evade the Execution of the Capital Point, viz. the Reſtitution of Spain and the Indies : And, in ſhort, that France had no other View, than to ſow and create Jealouſy and Diſunion among the Allies. As to the Complaint of the Plenipotentiaries, relating to their Perſons, namely, the pretended Contempt of their Character, the Publication of abuſive Libels, the opening of their Letters, the hindring the making any Viſits to them, and their Lodging, as if they had been in a kind of Priſon ; their High Mightineſſes obſerved, and aſſerted, " That, purſuant to the Agreement, the ſaid Plenipotentiaries
" came without any Character, to treat incognito ; for which Reaſon, no Ceremo-

" nial was obſerved on either ſide : But that all manner of Conſideration was had " for their Birth, Quality, and Merit. That Libels were ſeverely forbidden in " Holland, and the Authors and Printers liable to Puniſhment. That none of the " many Couriers the French Plenipotentiaries had receiv'd and diſpatch'd, had " been ſtopt ; nor were any of the Letters, they ſent by the ordinary Poſt, inter- " cepted. That no Perſon was ever hinder'd from going to them ; nor was any " Order given, to take notice who viſited them : But as in all Frontier Towns, 'tis " the Cuſtom that none enter, unleſs they declare who they are, both at the Gate, " and to the Governor ; it ought not to be thought ſtrange, nor ought Exceptions " to be taken, if this Cuſtom were not diſcontinued during the Stay of the French " Miniſters at Gertruydenbergh. And, in the laſt Place ; that they could not call " a kind of Priſon, the Town they pitch'd upon for their Reſidence, and which " they preferr'd to Antwerp, a large and noble City." Not many Days after, the Lord Viſcount Townſhend * deliver'd to the States-General a Memorial, wherein he acquainted them, That the Queen entirely approved both their Reſolution, in Anſwer to the Letter of the French Plenipotentiaries, and all the Steps they had taken during the late Negotiations: Which authentick Approbation, however obtain'd from the Queen, was extreamly grateful to their High Mightineſſes ; as were alſo the freſh Aſſurances his Lordſhip gave them, of her Majeſty's firm Reſolution to proſecute the War with all poſſible Vigor, till the Enemy were brought to accept ſuch Terms of Peace, as might ſecure the Tranquillity of the Chriſtian World : But notwithſtanding this publick Declaration, it ſoon appear'd, that the Queen was of another Mind.

Campaign in Flanders.

By this Time, the Confederate Armies, under the Prince of Savoy, and the Duke of Marlborough, had made a conſiderable Progreſs in Flanders. The Prince of Wirtemberg, and Lieutenant-General Cadogan, having * enter'd the French Lines without Oppoſition, the whole Confederate Army incamp'd, the ſame Night, in the Plain of Lens ; and the Siege of Douay being reſolved upon, that Place was inveſted Two † Days after. The Trenches were open'd the 5th of May, N. S. and the Attacks carried on with ſo good Succeſs, that notwithſtanding either the vigorous Defence of a very numerous Gariſon, or the Mareſchal de Villars marching at the Head of a great Army into the Plain of Lens, with a faint Shew to relieve the Place, the Beſieged thought fit to beat a ‖ Parley, and demand an honourable Capitulation ; which was granted, and agreed on the 27th of June. During this Siege, Prince Eugene form'd the Deſign of ſurprizing Ypres, which was not attended with Succeſs.

The Confederate Generals having allow'd their Troops ſome Days Refreſhment, in their reſpective Camps near Douay, caus'd the Trenches to be level'd, and put that important Place in a Poſture of Defence ; the Two Armies march'd, on the 10th of July, N. S. to Vitry ; and from thence, on the 12th, to Villers Brulin : Upon which Motion, the French Army retired within their new Lines from Arras, along the Crinchen, towards Miramont. The Enemy having, by this Situation, made it impracticable for the Allies, either to attack them, or beſiege Arras ; the Confederate Generals turn'd their victorious Arms againſt Bethune, which was inveſted the 15th of July, N. S. and ſurrender'd on the 29th of the next Month. About this Time, a Medal was diſperſed in the Netherlands, by the Chevalier de St. George's Friends, with that Prince's Head on the Right Side, and theſe Words, CUJUS EST ; and on the Reverſe, the Kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland, with this Motto, REDDITE. This Medal was, undoubtedly, ſtruck at this Juncture, upon the fond Hopes given by the Jacobites in England, to their Correſpondents in France, that the Britiſh Court and Nation were ready to invite the Pretender : To which, the Diſtractions occaſion'd by Dr. Sacheverel's late Sermon and Tryal, and the Countenance given by the New Miniſtry to the Doctrine of Divine, Hereditary, and Indefeaſible Right, and of Abſolute Paſſive Obedience, (which are diametrically oppoſite both to the late Revolution, and to the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover) gave an Air of Probability. But whatever Ground there was for ſuch an Expectation, Things were not yet ripe enough for the Pretender's Friends to throw off the Maſk.

The French Army ſtill declining an Engagement, Prince Eugene, and the Duke of Marlborough, reſolv'd to improve the remaining Part of the fair Seaſon, by laying Siege to Aire and St. Venant, at the ſame Time: Both which Places were inveſted on the 6th of September, N. S. and both ſurrendred on honourable Terms; viz. St. Venant on the 30th of September, and Aire on the 9th of November. Six Days after, the Confederate Armies broke up, and march'd into Winter-Quarters. Campaign on the Rhine inconſiderable.

The Campaign on the Rhine, afforded nothing material this Year: For the French, who in the Winter had threatned the Empire with a new Invaſion, were obliged to weaken their Forces on that Side, to cover their own Frontiers, and ſtrengthen their Armies in the Netherlands; and the Germans, through the uſual Ill-Management of their Affairs, were not in a Condition to improve that fair Opportunity of invading France; ſo that the Armies on both Sides, remain'd unactive. We may only take Notice, that the Elector of Brunſwick did wiſely lay down the Command of the Army of the Empire, his Electoral Highneſs being reſolv'd not to venture any more his Reputation on the Promiſes of ſuch as had ſo groſly and ſo often deceiv'd him, the preceding Campaigns: And that upon this Occaſion, he wrote a Letter to the Emperor, importing, in Subſtance, "That his Electoral High-"neſs had heartily wiſh'd, that the Affairs of the Empire had been put into ſuch "a Condition, that he might have had Cauſe to promiſe himſelf ſome Honour in "the Command of the Imperial Army, and to procure ſome Advantage to the "Common Cauſe, for which he would willingly, at any Time, venture his Perſon; "but that he had ſufficient Reaſons to believe, that the Duke of Wirtembergh would "not be brought to acknowledge, that he had Intrench'd on the Prerogatives of his "Electoral Highneſs, as Generaliſſimo of the Empire, and to give him due Satisfa-"ction for the ſame, becauſe the Miniſter of that Duke, and thoſe of the Circle of "Suabia, had declar'd in the Diet of Ratiſbon, that they were ſo far from acknow-"ledging the Pretenſions of his Electoral Highneſs, that they were reſolv'd to main-"tain what they had done." The Elector added, "That the Reinforcement, "of Eleven Thouſand Men, promis'd by his Imperial Majeſty, muſt be "look'd upon as uncertain, at leaſt as to the Time of their coming into "the Field; it being very well known, that the Regiments appointed for "that Service, were not compleat, and it being hardly poſſible to recruit "them Time enough, to enable them to take the Field, and to act in Con-"cert with the Confederate Forces in the Netherlands: That the Military Cheſt "of the Empire would be this Year leſs provided with Money, than in the pre-"ceding Campaign; becauſe it was plain, from the Proceedings of the Diet of "Ratiſbon, that few, if any States, were willing freely to contribute towards it; "and that it was neither adviſeable, nor even practicable, to compel by Military "Execution, the ſeveral Potent Princes, who, upon Pretence that they had Troops "in the Service of the Allies, and other groundleſs Excuſes, refus'd to ſend their "Quotas of Men to the Upper-Rhine; and to furniſh their reſpective Contingencies "of Money, without which it was impoſſible to carry on the Operations of War. "His Electoral Highneſs concluded from theſe, and ſome other Particulars, that "their Deficiency of Troops and Money; would be as great, and greater, than in "the former Campaigns, and the Contradictions in the Command, as diſagreeable "and prejudicial as ever: And therefore he hop'd, that his Imperial Majeſty having "duly weigh'd the ſame, would not inſiſt that he ſhould again take upon him a "Command, from which he could not promiſe himſelf any Honour, nor the Pub-"lick expect any Advantage." This Letter having been examin'd in the Aulick Council, the Great Mareſchal of the Court, the Vice-Chancellor of the Empire, and Count Wratiſlaw, had a Conference with the Envoy of Hanover, wherein they us'd many Arguments to perſuade him, "That there was ſtill Reaſon to hope, that "the Imperial Army would be put into a better Condition; That the Emperor "had written to the Duke of Wirtembergh, and the Circle of Suabia, to in-"duce them to give Satisfaction to the Elector; that the Imperial Regiments "deſign'd for the Rhine, were partly on their March; that no Time would be "loſt to recruit them, and that the Diet of the Empire having actually under "Conſideration, how to ſupply the Military Cheſt, it was hop'd they would vote a "ſufficient Sum; upon which Conſideration, they deſired the Envoy to uſe his good "Offices with his Maſter, that he would be pleas'd to command again the Imperial "Army on the Rhine: Adding, That as this would be a ſingular Service to the "Common Cauſe, ſo would it advance his Electoral Highneſs's Intereſt in the Em-"pire." The Envoy anſwer'd, That theſe being the ſame Reaſons that had already been offer'd to the Elector, and his Inſtructions being poſitive, he could not take upon him to write any further to his Electoral Highneſs on that Point: Whereupon Count Gronsfelt took upon him the Command of the Army of the Empire, as Impe-perial General; and about the beginning of May, poſted himſelf with ſome Troops, in the Lines of Etlingen, in order to obſerve the French; who about that Time paſs'd the Rhine near Fort-Kehl, to conſume the Forage on that Side. It was the Month of July, before the Troops of the Circles were join'd by the Imperial Reinforcements, upon which the Imperial Army paſs'd the Rhine, and at their Approach, the Enemy, who were deſtroying the Country about Landau, retired within their Lines at Croon-Weiſſenburgh.

Campaign on the Side of Piedmont, likewiſe inconſiderable.

Nor was the Campaign on the Side of Piedmont, more conſiderable, than on the Rhine. The March of the Confederate Troops met with ſuch Difficulties and Delays, that the Army was not form'd 'till about the middle of July; and the Duke of Savoy, beſides his former Pretences, for not putting himſelf at the Head of the Army, had now an indiſpenſible Excuſe, being, at this very Juncture, indiſpos'd, as well as the Prince of Piedmont, his eldeſt Son, and his Brother, the Duke of Aoſta. Hereupon Count de Thaun, Velt-Mareſchal of the Imperial Forces, took upon him the Command of the Confederate Army, the Piedmonteze Generals being directed to comply in every Thing with his Orders. But notwithſtanding the Preparations made to paſs the Alps, and penetrate into Dauphiné, the Zeal and Capacity of the General, and the Bravery of the Troops, they found it impoſſible to force their way though the Mountains; ſo that after having diſlodg'd the French from Arches, and ſome other Poſts at the Entrance of the Valley of Barcelonette, they gave over that Deſign, and the Army march'd to Suza, where they continu'd as long as the Seaſon did permit, to hinder the Duke of Berwick, who commanded the Enemy's Forces, from making any Detachments for Spain. The French were ſo apprehenſive of an Invaſion on the Side of Dauphiné, that beſides the Intrenchments they caſt up in the Mountains, with prodigious Labour and Expence, they were oblig'd to keep there Seventy Two Battalions, and a good Number of Horſe.

Campaign in Spain.

The moſt memorable Actions and Events, happen'd this Year in Spain; where the Inconſtancy of the Fortune of War, and Inſtability of human Proſperity, appear'd in a moſt ſurprizing Manner; both Parties being Conquerors, and conquer'd, by Turns. The Affairs of King Charles had but a diſmal Aſpect at the opening of the Campaign; for the Arrival of the Reinforcements he expected from Italy being retarded, by the Difficulties that always attend great Imbarkations, his Competitor was in a Condition to take the Field before him. The Marquis de Villadarias aſſembled the Spaniſh Army near Lerida; and King Philip having put himſelf at the Head of his Forces about the middle of May, paſs'd the Segra the 14th of that Month; advanc'd the 15th to Balaguer, and began to raiſe Batteries againſt that Place; but upon Advice of the approach of Count Staremberg, that Prince thought fit to repaſs the Segra, and to retire towards Lerida, to expect the Conjunction of the Spaniſh and Walloon Troops, which had been detach'd from the Netherlands; and ſome other Forces from Valencia, and other Places. In the mean Time, Lieutenant-General Stanhope being arriv'd at Barcelona, with a great Sum of Money, and a Thouſand Men for Recruits from Italy, join'd the Army then encamp'd near Agramunt, on the 29th of May, N. S. and King Charles having reſolv'd to meet his Competitor in the Field, arriv'd at the Camp near Balaguer, the 7th of June. The next Day his Catholick Majeſty went to an Eminence, where he had a full View of the Troops, and was ſaluted with a Triple Diſcharge of the Artillery and Muſkets, and then deſcending into the Plain, he took a general Review of the whole Army; as he did in Particular of the Spaniards the 9th, of the Portugueze and Dutch the 10th, and of the Engliſh the 11th. On the other Hand, King Philip having made himſelf Maſter of the Caſtle of Eſtadilla, and receiv'd the Reinforcements before-mention'd, he repaſs'd the Segra the 10th: Upon Advice whereof, King Charles expecting to be attack'd, ſent his heavy Baggage to Balaguer. At the ſame Time, it being conſider'd, that the Enemy were very much ſuperior, both in Horſe and Foot, their Army conſiſting of Forty Battalions, and Sixty Squadrons, whereas King Charles had only Thirty Battalions, and Forty Three Squadrons; it was thought fit to fortify the Confederate Camp, by caſting up Intrenchments in the Places moſt expos'd, and planting Cannon on the Eminences, to ſecure the Plain. On the 12th, King Philip advanc'd with his whole Army, with a ſeeming Reſolution to attack his Competitor; but having obſerv'd his Diſpoſition, he retir'd, and encamp'd at Belcayre, after his Army had ſtood Two Hours in Battalia, within half a League of the Allies. However, the latter lay on their Arms the following Night, and had Advice, that General Nebot, with Two Regiments of Miquelets, and ſome other Regular Forces, paſſed the Ebro; and attacking the little Town of Mora, carried it, after ſome Reſiſtance, making the Gariſon of Two hundred Men, and Seventeen Officers, Priſoners of War. The 13th, King Philip's Army advanced again in Order of Battel, within half Cannon-ſhot of the Confederate Camp, inſomuch, that about Three hundred of their Men in the Right Wing were killed and wounded, by the Cannon King Charles had placed on his Left; and which were anſwered by the Enemy's Batteries: But after ſome Conſultations with his Generals, King Philip thought it too dangerous to attack his Antagoniſt in ſo advantageous a Poſt; and, facing about, went back again to Belcayre, from whence he marched the next Day, and encamped between Ibras and Barbens. Thereupon, King Charles cauſed a Bridge to be laid on the Segra, near Balaguer, paſſed that River on the ſame * Day; marched to Noguera, and encamped between Portella and Algueira, in the Neighbourhood of Corbius. On the 18th, upon Advice that the Enemy had drawn out of Lerida ſome Pontoons, and Four Pieces of Cannon, deſigning to make a Detachment to paſs the Segra, and encamp between the Noguera and Balaguer, to cut off the Confederates Communication with that Town, which both ſecured his Retreat, and through which Proviſions muſt neceſſarily be brought to their Army, King Charles ſent a Detachment of Eight Companies of Grenadiers, and Eight Squadrons of Horſe, to obſerve the Enemy's Motions, and oppoſe their Deſigns. The Day before, King Charles received Advice, that the Enemy, having attempted to get into the Caſtle of Calaf, were repulſed with Loſs; but on the 23d, returning before the Place with Four Pieces of Cannon, they made themſelves Maſters of it. This ſmall Conqueſt was, however, of great Advantage to King Philip; for it gave an Opportunity to his Troops to raiſe Contributions in Catalonia, and incommoded King Charles's Communication with Barcelona; ſo that the Confederates finding it difficult to ſubſiſt at Portella, marched back to their former Camp near Balaguer, expecting the Reinforcements lately landed at Barcelona, from Italy, and other Troops from the Lampourdan; upon the Arrival of which, it was reſolved to march in Queſt of the Enemy.

In the mean time to give the Enemy's Forces in Rouſſillon a Diverſion, and hinder them from joining King Philip, the Confederate Generals reſolved to put in Execution the Deſign of a Deſcent upon the Coaſt of Languedoc, which the Duke of Marlborough had, ſome time before, concerted with Major-General Seiſſan, a Native of that Province, who, upon a Diſguſt, had left the French Service during the Siege of Tournay. Accordingly, on the 20th of July, the Confederate Fleet, under the Command of Sir John Norris, and Admiral Somelſdyke, ſailed from Barcelona; came on the 24th before the Port of Cette, and the ſame Evening landed at the Old Mole Seven hundred Men, and ſome Marines, without Oppoſition. The next Day, they made themſelves Maſters of the Town of Cette, and of the Fort on the Mole; and having left a ſufficient Gariſon for ſecuring the ſame, Major-General Seiſſan marched on with the reſt of his Troops to Agde, which ſurrender'd that very Night. This Succeſs having, by this Time, given the Alarm to the whole Country; the Duke of Roquelaure, Governor of Languedoc, put himſelf immediately at the Head of Four hundred Dragoons, and Two thouſand Militia; made himſelf Maſter of the Bridge of Agde, which was, on his Approach, too eaſily abandon'd by One hundred and fifty Men, that were left to maintain that important Poſt: And the Duke of Noailles having, on the other hand, marched with all Speed to his Aſſiſtance, with Two thouſand Horſe or Dragoons, having each a Foot Soldier behind him, the Admirals and General reſolved to give over the Enterprize, and reimbark the Land-Forces. However, that Attempt had ſo far the deſired Effect, as it both hinder'd the Duke of Noailles from joining King Philip; and gave the Confederate Troops in the Neighbourhood of Gironne, an Opportunity of reinforcing King Charles, which made way for the Two Victories his Catholick Majeſty obtain'd ſoon after. The Account of the Firſt, brought to Whitehall (Aug. 26. O. S.) by Colonel Crofts, who was ſent Expreſs by Lieutenant-General Stanhope, was as follows.

Deſign of a Deſcent on the Coaſt of Languedoc.

Tho' unſucceſsful, yet has a good Effect.

" On the 25th of July, his Catholick Majeſty having received Advice, that the " Baron de Wetzel, a Lieutenant-General in the Service of his Imperial Majeſty, was " advanced as far as Camaraſi, Three Leagues diſtant from Balaguer, with Reinforce- " ments drawn from the Lampourdan, and the Troops tranſported from Italy, ſent " him Orders to purſue his March the next Morning, and to join the Army. On " the 26th, ſome of our Parties, that were on the Patrole, ſent us Intelligence, " as ſoon as it was light, that they obſerv'd a great Fire in the Enemy's Camp; and " at Sun-riſing we were inform'd, that they were marching in Three Columns to- " wards Lerida; whereupon, ſeveral Parties of Huſſars, and other Detachments, " were ſent out to obſerve the Enemy, and diſturb their March. The ſame Morn- " ing, our Army decamp'd by the Dawn of the Day, paſs'd the River Scio, and took " Poſt in the new Camp that was mark'd out before Balaguer, near the Bridge of " that City. General Wetzel joined the Army before Noon, and all the Detach- " ments returned to the Camp: After which, his Catholick Majeſty, being adviſed " by his Parties, and by Priſoners, Deſerters, and Spies, that the Enemy had pitched " their Tents in the neighbouring Gardens of Lerida, immediately held a Council " of War; and after all the Generals of the Allies had given their Opinion, he or- " der'd the whole Army to ſtrike their Tents at Sun-ſet, and be in a Readineſs to " march. Accordingly, the Army decamped that Evening, paſs'd over the Bridge of

" of Balaguer, and took the Rout towards Alfaras, which is ſituated on the other " ſide of the Noguera, Five Leagues diſtant from Balaguer. For the Execution of " the projected Deſign, Lieutenant-General Stanhope was commanded to advance " with the utmoſt Expedition; having Orders to lay a Bridge over the Noguera, to " ſecure the Paſſes near Alfaras, and prevent the March of the Enemy. For this Service, " he had under his Command Major-General Pepper, with Four Regiments of Dragoons, " belonging to the Left Wing, Two of which were Engliſh, and Two Dutch, viz. One " Regiment of Guards, and thoſe of Pepper, Matha, and Schlippenbach; and alſo Count d' " Eck, Major-General of the Infantry in the Service of the Emperor, with Twenty " Companies of Grenadiers, Six Pieces of Cannon, and the neceſſary Pontoons. This " Diſpoſition being made for our March, thoſe Forces were immediately followed by " the whole Army. The Foot marched in Front, filing off from the Left, till both " Lines had paſſed the River, who were followed by the Infantry on the Right, the " Remainder of the Horſe of the Left moving after the Foot of the ſame Wing. " The Artillery marched after the Horſe of the Left; and the Cavalry of the Right " Wing brought up the Rear. The whole Army was obliged to paſs the River over " the Stone Bridge of Balaguer, the Segra not being fordable, and the Pontoons being " ſent before; but theſe Difficulties were ſurmounted by the Diligence of the Offi- " cers, and the Ardor of the Troops; for, before Eight in the Morning, of the 27th, " the whole Army had paſſed over that ſingle Bridge. As we were to take " the Rout through the Sarſana, we were obliged to march over another ſingle " Bridge, which was executed in the ſame Order, and with equal Expedition. On " the other ſide of that Bridge, we halted Two Hours on the Banks of the River, as " well to refreſh the Troops, as to give the Horſe Time to come up, that they " might march in the Front: The Cavalry having paſſed the Sarſana, advanced in " Two Columns towards Alfaras, being followed by the Infantry, in Two other Co- " lumns. Near Allegre, within a League of Alfaras, we received Advice from Ge- " neral Stanhope, that he had not only paſſed the Noguera, with the Detachment un- " der his Command, and poſſeſſed himſelf of the moſt advantageous Station near " Alfaras; but that he had alſo laid a Bridge over the River. At the ſame time he " adviſed, that the Waters were ſo low, that the Cavalry and Artillery might paſs " through the River it ſelf; adding, that if it ſhould be thought neceſſary, it was " fordable even by the Infantry. General Stanhope alſo acquainted us, that he had " then no Intelligence of the Enemy; but within half an Hour, he diſpatched an " Officer to inform us, that his advanced Guards had diſcovered Nineteen of the " Enemy's Squadrons, and ſome Infantry, marching towards Almenara, and a Cloud of " Duſt riſing behind them; upon which he had poſſeſs'd himſelf of the Riſing Ground " on that Side; and, at the ſame time, the Front of our Cavalry had paſſed the " Noguera. While our Army was advancing, the Enemy began to form themſelves " near Almenara, being Two Brigades of Foot, beſides the Nineteen Squadrons. " According to the Account given by the Priſoners, thoſe Troops were detached " the Night before, to take Poſſeſſion of thoſe Paſſes, and to prevent our March; " but that Deſign being fruſtrated by the Diligence of General Stanhope, they re- " ſolved to maintain themſelves in the Poſts they had taken near Almenara, till " their whole Army came up; which was marching in Two Columns, to ſuſtain " them. They advanced with the greateſt Diligence; but our Forces having in- " tirely paſſed the Noguera, before Six in the Evening, had the Advantage to pre- " vent the Enemy: For altho' they had form'd the whole Body of their Horſe in " Two Lines, and were ſupported by Eight or Ten Battalions, yet the reſt of their " Infantry was ſtill on the March, in Two Lines. Notwithſtanding our Situation " was ſuch, that we could not extend our Forces, but were obliged to form the " Two Wings of our Cavalry one behind another, and to divide each into Two " Lines; ſo that the whole conſiſted of Four, and the Left Wing made the advan- " ced Guard, as being firſt come up; and that we could only draw up our Infan- " try in Four Lines, behind each other; yet his Catholick Majeſty took a Reſolu- " tion to attack the Enemy immediately; both becauſe it being then Seven in " the Evening, he ſuppoſed they would take the Advantage of the Night to " remove to a ſtronger Camp, or retire; and becauſe he obſerv'd that the " Enemy were diſcouraged on account of their Situation; whereupon his " Majeſty commanded a Battery of Fourteen Pieces of Cannon, to be erect- " ed on an Eminence, which commanded that where the Enemy were poſted. " The Majors-General Frankenbergh and Pepper, began the Attack with ſuch Reſo- " lution and Bravery, that the whole Cavalry of the Enemy was routed, even be- " fore the Aſſailants could be join'd by our Right Wing: Though they puſh'd on " with the higheſt Warmth, and expreſs'd an ardent Deſire to join in the Battel; " only a few Regiments of it, commanded by the Count d' Atalaya, were ſo fortu-

" nate, as to ſhare in the Glory of this Action. The firſt Line of the Enemy " made very little Reſiſtance, excepting ſome particular Regiments, which be- " hav'd themſelves with great Bravery. Our Infantry came on with great In- " trepidity; but though they purſu'd the Enemy Two Hours in the Night, 'till " it was ſo Dark, that our Troops could not diſtinguiſh the Faces of each other, " it was impoſſible to come up with them. Although this Action can properly " be call'd but an Engagement of the Horſe, yet it was ſo furious, that not only " the Enemy's whole Cavalry was overthrown, and routed, with the utmoſt Con- " fuſion, but all their Infantry fled with the ſame Precipitation. The Foot re- " tir'd intermingled with their Horſe, obſerving no Order of Retreat, but many " throwing down their Arms in their Flight; the Army it ſelf leaving behind " them their Cannon, and loads of Ammunition, and abandoning their Baggage " and Equipage to the Peaſants. The Advantage obtain'd, ſeems to be of the " ſame Conſequence as an entire Victory, which was prevented only by the Dark- " neſs of the Night. On our Side, about Four Hundred Men were kill'd and " wounded; of whom the Regiment of Jeorger loſt Fifteen; the Engliſh Regiments " of Harvey, Rochfort, Pepper, and Naſſau, about Two Hundred; the Dutch Regi- " ments of Mattha, and Schlippenback, each Fifteen; the Regiments of Ormiborn " Thirty Nine; that of Spee, and Two other Regiments of Palatines, One Hundred. " The Lord Rochfort, and the Count de Naſſau, are amongſt the Slain, who being " Officers of great Merit and Diſtinction, their Loſs is univerſally lamented in the " Army. On the Enemy's Side, the Duke de Sarna, a Lieutenant-General, was " found among the Slain; what other conſiderable Officers were kill'd, we have " not yet an Account. We have taken Priſoners Lieutenant-General Verboon, Don " Vito Fariſio, Colonel of the Life-Guards; one Lieutenant-Colonel, Four Captains, " Fifteen Lieutenants and Cornets, and Three Hundred private Men. The Num- " ber of the Priſoners had been greater, if our Men, in the Heat of the Action, " could have charg'd themſelves with them. The Number of their kill'd and " wounded, cannot be leſs than Fifteen Hundred. We have alſo taken ſeveral " Cannon, Standards, and Kettle Drums, with a great Part of their Baggage, " among which is ſome of the Duke of Anjou's Plate. The Regiments on " our Side, that had the greateſt Share in this Action, were the Engliſh Regiments " above-mention'd; Three Regiments of Palatines, Three Dutch, one of Portugueze, " and Three Squadrons of the Regiment of Jeorger: All which charg'd and fought " with great Bravery and Emulation of each other. His Catholick Majeſty, by " his Preſence, animated the Troops during the Heat of the Action, and all the " Generals, in their reſpective Poſts, obey'd his Orders with great Addreſs and " Gallantry." We may here obſerve, That though General Stanhope, who, un- doubtedly, wrote the foregoing Account, was ſo modeſt, as ſcarce to mention himſelf, yet 'tis certain, that as the Engagement at Almenara was the Reſult of his Diligence and Advice, ſo the Succeſs of it was principally owing to his Con- duct, Reſolution, and Perſonal Courage: Which King Charles did not fail thankfully to acknowledge.

The Spaniſh Army having, after their Rout, retir'd under the Cannon of Lerida, King Charles bent his March towards the Cinca, to hinder King Philip's Retreat, and force him to a Second Fight; and, in his March, made himſelf Maſter of Balbaſtro, Hueſca, and ſome other Places in Arragon. Hereupon King Philip decamp'd from Lerida, with Deſign to retire into Caſtile, by the way of Saragoſſa; and having, on the 18th of Auguſt, paſs'd the Ebro, by the Bridge of Villa-Franca, poſted his Ar- my in an advantageous Place, at a Quarter of a League Diſtance from Saragoſſa. King Charles, who purſued him cloſe, advanc'd the ſame Day (Auguſt the 18th) to Oſera, from whence the Generals Stanhope, Carpenter, and Frankenberg, were detach'd, with Two Thouſand Horſe, to diſcover the Situation of the Enemy. Up- on their Report, the next Day, his Catholick Majeſty reſolv'd to paſs the Ebro, to fight the Enemy; which was put in Execution the 20th, with ſo good Succeſs, that their Army was entirely defeated. The Relation of this Victory brought to the * Queen of Great Britain, by Colonel Thomas Harriſon, Adjutant-General of her Ma- jeſty's Forces in Spain, was as follows.

* Sept. 19. O. S.

" On the 19th Day of Auguſt, N. S. at Six of the Clock in the Evening, his " Catholick Majeſty drew up his Army in Order of Battel, within Cannon Shot of " the Enemy. Mareſchal Staremberg, accompanied by the reſt of the Generals, " went to obſerve their Diſpoſition, and found them poſted with the Ebro on their " Left, the Town of Saragoſſa in their Rear, and the Right Wing of their Horſe " drawn up on the Brow of a ſteep Hill, with a Battery of Eight Pieces of Can- " non in their Front. The Day being far ſpent, and a great Part of our Foot not " come up, it was thought fit to defer the Attack 'till next Day. On the 20th, at Battel of Sa- ragoſſa.

A. D. 1710.

" break of Day, both Armies play'd their Cannon; and General Stanhope, who " commanded our Left Wing, diſcover'd that the Enemy had march'd moſt of " their Horſe from their Left Wing to their Right; upon which he obtain'd of " Mareſchal Staremberg, Four Battalions of Foot, which he plac'd at the Left of " our Horſe; and Six Squadrons of Portugueze Horſe, which were brought from our " Right. He drew up beyond the Four Battalions, in order to ſtretch our Left " Wing as far as poſſible, towards the Extent of their Right: It is to be obſerv'd, " that the Enemy lay in an oblique Line from the Ebro upon the Hill; ſo that " their Troops on the Hill, lay much nearer to us, than thoſe on the Deſcent from " it, and on the Plain. At Twelve a Clock at Noon, our Signal of Battel was " made, and our whole Army being drawn up in Two Lines, march'd out at once, " to attack the Enemy in full Front, except the Four Battalions which General " Stanhope had interlin'd with the Horſe, whom he order'd to advance, and take " Poſt on the Brow of the Hill, by which Means he gain'd Time for his Wing of " Horſe to form, after they were got up. Our Left Wing, from their Situation, " coming firſt to the Enemy, began the Battel, which increas'd towards the Center, " and ſo continued to the Right, 'till the whole were engaged; but notwithſtand- " ing a Diſpoſition ſo properly made, and the Goodneſs of our Troops, the Enemy, " with their ſuperior Numbers, and Advantage of Ground, ſeem'd, at firſt, to have " the better of the Day, which probably they would have maintain'd, if all our " Generals, commanding on the Left, had not ſeaſonably led on freſh Troops, to " ſupport and rally ſuch as they ſaw puſh'd or diſordered, by which the Advantage " ſoon began to incline to the Arms of his Catholick Majeſty. While the Affair " was obſtinately diſputed on the Left, our Foot being deeply engaged, made a " great Slaughter of the Enemy; and, at the ſame Time, their Left Wing of " Horſe making little Reſiſtance, within the Space of Two Hours, we gain'd a " compleat and glorious Victory. We have taken all their Cannon, and moſt of " their Colours; ſo that out of Forty Battalions, not above Four Thouſand eſcap'd, " and of Sixty Squadrons, about the like Number, all the reſt being kill'd, or ta- " ken Priſoners. The King, during the whole Action, gave the neceſſary Orders, " and, with his Royal Preſence, continued to encourage the Troops. His Majeſty " entred the Town of Saragoſſa the ſame Night, where he was receiv'd with " all imaginable Expreſſions of Joy. The ſame Night the Citadel of Saragoſſa " capitulated, and the Gariſon ſurrendred themſelves Priſoners of War.

This compleat Victory did not coſt the Allies above Two Thouſand Men, kill'd or wounded; and, which is very remarkable, not one General amongſt them: Whereas, the Loſs of the Spaniards was modeſtly computed at about Three Thouſand Men, kill'd and wounded; and between Five and Six Thouſand Priſoners, among whom were reckon'd near Four Hundred Officers: Beſides which, the Confederates took Seventy two Colours, or Standards, Twenty two Pieces of Cannon, and Part of the Enemy's Baggage. All the Troops of the Allies fought with great Courage and Reſolution: But the Engliſh Horſe and Dragoons, and the Dutch Infantry, commanded by Lieutenant-General Belcaſtel, diſtinguiſh'd themſelves in a particular manner. On the other hand, the Enemy aſcrib'd the Loſs of the Battel to the ill Behaviour of the Walloon Troops: Nor did the Marquis de Bay, who commanded their Army, gain any Reputation by that Action; after which, he retired towards Navarre, with the broken Remains of his Troops, to the Number of about Seven Thouſand, Horſe or Foot. The ſame Evening, King Philip, who lay ſomewhat indiſpoſed in an Abbey near Saragoſſa, made the beſt of his way towards Madrid, under a Guard of a few Squadrons; and that very Night, the City of Saragoſſa received their victorious King, with loud Acclamations, and other Demonſtrations of Joy. This unexpected Turn of Affairs in Spain, caus'd an inexpreſſible Conſternation in the Court of France; where a Council being call'd, it was reſolved, That the Duke of Vendoſme, on whom King Philip had already beſtow'd the Command of his Forces, ſhould immediately ſet out for Navarre, to put himſelf at the Head of the Remains of the Spaniſh Troops; which were to be reinforc'd with Detachments from ſeveral Parts of France. That General arriving at Bayonne, in the Beginning of September, held there a Conference, and concerted Meaſures with the Mareſchal de Montrevel, and the Duke de Noailles; after which, the Mareſchal returned to his Government of Guienne, to give the neceſſary Orders for the Troops in that Province to relieve the Gariſons of St. Jean de Pied-de-Port, Eſtalla, Pampeluna, Jaca, Fuentarabia, St. Sebaſtian, and other Places in Navarre; which were order'd to march, and join the ſcatter'd Spaniſh Army; and the Dukes of Vendoſme and Noailles purſued their Journey into Spain.

King Charles holds a great Council of War, Sept. 4. N. S.

In the mean Time, King Charles, having allow'd his wearied Troops ſome Days Refreſhment, and made himſelf Maſter of ſeveral Places of ſmall Importance, held a Coun-

Council of War at Calatayud; in which, beſides his Majeſty, were preſent, the Count d' Aſſumar, Ambaſſador of Portugal, the Prince of Lichtenſtein, Mareſchal Staremberg, and the Generals Stanhope, Count de la Puebla, Belcaſtel, Frankenberg, Carpenter, and Wills. The Particulars of this important and deciſive Council, were never perfectly known: But an Account of it, publiſh'd in England ſome Time after, imports, "That his Catholick Majeſty ask'd their Opinion upon theſe Four Points: Firſt, "Whether the Army had beſt march into Caſtile, or into Navarre? Secondly, If "they ſhould give their Opinion for advancing into Caſtile, whether it was practi- "cable to maintain the Army, and eſpecially the Horſe, as being a Country where- "in it would be very difficult to get all Neceſſaries? Thirdly, Since Admiral Norris "was then at Barcelona, in a Readineſs to do Service to the Common Cauſe, Whe- "ther he might not be employ'd to reduce the Kingdom of Valencia, and what "Forces he could take on Board? And Fourthly, What General Officer ſhould "have the Conduct of that Enterprize? That the Generals agreed in the Main, "That the Enterprize of reducing the Kingdom of Valencia, ought to be gone "about in the moſt ſpeedy and effectual Manner: But as to the firſt and principal "Point, all the Miniſters and Generals declar'd their Opinion, That the Army "ought to march into Caſtile, and directly to Madrid, preſuming this would be ma- "king the beſt Advantage of the Conſternation and Diſorder the Enemy were "in; That they hop'd to find Proviſions ſufficient; and that in order to diſ- "poſe the People to ſubmit themſelves, and give them all Aſſiſtance, and to take "off the Impreſſions the French had made on their Minds, the King ſhould write "to all the Magiſtrates and Councils at Madrid, inviting and encouraging them to "embrace his Intereſts. That to this General Stanhope added, That after the ta- "king Poſſeſſion of Madrid, it would be highly requiſite, for cutting off the Com- "munication betwixt France and Spain, to turn their March to Navarre, as well to "ſhut the Gate, on that Side, againſt France, as to open a Correſpondence directly "by Sea with England, whence they might expect to be ſpeedily ſupply'd, from "time to time, with all Succours and Stores of Proviſions. That Count *Stare*m- "berg agreeing entirely with the reſt of the Miniſters and Generals, expreſs'd his "particular Approbation of General Stanhope's Propoſition of the March for Na- "varre; and added, that, in the mean while, it was neceſſary to maintain a good "Gariſon in Gironne; and to provide in the beſt manner for its Defence, that it "might ſtop the Enemy's Paſſage into Catalonia from Rouſſillon: That he ſaid like- "wiſe, that it was neceſſary to lay Blockades to Lerida, Monſon, Mequinenza, and "Tortoſa, which, 'twas likely, would oblige thoſe Places to yield for want of Sub- "ſiſtence. That the King having heard them all, deliver'd his own Opinion, to this "Purpoſe, viz. That it was certainly of the laſt Importance, to purſue the Enemy "without loſs of Time, and to cut off their Communication with France; that the "long March from Saragoſſa to Madrid, might give the Duke of Anjou Opportunity "to carry off what he pleas'd from thence, and to oblige the Grandees, the Councils, "and all Perſons of Diſtinction and Wealth, to leave that City, whereby the Hopes "of all the Generals to maintain the Army, would be, in very great Meaſure, "fruſtrated: But that remembring what had formerly paſs'd, with reſpect particu- "larly to Madrid, he would not now take any thing upon himſelf, contrary to the "unanimous Opinions of the Miniſters and Generals; but abſolutely conſented to "go to Madrid.

This Account was, in ſome Parts of it, contradicted by other Relations, and by Letters from the Conde d' Aſſumar, importing, "That Count Staremberg, General "Belcaſtel, and ſome others, inſiſted, not to advance into Caſtile; but to poſſeſs "themſelves firſt of Navarre, and ſecure the Paſſes of Biſcay and Guipuſcoa, toge- "ther with the Ports of Bilboa and Paſſage; whereby they not only ſhould cut off "all Communication betwixt France and the Duke of Anjou, but ſhould thereby "facilitate the receiving of all manner of Succours and Supplies from the Mari- "time Powers, and, at the ſame Time, preſerve their Communication with Arra- "gon and Catalonia; which was of the utmoſt Conſequence, becauſe they had ſtill "in their Rear the Towns of Jaca, Monſon, Lerida, Mequinenza, and Tortoſa, all "ſtrongly gariſon'd by the Enemy. That notwithſtanding this Reſolution, whilſt "they were at the Camp of Utebo, in Arragon, a certain * Foreign General, toge- "ther with ſome Spaniſh General Officers, made ſuch preſſing Inſtances to his Ca- "tholick Majeſty to march towards Madrid, in hopes that the Grandees and Peo- "ple of Caſtile would ſide with him, that they over-perſuaded him to alter his "firſt Deſign, and advance towards that Capital." 'Tis certain, that whatever Reaſons the Engliſh Generals gave for it, the Plunder of Caſtile was none of the leaſt Motives, that induced them to inſiſt on the Marching directly to Madrid.

* Meaning Gen. Stanhope.

K. Charles marches into Caſtile.

On

A. D. 1710.

On the 20th of September, N. S. the Army arrived near Alcala de Henares; from whence General Stanhope was, the next Day, ſent to Madrid with a Detachment of the Army, and was well received by the Magiſtrates; who, upon Aſſurances of King Charles's Clemency and Protection, ſent a Deputation to make a Submiſſion to his Majeſty. The 28th, King Charles made his Entry into that City; and then went to the Quinta, a Country-Seat belonging to the Conde d' Aguilar, where he took up his Quarters. Upon the Motions of the Allies towards Madrid, King Philip and the Duke of Vendoſme rightly concluded, that they deſign'd to join the Portugueze; whereupon the Duke immediately repair'd to the Spaniſh Army, which was advanc'd from Arunda to Eſtevan de Gormas; and being, by this Time, reinforced by ſome Gariſons drawn out of Navarre, and other Troops from Caſtile, Galicia, and Valencia, to the Number of about Fourteen Thouſand Men, made a Motion, and incamp'd at Tordeſillas, on the Duero. Here King Philip put himſelf at the Head of his Troops, the 3d of October, N. S.; and on the 6th, march'd and incamp'd near Salamanca, on the River Tormas; where having received Supplies of Money from Cadiz and Seville, and of Corn and Forage from other Places, he moved to Placentia, in order to poſſeſs the Bridge of Almaraz, and thereby prevent the Conjunction of the Portugueze with King Charles. It was the general Wiſh and Expectation, both in Great Britain and Holland, that Portugal would, on this Occaſion, ſhew ſome Vigor for the Common Cauſe, and give a helping Hand to drive King Philip out of Spain: And this Expectation was ſtill heighten'd, by the extraordinary Joy with which the Portugueze received the News of King Charles's Second Victory near Saragoſſa, and the Meaſures they ſeem'd, at firſt, reſolved to take, in order to ſecond him. But tho' the Conde de Villaverde, who commanded their Forces, and paſs'd the Guadiana the 30th of September, might have join'd General Stanhope at Almaraz, ſeveral Days before King Philip could reach that Place, (ſince he did not arrive at Placentia till the 17th of October) yet the Hopes that were generally entertain'd on that ſide, were unfortunately diſappointed.

Gen. Stanhope takes Poſſeſſion of Madrid, Sept. 21. N. S.

The Portugueze fail to join K. Charles's Forces.

The Conjunction of the Portugueze being render'd impracticable, by the Arrival of King Philip's Army in the Neighbourhood of Placentia, from whence he ſent a Body of Troops to ſecure the Bridge of Almaraz; General Stanhope, with the Detachment under his Command, rejoin'd the Confederate Army; and about the ſame Time, the Duke of Vendoſme advancing to Oropeza, to take a View of ſome Poſts on that ſide, fell into an Ambuſcade of Five Hundred Horſe of the Allies, and narrowly eſcap'd being taken. All this while, the Confederates were buſy in fortifying Toledo; as if they intended to winter in Caſtile, and open a Communication with the Kingdom of Valencia, in order to receive from thence the Supplies King Charles had Reaſon to expect from Italy: But this Deſign being found impracticable, and it being conſider'd, that Troops were marching from all Parts of France, to reinforce King Philip; whoſe Army, by the Conjunction of the Forces in Eſtremadura, was already equal, if not ſuperior in Number, to that of the Allies; the latter, tho' too late, began to repent the fatal Counſel of marching to Madrid, inſtead of ſecuring the Paſſes in Navarre, after the Victory of Saragoſſa. In this Exigency, it was thought fitting, that King Charles ſhould conſult betimes for the Safety of his own Perſon, and the Preſervation of Catalonia, by his immediate Return to Barcelona: Whereupon, the Confederate Army * decamp'd from Villaverda, within a League of Madrid; and his Catholick Majeſty, attended only by the Royal Regiment of Dragoons, and the Regiment of Foot of Staremberg, conſiſting of a Thouſand Men, directed his March to the Town of Cienpozuelos, while the reſt of the Army march'd into their Quarters, appointed in the Places of St. Martino, Pinto, Chinchon, Valdemoro, Colmenar, Xelaſt, Cienpozuelos, and Ballecas, lying between Madrid and Toledo, and near the Tagus, without ſending any on the ſide of the Mancha. Upon his Arrival at Cienpozuelos, King Charles received Advice, that the marching of the Army from the Neighbourhood of Madrid, had reviv'd the Hopes, and rais'd the Spirits of the Partizans of France; who thereupon gave out, That the whole Confederate Army intended to march out of Caſtile; and began to threaten ſuch of the Inhabitants, as had ſhewn their Affection to the Houſe of Auſtria. To remove the Uneaſineſs of the latter, King Charles thought fit to continue at Cienpozuelos till the 17th; during which Time, his Majeſty held ſeveral Councils and Conferences with the Generals, about the neceſſary Meaſures for preventing all Dangers, both from the Enemy's Forces, and from the Country-People, who began to declare in their Favour. After this, his Majeſty went to Puento Largo, on the River Xarama; lay the 18th at Colmenar; the 19th at Amanezor, marching directly by the way of Paſteana to Saragoſſa, attended by ſome Lords and Grandees of Spain, who voluntarily offer'd themſelves to accompany him; and reach'd Earcelona the 15th of December, a Day before the French (under the Command of the Duke of Noailles) inveſted Gironne.

* Nov. 11. N. S.

K. Charles leaves his Army, and retires to Catalonia.

A. D. 1710.

King Charles had not been many Days in Barcelona, before he receiv'd a more mortifying Piece of News, than the Siege of Gironne. The Generals he had left with his Army, not thinking themſelves able, either to maintain their Ground, or to ſubſiſt in Caſtile, endeavour'd to make their Retreat; but were ſo cloſely purſued by the Spaniards, that on the 8th of December, N. S. General Stanhope, with Eight Engliſh Battalions, and as many Squadrons, was attack'd in the Town of Eribuega, and the next Day, forc'd to ſurrender Priſoners of War, after having defended that unfortify'd Place, as long as they had any Powder and Shot. Upon Notice that the Engliſh Troops were attack'd, Count Staremberg, who, by this Time, had reach'd Cifuentes, march'd back, with all poſſible Speed, to their Aſſiſtance, but came Two or Three Hours too late, to relieve them. And this whole Affair having been variouſly related by the Friends and Favourers, either of Count Staremberg, or of General Stanhope, I ſhall impartially endeavour to ſet it in as true a Light, as thoſe Accounts, and my private Informations will permit. The Confederate Generals having reſolv'd to retire between the Tajus and Tajura, the Neceſſity of getting Proviſions and Forage, obliged them to march in Three Columns, and by Three different Ways, the Imperialiſts on the Right, the Dutch in the Middle, and the Engliſh on the Left. The latter were caution'd by Count Staremberg, to march as near the Dutch as poſſible, in order to give each other mutual Aſſiſtance, in caſe of any ſudden Attempt from the Enemy: But, contrary to this Advice, the Britiſh Troops took the Road to Bribuega, for the Conveniency of Proviſions. Being heavy loaded with Baggage and Booty, they were obliged to march more ſlowly than the reſt, and as they brought up the Rear, ſo were they more expos'd to the Inſults of the armed Peaſants, and of the Parties of Horſe which the Enemy had ſent out to diſturb their March, and keep them in Play, 'till their main Forces could come up. Theſe Parties being join'd to the Number of about Twenty Squadrons, almoſt ſurrounded the Engliſh Foot, commanded by Major-General Wills, in their March to Orcho, and, in all Probability, would have cut them in Pieces, had not Major-General Pepper, who was driving ſome Militia from the Heights of Orcho, timely diſcover'd the Enemy, and only with Four Squadrons, extreamly weak, made a bold Stand, and kept the Spaniards in Awe, 'till the Regiments of Harvey and Stanhope came up to ſuſtain him; by which Time, the Foot got ſafe into the Gardens and Out-Houſes of Orcho. This narrow Eſcape ought to have put the Engliſh Generals more upon their Guard: But, inſtead of that, Two Days after, being the 6th of December, N. S. they went, with all their Troops, into Bribuega, a defenceleſs Town, with an old ruinous Caſtle; and, as if no Enemy had been near, reſolv'd to ſtay there Two or Three Days, to bake Bread. On the 8th, about Noon, the Enemy appear'd on the top of a neighbouring Mountain, of which Major-General Pepper having ſent Notice to General Stanhope, by Cornet Lavergne, his Aid-de-Camp, Orders were given for aſſembling the Troops. However, no great Apprehenſion was entertain'd of the Enemy, 'till towards the Evening, when they began to fire with Cannon on the Town: Whereupon General Stanhope detach'd Captain Coſby to Mareſchal Staremberg; and held a Council of War with the other Generals. In this Conſultation, Lieutenant-General Carpenter was of Opinion, that all the Horſe and Dragoons ſhould march out of the Town, over the Bridge, and that the Foot, with the heavy Baggage, ſhould be left in the Caſtle, where, by caſting up Intrenchments and Barricadoes, they might hold out Two or Three Days. This Counſel was the more to be regarded, in that they had not a ſufficient quantity of Powder and Shot for all the Troops; they who ſhould have taken Care of it, having neglected to provide them, before the Army ſeparated: But, whether upon the Expectation of being timely relieved, or out of fear of loſing their Baggage and Plunder, the Majority reſolv'd, that all the Troops ſhould ſtay in, and defend the Town. Count Staremberg march'd, with all poſſible Expedition, to their Reſcue; but before he could come up, they had been forced to yield Priſoners of War, for want of Ammunition. This Motion occaſion'd, the next Day *, a bloody and obſtinate Engagement, near Villa-Vicioſa, between the Spaniſh Army, commanded by King Philip, or rather the Duke of Vendoſme, and the Confederate Forces, under the Command of General Staremberg: But though both Parties claim'd the Victory, yet, 'tis certain, that the Confederates had only the Tokens, and the Spaniards the real Fruits of it. General Stanhope had the Misfortune to be generally cenſur'd, for marching ſo far out of the way, and ſhutting himſelf up in ſo defenceleſs a Place as Bribuega, with ſo conſiderable a Body of Troops: A Relation printed at Barcelona, importing, That upon his ſaying to Velt-Mareſchal Staremberg, That finding no Subſiſtence upon his Rout, he intended to bend his March ſomewhat more to the Left; the Velt-Mareſchal anſwer'd, He might do as he pleas'd; but that the more he took to the Left, the more he ſhould be expos'd

Captain Cosby's Account of the Battel of Villa-Vicioſa.

" Before his Catholick Majeſty left Cienpozuelos, it was reſolv'd in a Council of " War, that the Forces ſhould retire into Winter-Quarters on the Frontiers of Ar- " ragon; whereupon, the ſeveral Gariſons were drawn out of Toledo, and the other " Poſts, and the neceſſary Diſpoſitions made for the March of the whole Army. " The Fatigues of a long Campaign, the badneſs of the Weather, in a Seaſon ſo " much advanc'd, and the want of Tents and Proviſions, made General Staremberg " judge it more convenient for the Troops to march in ſeveral Columns, with the " Commanders of each Nation at the Head of their own People; and accordingly " they began their March on the 3d of December, N. S. from Chinchon and Villarizo. " By this Diſpoſition, it was the Poſt of the Engliſh, under the Command of the " Generals Stanhope, Carpenter, Wills, Pepper, and Gore, to direct their Courſe along " the Tajuna; and in Purſuance to the Orders they had received, they march'd the " 6th to Bribuega, a Village of about One Thouſand Houſes, ſituated on the Side of " a Mountain, near to Tajuna. Here they halted the 7th, as did all the reſt of the " Troops in their reſpective Cantons. The ſame Night, General Stanhope expecting " Mareſchal Staremberg's Orders, commanded the Forces to be in a Readineſs to " march at an Hour's Warning. The next Day, about Eleven a Clock, we diſco- " ver'd on the top of a Hill that overlooks the Town, a Body of Two Thouſand " Horſe, and ſome Foot; but having been followed in the Two Days March before, " by ſeveral ſmall Parties of the Enemy, whoſe Deſign was to intercept ſuch " Stragglers as fell into their Hands, and not knowing any Thing of an Army they " had in thoſe Parts, where the whole Country were our declar'd Enemies, and de- " priv'd us of all manner of Intelligence, we conceiv'd thoſe Troops that appear'd " on the Hills, conſiſted only of the ſmall Parties mentioned before, which were " now join'd in one Body. However, General Stanhope gave Orders to beat to Arms, " and immediately caus'd the Troops to be aſſembled. The Enemy having march'd " their Battalions and Squadrons under the Cover of the Hills, and having poſſeſs'd " themſelves of all the Avenues to the Town, they planted a Battery of Five " Pieces of Cannon, on the Place where the Two Thouſand Horſe were drawn up, " and from thence play'd upon our People. When General Stanhope perceiv'd him- " ſelf inveſted in this Manner, he order'd Captain Coſby, his Aid-de-Camp, to go to " Mareſchal Staremberg, who then lay at Cifuentes, a Town about Four ſmall " Leagues diſtant from Bribuega, and inform him of the Circumſtances he was in, " particularly, that he had but very little Ammunition; which, however, he wou'd " manage in the beſt manner he cou'd, and not fire a Shot, but where there was an " abſolute Neceſſity; and that he would endeavour to maintain the Place, 'till his " Excellency had Time to come to his Relief, or ſend him Succours. The Aid de " Camp left the General at Six in the Evening, and being oblig'd to quit the direct " Road, for fear of the Enemy's Parties, he came not up to Mareſchal Staremberg, " 'till Eleven a Clock the ſame Night. So ſoon as the Mareſchal had Notice of the " Danger the Engliſh were in, he order'd all the Troops that lay at Cifuentes, and " the adjacent Villages, to be aſſembled, and began his March the 9th, a little be- " fore † Ten in the Morning. Being arrived by Five in the Afternoon, at a Place " half-way between Cifuentes and Bribuega, he order'd Nine Pieces of Cannon to be " fir'd, as a Signal to General Stanhope, that he was marching to his Relief, and " there lay under Arms all that Night. Early the next Morning, being the 10th, " he diſpos'd his Army into a Line, and ſo march'd in good Order, 'till One a " Clock, by which Time he perceiv'd the Enemy forming themſelves into Order " of Battel, with their Right Wing at the Village of Villa-Vicioſa, and their Left " at a Wood, on the Plains of los Compos de los Mancebos; and having, by this " Means, all the Advantage of the Ground, the Mareſchal found himſelf obliged

(a) A Letter from Count de Salvaterra, to Don Jacinto de Puozzo Bueno, intercepted by a Party ſent out by the young Marquis das Minas, and publiſh'd in England, had theſe very Words.

" The Action was very fierce and bloody, beyond Imagination, for the Time it laſted, as may " appear by the Number of Men of Quality, and Officers of Note, kill'd and wounded in it. " General Staremberg gain'd a great deal of Honour, which ought not to be deny'd him, though " an Enemy, eſpecially his Foot, which I don't believe the World can match; whether we con- " ſider their Bravery in Fighting, or that gallant Air with which they made their Retreat; the " like, perhaps, never ſeen before, as all that ſaw 'em muſt own. As for us, though we all en- " deavour'd to do our Duty, yet the chief Part of our Succeſs muſt be attributed to God, and " the Juſtice of the King's Cauſe; and, under Heaven, to General Stanhope's ill Conduct; for if " we had not taken that Body under his Command, God only knows what would have become " of us.

" to extend his Left againſt ſome ſquare Walls, drawing the Horſe of his Right in " the Rear of his Firſt and Second Line, and covering his Flank with Four Compa- " nies of Grenadiers, Two Battalions, and Two Squadrons. In the mean while, the " Cannon play'd on both Sides, but ours with more Succeſs, till about Three a-Clock; " at which time, the Enemy attack'd our Right Wing with much Vigor, and made " them give way at firſt; but they ſoon recover'd, and form'd themſelves into good " Order. At the ſame time, our Left was ſo cloſely puſh'd by a much ſuperior " Number of Horſe, that they were diſpers'd * and purſu'd by the Enemy, who " meeting with our Baggage, which lay in the Rear of our Second Line, they left " the Purſuit, and fell to plunder. Whilſt this was doing, the Second Line of " Horſe in their Right, had taken our Left Wing of Foot in Flank, Front, and " Rear; and after a very hot Diſpute, had almoſt cut off Eight Battalions; after " which, thinking themſelves every way victorious, they alſo fell into Pillage. " This Marſhal Staremberg ſoon perceiv'd, and made an Advantage of it; for he " inſtantly form'd the Foot of his Right into hollow Squares, and poſting his " Cavalry on their Flanks, he charg'd their whole Body of Foot ſo vigorouſly, that " he entirely routed them, and our Men purſu'd them for above half a League " of Ground together. The Succeſs the Enemy had in the Beginning, had " ſo exaſperated our Soldiers, that they did not trouble themſelves to make many " Priſoners. However, ſome General Officers were taken, who declar'd, that they " had made Three Breaches in the Walls of Brihuega, and attack'd General Stanhope " Five ſeveral Times at each Breach, and were as often repulſed with great Slaugh- " ter; but renewing the Attack at Sun-ſet, they then obliged him, and the Troops " under his Command, to ſurrender Priſoners of War; which they had not done " even then, had they not ſpent all their Ammunition. Marſhal Staremberg pur- " ſued his Victory till more than an Hour after it was dark, and lay beyond the " Field of Battel till Eight the next Morning; at which Time, he found the Enemy " had retired in great Confuſion, by Favour of the Night; and that ſuch of our Bag- " gage and Artillery-Mules, as their Horſe had not been able to deſtroy or carry " off, the Peaſants of the Country had done for them; whereupon he was obliged to " burn all the Carriages, and nail up both our own Cannon, and thoſe we had taken " from the Enemy; after which, he purſued his March, without any Interruption, " towards the Frontiers of Arragon. The Enemy loſt above Six thouſand Men in " the Action; our Loſs does not amount to half the Number. Lieutenant-General " Belcaſtel is among the Slain, and is univerſally lamented. Marſhal Staremberg " ſent Three Trumpets, one after another, to get Information of the Priſoners " taken by the Enemy; who were ſo far from returning an Anſwer to the Marſhal, " that they would not ſo much as permit the Trumpets to come back; ſo that when " Captain Coſby came away, no particular Account could be had of them.

French Accounts of the Loſs of the Allies, and of their own.

Theſe Accounts were contradicted by the Relations publiſhed by the French, who boaſted, that the Spaniards took either in the Battel, or, the Day before, in Bribuega, above Eight thouſand Priſoners, near Four thouſand Horſes, Ten Pair of Kettle Drums, Fourteen Standards, Fifty four Colours, Twenty Pieces of Cannon, Two Mortars, Ninety ſix Waggons, and above One thouſand Beaſts of Burden; that Don Joſeph Vallejo, who, with his Detachment, had march'd before, to endeavour to cut off the Retreat of the Allies, and ſo was not preſent in the Action, took, on the 11th and 12th, above Twenty five hundred Priſoners, moſt of them Cavalry; that he likewiſe took General Staremberg's Baggage, which King Philip generouſly commanded to be reſtor'd to him; and that by the Liſts made by the Spaniſh Commiſſaries, it appeared that the Number of the Priſoners taken from the 9th to the 12th of December, incluſive, amounted to Eleven thouſand two hundred forty ſeven Men; which, together with about Three thouſand they had killed in the Defence of Bribuega, and in the Battel, amounted to above Fourteen thouſand. Nor were the French leſs induſtrious in extenuating their own Loſs, than in exaggerating their Victory; but notwithſtanding their Endeavours, it appeared by ſeveral intercepted Letters, of undoubted Authority, that they had near a Thouſand Men kill'd and wounded at the Attack of Bribuega, and above Three times as many in the Battel.

The Conſequences of the Actions at Bribuega and Villa-Vicioſa, decide the Victory on the Side of the Spaniards.

However, tho' Count Staremberg got, certainly, the better of the Battel of Villa Vicioſa, conſider'd in it ſelf; yet, whatever was the Enemy's Diſadvantage, the ſame was abundantly made up to them, by the taking of that great Body of the Confederate Troops at Bribuega; and yet more by the Conſequences of thoſe Two Actions, which undiſputably decided the Victory on the Side of the Spaniards: For, upon the Approach of the Enemy's Forces, General Staremberg thought fit to leave Saragoſſa the Night between the 30th and the 31ſt of December, and to abandon the whole Kingdom of Arragon. However, he retired in very good Order; notwithſtanding he was cloſely purſu'd by the ſeveral Detachments commanded by the Generals Mahony,

Some Days before he reach'd Barcelona, which was about the Beginning of February, Count Tattenbach, Governor of Girone, was obliged to capitulate, the French, under the Command of the Duke of Noailles, having carried on that Siege with a great deal of Reſolution and Obſtinacy; notwithſtanding the great Difficulties they met with in that Undertaking, both from the bad and rainy Weather, and the vigorous Defence of the Gariſon, who obtain'd very honourable Terms. Not long after, upon the Approach of the Marquis de Valdecannas, with a Body of Troops, in order to attack Balaguer, the Gariſon Count Staremberg had left there, conſiſting of Two Battalions and One hundred Horſe, thought fit to abandon the Place; ſo that King Charles's Affairs had now a very diſmal Aſpect: And beſides his being confin'd within the narrow Bounds of the Principality of Catalonia, King Philip gain'd this Summer a very material Point, by having undoubted Demonſtrations of the Affections of the Caſtilians to his Perſon and Government; inſomuch, that neither his Two Defeats at Almenara and Saragoſſa, nor his Retreat from Madrid; nor the Preſence of King Charles, with a Veteran Victorious Army, were able to ſhake their Loyalty to the Houſe of Bourbon.

Campaign in Portugal inconſiderable.

Nothing material happen'd this Year in Portugal, ſave only, that about the Beginning of July, the Marquis de Eay, who commanded the Spaniſh Forces in Eſtremadura, made himſelf Maſter of the Town of Miranda de Duero, by Surprize; took in it Four hundred Men of Regular Troops and Militia; and then form'd the Blockade of Braganza, which was raiſed by the Marquis de Riſbourg, upon the News of the Battel of Saragoſſa; and ſoon after, the Portugueze took from the Spaniards Xerez-de-los-Cavaleros, Earcarota, Alcanza, and Puebla, Places of great Name, tho' of very ſmall Conſideration, being ſcarce better than Villages. Some time before, the Earl of Galway, who found himſelf uſeleſs in Portugal, had deſired, and readily obtain'd Leave to return to England.

Four Indian Kings have Audience of the Queen.

On the 19th of April, this Year, Four Indian Kings, as they were vulgarly called, or rather Chiefs of the Six Nations in the Weſt-Indies, which lie between New England and New France, or Canada, who were lately brought over by Colonel Nicholſon, and Colonel Vetch, and who were cloath'd, and, for ſome Time, entertain'd at the Queen's Expence, had publick Audience of her Majeſty at St. James's: Some time after, they embark'd at Portſmouth, on Board the Dragon, one of her Majeſty's Men of War, together with Colonel Nicholſon, Commander in Chief of the Forces deſign'd for an Expedition in America, which was crown'd with the Conqueſt of Port-Royal in Nova Scotia, to which General Nicholſon gave the Name of Annapolis Royal.

Port-Royal in Nova Scotia, taken Oct. 5. and called Annapolis Royal.

Great Succeſſes of the Czar of Muſcovy.

The Czar of Muſcovy made a very conſiderable Improvement of the great Victory he obtain'd the Year before at Pultowa; for in this Year's Campaign, he reduc'd to his Obedience Elbing, in Poliſh Pruſſia; Wyburgh, the Capital of Carelia, or Carel-land; Kenholm, in Finland; Arembergh, in the Iſland of Oezel; Pernau, Revel, Riga, the Dunamunder-Fort, and, in a word, the whole Province of Livonia, the fineſt Jewel of the Swediſh Crown. 'Tis very probable, that the United Forces of his Czariſh Majeſty and King Auguſtus, would have made a greater Progreſs; but the High Allies having, with great Wiſdom, taken early Meaſures, and interpos'd their good Offices and Power, to prevent the Flames of this Northern War from ſpreading into the Roman Empire, the Province of Pomerania, whither General Craſſau, had retired out of Poland, enjoy'd a perfect Tranquility. The Treaty, or Project of Neutrality, which was made for that Purpoſe, was accepted by the Czar and King Auguſtus, and by the King of Denmark, with ſome Exceptions; as it was by the Regency of Stockholm, for the Swedes; tho' 'tis obſervable, the laſt did it only to ſerve a Turn: For their Czariſh and Poliſh Majeſties demanding that the Troops under General Craſſau, ſhould either be diſbanded, or put into the Service of the High Allies; this laſt was not agreed to by the Swedes, tho' a Treaty was ſet on Foot for that Purpoſe. At the ſame time, the Swediſh Miniſters at Vienna, Ratisbon, and other Places, notify'd, that their Maſter, who ſtill continu'd at Bender, was diſſatisfy'd with that Neutrality: And, on the other hand, notwithſtanding the earneſt Endeavours of the Britiſh and Dutch Miniſters at the Ottoman Port, to baffle the Artifices and Inſinuations of the French and Swedes, the Grand Signior, by the Advice of the Cham of Tartary, reſolv'd, at laſt, openly to eſpouſe the Quarrel of the King of Sweden: Hereupon, the Muſcovite Ambaſſador at Conſtantinople was ſeiz'd and confin'd; and not long after, the Grand Signior declar'd War againſt the Czar, having, for that Purpoſe, written Circular Letters by way of Manifeſto, to the reſpective Baſhaws, and Governors, in his Dominions.

Schonen; and pretending to ſhew, that the Reaſons alledg'd by the Danes, to juſtify that Invaſion, were ſo far from being a ſufficient Cauſe of War, that they did not amount even to a plauſible Pretence. Not long after, both the Swedes and Danes ſent out their reſpective Fleets to Sea; and the latter having, on the 14th and 15th of September, N. S. met with a violent Storm, whereby they were ſeparated, and ſeveral of their Ships ſuffer'd ſome Damage in their Rigging, they were obliged to return to the Kioger-Bogt. The Swedes imagining their Loſs to have been much greater, went in Queſt of them; and, on the 4th of October, attack'd them with Twenty One Ships of the Line of Battel, and Ten Frigats. Upon this Surprize, the Danes immediately cut their Cables, and endeavour'd to gain the Wind, ſo as to get between Copenhagen and the Swediſh Fleet; whilſt the latter endeavour'd to intercept them. This occaſion'd a Canonading between the foremoſt Ships; during which, a Daniſh Ship of Ninety Guns, call'd the Danebrag, blew up. But tho' the Swedes gain'd their Point, yet, advancing too far towards the Daniſh Coaſt, Two of their Flag-Ships (an Admiral, and a Rear-Admiral) ſtruck upon a Sand-Bank, near the Iſland of Amack; where the whole Swediſh Fleet came to an Anchor, to endeavour to recover them: This being impracticable, they ſav'd the Men, and ſet fire to their Two Ships; as they did to a Daniſh Tranſport. In the mean Time, the Daniſh Fleet return'd to their former Poſts before Koeg; and the Wind bearing very hard on the Coaſt, the Swedes were ſhy of attacking them a ſecond Time; and on the 7th of October, in the Morning, weigh'd Anchor, and ſail'd towards the Eaſt Sea. The Danes purſued them; but at ſuch a Diſtance, as ſhew'd they had no Mind to another Engagement.

The Imperial Arms were this Year attended with great Succeſſes in Hungary, where they reduc'd the important Towns of Leytſchau, Newhauſel, Zoluoch, Erla, Bartfeld, Eſperies, and ſome other Poſts, which were ill provided, and not in a Condition to make any long Defence. Some of the Chiefs of the Malecontents, conſidering that their Affairs were deſperate, and in a manner paſt Retrieve, inclin'd to conſult betimes for their Safety, by making their Submiſſion to the Emperor; but upon the Ottoman Port's declaring War againſt the Muſcovites, Prince Ragotſki encourag'd them to ſtand out to the laſt; feeding them with Hopes, that the Turks would aſſiſt them with Men, and the French with Ingineers and Money. As for the Affairs of Italy, they received this Year no viſible Alteration: For the Diſputes about Comachio, and the actual Recognition of the Title of King Charles, being ſtill in the ſame Condition, the Imperialiſts remained in Poſſeſſion of that Place; and the Ambaſſador of the Emperor, and his Catholick Majeſty, at Rome, did not appear in Publick with that Character; no more than did Signior Albani, the Pope's Nephew, who, in the mean Time, continued at Vienna.

The Imperial Court perſiſting in their Reſolution, not to grant the Exerciſe of their Religion to the Reformed in Sileſia, upon Pretence that they were not included either in the Treaty of Weſtphalia, or in the Convention of Alt-Ranſtadt; the Queen of Great Britain, out of her extenſive Zeal for the Preſervation of the Proteſtant Intereſt, order'd Lieutenant-General Palmes, her Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary to the Emperor, to make new Inſtances in their Favour: And the States-General order'd the Sieur Bruyninx, their Envoy, to uſe his good Offices, in Concert with thoſe of the Britiſh Miniſter. Hereupon thoſe Two Gentlemen preſented a Joint-Memorial to his Imperial Majeſty; which, however, had but little Effect: Tho', at this Time, the Imperial Court had more Reaſon than ever, to keep Meaſures with the Proteſtant Potentates.

We may here take notice, that, beſides the Miſeries inſeparable from War, ſeveral Countries in Europe continued, during the Year 1710, to be afflicted with the Plague; particularly, Poland, Pruſſia, Pomerania, Hungary, and ſome Parts of Sweden.

The Plague rages in ſeveral Parts of Europe.

England remain'd, indeed, free from that Calamity; but was, by this Time, fallen into a no leſs diſmal and dangerous a Diſtemper, being torn in pieces by Factions and Party-Rage. Theſe inteſtine Diviſions, as was hinted before, were occaſion'd by the late Tryal of Dr. Sacheverel; which not only raiſed great Heats and Animoſities among Perſons of all Ranks, but gave an Opportunity to deſigning Men, to carry on their ambitious Projects; by ſuggeſting Apprehenſions, that not only the Church, but the Monarchy it ſelf were in Danger. The general Ferment ſoon after broke out into numerous Addreſſes, of very different Stile and Tenor, that were preſented to the Queen: Thoſe who diſtinguiſh'd themſelves by the Name of Tories, or High-Church, made large Profeſſions of their Loyalty and Affection; diſclaiming all Principles inconſiſtent with Paſſive-Obedience, and Non-Reſiſtance; and expreſſing their Indignation againſt ſuch Doctrines, as openly deny'd Her Majeſty's Hereditary Title, and inſolently invaded Her Juſt Prerogative; promiſing to de- fend both, as well as the Church of England, and the Rights of Monarchy; and many of them, ſuggeſting the Diſſolution of the Parliament. On the other hand, the Whigs, or Low-Churchmen, profeſs'd the "utmoſt Deteſtation of the rebellious Tu- "mults and Diſorders, raiſed and fomented by Papiſts, Nonjurors, and other ſuch "like diſaffected Perſons; aſſuring her Majeſty, that they would defend her Perſon, "Government, and juſt Title, founded on the late Happy Revolution; Her Maje- "ſty's preſent Adminiſtration in Church and State, the Succeſſion in the Houſe "of Hanover, and the Toleration allow'd to Proteſtant Diſſenters. Nor did they "preſume to diſtinguiſh between her Parliamentary and Hereditary Title: But "wiſh'd, her Majeſty might always be ſerv'd by ſuch a wiſe and juſt Miniſtry, "ſuch a faithful and couragious General, and ſuch a dutiful and affectionate Par- "liament, as now made Her Majeſty's Reign the Glory of the Britiſh Monarchy, "the Envy of her Neighbours, and the Terror of her Enemies." The High-Church Addreſſes not only exceeded the others in Number, but were alſo far better received; as complimenting the Queen with a more extenſive Prerogative, and an Hereditary Title: And beſides, the Preſenters of them were countenanc'd, both privately by the New Favourite, Mrs. Maſham, and openly by the Duke of Shrewſbury, lately promoted to the Office of Lord Chamberlain, in the room of the Marquis of Kent, who thereupon was created a Duke. This Change was, undoubtedly, owing to the private Infuſions of Mr. Robert Harley: But before the Queen declar'd her Intentions, She thought fit, for Form ſake, and, perhaps, to cover her further Deſigns, to communicate her new Choice of a Lord Chamberlain to the Earl of Godolphin; who being gone, in Diſguſt, to Newmarket, from whence he ſent a Letter to the Queen; Her Majeſty, with her own Hand, wrote * to him the following Anſwer:

The Duke of Shrewsbury made Lord Chamberlain, April 14.

* April 13. 1710.

The Queen's Letter to the Lord Treaſurer thereupon.

I am ſorry to find by your Letter, you are ſo very much in the Spleen, as to think you cannot, for the future, contribute any Thing towards my Quiet, but your Wiſhes; however, I will ſtill hope, you will uſe your Endeavours: Never was there more Occaſion than now; for, by all one hears and ſees every Day, as Things are at preſent, I think one can expect nothing but Confuſion. I am ſure, for my Part, I ſhall be ready to join with all my Friends in every Thing that is reaſonable, to allay the Heat and Ferment that is in this poor Nation. Since you went to Newmarket, I have received ſeveral Aſſurances from the Duke of Shrewſbury, of his Readineſs to ſerve me upon all Occaſions, and his Willingneſs to come into my Service; which Offer I was very glad to accept of, having a very good Opinion of him, and believing he may be of great Uſe in theſe troubleſome Times. For theſe Reaſons, I have reſolved to part with the Duke of Kent; who, I hope, will be eaſy in this Matter, by being made a Duke; and I hope that this Change will meet with your Approbation, which I wiſh I may ever have in all my Actions. I have not yet declared my Intentions of giving the Staff and the Key to the Duke of Shrewſbury; becauſe I would be the firſt that ſhould acquaint you with it.

The Lord Treaſurer, who well underſtood the Meaning, and foreſaw the Conſequences of ſuch a Change, wrote to the Queen the following Letter:

Newmarket, April 15. 1710.

The Earl of Godolphin's Letter to the Queen.

"I Have the Honour of your Majeſty's Letter of the 13th; by which I have the "Grief to find, that which you are pleaſed to call Spleen, in my former Letter, "was only a true Impulſe and Conviction of Mind, that your Majeſty is ſuffering "your ſelf to be guided to your own Ruin and Deſtruction, as faſt as it is poſſible "for them to compaſs it, to whom you ſeem ſo much to hearken.

"I am not therefore ſo much ſurprized as concern'd, at the Reſolution which your "Majeſty ſays you have taken, of bringing in the Duke of Shrewſbury: For when "People began to be ſenſible, it would be difficult to perſuade your Majeſty to diſ- "ſolve a Parliament, which, for Two Winters together, had given you above Six "Millions a Year, for the Support of the War, upon which your Crown depends, "and even while that War is ſtill ſubſiſting, they have had the Cunning to contrive "this Propoſal to your Majeſty; which, in its Conſequence, will certainly put you "under a Neceſſity of breaking the Parliament, tho' contrary, I yet believe, to "your own Inclination.

"I beg your Majeſty to be perſuaded, I do not ſay this out of the leaſt Prejudice "to the Duke of Shrewſbury: There is no Man, of whoſe Capacity I have had a "better Impreſſion, nor with whom I have liv'd more eaſily, for above Twenty "Years.

"Your Majeſty may pleaſe to remember, that at your firſt coming to the Crown, "I was deſirous he ſhould have had one of the Chief Poſts in your Service; and it "would have been happy for your Majeſty and the Kingdom, if he had accepted "that Offer; but he thought fit to decline it; and the Reaſons generally given

A. D. 1710.

" at that Time, for his doing ſo, do not much recommend him to your Majeſty's " Service. But I muſt endeavour to let your Majeſty ſee Things as they really are: " And to bring him into your Service, and into your Buſineſs, at this Time, juſt " after his being in a publick open Conjunction, in every Vote, with the whole " Body of the Tories, and in private conſtant Correſpondence, and Caballing with " Mr. Harley in every thing; What Conſequence can this poſſibly have, but to make " every Man that is now iu your Cabinet uneaſy, and run from it as they would do " from the Plague? I leave it to your Majeſty to judge, what Effect this entire " Change of your Miniſtry will have among your Allies Abroad, and how will this " War be like to be carried in their Opinion, by thoſe who have all along oppoſed and " obſtructed it, and who will like any Peace the better, the more it leaves France " at Liberty to take their Time of impoſing the Pretender upon this Country?

" Theſe Conſiderations muſt certainly make Holland run immediately into a ſepa- " rate Peace with France, and make your Majeſty loſe all the Honour, and all the " Reputation your Arms had acquir'd by the War, and make the Kingdom loſe all " the Fruit of that vaſt Expence which they have been at in this War; as well as " all Advantage and Safety which they had ſo much need of, and had ſo fair a " Proſpect of obtaining by it. And can any body imagine, that after ſo great a " Diſappoinment to the Kingdom, there will not be an Inquiry into the Cauſes of " it, and who have been the Occaſion of ſo great a Change in your Majeſty's Mea- " ſures and Councils, which had been ſo long ſucceſsful, and gotten you ſo great a " Name in the World? I am very much afraid your Majeſty will find, when 'tis " too late, that it will be a difficult Taſk for any body to ſtand againſt ſuch an In- " quiry. I am ſure, if I did not think all theſe Conſequences inevitable, I would " never give your Majeſty the Trouble and Uneaſineſs of laying them before you; " perſuaded as I am, that your Majeſty will find them ſo, it is my indiſpenſible " Duty to do it, out of pure Faithfulneſs and Zeal for your Majeſty's Service and " Honour.

" Your Majeſty having taken a Reſolution of ſo much Conſequence to all your " Affairs, both Abroad and at Home, without acquainting the Duke of Marlbo- " rough or me with it, 'till after you had taken it, is the leaſt Part of my Mortifi- " cation in this whole Affair; though perhaps the World may think the long and " faithful Services we have conſtantly and zealouſly endeavour'd to do your Majeſty, " might have deſerved a little more Conſideration.

" However, for my own Part, I moſt humbly beg Leave to aſſure your Majeſty, " I will never give the leaſt Obſtruction to your Meaſures, or to any Miniſters you " ſhall pleaſe to employ. And I muſt beg further, to make Two humble Requeſts " to your Majeſty; One, That you will allow me to paſs the Remainder of my Life " always out of London, where I may find moſt Eaſe and Quiet; the other, That " you would keep this Letter, and read it again about Chriſtmaſs, and then be plea- " ſed to make your Judgment, who has given you the beſt and moſt faithful " Advice.

This Letter made no Impreſſion on the Queen, who, Two Days before ſhe re-receiv'd it, being already fix'd in her Choice, gave * the Staff and Key to the Duke of Shrewſbury; and the latter, in return to Mr. Harley, readily aſſiſted him, and Mrs. Maſham, in diſpoſing the Queen to make further Alterations. All Men are naturally fond of Power, thoſe eſpecially who are born to it; and therefore 'tis no wonder that Princes, who are ſtiled, and think themſelves GOD's Vicegerents on Earth, ſo impatiently bear the leaſt Diminution of their Authority. The Queen, though good-natured, indulgent, and eaſily to be govern'd by thoſe about her, who uſed her with Obſequiouſneſs, Complaiſance, and becoming Reſpect, was yet extream jealous of her Prerogative; irreconcileable to thoſe who had once treated her irreverently, and ſullenly tenacious of her Reſolutions. The Contrivers of the intended Changes, being perfectly acquainted with the Queen's Temper, made her take Notice of ſeveral Expreſſions, ungrateful to a Monarch's Ear, which in the Courſe of Dr. Sacheverel's Tryal, had dropp'd from ſome of the Managers for the Commons; and, afterwards, induſtriouſly procured thoſe Tory Addreſſes, which, as was hinted before, both complimented her Prerogative, and Hereditary Title, and, at the ſame Time, gratify'd the Diſguſt ſhe had conceiv'd againſt the Duke and Dutcheſs of Marlborough, and ſome of their Relations; and which her new Favourites were not wanting to cheriſh and improve. The Earl of Sunderland, the moſt zealous and moſt active of the Three Secretaries of State in the Whiggiſh Intereſt, and therefore moſt obnoxious to the Tories, being, at the ſame Time, implacably odious to Mr. Harley, and not very grateful to the Queen, it was reſolved to begin with him; and ſo joint Endeavours were uſed, totally to work him out of her Majeſty's Favour and Eſteem; for which, Pretences, if not Reaſons, were not wanting.

Sketch of the Queen's Character.

Arts uſed to make her change her Miniſtry.

A. D. 1710.

ing. The moſt plauſible was this: Some Time after the Death of the late Earl of Eſſex, the Queen deſign'd to have beſtowed his Regiment of Dragoons on Colonel Hill, a Gentleman, who, beſides the Intereſt of Mrs. Maſham, his Siſter, had a further Recommendation to her Majeſty, both as having been one of her Pages of Honour, and upon Account of his gallant Behaviour, and good Conduct at the Battle of Almanza; where he contributed to the rallying and preſerving the broken Remains of the Confederate Infantry. On the other Hand, the Duke of Marlborough having promis'd that Regiment to Lieutenant-General Meredith, and it being rightly ſuppos'd, that this was a Trial of Power between his Dutcheſs and the growing Favourite; his Grace, and his Lady, abſented themſelves from the Court, and retired, for ſome Days, to the Lodge in Windſor-Park. It being given out, that his Grace was ſo highly diſguſted, that he deſign'd to lay down his Command, the chief Lords in the Miniſtry, conſidering what a vaſt Prejudice the Loſs of ſo great a General and Politician, would be to the common Cauſe, made their Application to the Queen, to incline her to alter her Reſolution; but her Majeſty being undoubtedly glad of an Opportunity to give ſome Mortification to a Perſon, who, of late, had not behav'd her ſelf towards her Royal Miſtreſs, and great Benefactreſs, with that Reſpect and Aſſiduity which Duty and Gratitude exacted from her, remain'd fix'd in her firſt Choice, and inſiſted on her Prerogative. It would have been but common Prudence in the Duke's and Dutcheſs's Friends, to have dropp'd the Contention, and acquieſced in her Majeſty's Pleaſure: But as moſt Men are intoxicated with Power, inſomuch that the ſame Perſon in a high Poſt, has ſeldom as clear Notions of Things, as he would have out of it; the ſanguine Miniſters fondly believ'd themſelves able to undertake and execute whatever they thought fit; and, in that Confidence, looking on Mrs. Maſham as their ſecret Oppoſer, a Deſign was laid to procure a † Vote from the Houſe of Commons, to have her remov'd from her Majeſty's Bed-Chamber. Upon a Hint of this intended Violence, the ſame was timely prevented, by Colonel Hill's throwing himſelf at her Majeſty's Feet, and begging he might not be the unhappy Occaſion of any Uneaſineſs to her Majeſty; but that ſhe would be graciouſly pleas'd to beſtow the Favour ſhe intended him, upon ſome other Officer. The Queen granted his humble Requeſt; and ſending for ſeveral * Lords, told them, ſhe would find another way to reward Colonel Hill; but juſtly reſenting this, and ſome other Inſtances of Diſreſpect and Neglect; and, at the ſame Time, Mr. Harley, and Mrs. Maſham, dextrouſly improving that Opportunity, and acquainting her Majeſty with the general Diſcontent at the immenſe Power and Greatneſs of Two Men, who ſeem'd to engroſs all the Authority; her Majeſty was eaſily perſuaded to make ſome Changes in her Miniſtry, and to begin with the Perſon who was ſuppoſed to have been the chief Promoter of the Deſign to deprive her of Mrs. Maſham's Attendance. Hereupon the Seals were taken from the Earl of Sunderland: But becauſe no formal Neglect or Error in the Diſcharge of his Office, could be laid to his Charge; and it might appear ungracious to diſcard a Nobleman of an unblemiſh'd Character, and ſo near a Relation to the Duke of Marlborough, with Marks of Diſpleaſure; it was thought fit to mitigate his Diſgrace, by a Penſion: But when Word was brought to him, "That her Majeſty, as a Teſtimony of her Royal Favour, and of her being fully "ſatisfy'd in his Lordſhip's Services, deſign'd to preſent him with Three Thouſand "Pounds per Annum, to be ſettled upon him for Life; in ſome Meaſure, to "make up the Loſs of the Office of Secretary:" His Lordſhip, with the Generoſity of an old Roman, hardly to be parallel'd in theſe corrupt Times, anſwer'd, He was glad her Majeſty was ſatisfy'd he had done his Duty, but if he could not have the Honour to ſerve his Country, he would not plunder it. Before his Lordſhip was remov'd, the Queen was ſome Time in Suſpence, about the Choice of a Perſon to ſucceed him: But the Earl of Powlet, to whom the Seals were firſt offer'd, having declin'd ſo fatiguing an Enployment, the Lord Dartmouth, one of the Lords Commiſſioners of Trade and Plantations, and Son-in-Law to the Earl of Nottingham, was, at this Juncture, thought a fit Perſon to be Secretary of State; into which Office he was ſworn on the 15th of June.

The High-Church Party were wonderfully pleas'd, and elated, upon this Alteration, which they look'd upon as a ſure Earneſt, and Fore-runner of greater Changes; extolling her Majeſty for aſſerting her juſt Prerogative, and ſetting her ſelf free from an arbitrary Junto, that kept her in an inglorious Dependance on their Will and Caprice. And 'twas even ſaid, that the Duke of Beaufort, being, about this Time, come to Court, to pay his Reſpects to her Majeſty, told her, He was extremely glad he could now ſalute her QUEEN. On the other Hand, the Whigs were the more alarm'd, and caſt down, in that the beſt Part of their Wealth was lodg'd in the Exchequer, and publick Funds; and that they rightly conſider'd, that the Removal of

† This was to have been mov'd on the 23d of January, $17\frac{0}{1}$.

of the Earl of Sunderland, was but a Step to come at the Lord Treaſurer; in whoſe Capacity, Punctuality and Integrity, the Mony'd Men repos'd an entire Confidence; and they foreſaw, that his being laid aſide, would very much affect publick Credit: What they dreaded, came to paſs, through their own Fears; for as upon theſe Surmiſes, they began to ſell their Shares in the Bank of England, the Eaſt-India Company, and Annuities, all the publick Funds fell gradually; and (with ſome inconſiderable Intermiſſions) continued ſinking all the remainder of this Year. We may here obſerve, That the moſt artful Method by which the ſinking Miniſtry endeavour'd to ſupport themſelves, was, by ſuggeſting and propagating the Notion, that the Credit of the Nation wholly depended upon the Lord Treaſurer; which, being in a great Meaſure confirm'd by the Conſequences attending the very Apprehenſion of his being remov'd, not only all the mony'd Men in Great Britain, but even the whole Confederacy ſeem'd to be concern'd in his Preſervation. Hereupon Sir Gilbert Heathcote, Governor of the Bank of England, Nathaniel Gould, Eſq; Deputy-Governor, Francis Eyles, Eſq; and Sir William Scawen, Two of the Directors, (whether of their own Accord, or rather through the Suggeſtion of the Lord Treaſurer, is uncertain) thought fit to make their Application to the Duke of Newcaſtle, Lord Privy-Seal; to whom having repreſented the Dangers likely to attend the changing of the Miniſtry, his Grace introduc'd them to the Queen. Her Majeſty, having given them a favourable Hearing, was pleas'd to tell them, "That "ſhe, for ſome time before, reſolv'd to remove the Earl of Sunderland, for particular "Reaſons of State; but that ſhe had not yet determin'd to make any other "Changes; and whenever ſhe ſhould, ſhe would take Care, that the Publick Credit "might not be injur'd thereby." Hereupon, it was induſtriouſly given out, that the Queen had declar'd, ſhe deſign'd to make no more Alterations in the Miniſtry, which immediately reſtored the Publick Funds to their former Value; but they ſoon began to fall again, and many Foreigners withdrew their Effects from England, upon a ſtrong and better-grounded Report, that not only the Lord-Treaſurer would be laid aſide, but even the Parliament diſſolv'd.

Fall of the publick Funds.

Four Members of the Bank of England interpoſe in favour of the late Miniſtry.

The Queen's Declaration to them.

Her Majeſty's Allies, and in particular the Emperor, and the States General, were very attentive to what paſs'd in Great Britain; and being apprehenſive that the Duke of Marlborough would either be remov'd, or ſo diſguſted, as to lay down his Command, which might bring a great Prejudice to the Common Cauſe; Count Gallas, the Imperial Miniſter, and Mr. de Vryberge, the Dutch Envoy, were directed, in a moſt reſpectful Manner, to repreſent to the Queen, what ill Influence the changing of her Miniſtry might have on Affairs abroad. In anſwer to their reſpective Memorials, the Firſt was told, he might aſſure the Emperor, "That whatever Changes the Queen "deſign'd to make, ſhe had reſolv'd to continue the Duke of Marlborough in his Em-"ployments; and deſired, that Prince Eugene, and the other Imperial Generals and "Plenipotentiaries, might act with him with the ſame Confidence as before." And tho' the Anſwer that was given to Monſieur Vryberge, was kept ſecret; yet, 'tis certain, the Queen put a favourable Conſtruction on the Interpoſition of the States General, in favour of the Miniſtry; looking upon it, as undoubtedly it was, as the Effect of their Zeal for the Common Cauſe. However, there were not wanting thoſe among the High-Church Party, who not only inveigh'd againſt the Members of the Bank, that had applied to the Queen on this Occaſion; but made ſevere Reflections on the Dutch, for preſuming to intermeddle in an Affair of that Nature: And, at the ſame time, they handed about a ſmart (a) Anſwer, which, they pretended, the Queen had given to Mr. Vryberge's Memorial. But the ſoberer Part were inclin'd to excuſe her Majeſty's Allies; both becauſe they were engaged in a long, expenſive, and burthenſome War, upon Meaſures concerted with the late Miniſtry; and which they were reſolv'd to proſecute with Vigor, partly in the Confidence they repoſed in the Duke of Marlborough; and becauſe there ſeem'd to be a parallel Caſe, in the Queen's interpoſing at the Court of Vienna, in favour of ſome of the Emperor's Proteſtant Subjects; and even in the Parliament's Deſire, that an Application ſhould be made to the Emperor, for ſending Prince Eugene to command in Spain.

The Emperor and the States General interpoſe likewiſe in favour of the late Miniſtry.

Anſwer given to Count Gallas.

Severe Reflections on the Dutch.

The Allies excuſed by the more ſober Part.

Beſides the Methods before-mention'd, by which the Whig Party endeavour'd to prevent the Removal of the Lord-Treaſurer, and the calling of a new Parliament, they did not want ſtrong Arguments to prove the Danger of thoſe Alterations; for, both in their Diſcourſes and Writings they ſuggeſted, "That as all Seaſons are not "proper for Phyſick, ſo all Times are not fit for purging the Body Politick; and Arguments of the Whigs, againſt the intended Change.

(a) Viz. I am ſurpriz'd, a Matter of this kind ſhould come from the States— It is the greateſt Inſult that ever was offer'd to the Crown of England. However, it ſhall not leſſen my Eſteem of my Allies, nor alter my Reſolution in my own Affairs.

" therefore, even ſuppoſing the late Miniſtry to have been guilty of ſome Miſ-
" managements, yet ſince the War had hitherto been ſo ſucceſsfully carried on under " their Adminiſtration, it was prudent not to ſhift Hands before a Peace were con" cluded. That after ſo many Victories and Conqueſts gain'd by her Majeſty's Ar" mies, in Conjunction with thoſe of her Allies, which had obliged the French a " ſecond Time to ſue for Peace, and ſend their Plenipotentiaries to Holland, it was " reaſonable to believe, that our Heats and Diſturbances, occaſion'd by Dr. Sacheve-
" rel, together with the Hopes of an Alteration of our Miniſtry, which gave the " Enemy a Proſpect of a Turn of Affairs here, in favour of the Pretender, encou" raged them to prolong, and, at laſt, to break off the Conferences at Gertruyden-
" bergh. And, in fine, that it was no leſs ungracious to diſſolve a Parliament, that " had ſo readily voted the neceſſary Supplies for the War, than it was dangerous to " call a new one, during the preſent Ferment. To this it was anſwer'd, That, as in " Caſes of Neceſſity, Phyſick is adminiſter'd at all Times; ſo, for the ſame Reaſon,
" a Reformation in State is never out of Seaſon; that tho' it muſt be acknowledg'd,
" the War had hitherto been proſecuted with wonderful Succeſs, yet it could not be
" deny'd, that ſome Parts of it, particularly Spain, and the Weſt-Indies, had been no-
" toriouſly neglected; either with Deſign to ſpin out the War, or, at leaſt, to give " the whole Honour and Profit of it to the Favourite General; and therefore it was " neceſſary to put the Management of the Treaſury in the Hands of ſuch Perſons, as " would impartially give Attention to all the Branches of the War, which was, cer" tainly, the moſt effectual Means to procure a ſpeedy Peace. They own'd, that " conſidering the wrong Eſtimate the Jacobite Party here ever made of their own " Strength, and the falſe Informations they gave to the French Court, it was not al" together improbable, that the Enemy might have been encourag'd to break off
" the late Negotiation of Peace, upon a Proſpect of a favourable Change of Affairs
" in England: But they might have been fortify'd in that Expectation, by the Supine-
" neſs and ill Management of our Miniſters. That they might flatter themſelves to " ſucceed in a Second Attempt to bring in the Pretender; when, notwithſtanding
" the Proviſion made by Parliament towards the Security of Scotland, the Forts and " Gariſons there were ſcarce in a better Condition, than Two Years before. That
" the long Anticipations on our old Funds, the Deficiencies of ſome new ones, and " the immenſe Debts of the Navy, yet unprovided for, might reaſonably induce
" the Enemy to believe us involv'd in Difficulties, which they thought impoſſible
" for us to wade through. That our inteſtine Diviſions, induſtriouſly fomented by " the Emiſſaries of thoſe rapacious Miniſters, whom nothing but Confuſion could any " longer protect; and the ſcandalous Negligence that had been ſhewn in inſpecting
" and ſtating the Publick Accounts, muſt needs have leſſen'd our Reputation abroad;
" encourag'd the French to think us no dangerous Enemy; and made them expect to " ſee, e'er long, the great Band of the Confederacy diſſolv'd. That thoſe very " Conſiderations ſhew'd the Seaſonableneſs of bringing Abler, or, at leaſt, Honeſter
" Men, into the Adminiſtration. That the Debts being immenſe, it was highly ne-
" ceſſary to inquire how the Moneys appropriated by Parliament, had either been " diverted, or embezzled; which Inquiry, before unſucceſsfully attempted, would un" doubtedly be once more evaded, if the preſent Miniſtry and Parliament were con" tinued. That the ſame Reaſons that ought to induce her Majeſty to charge the " one, ought, likewiſe, to incline her to diſſolve the other: For, in our Political " Conſtitution, if the Miniſterial Part of the Government, and the Parliament, be " not of a Piece, nothing can be expected from them, but continual Jars and Miſ-" underſtandings, each obſtructing what the other moves for the publick Good. Be-" ſides theſe general Reaſons, it was urg'd, that the Junto (or chief Men in the late
" Miniſtry) by bribing Members, by Penſions, Civil or Military Offices, and by
" winking at the immenſe Gains ſome private Men made out of the Kingdom's
" Treaſure, had bid fair for the largeſt Share of the Legiſlative Authority; and " formed the Deſign of getting a GENERAL for LIFE, whoſe Power would be little " leſs, than either of a Roman Dictator, or an Engliſh Protector, whereby they might " govern arbitrarily both Queen and Nation; and, therefore, the Diſſolution of the " Parliament was abſolutely neceſſary, to break that fatal Combination, and quaſh
" ſuch towring and ambitious Projects. That the People, at this Time, groaning
" under a great Variety of old and new Taxes; the Neceſſities of the State being
" ſtill more preſſing than ever; the Honour of the Nation being at Stake, to make " good ſeveral Deficiencies and publick Engagements; and the late Miniſtry and " Parliament having exhauſted their Stock of Schemes, it was neceſſary to call for " the Aſſiſtance of another Set of Men to find out new Ways and Means. That a " free Nation, abhorring to ſee a few private Men accumulating vaſt Riches to " themſelves, in this general Poverty of the Publick, the Voice of the People,
" expreſſed

Contrary Arguments of the High-Church Party.

" expreſſed in the numerous Addreſſes that were daily preſented to the Queen, call'd " for this Change. That the High-Church Party, or the Landed Gentlemen, having " born the chief Burden of the War, it was but Juſtice to give them an Opportu- " nity, in ſome Meaſure, to repair their Fortunes, by admitting them into Places of " Profit. That as they begun the War, it ſeem'd reaſonable to allow them the " Honour of finiſhing it; and as upon the Death of the late King William, 'twas " they that made good the Deficiencies of that Reign, 'twas not to be doubted, but " they would be as tender of the Honour of Parliamentary Engagements. That " as the Junto had reaſon to dread the Induſtry, Frugality, Vigor and Courage, of " thoſe Patriots, whom they had found Proof againſt Bribery, and heartily zealous " for the Conſtitution in Church and State; ſo all ſiniſter Methods were us'd, to " keep them under, by branding them with odious Names, and charging them with " the wild Deſign of bringing in the Pretender: But that nothing could be more " extravagant, than to imagine, that Men of Eſtates, and Proteſtants, would, out of " Gaiety, ſet up Arbitrary Government, and Popery. And, in the laſt Place, that " ſome of our Princes had, indeed, been juſtly cenſur'd for Diſſolving Parliaments; " but 'twas then only, when they ſeem'd reſolv'd to govern without Parliaments: " Wherefore it could not be thought ungracious in her Majeſty to part with the laſt, " (though, as was alledg'd in their Favour, they ſupplied the Neceſſities of the War " with great Readineſs) ſince another was to be immediately ſummon'd, to meet " about the uſual Time, ſo that Foreign Affairs could ſuffer no prejudicial Inter- " miſſion by a Diſſolution. Upon theſe laſt, and the like Reaſons, urged with great Weight by the Duke of Shrewſbury, and inſinuated with equal Addreſs by Mr. Harley, the Queen reſolv'd to make further Changes in her Miniſtry, and to call a new Parliament. Purſuant to this Reſolution, on Tueſday, the 8th of Auguſt, her Majeſty ſent the Duke of Somerſet to demand of the Earl of Godolphin the Staff of Lord High-Treaſurer; and, the next Day, it was declar'd, That the Queen had been pleas'd to appoint John Earl Poulet, Robert Harley, Eſq; Henry Paget, Eſq; Sir Thomas Manſell, Baronet, and Robert Benſon, Eſq; Commiſſioners for the Execution of the Office of Treaſurer of her Majeſty's Exchequer. At the ſame Time, her Majeſty appointed Robert Harley, Eſq; Chancellor and Under-Treaſurer of her Majeſty's Exchequer, in the Room of John Smith, Eſq; who was afterwards made one of the Tellers of the Exchequer. The Queen was alſo pleas'd to appoint William Lord Cowper, Lord High-Chancellor of Great Britain, to be Lord Lieutenant of the County of Hertford, in the Room of the Earl of Eſſex, deceas'd; and leſt the Court of Hanover ſhould, either upon their own Obſervations, or the Suggeſtions of the diſcarded Whigs, take Umbrage at the late and intended Alterations, her Majeſty appointed Richard Earl Rivers, to go immediately her Envoy Extraordinary to that Court, to endeavour to remove all Jealouſies. On the 13th of the ſame Month, Mr. Harley was ſworn of the Queen's Privy-Council; and, about a Month before, the Earl of Angleſey, a young Nobleman of bright Parts, and growing Favour with the Queen, was made Vice-Treaſurer of Ireland, and Pay-Maſter of her Majeſty's Forces of that Kingdom, in the Room of the Lord Coningſby.

Lord Chancellor made Lord Lieutenant of Hertfordſhire, Auguſt 9.

Earl Rivers ſent Envoy Extraordinary to Hanover.

Mr. Harley made Privy-Counſellor, and the Earl of Angleſey Vice-Treaſurer of Ireland.

The Duke of Somerſet diſguſted.

It is worth Obſervation, that the Whigs were, at this critical Juncture, unhappily deprived of the Support of Two Great Men, whoſe Advice had no ſmall Weight with the Queen. The one was the Duke of Somerſet, whoſe Son, the Earl of Hertford, being refuſed a Regiment by the Duke of Marlborough, the high-ſpirited Father bore this Repulſe with deep Reſentment; the other was the Earl of Wharton, who, of late, had inſinuated himſelf very far into the Queen's Favour: But who, at this Time, happen'd to be at his Government of Ireland. But above all, the Whig Miniſtry had now Reaſon to lament the Loſs of the late Prince George of Denmark, who, whilſt he lived, had a great Influence over the Queen, and kept her ſteady to the Meaſures ſhe was engaged in for the publick Good. However, after the Removal of the Earl of Sunderland, and Lord Treaſurer, the Court pauſed a while to conſider, whether they ſhould keep in ſome Members of the old Miniſtry, or go on with a thorough Change. The new Favourites knew, in particular, that the Queen being entirely ſatisfy'd with the Wiſdom, Integrity, and Abilities of the Lord Chancellor Cowper, and that ſhe would not, without great Reluctance, part with ſo great a Miniſter, who, upon all Occaſions of Perplexity and Intricacy, had found the Way to make her eaſy, all poſſible Means were uſed, to perſuade him to continue in his Poſt. Whether a Coalition of the moſt eminent Men of both Parties, was ever really intended by the new Managers, or heartily propoſed to the Whigs, is not eaſy to determine: But, however, that Deſign being found impracticable, both becauſe the Earl of Rocheſter refuſed to come in upon ſuch a Scheme, and becauſe the moſt eminent Perſons among the Whigs, could not act in Confidence with Mr. Harley; and rather choſe voluntarily to reſign their Poſts, the Queen was in a manner manner neceſſitated to follow the Second Counſel, and agreeably to that, to call a New Parliament: The Diſſolution of the Old, which was expected about the beginning of September, was, for ſome Days, put off, upon the Difficulties ſtarted by the Lord Chancellor. But on the 21ſt of the ſame Month, the Queen exerted her Royal Prerogative, and order'd a Proclamation to be iſſued out for that Purpoſe. The ſame Day the Earl of Rocheſter was declar'd Preſident of the Council, in the room of the Lord Somers; and the Duke of Buckingham and Normanby, Lord Steward of her Majeſty's Houſhold, in the room of the Duke of Devonſhire. The Honourable Mr. Henry Boyle, having, the Day * before, reſign'd his Place of Secretary of State, the Seals were immediately given to Henry St. John, Eſq; and Sir Simon Harcourt reſtored to his former Office of Attorney-General. Some Time before, Robert Raymond, an eminent Lawyer of Gray's-Inn, was appointed Sollicitor-General, in the Room of Robert Eyre, Eſq; who, on the 5th of May, had kiſs'd the Queen's Hand, and been knighted, in order to be made one of the Judges of the Queen's-Bench, in the room of Sir Henry Gould, lately deceaſed. The Lord Chancellor Cowper, notwithſtanding the Queen's Declaration, that ſhe was entirely ſatisfy'd with his Service, and deſign'd to continue him; having, on the 23d of September, reſign'd the Greal Seal, her Majeſty, the next Day, committed the Cuſtody of it to Three Lord Commiſſioners, viz. Sir Thomas Trevor, Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas, Robert Trevor, Eſq; a Judge in the ſame Court, and Mr. Scroop, Baron of the Exchequer in Scotland: But about a Month † after, Sir Simon Harcourt, who, at firſt, was reported to have declin'd the Office of Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, was prevail'd upon by Mr. Harley, to accept it. Some Days before, Arthur Anneſley, Eſq; who, by the Death of his Brother, at this very Juncture, became Earl of Angleſey, was, jointly with Henry Lord Hide, Son to the Earl of Rocheſter, made ‖ Vice-Treaſurer, and Receiver-General, and Paymaſter of her Majeſty's Revenues in Ireland, vacant by the Death of the late Earl of Angleſey. At the ſame Time, George Granville, Eſq; a near Relation of the Earl of Bath, was appointed Secretary at War, in the room of Robert Walpole, Eſq; and John Manley, Eſq; was conſtituted her Majeſty's Surveyor-General, in the room of Samuel Travers, Eſq;. The next ⁂ Day, to the great Surprize of many wealthy Citizens, Arthur Moore, Eſq; a Perſon of as mean Capacity as Extraction, was made one of the Lords Commiſſioners of Trade and Plantations. But what raiſed ſtrange Jealouſies among the Well-affected to the Hanover Succeſſion, was to ſee the Duke of Hamilton, an open Stickler for the Pretender, brought into Play, and firſt made  Lord Lieutenant of the County Palatine of Lancaſter. A few Days after, the Duke of Ormond was declar'd Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, in the room of the Earl of Wharton; and Sir Edward Northey made Attorney-General. Dr. Robinſon, Dean of Windſor, who, of late, grew into great Confidence with Mr. Harley, was nominated to ſucceed Dr. Hall, deceas'd, in the Biſhoprick of Briſtol; and Dr. Byſſe to ſucceed Dr. Bull, deceas'd, in the See of St. Davids. Beſides theſe Changes, it was thought neceſſary to ſtrengthen the Hands of the New Miniſtry, and Church Party, by doing Juſtice to ſome Military Gentlemen, who had been unjuſtly diſregarded by the late Miniſtry. Hereupon the Earl of Portmore, an experienc'd General, who had diſtinguiſh'd himſelf on many Occaſions, in the late War, (under the Name of Sir David Collier,) and whoſe being laid aſide, (a) was lamented by all the Well-wiſhers to the Common Cauſe, was appointed Commander in Chief of Her Majeſty's Forces in Portugal, in the room of (a) To this Purpoſe I ſhall here relate the following remarkable Story, which I had (on the 1ſt of October, 1703) from Mr. Cloyſterman, a famous Face-Painter, who was principally concern'd in it. He had, it ſeems, by the Dutcheſs of Marlborough's Directions, drawn for her Grace a very large Family-Piece, in which were repreſented the Duke of Marlborough, (in a Corner, behind a thin Curtain) the Dutcheſs, their Son the Marquis of Blandford, and their Four Daughters. This Piece being much talk'd of, and admir'd, vaſt Numbers of Perſons went to ſee it; and, among the reſt, the Counteſs of Dorcheſter, a Lady of ſarcaſtick, poynant Wit, who, having view'd the Picture, turn'd off with this Expreſſion, Oh! Generation of Vipers! The Dutcheſs of Marlborough being inform'd of it, by ſome officious Talebearer or other, ſhe, and her Conſort, came to Cloyſterman's, to enquire into the Truth of the Story, which he, at laſt, confeſs'd. The Dutcheſs, being nettled to the quick, was, at firſt, for having her own Figure rubb'd out of the Piece, and a Flower-Pot placed inſtead of it: But, at laſt, ſhe reſolv'd to leave the Picture upon Mr. Cloyſterman's Hands, which went ſo near his Heart, (having ſpent many Months upon that great Piece, and loſt much of his Practice by it) that, at length, he grew melancholy mad, and pined away. Nor was the Counteſs's Taunt forgot: For this Paſſage falling out about the Time that the Earl of Portmore, (the Counteſs's Husband) was perſuaded to go and ſerve in Portugal, under the Duke of Schonberg, upon a Promiſe, that if his Grace were recall'd, he ſhould ſucceed him in the Command; yet when the Caſe happen'd, the Earl of Galway was ſent to command the Queen's Forces in Portugal, which the Earl of Portmore juſtly reſented, and thereupon quitted the Service.

the Earl of Galway; whoſe advanc'd Age and Infirmities render'd him unfit for Action; not to mention his Intimacy with the late Treaſurer. On the other hand, the Lord Windſor, who, ſome Years before, had a Regiment of Horſe taken from him, (either for not Voting in the Houſe of Commons according to the Dictates of the Miniſtry, or for oppoſing the Election of the Lord Treaſurer's Son, the Lord Rialton) was now reſtor'd to Her Majeſty's Favour, and advanc'd to the Poſt of a Lieutenant-General. At the ſame Time, General Webb, to whoſe good Conduct, and Victory at Wynendale, the Conqueſt of the important Town of Liſle was principally owing, was appointed Governor of the Iſle of Wight.

The Lord Windſor made a Lieutenant-General; And Gen. Webb Governor of the Iſle of Wight.

On the 26th of September, the Queen in Council order'd Two Proclamations to be publiſh'd; one for calling a New Parliament, the Writs to bear Teſte the 27th of that Month, and be returnable the 25th of November next; and the other, in order to the Electing and Summoning the Sixteen Peers of Scotland: And, at the ſame Time, Two other Proclamations were order'd to be publiſh'd, for a Publick Thankſgiving, on the 7th of November, both in England and Scotland; for the wonderful Courſe of Succeſs in this Campaign, and, more particularly, the ſignal and glorious Victory in Spain. Two Days * after, the Queen went to Hampton-Court; having, the ſame Day, order'd the Seals to be put to a Commiſſion for renewing the Lieutenancy of the City of London; in which, ſeveral Whigs, that were in the former, were left out, and Tories put in their Places. This new Commiſſion was chiefly deſign'd, both to prevent Sir Gilbert Heathcote, an Alderman near the Chair, and Governor of the Bank of England, (who had given Offence to the Court, by his Application to the Queen, in Favour to the late Miniſtry) his being choſen Lord-Mayor; and to ſtrengthen the Intereſt of the Church-Party, in the Election of Parliament-Men for the Capital City, which generally has a great Influence upon other Elections. But that Commiſſion was open'd too late, to have the intended Effect: For the Election for a Lord-Mayor coming on the 29th of September, according to Cuſtom, the Majority appear'd for Sir Gilbert Heathcote, and Sir Robert Beachcroft; and tho' a Poll was demanded, and great Intereſt made by the Church-Party, for Sir Richard Hoare, yet the Two firſt had the Majority of Voices; and being, on the 5th of October, returned by the Common-Hall, the Court of Aldermen did, on the 11th, chuſe Sir Gilbert Heathcote Lord-Mayor for the Year enſuing, to the great Mortification of the Church-Party. However, Sir Gilbert had but common Juſtice done him: There being an Agreement made ſome Years before, between the Aldermen of London, to chuſe him who is next the Chair, to prevent Animoſities and Diſputes. On the 10th of October, the Queen's Commiſſion for a new Lieutenancy was open'd at Guild-Hall; when Sir Samuel Garrard, then Lord-Mayor, Sir Francis Child, Sir John Parſons, Sir Robert Bedingfield, Sir William Withers, and Sir Richard Hoare, (all of the Church-Party) were choſen Colonels of the Six City-Regiments. About a Fortnight after, the new Lieutenancy of London * preſented a very dutiful Addreſs to the Queen; who gave them a very gracious Reception, and took that Opportunity to deſire them, as they had great Fortunes of their own, that they would uſe their Endeavours to ſupport the Publick Credit. It was expected that this Recommendation would have had a good Effect, and engaged the Church-Party in the City, either to advance Money to the Government, or to uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to ſupport the Publick Funds: But neither of theſe happen'd; and ſo the Bank, Eaſt-India, Annuities, and other Stocks, continued ſinking; which gave the New Miniſtry no ſmall Uneaſineſs; the rather, becauſe ſome Bills of Exchange, drawn from Genoa, for Remittances into Spain, happen'd, at this Juncture, to be proteſted. Hereupon, the new Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr. Harley) ſent his Agents into the City, who found Means to engage ſeveral rich Merchants and Bankers, particularly Mr. John Lambert, a French Refugee, to ſupply the urgent Neceſſities of the Government.

By this Time, the Elections for Parliament-Men were over in ſeveral Places; and, by the firſt Returns, it appear'd, that, amongſt the New Members, the Number of the Whigs was near equal with the Tories; which, as was then given out, anſwer'd the Expectation and Deſires of the New Managers: For, having gain'd their chief Aim, (which was, to get the late Lord Treaſurer, and his Creatures, remov'd) it was by many believ'd, that they now deſign'd to carry Things fair and even between both Parties; and therefore wiſh'd only for ſuch a Majority of the High-Church, in the Houſe of Commons, as might countenance the New Scheme; and whom, on the other hand, they might eaſily check, by means of their own Creatures, if an Unſeaſonable Zeal for the Church ſhould prompt 'em to make any Motions againſt the Toleration. If this was the real Intention of the New Miniſtry, which ſeem'd agreeable to the Moderate Principles of the Principal Contriver of the late Alterations, it ſoon appear'd that they were either miſtaken in their Computation, putation, or disappointed in their Wishes; and that the New Members of the Church-Party, far out-number'd those of the contrary Side: Which, besides the Influence of the Court, was owing to several other Causes. In the first Place, many of the Whig Gentlemen, who either could not be induc'd to believe that the Last Parliament should be dissolv'd, till the Blow was given; or, who, in Case of a Dissolution, thought themselves secure of being rechosen, had supinely neglected making an Interest; whilst those who design'd to oppose 'em, had early taken all the necessary Measures to carry their Point. Secondly, The Ferment rais'd by Dr. Sacheverel's Tryal, was now rather increas'd than abated; being industriously fomented and propagated throughout the Kingdom, in order to influence Elections: Which it did effectually, and in a more visible Manner, in the Cities and Boroughs thro' which that Divine made his Triumphant Progress, the last Summer. Thirdly, All the Inferior Clergy, (a few excepted) thinking themselves attack'd thro' the Sides of Dr. Sacheverel, were more than ordinarily zealous and diligent, in promoting the Interest of such as they thought best affected to the Church; not only without any Regard to the necessary Qualifications of Personal Merit, or Estate in the Candidates; but, in several Instances, in Breach of the Common Duties of Gratitude; strenuously opposing their very Patrons and Benefactors. And, in the last Place, the Mobility, whose tumultuous Risings in Favour of Dr. Sacheverel, seem'd, if not allow'd, at least conniv'd at, by the Impunity of their Leaders; and whose Spirits had wonderfully been inflam'd by a Multitude of licentious Writings, in which the Whigs were represented as Atheists and Republicans: The Mob, I say, appear'd now with unusual Confidence, and, as it were, arm'd with Authority, at the Elections, on the Side of the Church and Monarchy; and, not only by reproachful Language, and odious Epithets, but even by Blows, deterr'd those who came to vote contrary to the Voice of the People: Insomuch, that if the Whigs had not, on this Occasion, practis'd, as well as profess'd Moderation, these New Elections might have ended in (what was by many apprehended) a Civil War: So dangerous it is, to let loose a giddy, unthinking Multitude. The Influence of the Mob was, in a particular manner, remarkable in the Election for the City of Westminster; where Mr. Medlicot and Mr. Cross being set up by the Church-Party, some of those who offer'd to give their Voices for their Competitors, (General Stanhope, and Sir Henry Dutton-Colt) were knock'd down, and sorely wounded; which obliged many of their Party to return home, without Polling; whereby the Two first Candidates had a vast Majority. The Whigs expected, that the Election of the City of London would balance that of Westminster: And, indeed, the First Day of the Poll, their Candidates had a considerable Advantage; but such Industry was us'd by the then Lord-Mayor, and the Aldermen of the Church-Party, in bringing many Citizens upon the Livery, and engaging their Votes, that upon the Closing of the Books, Sir William Withers, Sir Richard Hoare, Sir George Newland, and John Cass, Esq; (all Four of the Church-Party) having the Majority of Votes, were declar'd duly elected. After the Poll was ended, there were extraordinary Rejoicings throughout the City, by Illuminations, Bonefires, Ringing of Bells, &c. And the tumultuous Mob was so exalted, and enraged against those, who seem'd not to partake in the Publick Joy, that they broke all the Windows they saw unlighted, without Distinction; so that many Houses of the Church-Party were damaged, as well as those of the Whigs; and, in particular, that of Sir Richard Hoare, one of the Four, for whose Sakes these Rejoicings were made: Which shews, by what Spirit of Blindness and Intoxication, the Rascality is govern'd. Some Days before, the Mob committed a more barefac'd, and audacious Piece of Outragiousness: For, as Sir Gilbert Heathcote, one of the Whig Candidates, was going out of Guild-Hall, they not only insulted him by reviling Language, but one of them spit in his Face; an Affront which, perhaps, was never offer'd before, in any Civiliz'd Nation, to a Person of his Character; He being, at that Time, the Lord-Mayor of London Elect, and, as such, one of the most eminent Civil Magistrates in Christendom.

Dr. Sacheverel's Progress.

As for the Libellous Papers, and Pamphlets that were publish'd at this Juncture, on both sides; History disdains to rake into so much Filth: But it having been hinted before, that Dr. Sacheverel was the principal Tool used by the Tories, to influence the People; it will not be amiss, here to take notice of his Progress. About the Middle of May, he went from London to Oxford, with a numerous Attendance; and was welcom'd, and magnificently entertain'd by the Earl of Abingdon, Mr. Charles Bertie, Fellow of All-Souls, Mr. Rowney, one of the Members of Parliament for that City, the Vice-Chancellor, the Heads of Houses, and most Persons of Distinction in the University. Here he continued the Remainder of that Month; and on Thursday the 1st of June, set out for Shropshire, under Pretence of taking Possession of a Living, lately beſtow'd upon him in that County by Mr. Lloyd; but, undoubtedly, with no other Deſign, than to make himſelf ſtill more popular, and to confirm the People in the High-Church Intereſt, in caſe, as they expected, the Queen ſhould diſſolve the Parliament. That Night, he came to Banbury, where the Mayor, Recorder, and Corporation, in their Robes and Formalities, with their Mace before them, attended him at his Inn, congratulated him upon his Deliverance, making him a Preſent of Wine; and in the Evening, there were Bonfires, Ringing of Bells, and all publick Expreſſions of Joy. The next Day, the Doctor dined at the Lord Willoughby's, and from thence went to Warwick, being met at a Diſtance from the Town by a Body of Horſe, who conducted him in. The Mayor and Aldermen, with abundance of the Gentry and Inhabitants of that Place, paid their Reſpects to him at his Inn, preſented him with Wine, and would have entertain'd him the Day following; which he declin'd, and went that Night † to the Lord Craven's, and continued ſome Days in that County. On the 12th of June, he was entertain'd at Dinner, by Sir William Boughton, together with the Lord Willoughby, Lord Craven, and divers other Gentlemen and Clergymen, who came to expreſs their great Joy and Satisfaction to ſee the Doctor. Some Days after, he continued his Progreſs, and on the 23d, went through Wrexham, in his Way to his Preferment at Salatin; being met within a Mile of the Town, by moſt of the Gentlemen in the County, and others, to the Number of about Two thouſand. He lay that Night at the Houſe of George Shakerley, Eſq; and next Day, the Chancellor of the Dioceſe gave Orders for his Inſtitution and Induction, which was perform'd ſome Days after. The Doctor having been invited to Shrewsbury, he went thither the 3d of July, being met at Monford Bridge, Three Miles from the Town, by Corbet Kingſton, Eſq; Mr. Owen, Mr. Creſſet, Mr. Creſwell, Mr. Mitton, and all the neighbouring Gentlemen, and others, and was conducted to Shrewsbury by about Five thouſand Horſe. After he had been nobly entertain'd there, he went to Mr. Owen's, at Condover, where he was alſo magnificently treated; and then proceeded to Bridgnorth, in which Place he could not fail making a moſt pompous Entry; Mr. R. Creſwell, jun. a rakiſh Youth, and a profeſs'd Jacobite, who deſign'd to ſtand for Member of Parliament for that Place, having ſent a Circular Letter to the Clergy round about, and others, who were Well-wiſhers to the Doctor's Doctrine, deſiring them to accompany him into Town, and favour him with their Company at Dinner. According to this Invitation, moſt of the neighbouring Clergy and Gentlemen repair'd to * Bridgnorth; ſo that when Dr. Sacheverel came near the Town, he was met by Mr. Creſwell, at the Head of about Four thouſand Horſe, and near Three thouſand Foot, moſt of them with white Knots, edged with Gold, and Three Leaves of gilt Laurel in their Hats; the Hedges, Two Miles from the Town, being dreſs'd with Flowers, and lined with People; and the Two Steeples adorn'd with Fifty Pounds-worth of Flags and Colours. The Doctor being likewiſe invited to Ludlow, he repair'd thither the 7th of July, being met by great Numbers of Men on Horſeback, and a vaſt Multitude on Foot; with Drums beating, Trumpets ſounding, and Colours flying; and being conducted to the Apartment prepared for him, was moſt nobly entertain'd. But as all Human Proſperity is generally fleeting and ſhort-liv'd, ſo Ludlow was, it ſeems, the laſt Stage of the Doctor's Triumph; and, indeed, it gave no ſmall Offence, even to the ſober Part of his own Party, to ſee a Clergyman, who had the Misfortune to be found Guilty of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, and who ſtill lay under the Cenſure of the higheſt Court of Judicature in Great Britain, daring the Juſtice of the Nation, and encouraging ſuch vaſt Numbers of Horſe and Foot to attend him: Which ſeem'd altogether inconſiſtent with the Doctrine of Paſſive-Obedience and Non-Reſiſtance, ſince his Triumphant Progreſs was but one Degree removed from a downright Inſurrection. The Doctor, expecting to be received at Worceſter with the ſame Honours and Reſpects that had been paid him in other Places, ſet out from Ludlow, in order to repair thither; but met with ſome Slights and Affronts in ſome Towns through which he had paſs'd. His Diſappointment and Mortification was ſtill more remarkable at Worceſter, Dr. Lloyd, Lord Biſhop of that See, having given expreſs Orders to the Clergy of his Dioceſe, againſt paying any Reſpect to the Doctor, which were punctually obey'd.

To conclude our Obſervations upon the Elections in England, we ſhall only take Notice, that tho' the Tories had boaſted, that none of the Managers againſt Dr. Sacheverel would be rechoſen; yet, notwithſtanding the utmoſt Endeavours that were uſed to prevent it, Sir Joſeph Jekyll, Sir Peter King, Mr. Lechmere, and Mr. Walpole, were return'd; as was alſo General Stanhope for Cockermouth, tho' he loſt his Election at Weſtminſter. according to the Deſires and Dictates of the Court; and thoſe of the Commons, much upon an equal Foot, between Whigs and Tories.

The new Lord Mayor inſtall'd without Solemnity.

On the 30th of October, Sir Gilbert Heathcote, Lord-Mayor of London, was, according to Cuſtom, ſworn at the Exchequer in Weſtminſter; but the Pageantry, and ſome other Parts of the uſual Solemnity, were omitted, his Lordſhip well knowing, that he was not acceptable to the Common People, ſome of whom were ſo audaciouſly inſolent, as to inſult him in his Cavalcade. On the 6th of November, the Queen came from Hampton-Court to St. James's Palace; where, the next † Day, ſhe obſerv'd the General Thankſgiving in her Royal Chapel. Two Days after, a remarkable Advertiſement, ſign'd Henry St. John, was publiſh'd in the London-Gazette, importing, "That ſome evil-deſigning Perſons having unſcrewed and taken away ſeveral "Iron Bolts, out of the great Timbers of the Weſt Roof of the Cathedral Church of "St. Paul, her Majeſty, for the better Diſcovery of the Offenders, was pleas'd to "promiſe her moſt gracious Pardon, and a Reward of Fifty Pounds, to any Per-"ſon concern'd therein, who ſhould diſcover his Accomplices." This Advertiſement occaſion'd the Report of a Plot to deſtroy the Queen and the Court, by the Fall of the Roof of St. Paul's on the Thankſgiving-Day; when, it was ſuppos'd, her Majeſty would have gone thither: Which pretended Screw-Plot, (as it was afterwards called) many of the Tories, and the Imiſſaries of the New Miniſtry, were ready enough to charge upon the Whigs. But, upon Inquiry, it appear'd, that the miſſing of the Iron Pins, was owing to the Neglect of ſome Workmen, who thought the Timbers ſufficiently faſten'd without them.

Report of a pretended Plot.

The Parliament being met, on the appointed * Day, the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers with the uſual Solemnity; and the Commons being ſent for up, the Lord Keeper, by her Majeſty's Command, notify'd to them her Majeſty's Pleaſure, that they ſhould forthwith proceed to the Choice of a fit Perſon to be their Speaker, and preſent him to her Majeſty the Monday following. The Commons being returned to their own Houſe, proceeded, accordingly, to the Choice of a Speaker; which, as 'twas generally expected, fell, without any Oppoſition, on William Bromley, Eſq; who, for many Years paſt, had been choſen Member for the Univerſity of Oxford; and who was ſure of all the Votes of the Church-Party, of which he had been one of the moſt conſtant, and moſt reſolute Leaders; particularly, in the Two firſt Parliaments of this Reign, when he brought in, and ſtrenuouſly ſtickled for, the Occaſional Conformity-Bill: Not to mention his natural and acquired Abilities, and conſummate Experience of Parliamentary Methods of Proceeding; which, alone, ſufficiently recommended him to that high Station. It is obſervable, that Sir Thomas Hanmer, Mr. John Smith, (formerly Speaker) and another Member, were, at firſt, propos'd: But this was only to try the Temper and Affections of the Houſe; for as ſoon as Mr. Bromley was named, the general Voice was for him. The Queen being, on the 27th of November, returned to the Houſe of Peers, the Commons preſented their Speaker to her Majeſty, who, having approved their Choice, ſhe afterwards made the following Speech to both Houſes.

"To this End, I ſhall recommend to you, what is abſolutely neceſſary for our "common Safety.

"The carrying on the War in all its Parts, but particularly in Spain, with the "utmoſt Vigor, is the likelieſt Means, with GOD's Bleſſing, to procure a ſafe and "honourable Peace for us, and all our Allies, whoſe Support and Intereſt I have "truly at Heart.

"For this Purpoſe, I muſt aſk from you, Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, the "neceſſary Supplies for the next Year's Service: And let me put you in Mind, that "nothing will add ſo much to their Efficacy, as Unanimity and Diſpatch.

"I cannot, without great Concern, mention to you, that the Navy, and other "Offices, are burthened with heavy Debts, which ſo far affect the publick Service, "that I moſt earneſtly deſire you to find ſome way to anſwer theſe Demands, and "to prevent the like for the Time to come. The Juſtice of Parliament, in ſatiſ-"fying former Engagements, being the certain way for preſerving and eſtabliſhing "National Credit.

"I am ſenſibly touched with what my People ſuffer by this long and expenſive "War, to which, when it ſhall pleaſe GOD to put an End, the flouriſhing Con"dition

" dition of my Subjects ſhall be as much my Care, as their Safety is at pre" ſent.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" The Eyes both of Friends and Enemies are upon you: The way to give Spirit
" to the one, and to defeat the reſtleſs Malice of the other, is to proceed in ſuch
" Manner, as becomes a Britiſh Parliament.

" I ſhall, in the plaineſt Words, tell you my Intentions; and I do this with the " greateſt Satisfaction, becauſe I depend upon their being agreeable to you.

" I am reſolved to ſupport and encourage the Church of England, as by Law
" eſtabliſhed.

" To preſerve the Britiſh Conſtitution, according to the Union.

" And to maintain the Indulgence by Law allowed to ſcrupulous Conſciences.

" And that all theſe may be tranſmitted to Poſterity, I ſhall employ none but " ſuch as are heartily for the Proteſtant Succeſſion, in the Houſe of Hanover; the " Intereſt of which Family, no Perſon can be more truly concerned for, than my " ſelf.

" Theſe are my Reſolutions: And your Concurrence with me in a ſteady Purſuit
" of them, will beſt manifeſt your Zeal for our Religion, for the Intereſt of our " Country, for your own Safety, and for my Honour.

Addreſſes of both Houſes.

The Lords preſented a very dutiful Addreſs to the Queen; wherein they entirely agreed with her Majeſty, in the ſeveral Reſolutions ſhe had declared ſo plainly, and ſo affectionately to her Parliament. The Commons more particularly told the Queen,
" That they brought both the Thanks of her whole People, whom her Majeſty had " made happy, by that Confidence ſhe had been pleaſed to place in their Duty and " Affection, and their own moſt ſolemn Aſſurances, that they would make all
" ſuch Returns, as ſhould convince her Majeſty, that her Confidence had not been
" miſplaced. That they were ſatisfied they lay under all poſſible Obligations,
" both from their Duty to her Majeſty, and the Care they owed to their Country,
" effectually and ſpeedily to grant the neceſſary Supplies for a vigorous Proſecution
" of the War in all its Parts, and eſpecially in Spain: Which they ſhould ſtudy to " do, in ſuch a manner, as might beſt anſwer the publick Service, and be moſt eaſy
" to thoſe they repreſented; and the ſame they ſhould continue to do, 'till ſuch a " Peace might be obtained, as her Majeſty, in her Royal Wiſdom, ſhould judge to " be ſafe and honourable for her Subjects, and all her Allies. That they had no
" Reaſon to doubt of her Majeſty's Care in every Thing that concern'd the Intereſt
" and Welfare of her People; but they thought themſelves obliged in Juſtice to " their Fellow-Subjects, and in order to make them bear, with greater Chearful-
" neſs, the Burdens they ſhould find neceſſary to lay upon them, moſt humbly to
" beſeech her Majeſty, that ſhe would pleaſe to continue her powerful Influences
" with all her Allies, that they might exert themſelves in the Common Cauſe,
" with Reſolutions equal, and with Aids proportionable to theirs. That the Burden
" of thoſe heavy Debts, which preſſed her People with ſo ſenſible a Weight, was,
" in ſome Meaſure, alleviated by her Princely Compaſſion; That they ſhould endea" vour to trace the Source of this great Evil, and to apply a Remedy ſuitable to it.
" That the Honour and Juſtice of Parliament ſhould, by them, be inviolably main" tained, and all ſuch other Meaſures purſued, by which the publick Credit might " be preſerved and eſtabliſhed.

" Your faithful Commons, added they, are truly ſenſible of your Majeſty's Wiſ-
" dom and Goodneſs in thoſe Reſolutions which you have declared; and do moſt " heartily concur in all which you have been pleaſed to recommend to them.

" We return your Majeſty our moſt humble Thanks for the firm Aſſurances you " have given both by your Words, and by your Actions, of ſupporting and encou" raging the Church of England by Law Eſtabliſhed.

" As we are true Sons of that Church, we cannot but be tenderly concern'd for its " Proſperity, and for its Honour, and are, by Affection and Principles, inclined to " ſecure its Doctrine, Diſcipline, and Worſhip.

" As we are Fellow-Chriſtians and Fellow-Subjects with thoſe Proteſtant Diſſenters,
" who are ſo unhappy to entertain Scruples againſt Conformity with our Church, we " are deſirous and determined to let them quietly enjoy that Indulgence which the " Law hath allowed them.

" As we are Britons, it is our Common Intereſt, and ſhall be our Joint Endea" vour, to preſerve that Union between the Parts of Great Britain, on which the " Safety of the whole depends.

" As we are Lovers of our excellent Conſtitution, both in Church and State, and " ſollicitous that our Poſterity may be as happy in future Ages, as we hope long to " continue under your Majeſty's Auſpicious Reign, we ſhall always ſteadily adhere " to the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, and be moſt watchful to " prevent any Danger which may threaten that Settlement, ſo neceſſary for the Pre-

" ſervation of our Religion, Laws, and Liberties.

" Theſe are the Ends truly worthy your Majeſty's Purſuit; and we do, with all
" all Humility, repreſent to your Majeſty, That the moſt effectual way to give " Spirit to your Friends, and defeat the reſtleſs Malice of your Enemies, will be,
" by diſcountenancing all Perſons of ſuch Principles, and avoiding all Meaſures of " ſuch Tendency, as may weaken your Majeſty's Title and Government, the Set" tlement of the Crown in the illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover, and advance the Hopes
" of the Pretender; and all other Principles and Meaſures that have lately threatned
" your Crown and Dignity, which, whenever they prevail, will prove fatal to our " whole Conſtitution, both in Church and State.

Though this Addreſs was generally approv'd, and abundantly ſhew'd the Commons good Diſpoſitions to anſwer all the Expectations of the Queen and Nation; yet it had little or no Effect, in Relation to the publick Funds: Moſt of the Whigs, and Monied Men, being ſtill uneaſy, whilſt the Doctrine of Abſolute Paſſive Obedience, and of Hereditary Right, altogether inconſiſtent with the late Revolution, and the Hanover Succeſſion, were openly countenanc'd: Not to mention their juſt Apprehenſions, that the Duke of Marlborough would either be laid aſide, or made ſo uneaſy, as to be obliged to reſign his Command. This Jealouſy was increas'd, upon a Paſſage that happen'd on the 28th of November, in the Houſe of Peers: Where the Earl of Scarborough having made a Motion, That the Thanks of that Houſe be return'd to the Duke, ſome Objections were rais'd againſt it by the Duke of Argyle; and the Duke of Marlborough's Friends being apprehenſive, that if the Queſtion were put upon it, the Negative might carry it, ſaid, it would be Time enough to ſpeak to that Matter, when the Duke was come Home; whereupon the Houſe was adjourn'd. The next * Day a Complaint was made by the Earl of Rocheſter, againſt the Lord Keeper, for taking upon him to introduce the Scotch Lords to the Queen, being himſelf no Peer by Patent: But the Lord Keeper excuſing his Miſtake, if he had committed any, with a great deal of Modeſty, and on the other Hand, the late Lord Chancellor maintaining, that he had Right to act as he had done; no further Notice was taken of it. As for the Commons, they made good their Aſſurances to the Queen, readily granted the neceſſary Supplies for the next Year's Service; and gave ſuch Diſpatch to the Land-Tax Bill, that, on the 23d of December, it receiv'd the Royal Aſſent; after which both Houſes adjourn'd to the 2d of January.

About the beginning of December, the Queen appointed the Earl of Peterborow to go to Vienna, to concert Meaſures with the Imperial Court, for the vigorous Proſecution of the War, particularly in Spain, which, at this Juncture, ſeem'd to be the Court's Favourite Project, though not generally approved. For many obſerv'd, that this was the very Thing the moſt Chriſtian King had been aiming at, in the late Negotiations, viz. to make a ſeparate Peace, excluſive from Spain, in order to carry the ſtreſs of the War into that Country, where, whatever Engagement he enter'd into, he might, underhand, aſſiſt his Grandſon; who, having the Affections of the People, might proſecute the War with infinite Advantage over the Allies, whereby his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty would eaſe himſelf of the War in Flanders, which gall'd him moſt, and threaten'd the very Heart of his Dominions. About the ſame Time, the Earl Rivers was appointed her Majeſty's Miniſter and Plenipotentiary to the Court of Hanover, from whence he was lately return'd; and Captain Delaval, who had already been named Ambaſſador Extraordinary to Portugal, was alſo appointed Ambaſſador Plenipotentiary to the Emperor of Morocco, with Inſtructions to treat for Horſes and Proviſions for the Confederate Armies in Spain. About this Time, likewiſe, Charles Craven, Eſq; Brother to the Lord Craven, was appointed Governor of Carolina, in the room of Major Tynne, lately deceas'd. It was alſo declared, That the Queen had † named Richard Hill, Eſq; to be her Envoy Extraordinary, and Plenipotentiary to the United Provinces, and to the Council of State appointed for the Government of the Spaniſh Low-Countries, (which Poſt he had formerly diſcharg'd with great Reputation) in the room of Lieutenant-General Cadogan, whom her Majeſty had thought fit to recal from that Employment. The Military Men were not ſo ſurpriz'd at this Change, as when they heard, that the Commiſſions of Lieutenant-General Meredith, Major-General Maccartney, and Brigadier Honywood, were ſuperceded; upon an Information, (by what Means procured, is yet a Secret) laid before the Queen, that thoſe Three Gentlemen had, in their Cups, drank Damnation and Confuſion to the New Miniſtry, and to thoſe who had any Hand in turning out the Old. This implying a heinous Reflection, if not, as ſome maliciouſly endeavour'd to ſtrain it, an Imprecation on the Queen's ſelf, Mr. Granville, Secretary at War, was directed directed to ſignify to them, That the Queen had no further Occaſion for their Service; but that, out of her gracious Bounty, ſhe was pleaſed to allow them to ſell their reſpective Regiments. Brigadier Honywood being then in London, her Majeſty's Pleaſure was ſignify'd to him here; and the Order for ſuſpending the other Two Generals, was ſent to the Duke of Marlborough, then at the Hague, who tranſmitted it to them at the Brill, where they were ready to embark for England. Some Perſons, who, about this time, came over from Flanders, extenuated the Crime of thoſe Three unfortunate Gentlemen; averring, That they only drank a Health to the Duke of Marlborough, and Confuſion to all his Enemies; which is uſual in all Armies, out of Reſpect to the Commander in Chief; but whether this Excuſe was well-grounded or not, the new Miniſters thought it neceſſary to make an Example, in order to keep within Bounds the Generals, and other Officers of the Army, ſome of whom, 'twas ſaid, dropt doubtful Expreſſions of ſtanding by their General: And this might adminiſter the greater Cauſe of Suſpicion, at this Juncture, becauſe the Deſign of making a General for Life, was laid to the Charge of the Old Miniſtry, in a Pamphlet † countenanc'd by ſome Great Men. Not many Days after, the Earl of Hertford, Son to the Duke of Somerſet, was made Governor of Tinmouth Fort, in the Room of General Meredith, who, about this Time, had a further Mortification put upon him, his Place of Gentleman of the Horſe to the Queen, being given to Coniers Darcy, Eſq; Brother to the Earl of Holderneſs. On the 13th of December, Henry Duke of Beaufort, and James Duke of Hamilton, were ſworn of her Majeſty's Privy-Council; and about the ſame time, Sir James Wiſheart, and George Clarke, Eſq; were made Commiſſioners of the Admiralty, in the Room of Mr. Methuen and Mr. Doddington. It is remarkable, that Mr. Clarke had formerly been turned out of his Place of one of the Prince of Denmark's Council, as High Admiral, for not Voting in the Houſe of Commons as directed by a Great Man; ſo that his Preferment was now thought a Piece of Juſtice done him. About this Time alſo, Charles Whitworth, Eſq; who was Envoy to the Czar of Muſcovy, was appointed Ambaſſador Extraordinary to the ſame Court. The Queen was alſo pleaſed, about the middle of December, to appoint the Earl of Abingdon Lord Chief Juſtice, and Juſtice in Eyre, of all her Majeſty's Foreſts, Chaces, Parks, &c. on the South-ſide of Trent, in the room of the Earl of Wharton; and to make the Counteſs of Abingdon one of the Ladies of the Bed-Chamber. Not many Days after, her Majeſty conferred the Honour of Knighthood upon Conſtantine Phipps, Eſq; one of Dr. Sacheverel's Council, in his late Tryal, and appointed him Lord Chancellor of Ireland; and William Jefferies, Eſq; was named her Majeſty's Reſident at the Court of Sweden.

On the 20th of December, Don Venturo Zary, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from the Emperor of Morocco, had a private Audience of the Queen, to whom he made ſeveral Preſents from his Maſter. Two Days after, the Electoral Prince of Hanover, Duke of Cambridge, the Duke of Devonſhire, and the Duke of Argyle, were, with the uſual Solemnity, inſtalled at Windſor, Knights of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter; the Lord Halifax ſtanding Proxy for the Firſt. On Chriſtmaſs-Day, the Queen went out of Mourning, which ſhe had worn above Two Years, for the Loſs of her entirely beloved Royal Conſort; and the Court was extream Magnificent. But the wonted Rejoicings of theſe Holy-Days, were much appal'd, by the ill News that came * from Spain, by the way of Paris and Holland; which ſeemed to confirm their Opinion, who were for carrying on the War with all Vigor in Flanders, and ſtanding on the Defenſive in Spain.

The Duke of Marlborough having embarked in Holland the 23d, and met with contrary Winds, did not reach Solebay till the 26th, at Five in the Afternoon; and having that Night lain at Chelmsford, arrived the 28th in London. Upon his Entrance into the City, about Five a-Clock in the Evening, his Coach was attended by Multitudes of People, with Links and Flambeaux; who, by their loud Acclamations, expreſſed their Joy at his Grace's happy Return. Tho' the Duke knew the Inſtability and Emptineſs of the Applauſe of the Vulgar; yet he could not but be well pleaſed to ſee himſelf ſo welcome to a Mobility, which, ſome Months before, was tumultuous in favour of Dr. Sacheverel, the main Occaſion, or rather Pretence, of the late Diſtractions and Alterations, which were principally intended, if not directly againſt himſelf, at leaſt againſt his neareſt Relations. However, his Grace, who never affected Popularity, thought it Prudence, in this Juncture eſpecially, to avoid the leaſt Shew of it; and therefore, inſtead of going directly to St. James's Houſe, bid his Coach drive to Montague Houſe; where, having reſted an Hour or Two, he went out by a private Door, leaving the Mobility behind. Immediately, upon his Arrival at St. James's, he waited upon the Queen, who gave him a very gracious Reception, and diſcourſed with him about half an Hour; after which, his Grace went to his Apartment. The next Morning, his Grace aſſiſted at a Committee of the the Privy-Council; and that Day, and the following, received the Visits of the Earl of Rochester, President of the Council; the Earl of Poulet, First Lord Commissioner of the Treasury; the Secretaries of State, and other Persons in the Ministry. Nevertheless, the Uncertainty whether his Grace should be continued in his Command in Flanders, cast a fresh Damp upon the Publick Credit; and, therefore, it was the general Wish of the most wealthy and substantial Citizens, that, in order to remove that Doubt, his Grace should receive the Thanks, if not of both, at least, of either of the Two Houses of Parliament. But his Grace's Friends having already been disappointed in the House of Lords, were shy of attempting it a second Time; the rather, because they found the Majority of that House inclined to pass that Compliment on the Earl of Peterborow; and those his Grace had in the House of Commons, thinking themselves too few to attempt it at all; so that, instead of having the Thanks of either House, his Grace had the Mortification to see an invidious and scurrilous Letter published, supposed to be written to the Mayor of St. Albans, and containing, Reasons why a certain Great General had not the Thanks of either of the Two Houses of Parliament, &c. This, together with some dubious Expressions, that came out of the Duke's Mouth, in the subsequent Debates about the Affairs of Spain, increased the Apprehension of many, that his Grace would gratify his private Disgust, and lay down his Commission; it being, they thought, natural for his Resentment to suggest, "That he had acquired a sufficient Stock of Honour and Wealth, "to despise the Frowns of Fortune; that it would be derogatory to his Character, "to stoop to the Authors of the Disgrace of his Relations; who, whatever their Pre- "tences might be, would never heartily embrace his Interest, and contribute to the "Support of the Glory he had already gained; that the Fate of War being uncer- "tain, the least Diminution of the Prosperity that had hitherto attended the Arms "of the Allies, might be charged on him as a Crime; whereas, if any Misfortune "should befal them under another General, the Court would have Reason to regret "the Loss of so prosperous a Commander, and to court him to serve again, which "would add a fresh Lustre to his Reputation." But his Grace, who, upon his Departure from Holland, had promised the States General, and Prince Eugene, not to abandon the Common Cause, like an old Courtier, and consummate Politician, resolved to conceal his private Resentment, by concerting Measures with the New Ministry, (tho' not with the same Confidence and hearty Zeal, as he did with the Old) wisely considering, that the preserving his Command in Flanders, was the most effectual Means to maintain his Credit Abroad, and to buoy up his declining Interest at Home. Pursuant to this Counsel, his Grace made a free Resignation of his Dutchess's Places at Court, by delivering into her Majesty's Hands, the Key of Groom of the Stole; which was so acceptable to her Majesty, that she was pleas'd, not only to renew his Commission, but likewise to make his Grace easy in his Command, by a Disposition of the other Generals. To this purpose, we may take Notice, that there being a Pique between his Grace, and the Duke of Argyle, the Queen named the latter her Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to King Charles III. and Commander in Chief of her Majesty's Forces in Spain; tho' it was, for some time doubtful, whether he would accept of these Emploments; his Grace being sensible, how difficult it would be for him to retrieve the desperate Affairs of that Country; which, if he failed to do, it might afford his Enviers an Occasion to censure his Conduct, as others had lately done, that of the Earl of Galway, and General Stanhope: But the Queen having fixed her Resolution, and the Parliament made an Additional Provision for the Service of Spain; his Grace acquiesced in the Queen's Pleasure, and some time after set out for Holland, in his way to Barcelona. Some Days pass'd, before the Queen disposed of the Dutchess of Marlborough's Places; but, about the latter end of January, it was declared, that the Dutchess of Somerset was made Groom of the Stole, First Lady of the Bed-Chamber, and Lady of the Wardrobe to her Majesty; and, that Mrs. Masham was made Privy-Purse, in the room of the Dutchess of Marlborough; who, some time after, removed from her Lodgings in the Royal Palace at St. James's to Montague House, retaining, of all her former Places, only that of Ranger of Windsor Park, which was given her Grace for a certain Number of Years. About the same Time, Sir John Leake, Rear-Admiral of Great Britain, was appointed Admiral and Commander in Chief of her Majesty's Fleet, in the room of Matthew Aylmer, Esq; and Sir Thomas Hardy was made Rear-Admiral of the Blue Squadron of her Majesty's Fleet. Not long before, the Regiments of Lieutenant-General Meredith, Major-General Macartney, and Brigadier Honywood, who having incurred the Queen's Displeasure, were suspended from their Commands, were disposed of; the First to the Earl of Orrery, the Second to Colonel Kane, and the Third to Colonel Clayton. At the same time, Major-General Sybourg, Lieutenant-Colonel of the Duke of Schomberg's

The Queen's ‖ Birth-day was this Year ſolemnized with extraordinary Pomp and Magnificence: But it was obſerv'd, that the Duke of Marlborough did not appear at this Feſtival, having, with her Majeſty's Leave, ſet out Four Days before for Bleinheim-Houſe, with the Marquis de Paſcal, Governor of Bruſſels, lately come over from Flanders, and Monſieur de Soiſſan, on whom the Queen did, afterwards, beſtow a Noble Gratuity, for his unſucceſsful Service the laſt Summer, on the Deſcent at Port de Cette.

‖ Feb. 6. The Duke of Marlborough ſets out for Bleinheim.

Let's now reſume the Proceedings in Parliament. As ſoon as the Commons † met again, Mr. Secretary St. John deliver'd to them a Meſſage from the Queen, acquainting them, "That there had been an Action in Spain, very much to the Diſ-"advantage of King Charles's Affairs; which having fallen, particularly, on the "Britiſh Forces, the Queen had immediately given Directions for ſending, and pro-"curing Troops to repair this Loſs; not doubting but the Parliament would ap-"prove thereof." The like Meſſage was ſent to the Lords; and both Houſes return'd the Queen their reſpective Thanks for it, aſſuring her at the ſame Time, That they were perfectly ſatisfy'd in her great Care; entirely depended upon her Wiſdom; and would effectually ſupport Her Majeſty, in her Meaſures for retrieving the Loſs in Spain. This Meſſage gave the Court-Lords a fair Occaſion for an Inquiry into the Affairs of that Country; and, at the ſame Time, (which they had principally in View) an Opportunity to give the Duke of Marlborough a ſide-wind Mortification, by calling the Earl of Galway to an Account, and paſſing a Compliment on the Earl of Peterborow. With this View, when the latter was thought to be on his Departure for Vienna, upon a Motion made by the Duke of Beaufort, the Lords deſir'd the Queen to ſtay his Lordſhip's Journey for ſome Days, that they might make uſe of ſuch Lights and Informations, as the Earl could give them, concerning the Affairs of Spain. This being all Court-Juggle, the Queen readily comply'd with the Deſire of the Peers; who having, on the 5th, taken the Affairs of Spain into Conſideration, the Earl of Abingdon, Chairman of the Committee of the whole Houſe, put, ſeverally, Five Queſtions to the Earl of Peterborow; to which his Lordſhip return'd diſtinct Anſwers, containing, in the main, a Relation of the Facts and Paſſages, publiſh'd ſome Years before by Dr. Friend, a Phyſician, who attended his Lordſhip in Spain, in a Book entituled, An Account of the Earl of Peterborow's Conduct, &c. wherein that Lord's Management was fully juſtify'd, and highly extoll'd; not without ſome glancing Reflections on the Conduct of the other Generals in Spain and Portugal; particularly, the Earl of Galway's. After this, the Lords order'd the Earl of Galway, and the Lord Tyrawley, (formerly known by the Name of Sir Charles O-Hara) to appear before them the * next Day; which they did accordingly: And the firſt, having a Chair appointed for him without the Bar, by reaſon of his Infirmities, was deſir'd by the Chairman, to give the Lords an Account of what he knew concerning the Affairs of Spain. The Earl of Galway, having excus'd his Deficiency, in not expreſſing himſelf ſo properly as he could wiſh in the Engliſh Tongue, gave the Lords an ingenuous Account of his Conduct, from his firſt ſetting out for Portugal, till the Time he was recall'd; with which their Lordſhips appear'd to be well ſatisfy'd: And, as he alledg'd, that his Memory might have fail'd him, in ſeveral important Particulars, he deſired he might be allow'd to give in Writing, what he had deliver'd by word of Mouth; which was readily granted. The Lord Tyrawley being deſir'd to ſay what he knew, about the ſame Affairs, and not knowing either the Driſt of ſuch an Inquiry, or how far his own Reputation was concern'd; his Lordſhip ſtood more upon the Reſerve, and ſaid, That when he was in the Army, he kept no Regiſter; and carry'd neither Pen nor Ink about him, but only a Sword, which he uſed the beſt he could, upon Occaſion: And, that all he knew, in general, was, That they always acted according to the Reſolutions of the Councils of War. The Lords Galway and Tyrawley being withdrawn;

several Peers, particularly the Duke of Marlborough, the Earls of Wharton and Godolphin, and the Lord Halifax, spoke in Favour of the Lord Galway; and, among other Things, the Duke of Marlborough (with the utmoſt Concern, and even Tears in his Eyes) ſaid, That 'twas ſomewhat ſtrange, that Generals, who had acted to the beſt of their Underſtandings, and had loſt their Limbs in the Service, ſhould be examin'd like Offenders, about inſignificant Things: And he could not imagine the Meaning of ſuch Proceedings, nor where they would ſtop. After a ſmall Debate, the Lords adjourn'd to the * Monday following; when the Earl of Galway deliver'd his Narrative in Writing; as did alſo the Earl of Peterborow, the Recapitulation of his Anſwers, with ſeveral other Papers. The † next Day, the Lords reſumed the Conſideration of the Affairs of Spain; the Queen being in the Houſe, incognito; and, after a long Debate, came to a Reſolution, That the Earl of Peterborow had given a very faithful, juſt, and honourable Account of the Councils of War in Valencia. It was afterwards mov'd, to adjourn to the ‖ Thurſday following; but before it paſs'd into a Reſolution, the Earl of Poulet gave in the following Queſtion, to be debated in the next Committee of the whole Houſe: "That the Earl of Galway, Lord Tyrawley, and "General Stanhope, inſiſting, in a Conference held at Valencia, ſome Time in Ja"nuary, 17$\frac{10}{11}$, in the Preſence of the King of Spain; and the Queen's Name be"ing uſed, in Maintenance of their Opinions for an Offenſive War, contrary to "the King of Spain's Opinion, and that of all the General Officers, and Publick "Miniſters, except the Marquis das Minas; and the Opinion of the Earl of Galway, "Lord Tyrawley, and General Stanhope, being purſued in the Operations of the fol"lowing Campaign, was the unhappy Occaſion of the Battel of Almanza, and one "great Cauſe of our Misfortunes in Spain, and of the Diſappointment of the Duke "of Savoy's Expedition before Toulon, concerted with Her Majeſty?" The Earl of Galway and Lord Tyrawley, having Notice that this Queſtion, which tended to cenſure them, was to be debated on the 11th of January, did (that Day) petition the Lords, to give them Time to put in their Anſwers, before their Lordſhips came to a Determination: But theſe Petitions were rejected; After which, the Lords debated the Queſtion propoſed by the Earl of Poulet; which was carried in the Affirmative. The next * Day, the Lords, in a Committee of the whole Houſe, took into further Conſideration the State of the War in Spain; the Queen being again preſent incognito; and, after a long and warm Debate, came to theſe Reſolutions: Viz. "Firſt, That it appear'd, by the Lord Sunderland's Letter, that the carrying "on the War offenſively in Spain, was approv'd and directed by the Miniſters; "notwithſtanding the Deſign of attempting Toulon, which the Miniſters, at that "Time, knew was concerted with the Duke of Savoy; and therefore, were juſt"ly to be blamed for contributing to all our Misfortunes in Spain, and to the Diſ"appointment of the Expedition againſt Toulon. Secondly, That the Earl of Peterbo"row, during the Time he had the Honour of Commanding the Army in Spain, did "perform many great and eminent Services; and, if the Opinion he gave in the "Council of War at Valencia, had been follow'd, it might, very probably, have "prevented the Misfortunes that had happen'd ſince in Spain." The Lords of the High-Church Party having, by the Help of the Scotch, who voted every one of them on that ſide, carry'd all theſe Queſtions; the Earl of Wharton moved, That ſuch Lords as were againſt them, might enter their Proteſts; which was readily granted: But the Earl of Rocheſter mov'd, on the other hand, That ſuch Lords as pleas'd, might make Animadverſions, on the Proteſtations of ſuch Lords as ſhould proteſt: Which was alſo agreed to. Then the Duke of Buckingham ſaid, One Thing more was to be done, before they adjourn'd; and that he would propoſe a Queſtion, which he was ſure would be readily agreed to; Viz. That the Earl of Peterborow have the Thanks of the Houſe, for his Eminent and Remarkable Services; And that the Lord Keeper return him the Thanks of the Houſe immediately? This Queſtion being unanimouſly agreed to; the Lord Keeper addreſs'd himſelf to the Earl of Peterborow, in the following Speech!

The Lord Keeper's Speech to his Lordſhip.

My Lord PETERBOROW,

"I Am commanded, by my Lords, to return their Thanks to your Lordſhip "for your many eminent and faithful Services to your Queen and Country, "during your Command in Spain.

My LORD,

"The Thanks of this illuſtrious Aſſembly, is an Honour, which has been rarely "paid to any Subject, but never after a ſtricter Inquiry into the Nature of any "Service, upon a more mature Deliberation, or with greater Juſtice, than at this "Time, to your Lordſhip. Such is your Lordſhip's known Generoſity, and truly "Noble Temper, that I aſſure my ſelf the Preſent I am now offering to your

" Lordſhip, is the more acceptable, as it comes pure and unmix'd, and is unattended " with any other Reward, which your Lordſhip might juſtly think would be an " Allay to it.

My LORD,

" Had more Days been allow'd me, than I have had Minutes, to call to Mind " the wonderful and amazing Succeſs, which perpetually attended your Lordſhip " in Spain, (the Effect of your Lordſhip's perſonal Bravery and Conduct) I would " not attempt the enumerating your particular Services, ſince I ſhould offend your " Lordſhip by the Mention of ſuch as I could recollect, and give a juſt Occaſion " of Offence to this honourable Houſe, by my involuntary Omiſſion of the far " greater Part of them.

" Had your Lordſhip's wiſe Counſels, particularly your Advice at the Council of " War in Valencia, been purſu'd in the following Campaign, the fatal Battel at " Almanza, and our greateſt Misfortunes which have ſince happen'd in Spain, had " been prevented, and the Deſign upon Toulon might have happily ſucceeded.

" I ſhall detain your Lordſhip no longer, than in Obedience to the Order I have " receiv'd, to return your Lordſhip, as I do, the Thanks of this Houſe, for your " eminent and remarkable Service to your Queen and Country, during your Com- " mand in Spain.

The Earl of Peterborow's Anſwer was to this Effect:

My LORDS,

The Earl of Peterborow's Anſwer.

" FOR the great Honour and Favour I have receiv'd from your Lordſhips, I " return my moſt humble Thanks, with a Heart full of the greateſt Reſpect " and Gratitude. No Services can deſerve ſuch a Reward; it is more than a ſuffi- " cient Recompence for any paſt Hardſhips; and to which nothing can give an " Addition. I cannot reproach my ſelf with any want of Zeal for the publick Ser- " vice; but your Lordſhips Approbation of what I was able to do, towards ſerving " my Queen and Country, gives me new Life; and I ſhall endeavour, in all my " future Actions, not to appear unworthy of the unmerited Favour I have received " to Day from this Great Aſſembly.

He ſets out for Vienna, Jan. 13.

The Earl of Peterborow having thus carried his Point, ſet out the next Morning, to embark for Holland, in his way to the Court of Vienna. But though it was generally believ'd, that the Lords would have contented themſelves with having paſs'd a ſlight Occaſional Cenſure on the Earl of Galway; (of whom the moſt conſiderable Peers of both Parties, had ſpoke very honourably, and whoſe Wounds pleaded in his Favour) yet on Friday, the 17th of January, he was ſummon'd to attend again their Lordſhips the Monday following. My Lord Galway being then indiſpos'd with a Rheumatiſm, and the Gout, and unable to obey that Order, the Lords ſent him a Queſtion in Writing; viz. Why, whilſt he commanded the Britiſh Forces in Spain, he gave the Right to the Portugueze? To this the Earl of Galway ſent an Anſwer, importing, That by the Treaty with Portugal, the Troops of that Crown were to have the Right in their own Country; and that, in order to engage them to march to Madrid, he was obliged to allow them the ſame Honour; for otherwiſe they would never have ſtirr'd out of Portugal. Though this Reaſon ſeem'd very plauſible; and it is certain, that if the Portugueze had not march'd into Caſtile, upon my Lord Galway's refuſing to give them the Right in Spain, his Lordſhip would certainly have been generally reflected on, for loſing the vaſt Benefit that was reaſonably expected from the Conjunction of the Portugueze with King Charles's Forces, on a Punctilio of Military Honour: Yet the Lords thought fit to reſolve, by a Majority of Sixty Four Voices, againſt Forty Four, That the Earl of Galway, in yielding the Poſt of her Majeſty's Troops to the Portugueze in Spain, acted contrary to the Honour of the Imperial Crown of Great Britain. Moreover, to give this empty Clamour againſt the late Adminiſtration, the Air of a ſerious and important Affair, the Lords appointed a Committee to inquire into the Deficiency of the Forces in Spain; and, upon the Report of that Committee, agreed to a Repreſentation, which being laid * before the Queen, receiv'd a very gracious Anſwer.

Queſtion put to my Lord Galway, Why he gave the Right to the Portugueze in Spain?

Which is voted diſhourable to the Britiſh Nation, Jan. 24.

Proceedings of the Commons.

All this while, the Commons were no leſs intent than the Lords, on the principal Buſineſs of this Seſſion, which, it ſeems, was to caſt an Odium on the late Miniſters in order to compliment and fix the New. With this View, on the 3d of January, Mr. Robert Harley, Chancellor of the Exchequer, inform'd the Houſe, That in Examinations relating to the Navy, ſome very conſiderable Abuſes were diſcover'd in the Victualling, and that a Member of the Houſe was nam'd therein: Whereupon an Addreſs was made to her Majeſty, to lay the ſaid Examinations before the Houſe: This being done accordingly, it appear'd, That Mr. Ridge, the Brewer at Portſmouth, was the Member therein mention'd, who being order'd to attend in his Place,

Place, and a Committee appointed to examine thoſe Accompts; upon their Report, the Houſe voted *, "That there had been many notorious Embezzlements, and "ſcandalous Abuſes in the Management of her Majeſty's Brewhouſe, and in Con- "tracts for furniſhing Beer, to the defrauding of the Publick, and Injury to the "Seamen. That Thomas Ridge, Eſq; having contracted to furniſh Five Thouſand "Five Hundred and Thirteen Tun of Beer upon his own Account, and Two Thou- "ſand Seven Hundred and Four Tun of Beer, in Partnerſhip with Mr. Dixon, and "having receiv'd Bills for the whole, although he had deliver'd out but Three "Thouſand Two Hundred and Thirteen Tun on the firſt, and One Thouſand Two "Hundred Sixty Nine Tuns on the latter Contract, be expell'd the Houſe: And that "an Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, to cauſe the ſaid Mr. Ridge to be proſe- "cuted for the ſame." Although this Mater appear'd extream odious, and the Cheat ſeem'd palpable, yet was not this Gentleman proſecuted, but, on the contrary, continu'd to ſerve the Navy, as before: For upon Examination, it appear'd, that, in Truth, the Publick ſuffer'd no Wrong. The Caſe ſtood thus: The Service of the Fleet had, of late, lain for the moſt Part in the Mediterranean, where the difference of Climate render'd the Beer ſent hence uſeleſs, and the Seamen, being not able to drink it there, required Drink of a better Sort; viz. a Beverage of Wine and Water, which is ordinarily uſed on board the Fleet in thoſe Parts. But as the Victualling-Office can, in their Accounts, charge Beer only, it was allow'd to the Seamen, by the Office, to take Money of the Brewer, wherewith to buy Beverage in the Streights. Thus, therefore, although the Beer was not deliver'd, and the Seamen drank Wine, yet the Nation paid for no more than their Allowance of Beer.

Petition againſt the poor Palatines.

On the 15th of January, upon the reading of a Petition of the Inhabitants of the Pariſh of St. Olave in Southwark, and other adjacent Pariſhes, "Complaining of "the great Number of Palatines inhabiting in one Houſe, whereby it was fear'd "ſome contagious Diſtemper might happen; and having not wherewithal to ſub- "ſiſt themſelves, were likely to become chargeable to the ſaid Pariſh: The ſaid Petition was referr'd to the Conſideration of a Committee, which was appointed for that Purpoſe, with Inſtructions to enquire, Upon what Invitation or Encouragement the Palatines came over, and what Monies were expended in bringing them into Britain, and for maintaining them here, and by whom paid. Nor did that Buſineſs reſt here: For, either upon a Suppoſition that the Palatines came over on the Encouragement of the Act for a General Naturalization, or on a Pretence taken from their coming over, a Bill was order'd to be brought in, to repeal the ſaid Act: And the next † Day, the Commons reſolv'd to addreſs the Queen, for the Papers relating to the bringing over and ſubſiſting the Palatines. On the 29th of the ſame Month, the engroſſed Bill, for ſecuring the Freedom of Parliaments, by limiting the Number of Officers in the Houſe of Commons, being read the Third Time, and the Queſtion put, that the Bill do paſs; it occaſion'd a Debate, in which ſeveral Members in the Court Intereſt, endeavour'd to have it thrown out: But the Country Party prevailing, the Queſtion was carried in the Affirmative, and the Bill ſent up to the Lords. The next Day, being the Anniverſary of the Martyrdom of King Charles the Firſt, the ſame was obſerv'd as uſual, and Dr. Higden, a High-Church Clergyman, preach'd in the Queen's Chapel at St. James's, (though not before her Majeſty, who happen'd to be indiſpos'd;) the Biſhop of Cheſter before the Lords; and Dr. Friend before the Commons: And both Houſes being met again on the 31ſt, they order'd, ſeverally, their Thanks to be return'd to that Prelate, and Divine, with a Deſire to print their reſpective Sermons. The ſame Day, the Commons read the Third Time, paſs'd, and ſent to the Lords, the Bill to repeal the Naturalization-Act: And the Queen, by reaſon of her Indiſpoſition, having, by her Commiſſion, authoriz'd ſeveral Lords to give the Royal Aſſent to the Act for charging and continuing the Duties on Malt, Mum, Cyder and Perry, &c. the Commons were deſired to attend the Houſe of Peers, where the Lords commiſſion'd by her Majeſty, gave the Royal Aſſent to that Act accordingly. Two Days after, the Lords rejected the Bill to limit the Number of Officers in the Houſe of Commons, without allowing it a Second Reading: Tho' ſome Lords, particularly the Earl of Sunderland, inſiſted for it; alledging, "That the Commons had of late Years ſent up that Bill, for Form-ſake, and only "to throw the Odium of its being loſt on the Houſe of Peers; and therefore their "Lordſhips ought, at leaſt, to give it a Second Reading, to let the Commons "know, that if they ſhould ſend it up once more, the Lords would take them at "their Words, and paſs it." On the 3d of February, Mr. Freeman, Chairman of the Committee of Elections, reported ſeveral Reſolutions taken in that Committee; particularly, that Sir William Barker, Baronet, was duly elected a Burgeſs for the Borough of Ipſwich, in the County of Suffolk; and that the Petition of William Thomp-

Feb. 2. The Bill to limit the Number of Officers in the Houſe of Commons, rejected by the Lords.

ſon, Eſq; (a Manager, in the laſt Seſſion of the laſt Parliament, againſt Dr. Sacheverel) was frivolous and vexatious: To which Reſolutions the Houſe agreed, and order'd, "That William Thompſon, Eſq; ſhould make Satisfaction to Sir William Parker, "for the Coſts and Expences he had been put to by reaſon of the ſaid Petition. However, Two Days after, the Tories received a ſmall Mortification; for the Lords, upon Reading the Bill for repealing the Act for a General Naturalization, rejected the ſame, by a Majority of Fourteen Voices, to the great Joy of all Proteſtant Foreigners. Moreover, it is remarkable, that if that Bill was deſign'd to prevent the French Refugees from enjoying the Benefit of the Naturalization, it had, in ſome meaſure, a contrary Effect; for whereas, ſince the paſſing of the Act, which, by this Bill, was to be repealed, ſcarce Eighteen hundred of them took the Advantage of it; above Two thouſand were naturaliz'd, ſince the Motion for repealing it was made, till it was rejected by the Lords. On the 16th, the Commons read a Third Time, an ingroſs'd Bill for ſecuring the Freedom of Parliament, by the farther qualifying the Members to ſit in the Houſe of Commons, and made ſeveral Amendments to it; after which, the ſame was paſs'd, and ſent up to the Lords, who, on the 22d, gave their Concurrence to it. This Bill, however, was not generally approv'd; for many obſerv'd, that by reſtraining the Election for Knights of Shires to Eſtates of 600*l. per Annum*; and for Citizens and Burgeſſes to 300*l. per Annum*, Men, who by their natural and acquired Abilities, Experience, and Skill in Buſineſs, are the fitteſt to ſerve their Country in Parliament, may happen to be excluded; and Men of never ſo indifferent Parts choſen, if but qualify'd in Land. That this Act ſubjects the Titles, as well as the Value of a great many Eſtates, (upon controverted Elections) to the Inquiſition of the Houſe of Commons; that it may cauſe the frequenter ſplitting of Freeholds, either Real, to the Decay of good Families, or Occaſional, and thereby be a further Cauſe of Land Stock-Jobbing, and Perjury; that it may prove a great Detriment to Trade, by excluding the proper Truſtees for it, and committing the Protection of it to the Landed Men only, which is a great Alteration of our Conſtitution; it being originally intended, that Corporations ſhould be repreſented by ſome of their own Party. And in the laſt place, that if this Bill was deſign'd to exclude the Military Officers, it would, in great meaſure, miſs of the deſired Effect; moſt of thoſe Officers that were then Members of Parliament, particularly ſuch as belong'd to the Land-Service, owing their Elections to their real Eſtates, and Country-Intereſt. The Commons were ſo ſenſible of this, and, at the ſame time, how much the great Number of Military Officers might endanger the Freedom of Parliament, that they thought it proper to ſend the Bill for limiting the Number of Officers in their Houſe, (before-mention'd) not long before they ſent up the Qualification-Bill, in hopes, that their Lordſhips would have paſs'd the firſt, and rejected the latter; but, it ſeems, the contrary happen'd.

Mr. Thompſon's Petition voted frivolous and vexatious.

Bill for qualifying Members of Commons, paſs'd by them, February 16. and by the Lords, Feb. 22. Objections againſt it.

On the laſt Day of February, the Queen gave the Royal Aſſent to, 1. An Act to continue the Act for recruiting her Majeſty's Land-Forces and Marines, for the Service of the Year 1711. 2. An Act for ſecuring the Freedom of Parliaments, by the farther qualifying the Members to ſit in the Houſe of Commons: And to Two private Bills. Now, while the Commons were buſy about Ways and Means, Mr. John Blunt, a crafty London Scrivener, was employ'd by the Lords of the Treaſury, to draw up a Scheme of the intended Lottery; which having been publiſh'd on the 8th of February, and received with general Approbation, both at Home and Abroad, the ſame was recommended to the Houſe of Commons, who likewiſe approv'd, and inſerted it in the Lottery-Bill. The Queen having, on the † 6th of March, given the Royal Aſſent to that Bill; and it being advertis'd in the London-Gazette of the 10th, That the Payments would begin to be taken in at Mercers-Hall, on Tueſday the 13*th*: When the Receivers appointed for that Purpoſe, met, it was found, that about 2660000*l.* had been ſubſcribed at the Bank of England, above the Firſt Payment of the whole Sum of One Million, Five hundred thouſand Pounds: A remarkable Inſtance of the great Wealth of this Nation; and, at the ſame time, an undoubted Proof of the Recovery of the Publick Credit, owing to the Care and Induſtry of the preſent Managers of the Treaſury; and to the Juſtice and Publick Spirit of this Houſe of Commons, in their Reſolutions to make good all National Debts; which embolden'd the New Miniſtry to undertake ſome Things, which, perhaps, they never intended at firſt.

for the Church, carried it by a great Majority. The Convocation being met again, on the 6th of December, the Lower Houſe preſented their Prolocutor to the Archbiſhop; on which Occaſion, Dr. Smalridge, and Dr. Atterbury himſelf, made eloquent Speeches in Latin, which the Metropolitan anſwer'd in the ſame Language, and then adjourn'd them to that Day Seven-night. In the mean time, it being apprehended that the old Diſpute between the Archbiſhop and the Lower Houſe might be unhappily revived, Mr. Robert Harley uſed his Endeavours to ſettle a good Correſpondence between them; and on the 12th of December, the Queen wrote a Letter to the Archbiſhop, importing in Subſtance, "That with great Grief of "Heart, ſhe obſerv'd the ſcandalous Attempts, which, of late Years, had been made, "to infect the Minds of her good Subjects, by looſe and prophane Principles, openly "ſcattered and propagated among them. That ſhe thought the Conſultations of the "Clergy particularly requiſite to repreſs theſe daring Attempts, and to prevent the "like for the future. That the juſt Abhorrence that her Subjects, from all Parts of "the Kingdom, had expreſs'd of ſuch wicked Principles, and their Abettors, gave "her good Ground to hope, that the Endeavours of the Clergy, in this reſpect, would "not be unſucceſsful. That for her part, ſhe was ready to give them all fitting En"couragement to proceed in the Diſpatch of ſuch Buſineſs as properly belong'd to "them; and to grant them ſuch Powers as ſhould be thought requiſite for carrying "on ſo good and deſirable a Work: And in Confidence that her Royal Intentions, in "that behalf, would not be fruſtrated, nor the Ends of ſuch Aſſemblies defeated, "by any unſeaſonable Diſputes between the Two Houſes of Convocation, about un"neceſſary Forms and Methods of Proceeding; ſhe earneſtly recommended, that "ſuch Diſputes might ceaſe; and that ſhe determin'd to do all that in her lay, to "compoſe and extinguiſh them. All which, ſhe required the Archbiſhop to commu"nicate to the Biſhops and Clergy of this Province in Convocation aſſembled.

Debates about an Addreſs.

The Convocation being met again, on the 13th of December, the Biſhops propoſed to the inferior Clergy an Addreſs to be preſented to the Queen; but though the Lower Clergy ſeem'd ready to agree to the main Parts of the Three firſt Paragraphs, yet they deſired to have ſome Expreſſions in the Fourth enlarg'd; upon which, a Debate ariſing, the Metropolitan communicated to them the Queen's Letter, before-mention'd; and then adjourn'd them for Two Days only. Being met again † accordingly, the Conſideration of the Addreſs was reſumed; and the inferior Clergy inſiſting on the enlarging the Fourth Paragraph, and upon anſwering the ſeveral Heads of the Queen's Letter, (which Method the Commons had followed with relation to her Majeſty's Speech) the Biſhops refuſed to comply with their Deſires. Hereupon, to prevent Diſputes, that might give Offence to the Laity, the Archbiſhop thought fit to adjourn the Convocation to the 17th of the next Month; tho' not without increaſing the Diſguſts of the High-Church Clergy. Among the Diſcontented would have been Dr. Aldrich, Dean of Chriſt-Church in Oxford, but that he died juſt the Night before. He was, indeed, a learned and pious Divine; but a warm Zealot for the Church and Hereditary Right; which, of late Years, had made him deſcend ſo low, as to apply himſelf to the contriving of the hieroglyphical Figures of the Oxford Almanack, with Alluſions in favour of the Pretender.

The Convocation meets, January 17. and further prorogued.

The Convocation being met the 17th of January, according to their laſt Prorogation, they were further prorogu'd to the 24th, when the Queen's Licenſe, under the Broad Seal, was brought by the Lord Dartmouth, one of her Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, to impower them to ſit and do Buſineſs, in as ample a manner as was ever granted ſince the Reformation: This Licenſe was directed to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, as Preſident and Metropolitan, or, in his Abſence, to the Biſhop of London; or, in the Abſence of both, to the Biſhop of Bath and Wells, to preſide over them; and was received with great Joy and Satisfaction: Thoſe who formerly oppoſed the Prerogative claim'd by the Archbiſhop, looking upon it as a Sign of their Victory; and the others, who profeſs'd more Moderation than the reſt, not being ſorry that this Expedient was found, if not to extinguiſh, at leaſt to ſuſpend the late unhappy Differences between both Houſes of Convocation, which afforded juſt Matter of Offence to the Laity, and drew a Contempt upon the Clergy. An Addreſs of Thanks to her Majeſty, being ſent down from the Higher Houſe to the Lower, was unanimouſly agreed upon; and the whole Houſe went up with that Reſolution to the Preſident, and Ten Suffragan Biſhops, aſſembled in the Jeruſalem Chamber: Upon which, the Preſident told the Prolocutor, that he would, the next Day, know when her Majeſty would be pleaſed, that both Houſes ſhould attend with their Addreſs; and ſo adjourn'd till the 26th in the Morning, to which the Lower Houſe agreed, and adjourn'd themſelves to the ſame Time. On the 26th, the Preſident ſent for the Lower Houſe to the Jeruſalem Chamber, where he acquainted them, that her Majeſty would be attended with their Addreſs at One of the Clock in the Afternoon, noon, the next Day; but that being a little indiſpos'd, it was her Pleaſure, a ſmall Number of each Houſe ſhould preſent it. The Queen's Anſwer.

Her Majeſty's Anſwer to this Addreſs was, " That having done her Part, ſhe
" expected they would lay aſide every Thing which might hinder the good Effect of " her Licenſe; and apply themſelves heartily to thoſe weighty Matters, which " tended to the Honour of our Holy Religion, and the Welfare of her Subjects.

The Convocation being met again, on the laſt Day of January, and the Lower-Houſe ſent for up to the Jeruſalem-Chamber, the Queen's Second Letter, * directed to the Preſident, was read over to both Houſes, directed, To the moſt Reverend Father in God, her Right Truſty, and Right entirely beloved Counſellor, Thomas, Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Primate of all England, and Metropolitan and Preſident of the Convocation of the Province of Canterbury: And importing in Subſtance, " That
" whereas, by her Royal Licenſe, ſhe had, among other Things, impower'd and
" authoriz'd them to conſer, treat, debate, conſider, and agree upon ſuch Points,
" Matters, Cauſes and Things, as ſhe, from Time to Time, ſhould deliver, or
" cauſe to be delivered to them in Writing, under her Sign Manual, or Privy-Signet;
" ſhe accordingly tranſmitted to them, the Heads of ſuch Matters as ſhe thought " proper for the Conſideration of the ſaid Convocation; to wit, 1. The drawing up a Repreſentation of the preſent State of Religion among us, with Regard to the late exceſſive Growth of Infidelity, Hereſy, and Profaneneſs. 2. The regulating the Proceedings in Excommunications, and reforming the Abuſes by Commutation-Money. 3. The preparing a Form for the Viſitation of Priſoners, and particularly condemned Perſons. 4. For admitting Converts from the Church of Rome, and ſuch as ſhould renounce other Errors. 5. For reſtoring thoſe who have relapſed. 6. The eſtabliſhing Rural Deans where they are not, and rendring them more uſeful where they are. 7. The making Proviſions for preſerving and tranſmitting more exact Terriers and Accounts of Glebes, Tithes, and other Poſſeſſions and Profits belonging to Benefices. 8. The regulating Licenſes for Matrimony, according to the Cannon, in order to the more effectual Prevention of Clandeſtine Marriages.

* The Queen's Second Letter to the Convocation, dated Jan. 29.

The Convocation appoint Committees to conſider of the Points in her Majeſty's Letter.

Hereupon it was unanimouſly reſolv'd, That an Order be made to return her Majeſty their moſt dutiful Thanks for her gracious Letter; and that they would endeavour heartily to purſue the Ends of it: In order to which, proper Committees were appointed by both Houſes; and then they adjourn'd to the 7th of February. Upon that Day, in Purſuance of her Majeſty's Letters, both Houſes proceeded on many weighty Affairs: After which, they adjourn'd to Friday, the 9th, when they met again, and adjourn'd to that Day † Sevennight. In the mean Time, the Queen thought fit to grant a new Licenſe, appointing the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Preſident of the Convocation, and during his Abſence, the Biſhop of London; during their Abſence, the Biſhop of Wincheſter; during their Abſence, the Biſhop of Bath and Wells; and, in the ſame Manner, the Biſhops of Exeter, Briſtol, and St. David's. This new Licenſe, which, on the 16th of February, was communicated to both Houſes of Convocation, occaſion'd ſome Obſtru-

Obſtructions in their Proceedings. For the Three Prelates named in the firſt Licenſe to be of the Quorum, viz. the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhop of London, and the Biſhop of Bath and Wells, happening all to be infirm; ſo that, for want of the Preſence of one of them, nothing could be done in the Upper Houſe; the Queen, by her Second Licenſe, thought fit to enlarge the Quorum, by adding the Biſhops of Winchester, Exeter, Briſtol, and St. David's: But the Meaning of this Second Licenſe not being at firſt, either well explain'd, or apprehended, it rather increas'd, than remov'd Difficulties. For, the Upper Houſe ſtill look'd upon the nominating of the Quorum of their Committees, as derogatory from the Authority of the Metropolitan, and therefore, ſome were for enquiring how long the Crown had aſſumed and exerciſed that Power? And, at the ſame Time, it was thought unprecedented, that younger Biſhops ſhould be put over the Heads of Senior Prelates, as ſome had been. The Lower Houſe were in Doubt, whether the Committees appointed before the ſaid Second Licenſe, were to ſtand? And having made Application to the Higher Houſe for their Opinion, their Lordſhips return'd a dubious Anſwer. In order to clear theſe Doubts, the Upper Houſe reſolv'd to make Application to the Queen; and one of their Lordſhips having * laid before her Majeſty theſe Two Queſtions: Firſt, "Whether it was intended, That the firſt of the "Quorum preſent, ſhould preſide in the Abſence of the Archbiſhop? Secondly, "Whether he ſhould have a Negative, when preſent?" Her Majeſty was pleas'd to declare, That it was not her Intention to infringe the Right and Authority of the Archbiſhop's preſiding by himſelf, or his Commiſſary, over the whole Convocation; nor that the Perſon or Perſons whom ſhe had named of the Quorum, ſhould have any Negative in the Proceedings of the Houſe, other than what every Biſhop has in his private Capacity; but only, that when any of the Buſineſs preſcrib'd by the Royal Licenſe was to be done, the Preſence of one of the Quorum ſhould then be neceſſary. The Queen having, by this Declaration, given Satisfaction to the Biſhops, upon the principal Matters in Debate about her Licenſe, their Lordſhips † immediately revived the Two Committees, before appointed, to conſider the Two firſt Articles of her Majeſty's Letter. Two Days ‖ after, the Biſhops appointed Three other Committees, to conſider the Three laſt Articles; and the reſt, relating to ſeveral Forms of Prayer, was alſo put into a Method of being diſpatch'd. The joint Committee, which was to prepare a Repreſentation of the preſent State of Religion, agreed upon the Heads of it; and another appointed to regulate Commotions of Penance, agreed to deſire an Act of Parliament, for changing the Writ de Excommunicato, into one de Contumaci Capiendo; and prepared the Draught of a Canon, for rectifying the Abuſes of Commutations. A Committee of Charity, appointed by the Lower Houſe, brought in a Report, That the Charity Schools did highly deſerve the Cognizance and Encouragement of this Synod: And the Lower Houſe made Application to the Upper, returning their Lordſhips Thanks for the Countenance they had given them; and deſiring, that Archdeacons might be directed to recommend them Miniſters in populous Cities, to promote them. That Committee gave alſo their Opinion, and the Lower Houſe agreed to it, That the ſetting up Parochial Libraries, deſerv'd the Encouragement and Aſſiſtance of this Synod. On the 1ſt of March, the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons acquainted the Houſe, "That there had been with him, the Day before, in the Evening, the Prolocutor of "the Lower Houſe of Convocation, with Dr. Stanhope, Dean of Canterbury; Dr. "Stanley, Archdeacon of London; Dr. Smalridge, Proctor for the Chapter of Litchfield; and Dr. Delaune, Proctor for the Dioceſe of Oxford, and brought him a "Meſſage, importing, That the Lower Houſe of Convocation had, with great Sa"tisfaction, taken Notice of an Inſtruction given by the Honourable Houſe of "Commons to a Committee, (appointed to examine a Petition of the Miniſter and "Church-Wardens of Greenwich, praying Relief for the rebuilding of that Church) "To conſider what Churches were wanting within the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Suburbs thereof, and report the ſame to the Houſe. That it was in "their Thoughts to have done what in them lay, towards ſetting forward ſo pious "a Deſign; but they were glad to find themſelves happily prevented, by the Zeal "of that Honourable Houſe, which, at the Time that they plac'd him (Mr. "Speaker) in the Chair, gave them an Earneſt of their entire Diſpoſition, to do "every Thing that might be for the Honour and Advantage of the Church of England. That they did, in the Name of the whole Clergy of this Province, return "their unanimous Thanks to the Honourable the Commons, for this Inſtance of "the affectionate Regard they had ſhewn to the Welfare of the Eſtabliſh'd Church, "and the common Intereſts of Religion. And that the Prolocutor was directed by "the Clergy of the Lower Houſe of Convocation, to ſignify their Readineſs to pro"mote the good Work now in View, by imparting ſuch Lights as they were able "to afford, in relation to the extreme want of Churches, in and about theſe po-

" pulous Cities." Hereupon, the Commons reſolved, " Firſt, That this Houſe " would receive all ſuch Informations, as ſhould be offer'd to them from the Clergy " of the Lower Houſe of Convocation, with relation to the Want of Churches in " the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Suburbs thereof. Secondly, That this " Houſe would, in all Matters immediately relating to Religion, and the Welfare " of the Eſtabliſh'd Church, have a particular Regard to ſuch Applications, as " ſhould, at any Time, be made to them from the Clergy in Convocation aſſem- " bled, according to the ancient Uſage, together with the Parliament." Purſuant to theſe Reſolutions, quicken'd by a ſolemn Recommendation from the Queen, the Commons afterwards paſs'd a Bill for the Building of Fifty New Churches, in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter; and gave the Duty of One Shilling per Chalder on Coals, from the 29th of September, 1716, to the 29th of September, 1719; for raiſing the Sum of 350,000 l. for that pious Service. And, indeed, none could wonder, that this Houſe of Commons ſhould ſhew an extraordinary Zeal for the Church, and expreſs their Gratitude to the Inferior Clergy, by whoſe Influence, chiefly, many of them carry'd their Elections.

350,000 l. granted to build Fifty new Churches.

To make themſelves yet more popular, the Commons had, before * this Time, appointed a Committee to examine and ſtate the Publick Debts of the Navy, and other Offices, for which no Proviſion was made by Parliament; and to report, what Principal and Intereſt was due thereupon. This Committee having made their Report, the Houſe reſolved, on the 9th of March, that a Supply be granted to Her Majeſty, for the Payment of theſe ſeveral Debts: Viz. To the Navy, 5,130,539 l. To the Ordnance, 154,324 l. To the Tranſport-Service, 424,791 l. To the Army-Debentures, 1,018,656 l. To deficient Tallies, 12,025 l. To the Navy, for Debts incurr'd between Michaelmas and Chriſtmas 1710, 378,859 l. To Subſidies due, 9,375 l. In all, 7,128,569 l. To which were added the Tallies of the laſt Year, which lay in the Offices. The Supply given afterwards for this, was a Continuation of the General Mortgage from 1716, to raiſe an Annuity of 568,279 l. being the Intereſt at Six per Cent. till the Principal be provided for: And with this Intereſt, was alſo given the Monopoly of a ſuppoſed Trade to the South-Sea, or Coaſt of Peru in America; the ſeveral Proprietors of the Navy-Bills, and other Publick Securities, being to be incorporated for that Purpoſe. And becauſe the Fund was ſo diſtant, it was declar'd, That the Parliament would annually make Proviſion for the Intereſt, till 1716. This was the grand Project which, on the 2d of May, Mr. Robert Harley propos'd to the Commons, in order to ſatisfy all Publick Debts, and to make good all Deficiencies: Which Scheme being generally approv'd, produced, afterwards, the South-Sea Company.

Riſe of the South-Sea Company.

Some Time before, an Accident happen'd, which, by the crafty Management of it, very much advanc'd the Reputation of the Chancellor of the Exchequer. The Marquis de Guiſcard, (whom we mention'd before) enjoy'd his Pay, as Colonel, till ſome Time after the Battel of Almanza; where his Regiment, having behav'd very well, was almoſt entirely defeated, and therefore never raiſed again. Hereupon the Marquis ſollicited a ſettled Penſion, to little Purpoſe; both by reaſon of his unpolitick Behaviour, and of his Intimacy with ſome Perſons that had been removed from their Imployments; particularly Mr. Henry St. John, with whom he had enter'd into a ſtrict Confidence, and Community of Pleaſures. The latter, by the Revolution before-mention'd, being now advanc'd to the Poſt of Secretary of State, the Marquis expected to have found a great Support in him: But, as all Friendſhips that are not grounded on Virtue, are ever fleeting, and generally ſhort-liv'd; the Secretary, who had (ſome Time before) quarrel'd with Guiſcard about a Miſtreſs, or rather, a Child, which neither of them would own, was hardly prevail'd with to ſpeak in his Favour. However, upon his faint Recommendation, the good-natur'd Queen order'd him a Penſion of 500 l. per Annum: But the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who never lik'd Guiſcard, not only reduc'd his Penſion to 400 l. but declin'd to have it put upon a fix'd Eſtabliſhment. The Marquis endeavour'd, ſeveral times, to apply to the Queen for Redreſs; but being denied Acceſs to Her Majeſty, and highly diſguſted with the Uſage he receiv'd, from thoſe very Perſons he had look'd upon as his intimate Friends, he try'd to make his Peace with the Court of France; and, in order to that, wrote to Mr. Moreau, a Banker in Paris. His Letters being directed to a Perſon in Portugal, under the Cover of the Earl of Portmore; his Lordſhip ſuſpecting ſomething, open'd one of the Pacquets, and finding in it a dangerous Correſpondence, ſent it back to his Lady, the Counteſs of Dorcheſter, who deliver'd it to Mr. Harley; and, by her Means, another Pacquet, which Guiſcard would have tranſmitted to Portugal, was intercepted. Some pretend, that thoſe Letters contain'd only looſe Reflections on the Weakneſs, and mean Capacity of the preſent Miniſtry; but, whatever was the Purport of them, (which has hitherto been a Secret) the Marquis de Guiſcard was, on the 8th of March, apprehended in St. James's Park, for High-Treaſon, by Virtue of a Warrant from Mr. Secretary St. John. He was ſo ſurpriz'd and diſorder'd, that, thinking it impoſſible for him to eſcape an ignominious Death, (which he ever dreaded) he deſir'd the Meſſengers that diſarm'd him, to kill him : And, being brought to the Cockpit, in the Height of Deſpair, he took the helliſh Reſolution to make his Ruin fatal to thoſe who occaſion'd it ; and eſpying a Penknife in the Room, where he was confin'd, he laid hold of it, unperceiv'd by the Meſſengers that watch'd him. A Committee of Council being (a) ſummon'd on this extraordinary Occaſion, and the Marquis brought before them to be examin'd ; Mr. St. John aſk'd him ſeveral Queſtions, about his Correſponding with France ; to which he return'd evaſive Anſwers, with an aſſur'd Countenance. But when Mr. Secretary aſk'd him, Whether he knew Mr. Moreau, Banker at Paris ? producing, at the ſame Time, Monſieur de Guiſcard's intercepted Letters ; the latter appear'd very much ſurpriz'd, and diſturb'd. Finding himſelf diſcover'd, and deſpairing of a Pardon, he reſolved to put his black Deſign in Execution ; and, thro' a falſe Notion of Honour, choſe rather to commit a Villany, that he might fall by the Swords of Gentlemen, than, like a common Malefactor, to expect an ignominious Death, from the Hands of the Executioner. It is the general Opinion, that (as was hinted before) his Deſign was to make his firſt Attempt upon the Life of Mr. Secretary St. John ; which appears the more probable, becauſe, as ſoon as he thought himſelf in a manner convicted of the Crime for which he was apprehended, he deſir'd to ſpeak a Word with Mr. St. John aſide : But Mr. Secretary told him, " That was impracticable, and unuſual : That he was be- " fore the Committee of the Council, as a Criminal ; and if he had any Thing to " offer, it muſt be ſaid to them all." Mr. de Guiſcard perſiſting in his Deſire to ſpeak only to Mr. St. John ; they went to ring the Bell, to call in the Meſſengers to carry him away ; which he obſerving, ſaid, Voilà qui eſt dur, pas un Mot ; That's hard, not one Word. Being diſappointed in his Deſign againſt Mr. St. John, who ('tis obſervable) had chang'd Seats with Mr. Harley, that Mr. de Guiſcard's Face might be full in the Light, and his Countenance better perceiv'd, upon any Queſtions that ſhould be aſk'd him ; Guiſcard was not long in Suſpence about the Choice of the Perſon, whom he ſhould ſacrifice to his wild Fury ; but immediately pitch'd upon Mr. Harley ; either, (as ſome have ſuggeſted, that he confeſs'd it afterwards in the Priſon) becauſe not being able to come at the Secretary, as he intended, it was ſome Satisfaction to murder the Perſon whom he thought Mr. St. John lov'd beſt ; or, which is more probable, becauſe he never found Mr. Harley inclin'd either to truſt, or to favour him. Hereupon, he ſtept towards the Table, as if he deſign'd to ſay ſomething to Mr. Harley ; and, ſtooping down, ſaid, J' en veux donc à Toy, Then have at Thee ; and ſo ſtabb'd him about the Middle of the Breaſt : But, by a ſingular Providence, lighting on the Bone, the Penknife broke about Half an Inch from the Handle ; of which the Aſſaſſin being unſenſible, he redoubled the Blow, and, with a great Force, ſtruck Mr. Harley not far from the firſt Wound.

He deſigns to kill Mr. Secretary St. John.

He ſtabs Mr. Harley.

What paſs'd during the Horror, Surprize, and Confuſion occaſion'd by this barbarous Attempt, can hardly be diſtinctly related ; ſince no Spectator could be ſo unconcern'd, as to obſerve every particular Circumſtance of this Tragical Scene. Some will have it, that after the Aſſaſſin thought he had done Mr. Harley's Buſineſs, he ruſh'd on towards Mr. St. John, and overthrew the Clerk's Table that ſtood between : But whether this be true, or no, 'tis certain, that when Mr. St. John ſaw Mr. Harley fall, he cry'd out, The Villain has kill'd Mr. Harley ; and, drawing his Sword immediately, as did alſo the Duke of Newcaſtle, and ſome others, they gave Guiſcard ſeveral Wounds. Mr. St. John was the moſt eager to revenge his Friend's ſuppoſed Murder ; but when he ſaw that Mr. Harley got up, and walk'd about, and heard the Earl of Powlet cry out, not to kill Guiſcard, he gave over making Paſſes at him. Some of the Privy-Counſellors ſecur'd themſelves with Chairs, againſt the Rage of the Aſſaſſin, who ſeem'd to threaten them all : Others ran out of the Room, to call for Help ; and the Meſſengers and Door-keepers having thereupon ruſh'd in, they went to lay hold on Guiſcard. The latter, who was naturally ſtrong, having gather'd ſtill freſh Force from his Frenzy, ſtruggled for a while, and overthrew ſome of his Aſſailants ; but after having made all the Efforts that human Nature is capable of, he was, at laſt, got down, and conquer'd,

He receives ſeveral Wounds.

(a) The Privy-Counſellors that met on this Occaſion, were, the Lord-Keeper Harcourt, the Earl of Rocheſter ; the Dukes of Buckingham, Newcaſtle, and Ormond ; the Earl Powlet ; Mr. Robert Harley ; and the Three Secretaries of State, viz. the Duke of Queensberry, the Lord Dartmouth, and Mr. St. John.

principally by Mr. Wilcox, one of the Queen's Meſſengers; who being a very robuſt and ſtrong Man, ſtoutly grappled with him, and gave him ſeveral Bruiſes, particularly one in the Back, which was afterwards judg'd to have occaſion'd his Death. Whilſt they were binding him, being ſtill apprehenſive of dying by the Hands of the Executioner, he addreſs'd himſelf to the Duke of Ormond in theſe Words: My Lord Duc d' Ormond, pourquoy ne me depêchez vous? That is, Why don't you diſpatch me? But the Noble Duke made this memorable Anſwer: Ce n'eſt pas l'Affaire des Honnêtes Gens; C'eſt l'Affaire des autres: 'Tis not the Work of a Gentleman; 'tis the Work of others. On the other hand, 'tis certain, that his Grace was never ſo ſenſibly touch'd with any Thing, as he was, at this ſad Juncture; to ſee a Perſon, whom, out of Gratitude to his Brother, he had taken under his immediate Protection, involv'd in ſo much Guilt and Villany.

He deſires the D. of Ormond to kill him. The Duke's Anſwer.

The very next * Day, both Houſes of Parliament agreed upon an Addreſs to the Queen; wherein they expreſs'd their great Concern for the moſt barbarous and villanous Attempt, made upon the Perſon of Robert Harley, Eſq; ; adding, That they had Reaſon to believe, that his Fidelity to Her Majeſty, and Zeal for her Service, had drawn upon him the Hatred of all the Abettors of Popery and Faction: And beſought Her Majeſty, to take all poſſible Care of her Sacred Perſon; and, for that Purpoſe, to give Directions for cauſing Papiſts to be remov'd from the Cities of London and Weſtminſter. The Queen took this Advice very kindly; promis'd to give the proper Directions, according to the Deſire of both Houſes; and recommended to them, to make a Law, to puniſh with Death, ſuch villanous Attempts on the Lives of Magiſtrates, in the lawful Execution of their Office; tho' the Miſchiefs deſign'd ſhould not take Effect: Upon which, an Act was paſs'd this Seſſion, to make an Attempt on the Life of a Privy-Counſellor, to be Felony without Benefit of the Clergy. On the other hand, a Proclamation was publiſh'd, ſtrictly to put in Execution the Laws againſt Papiſts: And, when Mr. Harley came firſt to the Houſe of Commons, after his Recovery, he was, by their Order; † congratulated upon it, by Mr. Bromley, their Speaker, in a ſet, flattering Speech; wherein he devoutly pray'd, That the ſame Providence that had wonderfully preſerved him from ſome unparallel'd Attempts, and had rais'd him up to be an Inſtrument of great Good, at a very critical Juncture, when it was much wanted, might continue ſtill to preſerve ſo invaluable a Life, for the perfecting of what was ſo happily begun; that they might owe to his Counſels, and to his Conduct, the Maintenance and firm Eſtabliſhment of our Conſtitution in Church and State. Blown up with this ſolemn Congratulation, and the general Prepoſſeſſion in his Favour, Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer did, about a || Week after, propoſe, in the Grand Committee on Ways and Means, the Scheme before-mention'd, to ſatisfy all National Debts. Tho' there was nothing in this Project, but what a Man of the meaneſt Capacity might eaſily have found out; and tho' the Pretence of paying the National Debts without any Charge to the Nation, and yet allowing a large Intereſt, till the Capital Sums, or the Debts themſelves, were redeem'd and paid by Parliament, was a groſs, palpable Illuſion; Nevertheleſs, the ſame being gilded over by the glittering Proſpect of having a Share in the Trade of the South-Seas, (by which the French got immenſe Riches) Mr. Harley's Scheme was received with general Applauſe; and the Commons brought in a Bill, on the Reſolutions that had been dictated by the Projector. It happen'd very luckily for the latter, that the ſame Day he laid his Scheme before the Commons, the Earl of Rocheſter, Maternal Uncle to the Queen, Preſident of the Council, and a Man of great Integrity and Wiſdom, died ſuddenly; whereby Mr. Harley was rid of the only dangerous Competitor he had in the Queen's Favour; and became Prime Miniſter. The Parliament having already worſhipp'd the Idol of their own making, the good-natur'd Queen thought no Honours or Preferments, too great to reward his Eminent Services: For, in the firſt place, ſhe created him Baron Harley, of Wigmore, in the County of Hereford, Earl of Oxford and Earl Mortimer; and on the 29th of May, the Anniverſary of the RESTORATION of King Charles the Second, the Queen appointed him Lord High-Treaſurer of Great Britain. On the 1ſt of June, he took the Oaths for that Office in the Court of Chancery; upon which Occaſion, the Lord Keeper Harcourt, that he might not be out-done by Mr. Bromley, complimented him on his Title, in a Strain ſuitable to the Pomp and Magnificence of his Patent; addreſſing himſelf to him in the following Speech:

Some time before, the Commons agreed to the Reſolutions of their Committee, about the Palatines, viz. " That the inviting and bringing over into this Kingdom

Bill to prevent Bribery in Elections, dropt.

Commons read the Third Time an engroſſed Bill for the better preventing Bribery and Corruption; and other undue Practices in Elections of Members to ſerve in Parliament: And the Speaker having opened the Bill, ſeveral Amendments were made to it; but a great Debate ariſing thereupon, the ſame was adjourn'd to the next Day, when the Queſtion being put, that the Bill do paſs, it was carried in the Negative. The ſame Day, the Commons proceeded to the Choice of Commiſſioners for examining the Value of Lands, and other Intereſts granted by the Crown, ſince the 13th Day of February 1688, and upon what Conſideration ſuch Grants were made, in order to reſume the ſame, and apply them to the Uſe of the Publick; and the Clerk, and Clerk-Aſſiſtant, went on each ſide the Houſe, with Glaſſes, to receive from the Members the Liſts of Perſons Names to be Commiſſioners. A Committee being afterwards appointed to examine the Liſts, they made their Report the 18th, and it appear'd, that the following Perſons had the Majority, viz. Sir Simon Stuart, Mr. Everſfield, Mr. Hind Cotton, Mr. Bulteel, Mr. Hewetſon, Mr. Blackmore, Mr. Wrightſon, and Mr. Mackenſie. The Two laſt having an equal Number of Votes, the Commons ballotted again for a Commiſſioner, on the 21ſt of the ſame Month; and upon examining the Liſts, it was found, that William Wrightſon, Eſq; had the Majority. On the 24th, the Commons read the Third Time the Bill for reſuming the Grants made by the Crown, ſince the 13th of February 1688; and having inſerted in it the Commiſſioners Names, reſolv'd that the Bill do paſs, and ſent it to the Lords for their Concurrence; but on the laſt Day of April, their Lordſhips rejected that Bill, which was generally thought partial, and injurious to the Memory of the late King William.

The Bill to reſume King William's Grants rejected.

On the 17th of April, at Night, Captain Powel arrived at Whitehall from the Hague, being ſent Expreſs from the Lord Raby, her Majeſty's Ambaſſador Extraordinary, and Plenipotentiary there, with an Account, that the Emperor Joſeph I. died of the Small-Pox at Vienna, the 17th of that Month, N. S. Hereupon, her Majeſty reſolved to concert Meaſures with her High Allies, to advance King Charles III. to the Imperial Throne; and on the 26th, the Earl of Suffolk, Lord Marſhal, made an Order to ſignify the Queen's Command, " That upon the Death of the Emperor,
" her Majeſty intended to go into Mourning the Sunday * following, and did expect,
" that the Peers, Peereſſes, and all other Perſons, ſhould wear ſuitable Mourning."
On the 20th of the ſame Month, the Queen ſent a Meſſage to both Houſes, importing, " That ſhe had come to a Reſolution to ſupport the Intereſt of the Houſe of Au-
" ſtria, and to uſe her utmoſt Endeavours to get the King of Spain made Emperor.
" That the States General had concurr'd with her Majeſty; and that ſhe had taken " the moſt proper Meaſures to engage all thoſe who had a Share in this Election,

" and were in the Intereſt of the Common Cauſe, to join with her in bringing " this great Work to a good Iſſue: And ſhe had an entire Confidence in the Affe- " ction and Duty of her Parliament, that with their Aſſiſtance ſhe ſhould be enabled " to make a happy Concluſion of this War, in a ſafe and honourable Peace." This produc'd a joint Addreſs from both Houſes to her Majeſty, wherein they return'd their moſt "Humble Thanks for her Majeſty's moſt gracious Meſſage; acknowledg'd " the early and wiſe Care ſhe had been pleas'd to take, to prevent the ill Conſe- " quences of the Emperor's Death, by reſolving to ſupport the Intereſt of the " Houſe of Auſtria, and endeavouring to promote the Election of the King of " Spain to the Empire; and aſſured her, that they could not be diſcourag'd by this, " or any other Misfortune, from ſupporting her Majeſty in all the Meaſures, which, " in her great Wiſdom, ſhe ſhould judge proper, to bring this War to a happy Conclu- " ſion, by a ſafe and honourable Peace. The Queen thank'd them heartily for this Addreſs; and told them, it was of great Importance that the World ſhould know, that both Houſes of Parliament did ſo unanimouſly approve the Meaſures ſhe had taken on the Emperor's Death; which would very much encourage her Allies to continue united in the Common Cauſe. Both the Queen's Meſſage, and the Addreſs of the Two Houſes thereupon, are the more remarkable, in that the firſt gave the Diſcerning a Glimpſe of the Project the New Miniſtry form'd upon the Death of the Emperor Joſeph, and which they afterwards publickly avow'd, viz. to make a Peace, by yielding Spain, and the Weſt-Indies, to King Philip; not only becauſe the regaining of them for King Charles, was (as they pretended) attended with inſuperable Difficulties, but alſo becauſe, in their Opinion, the ſame, if poſſible, would deſtroy the Balance of Europe, the ſettling of which was the main Object of the Grand-Alliance: And both Houſes of Parliament having, in that Addreſs, ſhew'd a Diſpoſition to approve any Meaſures her Majeſty ſhould think proper to procure a Peace, the Miniſtry thought themſelves arm'd with ſufficient Authority to purſue their Scheme.

Their Addreſs to her Majeſty.

The Miniſtry forms a Project to make a Peace, by leaving Spain and the Weſt-Indies, to King Philip.

A Committee having been appointed to inſpect the Miſmanagements in the ſeveral Offices, and having made their Report, the Commons, to compleat the grand Buſineſs of this Seſſion, reſolved *, " That an humble Repreſentation be laid before " her Majeſty, of the ſeveral Reports and Reſolutions of the Houſe, upon the ſaid " Miſmanagements:" And a Committee was appointed to draw it up. It is worth Obſervation, that Edward Harley, Eſq; Auditor of the Impreſt Accounts in the Exchequer, who owed his Preferment to the Earl of Godolphin, was the principal Agent employ'd by his Brother, Robert Harley, in all theſe odious and ſtrain'd Proceedings againſt the late Miniſters; and the intended Repreſentation being, by his great Care, cook'd up, and approved by the Commons, the ſame was, on the 4th of June, preſented to her Majeſty by the whole Houſe; as follows:

* May 24.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

Repreſentation of the Commons to the Queen.

" WE Your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Commons of Great Britain, in " Parliament aſſembled, have, with the utmoſt Zeal and Unanimity, applied our ſelves " to the Diſpatch of thoſe great and important Affairs, which your Majeſty was pleaſed to re- " commend to us from the Throne; and we humbly hope, that we have in every Reſpect, an- " ſwer'd your Majeſty's Expectations, in calling this Parliament.

" In making ſuitable Proviſion for the publick Service, we have met with great Difficulties " from the Anticipation of Funds, and the large Sums with which the Publick Revenues ſtand " charged for long Terms to come: However, we have not been diſcouraged, but have, with " greater Diligence, carried on our Endeavours to raiſe ſuch Supplies, as, we truſt, will be ef- " fectual, not only for the Service of the preſent Year, but alſo for the Diſcharge of the heavy " Debts, ſo long, and ſo juſtly complained of. And as the abſolute Neceſſity of carrying on the " War, and our Reſolutions to ſupport the publick Credit, and maintain the Honour and Juſtice " of Parliament, have obliged us to increaſe the Burden of Taxes upon our Fellow-Subjects, ſo " we are perſuaded, that the ſame Reaſons will induce them to pay thoſe Taxes with Chearful- " neſs and Satisfaction.

" At the ſame Time, we have thought it another Part of our Duty, to enquire into the " Cauſes of the heavy Debts we labour under, and to trace the Source of that great Evil, as " what we thought would, in ſome Degree, ſatisfy the Minds of your People, and prevent the " like Miſchief for the future.

" This was a Promiſe, and an Aſſurance, which we preſumed to give your Majeſty, at the " beginning of this Seſſion: And now, at the Concluſion of it, we beg Leave to lay before your " Majeſty, the Reſult of our Inquiries, which we hope your Majeſty will not judge to be un- " worthy of your Royal Conſideration.

" In examining into the State of the War, and looking back from the beginning of it, we " find that in ſeveral Years the Service has been enlarged, and the Charge of it increaſed, be- " yond the Bounds preſcribed, and the annual Supplies granted by Parliament; to this new and " illegal Practice we muſt, in a great Meaſure, aſcribe the Riſe and Growth of the heavy " Debts that lie upon the Nation. Nor does the Conſequence of it end there; for we muſt alſo " repreſent it to your Majeſty, as a dangerous Invaſion of the Rights of Parliament. The " Commons muſt ever aſſert it as their ſole and undoubted Privilege, to grant Money, and to " adjuſt and limit the Proportions of it: And when your Majeſty has recommended to them to

A. D. 1711.

" conſider of Supplies, and they have deliberated upon the ſeveral Eſtimates for the Annual " Services, and conſidered and determined what the Nation is able to bear, their Proceedings " would be very vain and ineffectual, if after the reſpective Sums are ſtated and granted, thoſe " through whoſe Hands the Diſpoſition of them paſſes, are allow'd, in any Meaſure, to alter " and enlarge them. This is an Attempt, which very little differs from levying Money without " Conſent of Parliament, as will appear to your Majeſty from this one Conſideration: That a " Charge of that kind once incurr'd, and laid as a Debt upon the Navy, or any other publick " Office, is ſo far binding upon Parliament, that how little ſoever they approve of the Means by " which it was contracted, yet the publick Credit being pawn'd, the Commons cannot, without " the Ruin of that, refuſe to provide for it.

" This alſo has been an Occaſion why great Sums of unappropriated Money, ariſing from the " Exceedings and Surpluſages of ſome of the Funds granted by Parliament, have not been ap- " plied, as they ought to have been, in Aid of the Deficiencies of other Funds. Had this juſt " Care been obſerved, the Debts of the Nation could not have increaſed to ſo exorbitant an " Height; but other Uſes were found out, ſuch as were neither voted, nor addreſſed for, by " Parliament; which, therefore, we adjudge to have been a Miſapplication of Publick " Money.

" With regard to the Debts of the Navy, we find, that one great Diſcouragement, and Bur- " den, which that Part of the Service has lain under, has been from a Liberty that has been " uſed, of diverting ſeveral Sums iſſued to that Service, and transferriug them to other Pur- " poſes, for which they were not intended; particularly, that the Sum of Six Hundred and Six " Thouſand, Eight Hundred and Six Pounds, Seven Shillings and Seven Pence, belonging to the " Navy, has been paid for Proviſions ſupplied to Land-Forces ſent to Spain and Portugal, and for " the Gariſon of Gibraltar; for which no Deductions have been made from the Pay of thoſe " Forces, nor any Part of that Sum reaſſigned to the Victualling, notwithſtanding the ſeveral " Acts of Parliament provided, and the many Letters writ, and Repreſentations made to the " Treaſury in that Behalf. This unjuſtifiable Proceeding has been a Diſcouragement to the Seamen, " occaſioned the paying extravagant Rates upon Contracts, and has very much contributed to ſink the Credit of " the Navy.

" To this we muſt add the many notorious Embezzlements, and ſcandalous Abuſes, which ap- " pear to have been practiſed, as well in the Management of your Majeſty's Brewhouſe, as in " the Contracts for furniſhing the Navy with Beer. We have already preſumed to addreſs your " Majeſty, That ſeveral Perſons, whom we diſcover'd to have been guilty of thoſe Frauds, " ſhould be proſecuted at Law for their Offences; and we entirely rely upon your Majeſty's moſt " gracious Aſſurance, That thoſe Proſecutions ſhall be effectually carried on; but we muſt alſo, " upon this Occaſion, beg Leave farther to repreſent to your Majeſty, That the Commiſſioners ap- " pointed to take Care of the Victualling your Majeſty's Navy, have been guilty of great Negligence and " Remiſneſs in their Duty: For the Inſtructions which go along with that Commiſſion, are ſo well " adapted to the preventing theſe very Abuſes which have been committed, that nothing but a " notorious Miſmanagement in that Office, and an inexcuſable Neglect in purſuing thoſe In- " ſtructions, could have given way to the great Loſs the Publick has ſuſtained in that Part of the " Service.

" The evil Effects of this Miſmanagement in publick Offices and Miſapplication of Parlia- " mentary Supplies, have been increaſed by the very Methods of bringing in the publick Mo- " ney: For, it has appeared to us, that the Receivers of the Land-Tax, and of the other Re- " venues, have not been called upon to pay in the Money they had received in, in due Time, " as the Law requires. Such has been the extreme Remiſneſs, and unaccountable Indulgence " of thoſe, whoſe Duty it was to oblige thoſe Receivers to make due and punctual Payments, " that on the 8th Day of December, 1710, there was an Arrear of the ſeveral Land-Taxes, for " Five Years, ending the 24th of March, 1709, amounting to the Sum of Two Hundred Seventy " Two Thouſand, Five Hundred Ninety Six Pounds, Eight Shilling and Eight Pence, ſome " Part of which was paid into the Exchequer, after the Commons had ordered an Enquiry into " that Matter; yet the Sum ſtanding out, at the beginning of April, 1711, was One Hundred " Eighty Thouſand, Four Hundred Thirty Nine Pounds, Seven Shillings and Six-pence " Half-penny. From theſe Omiſſions, the Publick remains long under the Load of Inte- " reſt, for want of that Money which lies in the Hands of Receivers; ſo that the Sup- " plies granted to your Majeſty, however large or well proportioned to the Occaſions of " the War, could never prove effectual to prevent the Incumbrance of Debts, whilſt " they were neither collected, nor diſburſed faithfully, according to the Ends and Methods de- " ſigned by Parliament.

" Thus far have we proceeded, in diſcovering ſome of thoſe Cauſes which have brought ſo " great a Weight of Debts upon the Nation; and we might have made a much greater Progreſs " in our Inquiries, if the Accounts of the publick Money had been regularly paſſed; but to our " great Surprize and Concern, we find, That they who of late Years have had the Management of your " Majeſty's Treaſury, and ought to have compelled the ſeveral Accomptants, duly to paſs their reſpective Ac- " counts, have been guilty of ſo notorious a Breach of Truſt, and of ſo high an Injuſtice to the Nation, that " of the Moneys granted by Parliament, and iſſued for the Publick Service to Chriſtmas, 1710, there re- " mains unaccounted for, the Sum of Thirty Five Millions, Three Hundred and Two Thouſand, One Hun- " dred and Seven Pounds; for a great Part of which, no Accounts have ſo much as been laid before the Au- " ditors: And for the reſt, though ſome Accounts have been brought in, yet they have not been proſecuted by " the Acomptants, and finiſhed. This has made it impracticable for us to arrive at ſo exact a know- " ledge of the State of the Nation, with regard to the publick Money, as we wiſh'd, and might " have expected; and your Majeſty will pleaſe to conſider, in ſuch an immenſe Sum unaccounted " for, how many Embezzlements may be concealed, and how juſtly it is to be ſuſpected, that " ſo ſcandalous a Remiſneſs has been allowed with no other Deſign. We humbly beſeech your " Majeſty, that you will give immediate and effectual Directions for the compelling the ſeveral " impreſt Accomptants ſpeedily to paſs their Accounts; and, in the mean Time, we humbly " hope your Majeſty will approve the Reſolution of your Commons, That ſuch of the Accomptants " who have neglected their Duty, in proſecuting their Accounts, ought no longer to be intruſted with receiving " the publick Money.

" We

A. D. 1711.

" We cannot omit taking Notice to your Majeſty, of another extraordinary Inſtance, in which " the publick Money has been miſapplied, by bringing over the poor Palatines, to inhabit and " ſettle themſelves in this Kingdom: This was not only an extravagant and unreaſonable Expence " in it ſelf, but many other ways uneaſy and grievous to your People; for as it was viſible that " ſuch Numbers of neceſſitous and uſeleſs Foreigners muſt unavoidably tend to the Increaſe and " Oppreſſion of the Poor of this Kingdom, ſo being a Mixture of People of all Religions, it " was evident, how dangerous they might prove to the quiet of our Government, and " the Conſtitution of our eſtabliſh'd Church. Upon what Incouragement and Invitation they " came over, we have not been able to diſcover; but we look upon it as certain, That the cal- " ling over ſo many Families from a Country ſo remote, could not be brought about without In- " duſtry and Contrivance; and thoſe who were concern'd in it, ſeem'd to have been conſcious of " the Evil of their own Deſigns, by the Secrecy with which they purſued them. Your Majeſty, " in your great Wiſdom, will beſt recollect from whence this Attempt and Advice proceeded; " and we humbly repreſent it as our Opinion, That the Authors of it were Enemies to your Majeſty " and your Kingdom.

" We beg Leave to offer to your Majeſty's Conſideration, but one Thing more, which has " alarmed your People with juſt Fears. The Arbitrary Attempt of new modelling Corporations, " by impoſing a Charter upon the Borough of Bewdley; a Charter void and illegal, not being accepted " by the Corporation then in Being, deſtructive of the Conſtitution of Parliament, in transferring the Rights " of Electors to others, and injurious to your Majeſty's Subjects, in diveſting them of their Franchiſes and " Freeholds, even after they had been affirmed by Judgments upon the vigorous Proſecutions of " Quo Warranto's. We return your Majeſty our moſt humble Thanks, for putting a ſtop to ſo " pernicious a Precedent, by ordering the proper Methods to be taken for Repealing the ſaid Char- " ter, and quieting the Borough in the Poſſeſſion of their ancient Privileges. We are truly ſenſible of " your Majeſty's tender Regard to the Rights of all your People; and we cannot, without In- " dignation, reflect upon the oppreſſive Deſigns of thoſe evil Counſellors, who endeavour- " ed to have brought a Blemiſh of this kind upon your Majeſty's moſt juſt and gentle " Reign.

" From all theſe evil Practices, and worſe Deſigns of ſome Perſons, who had, by falſe Pro- " feſſions of Love to their Country, inſinuated themſelves into your Royal Favour, irreparable " Miſchief had accrued to the Publick, had not your Majeſty, in your great Wiſdom, ſeaſona- " bly diſcovered the fatal Tendency of ſuch Meaſures; and out of your ſingular Goodneſs to " your People, removed from the Adminiſtration of Affairs, thoſe who had ſo ill anſwered the " favourable Opinion your Majeſty had conceived of them, and in ſo many Inſtances groſly " abuſed the great Truſt repoſed in them. Your People could with greater Patience have ſuf- " fered the manifold Injuries done to themſelves, by the Frauds and Depredations of ſuch Evil " Miniſters, had not the ſame Men proceeded to treat your Sacred Perſon with UNDUTIFULNESS " and Diſregard; but as the Intereſts of your Majeſty and your People are inſeparable, and are " by your Majeſty, and your good Subjects, inſeparably purſued, the Wrong which thoſe Men " had done to the Publick, drew upon them your Royal Diſpleaſure; and their Irreverence to- " wards your Majeſty, juſtly expoſed them to the Indignation of your People.

" Your Majeſty had, from the beginning of your auſpicious Reign, expreſſed a truly Chriſtian " Moderation, by Promiſes of Lenity and Protection to all your peaceable Subjects, and of Coun- " tenance and Favour to thoſe who ſhould moſt recommend themſelves by their Zeal for the eſtabliſhed " Government in Church and State; but theſe Miniſters framed to themſelves wild and unwarranta- " ble Schemes of Balancing Parties, and under a falſe Pretence of Temper and Moderation, did " really encourage Faction, by diſcountenancing and depreſſing Perſons zealouſly affected to your " Majeſty, and to the Church, and by extending their Favour and Patronage, to Men of licen- " cious and impious Principles, ſuch as ſhake the very Foundation of all Government, and all " Religion.

" Out of our unfeigned Zeal for your Majeſty's Honour and Service, and our faithful Affection " to the publick Good, we cannot forbear, with all Humility and Earneſtneſs, to beſeech your " Majeſty, that you would avoid, as the greateſt Enemies to your Royal Dignity, and to your " People's Safety, all Perſons who ſhall endeavour to engage you in ſuch pernicious Meaſures, " and that you would employ in Places of Authority and Truſt, ſuch only, as have given good " Teſtimonies of their Duty to your Majeſty, and of their Affection to the true Intereſt of your " Kingdom.

" Theſe are the humble Deſires of your faithful Commons, and theſe we know to be your Ma- " jeſty's gracious Intentions. From your tender Concern for this Church and Nation, and from " what you lately have done, and are going on to do for the Happineſs and Satisfaction of your " People, we promiſe our ſelves a favourable Acceptance of this our Application; and from our " Duty to your Majeſty, and our Fidelity to our Truſt, your Majeſty may confide in us, that we " will, upon all Occaſions, defend and ſupport your Majeſty, and our happy Conſtitution, againſt " all Enemies and Oppoſers whatſoever.

To which the Queen return'd the following Anſwer.

GENTLEMEN,

The Queen's Anſwer.

" THIS Repreſentation gives me freſh Aſſurances of your Zeal for my Service, and for the " true Intereſt of your Country.

" It contains many Particulars, I will take them all into my ſerious Conſideration, and give " the neceſſary Directions to redreſs the Grievances you complain of.

" Be aſſur'd, That your Advice, upon all Occaſions, has the greateſt Weight with me.

Addreſs for inquiring into the State of the Forces in Spain and Portugal.

" On the 7th of June, the Speaker reported Her Majeſty's Anſwer, after which " the Commons reſolv'd to addreſs the Queen, to appoint Perſons to inquire into the " Number and Quality of the Forces in Her Majeſty's Pay, in Spain and Portugal, " and to examine the State of the Payments and Accounts relating to the ſaid For- " ces; and to the Gariſons and Fortifications of Gibraltar, and Port Mahon; and

The Lords having paſſed the laſt Money Bill for raiſing Two Millions, without Amendment, it was generally expected, that the Queen would that * Day, have come to the Houſe of Peers, to put an End to this long Seſſion: But it was thought fit to let the Commons ſit ſome Days longer, to give them an Opportunity, to make Orders for the iſſuing out new Writs, for Electing Members in the Room of ſuch as were advanced to Places of Truſt and Profit. Accordingly, the Commons order'd, that very † Day, a new Writ to be made out, for a Citizen of the City of York, in the Room of the Honourable Robert Benſon, Eſq; made Chancellor, and Under-Treaſurer of the Exchequer, and another new Writ, for the Electing a Burgeſs for the Borough of Thirsk, in the County of York, in the Room of Sir Thomas Frankland, appointed to manage the Duties of the Poſt-Office. Then the Commons adjourned to the 9th of June, when new Writs were order'd to be iſſued out, for Electing a Knight for the County of Surrey, in the Room of the Honourable Heneage Finch, Eſq; who was made Maſter of Her Majeſty's Jewel-Houſe; and another for Electing a Knight for the County of Somerſet, in the Room of Sir William Wyndham, advanc'd to the Office of Maſter of Her Majeſty's Hart and Buck-Hounds. This done, the Commons adjourn'd again to the Tueſday * following, when they order'd other new Writs to be made out for Electing, 1. The next Day ‖, the Queen being come to the Houſe of Peers, with the uſual State and Solemnity, and the Commons ſent for up, and attending, Her Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to Ten Publick, and to Seven Private Bills; after which Her Majeſty made the following Speech to both Houſes.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" IT is with great Pleaſure I tell you, at the End of this Seſſion, That you have " fully made good all the Aſſurances you gave me at the beginning of it.

" This I look upon as a further Pledge of my Subjects Duty and Affection, which " is the firmeſt Support of my Throne.

" I thank you, Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, in a particular manner, for " what you have done. You have complied with my Deſire, in granting, a Sup- " ply for building many new Churches; and you have not only enabled Me to carry " on the War, but have made effectual Proviſion for paying thoſe heavy Debts " which were almoſt grown an inſupportable Burthen to the Publick; and this at a " time, when our Enemies, every where, pleaſed themſelves with the Hopes, that " the Supplies for the Service of the current Year could not have been found. You " have diſappointed them in all reſpects; and by the great Sums you have raiſed, " the greateſt ever granted to any Prince in one Seſſion, you have reſtored the pub- " lick Credit, which I will take Care to preſerve by a frugal Management.

" The World muſt now be ſatisfied, that nothing can be too difficult for a Par- " liament, fill'd with ſo much Zeal for the true Intereſt of the Nation in Church and " State.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" The Satisfaction I take in the Power with which GOD has intruſted me, is to " employ it for the Protection and Good of all my People, whoſe Proſperity I have " as much at Heart as ever any of my Predeceſſors had.

" You

" You ſee the happy Effects of a mutual Confidence between me and my Subjects; " I ſhall look upon any Attempt to leſſen it, as a Step towards diſſolving my Go- " vernment.

" The Temper you have ſhewn, will, I hope, convince thoſe who have the Mis- " fortune to differ from our Church, that their Liberty is not in Danger.

" It is needleſs for me to repeat the Aſſurances of my earneſt Concern for the " Succeſſion of the Houſe of Hanover; and of my fixed Reſolution to ſupport and " encourage the Church of England, as by Law eſtabliſhed.

" You are now returning to your ſeveral Countries; and I expect from you, that " you will further recommend your ſelves to me by ſtudying to promote the publick " Peace and Quiet.

The Parliament prorogued.

Then the Lord-Keeper, by her Majeſty's Command, prorogued the Parliament to Tueſday the Tenth Day of July next: But, before we leave this Seſſion, it will not be amiſs to take notice of an Affair that made great Noiſe in it. On Monday the 19th of February, Mr. Eversfield, Knight of the Shire for the County of Suſſex, and a great Stickler for High-Church, made a Complaint to the Houſe of Commons of a Letter, which he was inform'd, had been written by Sir James Montague, a Member of the Houſe for the City of Carliſle, in order to promote his Election there; and which he conceived, reflected on her Majeſty's Honour. Being ask'd, Whether he had ſeen the Original of that Letter; he ſaid, He had not, but only a Copy of it; for the Truth of which, he was ready to produce his Voucher. Sir James Montague denying the Fact, and offering to prove the contrary; the Inquiry into that Matter was put off to the next Day *: When the Houſe being inform'd, that Colonel Gledhill was at the Door, and had ſomething to offer to the Houſe, he was call'd in, and at the Bar charg'd Sir James Montague with writing the Letter before-mentioned. This occaſion'd a long and warm Debate; Sir James Montague ſtill denying the Writing of ſuch a Letter; and deſiring that the Biſhop of Carliſle, to whom he had indeed, written a Letter about his Election, and who waited in the Lobby, might be examined about it. Colonel Gledhill, on the other hand, deſired Time to produce his Witneſſes; which, he ſaid, were in the Country, to prove his Charge: Whereupon, by a Majority of One Hundred Fifty Three Voices againſt One Hundred Fifty One, it was ordered, That that Matter be taken into Conſideration on that Day Three Weeks. On the 9th of March, the Commons being inform'd, That the Queen had order'd the Officers of her Army in Spain, to repair to their Commands there, reſolv'd to addreſs her Majeſty, that ſhe would be pleas'd to give Leave to Colonel Gledhill to ſtay ſome Days longer; which her Majeſty readily granted. The Ground of his Accuſation was only this: When the late Election for Carliſle, where Sir James Montague uſed to be choſen, and now ſtood Candidate, came on, the Friends of his Competitors, (as 'tis uſual in ſuch Caſes, to take all Advantages) gave out, that Sir James being removed from his Place of Attorney-General, the chuſing of him again might be interpreted a Diſrepect to the Court; of which Suggeſtion Sir James being inform'd, he wrote to his Friend, the Biſhop of Carliſle, " That tho' the Queen had thought fit to put another in his Place, yet he was ſo " far from having incurr'd her Majeſty's Diſpleaſure, that, on the contrary, her " Majeſty had graciouſly been pleaſed, in Conſideration of his former Services, to " beſtow upon him a Penſion of a Thouſand Pounds per Ann." This Letter being communicated to ſome of the Electors, Sir James Montague's Opponents took from thence Occaſion to object, That ſince he had a Place of Profit, meaning the Penſion, he could not be choſen Member: Of which, Sir James having Notice, he wrote a ſecond Letter to the Biſhop of Carliſle, to remove that groundleſs Objection; intimating, That he had no Place of Profit, but only a Penſion for Life, which did not diſqualify him to be choſen. Sir James Montague's Friends having thought it neceſſary to have part of this Letter diſpers'd, Colonel Gledhill took a Copy of it; and ſhewing afterwards his Notes to ſome Acquaintance, he was told, That he had omitted the moſt remarkable Part of the Letter; viz. That the Queen had given Sir James Montague a Penſion, to enable him to carry his Election: Whereupon he reform'd his Notes, according to this wrong Information, and ſhew'd 'em to ſome Parliament Men, who, to curry Favour at Court, thought fit to lay that Matter before the Houſe of Commons, in order to wipe off the ſuppoſed Scandal caſt on her Majeſty's Honour. On the 14th of March, the Commons proceeded to take into Conſideration, the Matter of the Charge of Colonel Gledhill, upon Sir Montague; and the Colonel was call'd in, and ſome Witneſſes were examin'd, as well on his Part, as of Sir James's; and being withdrawn, the Houſe being inform'd, that the Lord Biſhop of Carliſle, (who had been mention'd in the Evidence given at the Bar,) deſired to be admitted to be heard; he was heard accordingly. And his Lordſhip being withdrawn, Sir James Montague was heard likewiſe. This occaſion'd a warm De-

But, nevertheleſs, it was reſolv'd, "That Co-"lonel Gledhill had ſufficient Grounds for bringing the ſaid Charge before this "Houſe."

The Biſhop of Carliſle cenſur'd for diſperſing Sir J. Montague's Letter.

The Duke of Marlborough having been continued in the Command of the Britiſh Forces in Flanders, and a young * General (who had given his Grace ſome Uneaſineſs) being recall'd from thence, and ſent to Spain; many were inclined to hope, that a Reconciliation was effected between his Grace and the New Miniſtry: But the † Author of Four Letters, written in Vindicatiou of the late Miniſtry, as to the Management of the WAR, and the Negotiations of PEACE; and who, undoubtedly, received Hints and Inſtructions from his Patron; plainly inſinuated, "that "little more Harmony was to be expected between Two Rivals in Power, than "between a Falling and a Riſing Favourite. Some Perſons, ſays that Writer, would "ſtill pretend to put a good Face upon the Matter, and do not queſtion, from the "Duke of Marlborough's paſt Succeſſes, that he will yet frighten our Enemies into "an Honourable Peace: But, I am afraid, he is not likely to do ſo much at this "Time, when the Enemy are encouraged to take Heart afreſh; the Allies are full "of Jealouſies and Fears, and himſelf extreamly mortified. Things are not the "ſame, any more than the Uſage he meets with: When he is uneaſy in his "Thoughts, undermin'd in the Favour of his Sovereign, and vilely miſrepre-"ſented to the People; when his want of Intereſt at Home, makes it impoſſible "for the Allies to depend upon the Hopes he gives them; when he is without Au-"thority in his Army, where it is made criminal to eſpouſe his Intereſt; and to "fly in his Face, is the ſureſt Means to Advancement: When 'tis meritorious in "his Officers to cabal againſt him; and the moſt factious, will be thought the moſt "deſerving: With what Heart can a Man, in theſe Circumſtances, ſerve? Or, "what Succeſs can be expected from him, when he is to depend upon profeſs'd "Enemies for his Support? 'Tis little, I think, we can hope for even from him "hereafter; tho' that little be more than any body elſe could do." Upon theſe Conſiderations, the Duke's Friends concluded, that his Grace reſolved to ſacrifice his private Diſguſts to the publick Good, by concerting Meaſures with the New Miniſtry, if not with equal Confidence, at leaſt with the ſame hearty Zeal for the Common Cauſe, as he did with the late Lord Treaſurer: Which, if real, were, indeed, Heroick Motives. But his Grace's Enemies were not wanting to ‖ ſuggeſt, That nothing but his predominant Paſſion, an inſatiable Deſire of Wealth, kept him in his Command; and that he rather choſe to make a Surrender of his Dutcheſs's Places, than to part with his own, which were far more profitable. Be that as it will; about the Beginning of February, the Queen was pleas'd to write a very obliging Letter to the States-General, about the Duke of Marlborough; Whoſe Conduct, Her Majeſty declar'd her ſelf to be entirely ſatisfied with; and aſſur'd them, that, according to their Deſires, ſhe would order the Duke forthwith to go over to Holland. Accordingly, the 18th of that Month, his Grace ſet out from St. James's, with a poſitive Aſſurance, that the Payment of the Troops under his Command, would be as effectually taken care of by the New Miniſters, as it had been by the Old; and imbarking at Harwich, the next Day, arriv'd at the Hague on the 4th of March N. S. to the great Satisfaction of the States-General. While all Things were preparing on both ſides for the opening of the Campaign, many Conſultations were held on ſeveral weighty Affairs; particularly in relation to the Aſſembling a Body of Troops, to preſerve the Neutrality of the Empire, which was in imminent Danger of being broke, by the King of Sweden's refuſing to come into the Meaſures already agreed on for that Purpoſe. After ſeveral Conferences, it was, at length, reſolved, That Her Britannick Majeſty, and the States-General, ſhould employ in that Service the Eight Palatine Battalions in their Pay, and provide the other Four, that would ſtill be wanting to compleat their Quotas, where they might beſt be ſpared, without affecting the Common Cauſe. On the 22d of March, N. S. the Poliſh Miniſter received an Expreſs from the King his Maſter, with Orders to preſs the March of thoſe Troops; and having, the next Day, had a Conference with the Miniſters of the Allies, it was reſolv'd, that, by the 15th of the next Month, they ſhould be at Gronenburgh, on the Oder, the Place appointed for their general

Some Time before, Sir James Wiſhart arrived at the Hague, from England, under Pretence of concerting the Operations at Sea, with Commiſſioners appointed by the States-General for that Purpoſe; but, in reality, to find fault and expoſtulate with the Admiralty of Holland.

Sir J. Wiſhart arrives at the Hague, Feb. 25. N. S.

There was, at this Juncture, another Affair, of no ſmall Conſequence, agitating at the Hague: For, when the High Allies expected to hear that the King of Pruſſia's Troops were on their March into the Field, the Sieurs Grumbow and Hymmen, that Prince's Miniſters, declar'd, That unleſs their Maſter had full Satisfaction given him, as to the Arrears due to his Forces, and the Succeſſion of the late King William, as Prince of Orange; his Troops ſhould not march out of their Winter-Quarters. The Allies were ſomewhat ſtartled at this unexpected Declaration; but the Deputies of the States having had ſeveral Conferences with the Pruſſian Miniſters, an Agreement was concluded, containing in Subſtance, "That the Arrears due to his "Pruſſian Majeſty, ſhould be paid in Four Months Time: That notwithſtanding "the Houſe of Dieren had been adjudg'd, by Sentence of a Court of Judicature, "to the Prince of Naſſau, the States conſented, that his Pruſſian Majeſty ſhould "continue to make uſe of it; and that the Council, who had adminiſtred the Re-"venue of the Succeſſion of Orange, ſince the Death of the late King, ſhould be "obliged ſpeedily to give an Account of the ſame." As ſoon as the Deputies had made this Declaration, and promiſed, that ſome other Articles, inſiſted upon by the King of Pruſſia, ſhould be regulated with all Speed; the King of Pruſſia approved this Agreement, and his Troops began their March for the Netherlands.

Unexpected Demands of the Pruſſian Miniſters.

The Duke of Argyle arrived at the Hague, the 4th of April N. S.; and having made a Viſit to the Penſionary, and another to the Lord Townſhend, continued his Journey for Spain. His Grace did not think fit to viſit either the Duke of Marlborough, or the Preſident of the Aſſembly of the States; on Pretence of being very much in Haſte: But their High Mightineſſes ſent their Agent, to compliment him, and wiſh him a good Journey, and Succeſs in his Command. About this Time alſo, the Lord Raby, who was appointed to ſucceed the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, as Ambaſſador Extraordinary, and Plenipotentiary from the Queen of Great Britain to the States-General, being arrived at the Hague from Berlin, and having deliver'd his Credentials in the uſual Form; the Preſident of the Aſſembly, upon returning the Viſit his Excellency had given him, ſignified to him, That Her Majeſty's Choice of his Excellency, to repreſent her Royal Perſon, was highly acceptable to the States: But notwithſtanding this Compliment, when the Lord Viſcount Townſhend ſet out from the Hague, in order to embark for England, he left behind him a general Regret, and the moſt ſolid Reputation that ever was gain'd by any Britiſh Miniſter with that wiſe Republick.

The Lord Raby Ambaſſador and Plenipotentiary at the Hague, arrives there April 8. N. S.

The Duke of Marlborough expected, with great Impatience, the Arrival of Prince Eugene of Savoy, who was ſome time detain'd at Vienna by the coming thither of a Turkiſh Aga, with a particular Commiſſion from the Ottoman Port, to remove any Jealouſy that might be entertain'd at the Imperial Court, from the warlike Preparations the Turks were at this time making againſt Muſcovy and Poland. In the mean while, his Grace was daily in Conference with the Deputies of the States, to concert the Operations of War; and it being thought of utmoſt Importance to be in the Field before the Enemy, it was reſolv'd to cauſe Detachments from all the Gariſons to canton along the Scarpe, and between that River and the Canal of Douay, whereby a great Body might, in few Hours, be form'd, and be in a Readineſs to march; which, with great Diligence and Secrecy, was put in Execution, under the Direction of Lieutenant-General Cadogan. At the ſame time, vaſt Magazines were providing at Tournay, from whence Proviſions and other Neceſſaries were to be ſent up the Scheld and the Scarpe to Douay, for the Subſiſtence of the Troops; and, on the other hand, the French Forces began about the middle of April to aſſemble near Cambray and Arras. The Mareſchal de Villars being expected at either of thoſe Places the 25th of April, N. S. the Duke of Marlborough ſet out from the Hague the 23d of the ſame Month, and embark'd at Streyn Sas, on Board a Yatcht of the States, which conducted him to Ghent, where his Grace arrived the 25th, and the next Day reach'd Tournay, near which Place the Troops were encamp'd in ſeveral Bodies. His Grace having held a Council of War, it was reſolv'd, that thoſe ſeveral Bodies ſhould join, and form the Army, which was done accordingly on the 30th; and the Army encamp'd with the Right on the Marque, and the Left on the Scarpe, the Town of Orchies being in the Center, where the Duke took his Quarters. Upon theſe Motions, the French Troops drew likewiſe together, and encamp'd behind the Senſet, the Right to Oiſy, and the Left to Morchy le Procuſe; having diverted the Courſe of the Scarpe at Bioche, whereby that River fell into the Senſet, and render'd their Camp almoſt unacceſſiunacceſſible on the Left, and on the Front; beſides which, their Flank was cover'd by the Scheld. Hereupon, the Britiſh General broke up from Orchies on the 1ſt of May, N. S. and his Army having paſs'd the Scarpe, partly at Pont-à Rache, and partly at Marchienne, encamp'd all along the Road from Douay to Valenciennes, the Left to Sommain, and the Right to Goulezin, Warde being almoſt in the Center, where the Duke took his Quarters: But nothing material happen'd till the 9th of the ſame Month, when Three thouſand French, detach'd from Valenciennes and Condeé, attack'd at Tuns, between St. Amand and Mortagne, a Convoy of Forty five Boats, laden with Hay and Oats for the Confederate Army, which ſet out from Tournay, under a Guard of Two Battalions, commanded by Brigadier Chambrier. The Action was very hot; but notwithſtanding the vigorous Reſiſtance of the Guard, the Enemy burnt Twelve Boats. However, the Gariſon of St. Amand coming to the Aſſiſtance of the Guard, the French retir'd, having had about a Hundred Men killed and wounded: The Loſs on the Side of the Allies was near the ſame; and all the other Boats having eſcaped, the Damage the Confederates ſuſtain'd on this Occaſion, was very inconſiderable.

The Confederates march to Warde.

Before this Time, the Prince of Savoy was ſet out from Vienna; but, by reaſon of the unexpected Death of the late Emperor Joſeph, had been obliged to ſtay ſome Days about Franckfort, to concert with the Elector of Mentz, the neceſſary Meaſures for the Security of the Empire, and to view the Lines, and other Poſts. Having given ſuch Directions as he thought convenient, his Highneſs proceeded to the Court of the Elector Palatine, to regulate ſeveral Matters with that Prince, who, as one of the Vicars of the Empire, was to have the chief Adminiſtration thereof, during the Interregnum; and arriv'd at the Hague the 5th of May, where he was oblig'd to tarry ſome time; ſo that he did not join the Duke of Marlborough till the 21ſt of that Month. Thoſe Two Generals reſolv'd to continue in their Camp as long as poſſible, in hopes that the Scarcity of Forage would oblige the Enemy to decamp; for after the ſeveral Attempts that were made at the Poſt of Arleux, which was taken and retaken, there was no Likelihood to force their Lines. In the mean time, the French, hoping that the Elector of Bavaria had many Friends in the Empire, who would declare for him; and believing that the Germans, being depriv'd of their Chief, would hearken to a Neutrality, if that Elector appear'd in Germany at the Head of a powerful Army, reſolved to ſend him thither; and in order thereto, reinforced their Army on the Rhine, both from their Gariſons on the Maeze and Moſelle, and from their Army in the Netherlands; for Monſieur de Villars thought his Lines ſo ſecure and impenetrable, that he boaſted, they were the Ne plus ultrà of the Duke of Marlborough. Thoſe Lines began at Bouchain, on the Scheld, and were continued along the Senſet and the Scarpe to Arras; and from thence along the Upper Scarpe and the River Ugy, to the Canche, the Opening between thoſe Rivers being intrench'd and fortify'd with all poſſible Care by a large Ditch, defended with Redoubts, and other Works.

The Enemy's Preparations alarming the Empire, Prince Eugene received poſitive Orders from Vienna, to march with the Imperial and Palatine Troops to the Upper Rhine, in order to ſecure Germany; and, accordingly, the Two Armies decamp'd from the Camp before-mention'd the 14th of June, and repaſs'd the Scarpe, Prince Eugene taking his Way towards Tourray, and the Duke of Marlborough marching towards the Plain of Lens, in ſight of the French, who did not offer to inſult his Rear. His Grace continued there till the 20th of July, when he advanc'd towards Aire, to make the Enemy believe, that he deſign'd to beſiege St. Omer, or attack their Lines on that Side. This obliged the Mareſchal de Villars to reinforce the Gariſon of that Place, and to draw all the Troops to defend his Lines between the Scarpe and the Canche, which both Armies believ'd his Grace deſign'd to attack. The Confederate Army encamp'd at Villers Erulin, in the Beginning of Auguſt; and on the 4th, by Break of Day, my Lord Duke advanc'd with a great Detachment to take a nearer View of the Lines; and being returned to his Camp, order'd Faſcines to be provided, and made ſuch other Diſpoſitions, as confirm'd every body in the Opinion, that his Deſign was againſt the Lines. The Army had Orders to march about Nine of the Clock at Night; but as ſoon as they were in Motion, his Grace put himſelf at the Head of the Horſe of the Left Wing, and march'd back towards the Senſet, with ſo much Diligence, being follow'd by the reſt of the Army, that having paſs'd the Scarpe at Vitry, at Five of the Clock the next Morning, he march'd directly to ſupport the Detachment from the Gariſon of Douay, which had already paſs'd the Senſet, and was join'd there by the reſt of his Army; which, without the Loſs of One Man, got, by that well-manag'd Stratagem, into the formidable Lines of the Enemy.

to attack the Allies, whilſt he was ſending Troops over the Scheld at Cambray, to poſt themſelves between that Place and Bouchain, to prevent the Siege of this laſt Town; but the Duke of Marlborough, ſuſpecting his Deſign, and the Siege of Bouchain being reſolved upon in a Council of War, paſſed the Scheld, and cauſed that Place to be inveſted, and the Lines of Circumvallation to be made, (tho' in ſome Places they were expoſed to the Cannon of the Town, and the Batteries of the French Army) and to be continued from the Senſet to the Upper Scheld, through a Moraſs and Inundation, which was thought impracticable. The Trenches were open'd the 18th of Auguſt, and the Gariſon ſurrender'd Priſoners of War the 12th of September, in the ſight of Monſieur de Villars; and this Conqueſt ended the Campaign on that Side.

And takes Bouchain.

The Arrival of Prince Eugene, with the Reinforcements before-mention'd, diſappointed the Deſigns of the French, who thereupon gave over the Thoughts of invading Germany, and had Recourſe to their uſual Artifices to gain ſome Members of the Empire; but the Electors, encouraged by the powerful Recommendation of the Queen of Great Britain, and of the States, rejected thoſe Offers; and, without any Regard to the Requeſt and Proteſtations of the late Electors of Cologn and Bavaria, tho' ſupported by the French and the Pope, unanimouſly elected his Catholick Majeſty King Charles, Emperor of the Romans, by the Name of Charles VI. That Prince having given the neceſſary Directions for the Regency of Catalonia, which he left to his Queen, embark'd on Board the Confederate Fleet, and was crown'd Emperor on the 22d of December at Franckfort, in great Solemnity. As ſoon as that important Election was over, Prince Eugene ſent the Imperial Forces, and thoſe of the Empire, into Winter-Quarters, without being able to make any Enterprize againſt the Common Enemy; for tho' the Troubles of Hungary, which had occaſion'd a fatal Diverſion, were pacify'd in April, yet the Imperial Court could not make any Detachments from thence to reinforce their Army, for want of Money; and by reaſon of the War that broke out the laſt Winter between the Czar and the Turks, which obliged the Court of Vienna to keep a good Number of Troops in Hungary.

King Charles elected Emperor of Germany, Oct. 12. N. S.

The fatal Differences between the Courts of Vienna and Turin having, in a great meaſure, obſtructed the Operations of War on the ſide of Piedmont for the Two preceding Campaigns, the Queen of Great Britain diſpatched the Earl of Peterborow to make new Inſtances for an Accommodation; and her Majeſty's Interpoſition proved ſo effectual, that ſome few Days before the late Emperor was taken ill, he granted to the Duke of Savoy the Poſſeſſion of the Fiefs in the Montferrat, with all the Rights and Privileges that were enjoyed by the former Dukes of that Country; and his Imperial Majeſty would, doubtleſs, have given a full Satisfaction to that Prince, on his other Pretenſions, had not his Death prevented the ſame. His Royal Highneſs being, however, contented with what he had obtain'd, took the Field in Perſon, with his own Troops and Auxiliaries; forced his Way into the Dutchy of Savoy, penetrated as far as the Rhone, but was ſtopt by the French, who were poſted near Fort Barraux, in an inacceſſible Camp; ſo that after having continued in that Country as long as the Seaſon of the Year would permit, he was obliged to repaſs the Alps, not being ſtrong enough to maintain himſelf in Savoy in the Winter, for want of Magazines, and other Neceſſaries. This Expedition did, however, conſiderable Service; for the French were thereby obliged to weaken their Forces on the Rhine, which render'd their Deſign againſt the Empire abortive; and, on the other hand, they could not ſend the Reinforcements they had promiſed the Duke of Vendoſme, to act againſt Catalonia.

Differences between the Emperor and Duke of Savoy, adjuſted.

Campaign in Savoy.

Both Armies there ſuffer'd ſo much in the Year 1710, by their long Marches, and the Battels of Almanza, Saragoſſa, and Villavicioſa, that it is not ſurprizing that the Campaign began, this Year, very late, on that Side: And tho' the Duke of Vendoſme boaſted to diſlodge the Allies from Terragona and Barcelona, and conſequently from the whole Country of Catalonia, before Chriſtmas; yet he made no other Enterprizes, than the Sieges of the Caſtles of Venaſque, Arens, and Cardona; nor was he able to drive the Allies from Pratz del Rey, where they poſted themſelves, at the beginning of the Campaign. The Caſtle of Cardona made ſo good a Defence, that General Staremberg had Time to relieve it, and to diſlodge the Enemy: Which gave great Reputation to the Arms of King Charles, and as much Diſgrace to thoſe of the Enemy. That General, accompanied by Major-General Montheſe, Commander of the Dutch Forces, and Lieutenant-General Hamilton, as Voluntiers; with about Four Thouſand Horſe and Foot, ſet out the 20th of December, and the next Day, arriv'd within a League of the Caſtle, where a briſk Action happen'd to the Advantage of the Imperialiſts. The 22d, they finiſh'd the Work, by putting Relief into the Caſtle, and raiſing the Siege of it, which they effected with great Bravery, and made the Enemy retreat with Precipitation, and the Loſs of above Two Thouſand Men, Fourteen battering Cannon, and Four Mortars, beſides the Ammunition and Proviſions which they left behind. The Loſs, on the Side of the Imperialiſts, amounted only to Two Hundred Soldiers kill'd or wounded, and Three Officers kill'd.

Campaign in Portugal inconſiderable.

The Operations of War on the Side of Portugal, were, this Year, very inconſiderable; for notwithſtanding the Portugueze retook, in the beginning of the Campaign, Miranda de Duero, and that, through the indefatigable Care of the Earl of Portmore, General of the Engliſh Forces in that Country, they brought a fine Army into the Field, and advanced into the Spaniſh Territories, in hopes to deſtroy the Magazines of the Enemy at Merida, which would have facilitated the Siege of Badajox; yet the Portugueze abandon'd that Deſign, and return'd into their own Country, to cover it againſt the Marquis de Bay, who had made an Incurſion into it.

The Chapter of Hildeſheim, a City in the Circle of the Lower Saxony, having, ſome Years before, in a moſt violent Manner, moleſted the Proteſtants ſettled in that Biſhoprick, the Elector of Hanover thought himſelf oblig'd in Conſcience, to uſe his Intereſt for the Relief of thoſe diſtreſſed People; and his powerful Interpoſition, produc'd a Convention between his Electoral Highneſs and the Chapter; whereby it was agreed, that the ſaid Proteſtants ſhould, for the future, enjoy their Civil and Religious Liberties, according to the Treaties of Weſtphalia. This Agreement was pretty well obſerv'd, for about Four Years; but as 'tis the general Maxim of the Popiſh Clergy, to keep their Faith with thoſe they call Hereticks, no longer than it ſuits with their Conveniency, the Chapter of Hildeſheim ſeeing the Elector of Hanover intent on the grand Affairs of Chriſtendom, and thoſe of the North of Germany, thought this a proper Opportunity to perſecute again the Proteſtants in their Diſtrict, fondly hoping that his Electoral Highneſs would either overlook, or not reſent it. But they found themſelves miſtaken: For the Elector, having firſt admoniſh'd them to forbear thoſe Violences, reſolv'd, upon their Refuſal, to make uſe of Force to repreſs their turbulent Spirits. Hereupon, about the beginning of the Year 1711, he caus'd the Town and Caſtle of Paine, and afterwards the City of Hildeſheim, to be ſeized by his Troops; and order'd, at the ſame Time, his Miniſters at Berlin, the Hague, and other Courts, to notify, that as ſoon as the Chapter had redreſs'd the Grievances of the Proteſtants, he would withdraw his Forces from that City and Biſhoprick, of which he never deſign'd to keep Poſſeſſion. However, this Declaration was not ſufficient, either to ſtill the loud Clamours of the Papiſts, or even to remove the Jealouſies and Umbrage which the King of Pruſſia, and ſome other Proteſtant States, entertain'd upon this Service: And thereupon the latter made preſſing Inſtances with the Queen of Great Britain, and the States-General, to ingage them to interpoſe their good Offices, to oblige the Elector of Hanover to evacuate Heldeſheim. On the other hand, his Electoral Highneſs caus'd a kind of Manifeſto to be publiſh'd, to juſtify his Proceedings, and the Uprightneſs of his Intentions: And foreſeeing that the Chapter of Hildeſheim, would raiſe a Clamour in the Diet at Ratiſbon, and pretend (as they actually did) that the Entrance of the Hanoverian Troops into that Biſhoprick, had diſabled it from furniſhing its Contingent to the Army of the Empire: His Electoral Highneſs wiſely obviated that odious Imputation, by taking Care that his Troops ſhould not touch the leaſt part of the ordinary Revenues and Contributions, out of which that Biſhoprick us'd to furniſh its Quota. The Chapter being thus left without any colourable Excuſe, and ſeeing the Elector of Hanover firmly reſolv'd to have the Grievances of the Proteſtants in that Biſhoprick redreſs'd, thought it Prudence to give his Electoral Highneſs entire Satisfaction: Which they had no ſooner done, and renew'd the Treaty for the Security of the Rights and Liberties of the Proteſtants, but his Electoral Highneſs gave a noble Proof of his Integrity and Sincerity, by withdrawing his Forces from the Dependencies of that Biſhoprick. The Biſhop of Munſter was very inſtrumental in that Agreement, and did the Empire a great Piece of Service: For ſome ill-deſigning Perſons had ſo miſrepreſented this Affair to the King of Pruſſia, that there was reaſon to fear an open Rupture between that Prince, and the moſt ſerene Houſe of Hanover.

He ſeizes on that City.

The Endeavours uſed to adjuſt the Diſputes about the Succeſſion of the late King William, of Glorious Memory, were not attended with the like Succeſs. An Accommodation, as was hinted before, was attempted in the beginning of the Spring; and the King of Pruſſia repairing to the Hague ſoon after, to preſs the Concluſion of that Affair, the Prince of Naſſau Friezland, the other Party, was earneſtly deſired by his Pruſſian Majeſty to come thither alſo. His Highneſs comply'd, though not without ſome Reluctancy and Concern, to leave the Confederate Army in the middle of the Campaign; which ſeem'd to forebode the Fatality that attended that brave young Prince. For on the 14th of July, N. S. being come to Moerdyke, in his way to the Hague, and being oblig'd to ferry over the Amer, both by reaſon of the Fatigue

The Prince of Naſſau Frieze-land drown'd, July 14. N. S.

A. D. 1711.

Fatigue of his Journey, and the Rain which fell in great Abundance, he choſe to continue in his Coach, together with Mr. Hilken, Maſter of the Horſe to his Highneſs, and Colonel of his Guards; but by that time they were got within a ſmall Diſtance of the oppoſite Shore, a ſudden tempeſtuous Guſt of Wind aroſe, with which, and the Diſturbance of the Water occaſion'd by it, the Horſes were ſo frighted, that they immediately leap'd over Board, overſet the Veſſel, and dragg'd the Coach into the Amer, ſo that the Prince, and his Companion, were ſoon drown'd, notwithſtanding all the Endeavours uſed by one of his Highneſs's Servants, who loſt his Life in attempting to ſave his Maſter's. The Death of that Prince, who, whatever Claim was put up by others, to the Succeſſion of the late King William, did, by general Conſent, inherit the Virtues, and gave Hopes of attaining the Reputation of the Illuſtrious Princes of Orange, was univerſally lamented by the States-General; all the Inhabitants of the United Provinces; and, in particular, by the Army, who had been Eye-Witneſſes of his good Conduct, and Heroical Bravery in the memorable Sieges of Liſle, Douay and Mons, the Battel of Oudenarde, and chiefly in that of Blaregnies, wherein he gave ſuch diſtinguiſh'd Proofs of the ſedateſt Intrepidity, as gain'd him the Love and Eſteem of all the Generals, Officers, and Soldiers.

His Loſs univerſally lamented.

Not many Days after this melancholy News reach'd England, Brigadier Sutton arrived at Whitehall, with the Account of the Duke of Marlborough's paſſing the French Lines, which gave his Grace's Friends the greater Joy, becauſe his Enemies, as they heartily wiſh'd it, ſo had they fondly given out, That nothing ſhould be done this Year in Flanders. 'Tis certain, that this Succeſs of the Duke, did not well ſuit with the Scheme of the new Miniſters; who having made underhand Advances towards a Peace, with ſome French Agents in London, wanted nothing but fair Pretences, publickly to avow and juſtify their Meaſures. Upon their Diſappointment, the Duke of Marlborough's Enemies endeavour'd to leſſen his Reputation and Glory, ſome pretending, That he had only removed his Army from a plentiful, to a ſtarving Camp; but that malicious Suggeſtion was ſoon confuted, as well by the Sequel of his late Succeſs, as by the Applauſe all Europe gave to the Conduct of the Britiſh General; whilſt Mareſchal de Villars was publickly reflected on, and lampoon'd, both in his own Army, and at Paris, and had much ado to keep his Ground at Court. This Paſſage ſhews how far ſome Men are intoxicated by the Spirit of Party and Faction, which clouds their Underſtandings, and byaſſes their Affections to ſuch a Degree, that they cannot either diſcern, or are offended with the brighteſt Merit.

The Duke of Marlborough's Enemies endeavour to leſſen his Glory.

Not long after, the new Miniſters receiv'd a more ſenſible Mortification, in the Miſcarriage of the Expedition to the Weſt-Indies, which, for many Months, had kept all Europe at a Gaze, and in doubtful Expectation. Before we enter upon the Account of that Diſaſter, it is neceſſary to obſerve, that one of the moſt ſpecious, and, indeed, beſt grounded Complaints againſt the former Adminiſtration, was, that during ſo long a War, in which ſo much Blood and Treaſure had been ſpent, ſo little Care had been taken, either to improve thoſe advantageous Conditions, upon which England entred into the Alliance, viz. That we ſhould remain Maſters of ſuch Places as we ſhould poſſeſs in the Spaniſh Weſt-Indies, or to ſecure our own Colonies on the Continent of America, and regain our Newfoundland-Fiſhery. 'Tis true, a ſucceſsful Attempt was, in the Year 1710, made by Colonel Nicholſon, on Port-Royal in Nova-Scotia, which had been concerted with the late Miniſtry; but neither was this thought ſufficient to attone for their pretended paſt Neglect; nor did they reap the Honour of that Deſign, being remov'd before it was put in Execution. Upon the News of this Conqueſt, the New Miniſters reſolved to follow that Blow; in the Proſecution of which Counſel, they were further incouraged by Colonel Nicholſon; who, upon his Return, had ſeveral Conferences with the Lord Treaſurer, and laid before him very plauſible Schemes for the Reduction of Quebec, and Placentia, in order to ſecure the whole Country of Canada, and to drive the French out of Newfoundland, and thereby gain the intire Fiſhery to our ſelves: A Deſign, undoubtedly, worthy the beſt of Patriots, as well as wiſeſt Stateſmen! For, as the Succeſs of it would have produced little leſs than Five Hundred Thouſand Pounds per Annum neat Profit to this Nation, ſo would it have greatly increas'd our Naval Strength, and, which had been a double Advantage, given a fatal Blow to that of France; the Canada and Newfoundland Trade, being the beſt Nurſery of Sailors that Kingdom has on the Ocean. Nor was this all that the Miniſtry had in View, in the Deſign of reducing Canada: They were not unacquainted with the Dangers impending from that Quarter, on all our Settlements on the Continent of America; which had been laid before Her Majeſty, by the Four Indian Princes that came over with Colonel Nicholſon, in the Spring of the Year 1710. They knew beſides, the great Advantage which ſome of thoſe Plantations bring to the Britiſh Nation; and therefore could not but think all manner of Precaution ought to be taken, taken, effectually to ſecure them againſt ſo incroaching a Neighbour as the French. Not to mention the Glory of ſucceeding in ſo beneficial a Deſign, which would have ſignalized the Beginning of their Adminiſtration, and therefore was certainly a powerful Motive to this Undertaking; which was concerted, and carry'd on, with almoſt unexampled Secrecy, tho', perhaps, executed with leſs Diligence and Forecaſt, than the Nature of ſo important a Service requir'd.

About the Beginning of April 1711, the Regiments of Colonel Kirke, Brigadier Hill, Colonel Windreſs, Colonel Clayton, and Colonel Kane, which had been drawn from the Army in Flanders, were embark'd at Oſtend, and thence tranſported to the Rendezvous at Portſmouth; where the Regiments of Lieutenant-General Seymour, and Colonel Deſaunay, with a Battalion of Marines, commanded by Colonel Charles Churchill, were alſo ſhipp'd off for the intended Expedition, under the Command of Brigadier Hill, Brother to the New Favourite. While the neceſſary Proviſions were getting ready, the Land-Forces continued on Board the Tranſports and Men of War at Spithead, till the 28th of April, when they ſail'd from thence with the Squadron commanded by Sir Hovendon Walker, conſiſting of her Majeſty's Ships the Edgar, Monmouth, Devonſhire, Humber, Swiftſure, Kingſton, Sunderland, Montague, and Dunkirk; which were to be reinforced by other Ships in the Weſt-Indies. On the 2d of May, the Fleet was, by contrary Winds, obliged to put into Plymouth, from whence they ſailed again the 4th. The Deſign of this Expedition was kept ſecret, till they came over the Banks of Newfoundland, near New England; when the General and Admiral having open'd their Orders, it was made known, That they were firſt to attempt the Conqueſt of Quebec, a rich ſtrong City, ſituate on the Left Side of the River St. Lawrence, or Canada, which runs about One hundred and thirty Leagues from its Mouth, up to that Place. After ſeven Weeks and three Days ſailing, the Fleet anchor'd in Nantasket Road, near Boſton in New-England, on Sunday the 24th of June. The next Morning, the Caſtle of Boſton giving the uſual Signal of ſeveral Ships being ſeen in the Bay, about Noon the Alarm begun, and all Precautions were taken for the Defence of that Place: But the Inhabitants were ſoon agreeably ſurpriz'd, when they found theſe Ships to be her Majeſty's Squadron. The General and Admiral being come aſhore, held a Council, in which it was thought fit, that the Forces on Board the Fleet, ſhould land, and encamp on Noddes Iſland, to refreſh themſelves, till the Preparations to be made in thoſe Parts for the Execution of the intended Expedition, were in a Readineſs: And thoſe Troops, who prov'd to be in a better State of Health than could be reaſonably expected after ſo long a Voyage, were review'd by General Hill. The Fleet, upon their Arrival at Boſton, conſiſted of Twelve Men of War, Forty Tranſports, and Six Store-Ships, with all manner of warlike Stores, and a fine Train of Artillery, with Forty Horſe for the Uſe of the the ſame, commanded by Colonel King, with proper Officers; beſides which, the Admiral found there the Windſor and Weymouth, which had brought in a French Man of War of Forty two Guns, and Three hundred Men, and Three other Prizes, valued about Sixty thouſand Pounds. The Dunkirk brought in likewiſe a ſmall Banker as Prize, which ſhe took on the 28th of May. But here we may take Notice, that tho' the principal Managers of this Enterprize, were made to expect, that upon the Arrival of the Fleet in New-England, they would find there all the neceſſary Supplies of Proviſions; yet above Five Weeks elaps'd, before all Things could be got in a Readineſs for the Proſecution of the Deſign. Some would have laid the Blame of this Delay upon the Governor of New-England; but it afterwards appear'd, from authentick Teſtimonies, that he did all that lay in his Power to forward and promote this Expedition. On the 20th of July, the Britiſh Forces return'd on Board their reſpective Ships, and on the 28th, Two Regiments of New-England, Maſſachuſſet's-Bay, New Hampſhire, and Rhode-Iſland Plantation, commanded by Colonel Vetch, and Colonel Walton, who were to aſſiſt in this Enterprize, began to embark on Board the Ships and Sloops provided for that purpoſe. On the 30th of July, the Fleet ſailed from Boſton for the River Canada; the Line of the Battel of the Squadron, conſiſting of the Swiftſure, Sunderland, Devonſhire, Edgar, (on Board of which was Sir Hovendon Walker, Admiral) Humber, Windſor, Dunkirk, Feverſham, Leopard, Cheſter, and Monmouth, Men of War; with the Leoſtaff and Triton's Prize, Two Thirty Gun Veſſels; and the Baſilisk and Granado, Bomb-Ships.

The Fleet ſails from Plymouth, May 4.

They arrive Boſton, June 25.

The Expedition retarded for want of Proviſions.

Beſides the Forces on Board the Fleet, Lieutenant-General Nicholſon, who was thought to be the chief Projector of this Expedition, and therefore reſolv'd to have a conſiderable Share in the Execution, ſet out from Boſton the ſame Day that the Fleet ſailed from Nantasket-Bay. Having ſtaid a few Days at New-York, he proceeded from thence to Albany; where the Forces of New York, Connecticut, and New Jerſey, with the Palatines, and about a Thouſand Indians of the Five Nations, having rendezvous'd under the Command of Colonel Ingoldſby, Colonel Schuyler, and Colonel

Colonel Whiting, they march'd towards Canada on the 28th of Auguſt. But beſides the Delay in getting Proviſions, the Admiral was alſo diſappointed as to the Pilots he was made to expect to find in New-England, to conduct the Fleet up the River of St. Lawrence, the Navigation of which is, by all Sailors, agreed to be the moſt dangerous and difficult of any Part of the Ocean; for inſtead of experienc'd Steermen, who ſhould voluntarily have offer'd their Service, ſome Men were, in a manner, forc'd on Board the Fleet, who profeſs'd their Ignorance and want of Skill. This gave the Admiral no ſmall Uneaſineſs, which was increas'd by the Relation he had from the Maſter of a French Ship bound from Rochel to Canada (on Board of which were 30 Soldiers for the Gariſon of Quebec) taken by the Cheſter, who acquainted Sir Hovendon Walker, that the Navigation of the River Canada, is naturally ſo hazardous, by reaſon of its ſtrong Currents and frequent Fogs, that when the French Ships from Rochel, and other Ports, are to go upon that Voyage, they give out, that they are bound to another Place, otherwiſe they could not get their Complements of Seamen: And as a farther Proof of this, told them, that the Year before, coming down that River, being Nine Ships in Number, Eight of them were loſt. He alſo gave an Account, that about a Hundred Leagues off Cape Finiſterre, he parted from Monſieur du Guay Trouin, who was ſent upon a ſecret Expedition, with Sixteen Sail of Men of War; adding, that there were with him ſeveral Tranſports, with Four thouſand Men on Board, and Four Bomb-Veſſels: But notwithſtanding theſe diſcouraging Accounts, it was reſolv'd to proſecute the intended Expedition; the Admiral taking the wiſe Precaution to keep on Board his Ship, the Maſter of the French Prize, to whoſe Advice, next to Providence, he ſoon after ow'd the Preſervation of the whole Fleet. A favourable Gale of Wind brought them into the Gulph of St. Lawrence off of Bird Iſland, near the Mouth of the River Canada, on the 14th of Auguſt. The Humber and the Devonſhire Men of War, being both of Eighty Guns, and Three Decks, and thought too large to go up that River, the Admiral order'd them back to Great Britain; and the Stern of the Cheſter being defective, Sir Hovendon thought fit to ſend her to Boſton; and having, on the 15th of Auguſt, made the Signal of Separation for thoſe Three Ships, ſtood away for the River; and ſoon after, within Forty eight Hours, they had a ſteady ſtrong Gale of Wind and fair Weather.

Account given by a French Maſter of a Ship of the Dangers attending the Navigation of the River St. Lawrence.

From this laſt Account, which was given from on Board the Devonſhire, who, on the 16th of September, arrived at Portſmouth, it was hoped that the Fleet would ſoon after have been in ſight of Quebec; upon which Suppoſition, the Reduction of that Place was little doubted. But on the 6th of October, Colonel Clayton arrived at London, being ſent Expreſs by Brigadier Hill, and Sir Hovendon Walker, with the melancholy News of their Diſappointment. The Account the Admiral himſelf gave of it, imported in Subſtance what follows: "On the 18th of Auguſt, the Wind blowing freſh at "N. W. we put into Gaſpe Bay, where we ſtaid till the 20th, being afraid of loſing "Company with the Tranſports that might be blown to Leeward; but having got "all of them together, we proceeded up part of the River of Canada, which is a "Hundred and thirty Leagues long to Quebec, from the Mouth of it. On the 21ſt, "it prov'd foggy, and continued ſo all Night, and the Day following, with little "Wind till the Afternoon, when, in an extream thick Fog, it began to blow hard "at E. and E. S. E. We found our ſelves then in a dangerous Circumſtance, having "neither Soundings nor Sight of Land to ſteer any Courſe, or any Anchorage within "Sixty Leagues, and that not ſafe; ſo that the Pilots on Board this Ship being the "beſt in the Fleet, were of Opinion, that the Admiral ſhould make a Signal to "bring to, which he did with our Heads to the Southward, judging by that, we might "eſcape Danger, and be driven by the Stream in the Mid-Channel: But, quite con-"trary, as we were with the Wind Eaſterly, and our Heads to the Southward, in Two "Hours we found our ſelves upon the North Shore among Rocks and Iſlands, where "the whole Fleet had like to have been loſt. The Men of War eſcaped, tho' with "extream Hazard, but Eight Tranſports were caſt away, with about Eight hun-"dred Men, Officers, Soldiers, and Seamen; and had not the Admiral made the "Signal as he did, 'tis very likely that our Loſs would have been much greater.

Sir Hovendon Walker's Account of the Miſcarriage of that Expedition, in a Letter dated September 12, 1711. See Annals of Queen Anne, Vol. X. p. 159

"After this Diſaſter, we continued thereabouts two or three Days, ſeeing what "Men, and other things we could get from the Shore; after which, it was determi-"ned by a Conſultation of Sea-Officers, to return back to ſome Bay or Harbour, "where the Fleet might ſafely ride till a further Reſolution ſhould be taken. Ac-"cordingly, on the 14th of September, we arrived in the Spaniſh River Bay, and the "General and Admiral call'd a Council of War of Land and Sea-Officers, who con-"ſidering we had but Ten Weeks Proviſion for the Fleet and Army, and that the Na-"vigation in theſe Parts of the World being ſo bad and dangerous, that at this Time "of the Year we could not depend upon a Supply of Proviſions from New-England, "it was unanimouſly agreed to return home, without making further Attempts elſe-

" where. Thus has our Expedition been diſappointed by inſuperable Difficulties. " The Saphire was ſent to Boſton; and the Montague was order'd to endeavour to " find the Humber and Devonſhire, which were order'd to cruize off Cape Britton; " but not meeting with them, we found her at Anchor off this Place. The " Enterprize, and Triton Prize, join'd us here on the 10th Inſtant; the for- " mer being order'd to convoy the New England Ships, which are to car- " ry the Forces, detach'd by the General, to gariſon Annapolis Royal. The " Men of War which are now with us, are the Edgar, Swiftſure, Monmouth, " Windſor, Montague, Dunkirk, Kingſton, and Sunderland. The Leopard is order'd " immediately to ſail for England with Colonel Clayton, to Court. Our Land Forces " were in ſo good a Condition, that I do not hear of the Death of any Captain, " but one, ſince our Imbarkation, to the Time of the Loſs of our Tranſports." On the 9th of October, Sir Hevendon Walker, with the Men of War, and the Remainder of the Tranſports, arriv'd ſafe at Portſmouth, where the Troops were Landed: But on the 15th, the Admiral's Ship, the Edgar, of Seventy Guns, riding at Spithead, did unfortunately blow up by Accident, about Two of the Clock in the Afternoon, with above Four Hundred Seamen in her, and above Thirty of the Inhabitants of Portſmouth, who went on board that Ship, to make merry with their Friends: Which Loſs very much aggravated the Diſappointment of the Quebec Expedition. To conclude the Account of the Naval Affairs, we muſt take Notice, that the Britiſh Fleet in the Streights, was, this Year, commanded by Sir John Norris, who aſſiſted King Charles in Convoying the German Forces and Ammunition from Vado to Barcelona, and protected the Britiſh Trade in the Mediterranean. The Home Squadron did the like in the Narrow-Seas; ſo that the French durſt not keep Abroad. All they did this Summer, was the ſending a Squadron of Fourteen or Fifteen Men of War, under the Command of the Sieur Du Guay Trouin, to America, where they had already another Squadron, commanded by Mr. Du Caſſe. Du Guay's Expedition, was, for ſome Time, kept very ſecret; but, at laſt, it was known, that having, on the 12th of September, N. S. entred the Bay of Rio de Janeiro in Brazil, he obliged the Portugueze to run aſhore and ſet on Fire their Men of War in that Port; after which he made himſelf Maſter of the Town of St. Sebaſtian, and having kept Poſſeſſion of it for Two Months, ſail'd from thence the 13th of November, carrying away Six Hundred Ten Thouſand Cruſadoes, beſides a great Quantity of Sugar, and other rich Plunder, which they valued at Seven Millons of Livres; and pretended, that the whole Loſs ſuſtain'd by the Portugueze, amounted to Five and Twenty Millions. But, however, 'tis certain, that the Booty that was carried away, fell conſiderably ſhort of the Expence of that Expedition. On the other Hand, the French made, this Year, ſome unſucceſsful Attempts on the Leeward Iſlands: And, about the ſame Time, Commodore Littleton took a Spaniſh Galleon, and another Ship of Twenty Six Guns, richly Laden, in the Weſt-Indies.

Affairs of Ireland.

Before we return to Great Britain, let us attend what paſs'd in Ireland. The Duke of Ormond, Lord Lieutenant of that Kingdom, having ſet out from London the 14th of June, arrived on the 3d of July at Dublin, where he was receiv'd with extraordinary Marks of Honour and Reſpect. On the 9th the Parliament met, to whom his Grace made a Speech, wherein he intimated, That the publick Accompts which ſhould be laid before them, would ſhew her Majeſty's Care in ſaving, upon the ſeveral Heads of Expence; and recommended to them to provide for the Troops eſtabliſhed. Both Houſes addreſs'd her Majeſty in very Loyal Terms, and gave their Thanks to the Lord Lieutenant for his Speech. On the 30th of the ſame Month, the Commons reſolv'd to grant a Supply to her Majeſty, to make good the neceſſary Branches of the Eſtabliſhment for Two Years, commencing the 24th of June, 1711; as alſo for building an Armory in Dublin, to keep Twenty Five Thouſand Arms; for Two Powder Magazines, and Seven Thouſand Pounds for building the Council-Chamber, a Treaſury-Office, and other Offices deſtroyed by a late Fire in Dublin-Caſtle. On the 11th of Auguſt, the Bills being prepared to be tranſmitted to England, the Lord Lieutenant ſignified his Pleaſure, that the Parliament ſhould adjourn to the 20th of September, which they did accordingly. They aſſembled again on that Day, and ſat till November the 9th, when all the publick Buſineſs being done, the Acts received the Royal Aſſent, and the Parliament was prorogued to the 2d of September next. It is obſervable, That during this Seſſion, the Duke of Ormond, Sir Conſtantine Phipps, Lord Chancellor, and the Majority of the Iriſh Houſe of Peers, did, on ſeveral Occaſions, viſibly favour and countenance the High-Church-Party, if not downright Jacobites; whereas, on the contrary, the Commons ſtrenuouſly aſſerted the Revolution Principles, and ſhew'd their firm Adherence to the Proteſtant Succeſſion: Particular Inſtances of which, may be ſeen in our Annals of this Reign *. Duke

Duke of Ormond having appointed the Lord Chancellor Phipps, and General Ingoldſby, to take Care of the Government of Ireland, as Lords Juſtices, his Grace embark'd for England, with the Earl of Angleſey, about the latter End of November.

Some Time before, a Spirit of Jacobitiſm diſcover'd it ſelf in Scotland; which was owing to ſeveral concurring Cauſes. It was a general Obſervation, That the Union of the Two Kingdoms having been mainly obtain'd by Bribery and Corruption within Doors, by Force and Violence without; and, on the other hand, the deſirable End of it, an Union of Affections and Advantages, not being cordially proſecuted, the ill Humours and Diſcontents, that occaſioned a ſtrong Oppoſition to that Tranſaction in 1706, were rather increaſed than abated, when the Queen thought fit to change her Miniſtry; which was neceſſarily attended with Alterations in Scotland. Moreover, ſome of the Nobility there, who had formerly moſt warmly oppos'd, both the ſettling of the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line, and the Union; but who had private Piques againſt the late Engliſh Miniſters, being now choſen into the Britiſh Parliament, it is not improbable, that the diſcontented Scots, particularly the Friends of the Pretender, might fondly believe this to be a proper Opportunity, both to ſhew their own Inclinations, and to try how far they might expect to be countenanc'd: To which they might be further encouraged by the late numerous Engliſh Addreſſes, aſſerting and maintaining the ſole HEREDITARY Right. Upon this Preſumption, the Dutcheſs of Gordon, a Roman Catholick, having, about the latter end of June, ſent to Mr. Robert Bennet, Dean of the Faculty of Advocates of Edinburgh, a Silver Medal, with a Head on the Right Side, and this Legend, CUJUS EST? And on the Reverſe, the Britiſh Iſlands, with this Motto, REDDITE, as a Preſent to the Faculty, the ſaid Medal was firſt left in the Hands of one of their Servants; the Dean being ſhy either to accept it, or place it in the Repoſitory of Rarities, before he had conſulted ſome of the Members of the Faculty. In order to that, there being either an occaſional, or ſet Meeting, on the 30th of June, Mr. Bennet preſented to them the Medal before-mention'd, telling the Faculty, "Her Grace "the Dutcheſs of Gordon, ſent, as a Preſent to them, the Medal of King James "the Eighth, whom they, and the Engliſh, call'd the Pretender: And he hoped Thanks "were to be return'd to her Grace." Mr. Alexander Stevenſon anſwer'd, That the Medal ſhould be returned to her Grace, for the receiving it was throwing Dirt on the Face of the Government. He was ſeconded by Mr. Robert Alexander, of Black-Houſe, who ſaid, That the receiving of ſuch a Medal, was owning a Right contrary to her Majeſty's. Mr. Robert Frazer anſwer'd, "That Oliver Cromwel's Medal, who deſerv'd to be "hang'd, and the Arms of the Commonwealth of England, had been receiv'd, and "why not this? Upon this Mr. Duncan Forbes, Brother to Colloden, and Mr. Joſeph Hume of Nineholes, ſaid, It was Time enough then to receive the Medal, when the Pretender was hang'd; to whom adhered Mr. Hugh Dalrymple, Son to the Preſident; Mr. James Ferguſon, Son to Sir John Ferguſon of Kirkennel, and Sir James Stuart of Goodtrees, trees, her Majeſty's Sollicitor. After that, Mr. Dundaſs, of Armiſton, roſe up, and made the following Speech:

Dean of Faculty, Whatever theſe Gentlemen may ſay of their Loyalty, I think they affront the Queen, whom they pretend to honour, in diſgracing her Brother, who is not only a Prince of the Blood, but the Firſt thereof; and if Blood can give any Right, he is our undoubted Sovereign. I think, too, they call her Majeſty's Title in Queſtion, which is not our Buſineſs to determine. Medals are the Documents of Hiſtory, to which all Hiſtorians refer; and therefore, though I ſhould give King William's Stamp, with the Devil at his Right Ear, I ſee not how it could be refuſed, ſeeing an Hundred Years hence, it would prove, that ſuch a Coin had been in England. But, Dean of Faculty, What needs further Speeches? None oppoſe the receiving the Medal, and returning Thanks to her Grace, but a few pitiful Scoundrel Vermin and Muſhrooms, not worthy our Notice. Let us therefore proceed to name ſome of our Number, to return our hearty Thanks to the Dutcheſs of Gordon. Hereupon the Dean of the Faculty put it to the Vote, and it was carry'd by a Majority of Sixty Three Voices againſt Twelve, (there being Seventy Five Members preſent) that Thanks ſhould be return'd to her Grace, by Mr. Dundaſs, and Mr. Horn of Weſthall. Three Days after, theſe Two waited on the Dutcheſs, and Mr. Dundaſs return'd her the moſt hearty Thanks of the Faculty for all her Favours, particularly in preſenting them with a Medal of their Sovereign Lord the King; hoping, and being confident, that her Grace ſhould, very ſoon, have an Opportunity to compliment the Facuty with a Second MEDAL, ſtruck upon the Reſtoration of the King and Royal Family, and the finiſhing Rebellion, uſurping Tyranny and Whiggery. It was, on this Occaſion, juſtly obſerv'd, that this Medal was not New; for the Publick had an Account of its being diſpers'd in the Netherlands about a Year before: And it was then the general Opinion, that it was ſtruck upon the fond Hopes given by the Jacobites in England, to their Correſpondents in France, that the Britiſh Nation was ready to declare for the Pretender: To which the Diſtractions occaſion'd by Dr. Sacheverel's Sermon and Tryal, and the aſſerting the Doctrines of Divine Hereditary Right, and of Abſolute Paſſive Obedience, diametrically oppoſite both to the late Revolution, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, gave ſome Air of Probability. Nor was this Medal ſcarce, but rather common; and as for its intrinſick Value, it did not exceed Half a Crown: So that it could not be worth either the Dutcheſs's while to preſent it, or the Faculty's to receive it, on the Account of its being New, Scarce, or Valuable in it ſelf. And if the Advocates deſign'd it only as a Curioſity, they might have eaſily procur'd it, and plac'd it among their Collection, without Formality and Noiſe. But the Dutcheſs's Preſenting it, and ſome of the Advocates Receiving it with Solemnity, and endeavouring to make it the Act of the Faculty, by returning Thanks to her Grace in the Name of the whole Society, with ſo much Oſtentation, was certainly a publick and treaſonable Affront to Her Majeſty, a tacit Arraignment of her Title, and a ſtriking at the Settlement in the Houſe of Hanover. Nor is it to be doubted, that the Deſign of the Jacobites was to give Reputation to their Cauſe, by engaging ſo many Gentlemen of the Long Robe to eſpouſe it; as the readieſt way to bring the Common People into their Meaſures: For as theſe are generally led by Example, they would be apt to conclude, that there could be no Danger in following the Pattern ſet them by thoſe, who, of all Men, ought beſt to underſtand the Laws and Conſtitution of their Country. The Timing of this Tranſaction was likewiſe judg'd very remarkable: For, it was ſoon after the Aſſembly of the Kirk of Scotland had publickly declar'd themſelves for the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the moſt Illuſtrious Houſe of HANOVER; and their Senſe being juſtly taken for that of the Bulk of the Proteſtants in Scotland, whom they repreſent in an Eccleſiaſtical Capacity, it ſeem'd, the Jacobite Party there thought it neceſſary to balance them, by the Senſe of the Miniſters of Law and Juſtice in that Country. This happen'd alſo immediately after Her Majeſty had declar'd, in her Speech at the Cloſe of the laſt Seſſion of Parliament; That 'twas needleſs for Her to repeat the Aſſurances of her Earneſt Concern for the Succeſſion of the Houſe of HANOVER: From whence it may be concluded, that the Jacobites, being ſenſible of the Hurt this Declaration had done their Cauſe, they might think, the only way to retrieve it, was, by getting ſo many Lawyers to declare for them. And, in the laſt place, this was done at a Time when the Armies were in the Field, and the Pretender reported to be gone from St. Germains, in order to imbark in ſome Port of France on the Ocean; which might raiſe a well-grounded Suſpicion, that this was deſign'd to favour a Second Invaſion: The rather, becauſe Mr. Dundaſs, in his Compliment to the Dutcheſs of Gordon, did not ſcruple to inſinuate a ſpeedy Reſtoration of the King and the Royal Family.

The Faculty return her ſolemn Thanks for it.

Remarks on its being preſented, and receiv'd with Solemnity.

A. D. 1711.

The Report of this Medal's being preſented, and received with the Circumſtances above-mention'd, having made great Noiſe in Edinburgh; Sir David Dalrymple, the Queen's Lord Advocate, thought it his Duty to give an Account of it to the Duke of Queenſberry, one of the Principal Secretaries of State, who happening to die at this very Juncture, that Information was laid before the Queen, by one of the other Secretaries: Whereupon, Orders were ſent to the Lord Advocate, to inquire into that Matter. The Faculty of Advocates being ſenſible of the Error committed by ſome of their Members, endeavour'd to palliate it by a Declaration, importing, "That being met extraordinarily, it appear'd to them, that a Medal "was ſent to one of their Servants; who being call'd, acknowledg'd his having "the ſame, and juſtify'd that it never was put into the Faculty's Collection of Me- "dals, nor had ever been out of his Cuſtody. That the ſaid Dean and Faculty "did, at the ſame Time, unanimouſly declare, That they rejected the Offer of the "ſaid Medal, and order'd the ſaid Servant to deliver up the ſame into the Hands "of the Lord Advocate, which was done in their Preſence: And did unanimouſly "appoint a Committee, to bring in an Act of Faculty; containing a Narration of "the Fact as above, and a Declaration of their Duty and Loyal Affection to Her "Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion as by Law eſta- "bliſh'd; and their Deteſtation of all Practices, that, directly or indirectly, might "contain the leaſt Inſinuation to the contrary, or any Incouragement to the Pre- "tender." It was for ſome Time Matter of Doubt, whether the Government would be ſatisfy'd with this Act of the Faculty; for 'twas well known, that, notwithſtanding their publick Recantation, or Denial, yet the Fact had happen'd as was above related; and was, in private, juſtify'd by ſome of the Members that had been moſt active in it: But as 'tis Prudence, in many Caſes, for Princes rather to overlook, than puniſh Injuries; ſo the Court thought fit to make no further Inquiry into that Buſineſs: Wiſely conſidering, that the Advocates could not be ſo extravagant, as to venture upon a Piece of Temerity ſo nearly bordering upon Treaſon, had they not been ſure of being ſupported by a ſtrong Party of Jacobites, and other diſcontented Perſons, who wanted but an Opportunity to riſe. However, this Lenity of the Government embolden'd Mr. Dundaſs to write, and ſend to the Preſs, a Vindication more traiterous, if poſſible, than their Proceedings about the Medal; but, before its Publication, the Printer carry'd the Copy of it to the Lord Provoſt of Edinburgh, who communicated it to Sir James Stuart; and he took care that the Queen and Council ſhould be inform'd of it; upon which, that Paper was intirely ſuppreſs'd. Moreover, Monſieur de Kreyenberg, Reſident from the Elector of Hanover, having, by his Electoral Highneſs's expreſs Orders, preſented a Memorial, and made preſſing Inſtances for the Proſecution of Mr. Dundaſs and his Aſſociates; the Government not only granted his Requeſt, but even removed Sir David Dalrymple from his Office of Lord Advocate, on Pretence that he had been ſomewhat remiſs, in proſecuting the Scotch Medaliſts; and reinſtated Sir James Stuart in that Poſt, on Account of the Zeal he had lately ſhew'd, in adviſing the ſuppreſſing of Mr. Dundaſs's Vindication. Tho' this gave ſome Satisfaction to the Friends of the Proteſtant Succeſſion, yet, 'tis obſervable, that Sir David Dalrymple was ſo far from being an Enemy to it, that his particular Acquaintance did not ſtick to affirm, that he would have proſecuted the Medaliſts with greater Severity than any whatever, had he not had ſecret Inſtructions from a Great Man at Court, not to ſtir in that Affair.

Act of the Faculty of Advocates, rejecting the Medal.

Vindicaiion of Mr. Dundaſs's Proceedings, ſent to the Preſs, and ſuppreſs'd.

Sir J. Stuart made Lord Advocate of Scotland, in the room of Sir D. Dalrymple. The latter juſtify'd.

Nor were the Jacobites leſs buſy in England: For while theſe Things paſs'd in Scotland, they were very induſtrious in diſperſing, clandeſtinely, a printed Paper, entituled, An Oath to an Invader, and Abjuring the Invaded, diſſected and examin'd: Containing Eleven Queries, levell'd againſt the Revolution, and the Oath of Abjuration, now adminiſtred in Great Britain, which was printed at the End of that Paper. About that Time likewiſe, a News-Paper took notice of a Paragraph, inſerted in a written Poſtſcript to the Poſt-Boy, of the 5th of July, 1711, ſent to Dick's Coffee-Houſe in Dublin, and (as may well be ſuppoſed) to many other Places; which was as follows: "We are inform'd, that Mr. White, alias Leſley, "is gone to Swiſſerland, in order, if he can, to convert a certain YOUNG GEN- "TLEMAN, and bring him over from Popery to Proteſtantiſm. If he ſucceeds, "it's hop'd, that there will be no Experiment try'd hereafter, to run the Hazard "of making uſe of a COMEOVER: For thoſe Sort of Gentlemen ought no "more to be truſted, than a ſtanch Whig ſhould, altho' he ſwears that he ſhall be "for the Church and Monarchy: Except thoſe, who have been ſenſible of their Er- "rors, and, ſince their Converſion, have merited the Eſteem of all honeſt Men." This Paragraph was founded upon a Report, that the Pretender was, about that Time, preparing to go for Swiſſerland: But he only went to the French Army in Dauphiné;

A Paper call'd, An Oath to an Invader, and Abjuring the Invaded, diſſected, induſtriouſly diſpers'd.

Remarkable Paragraph in Favour of the Pretender, inſerted in the written Poſtſcript to the Poſt-Boy.

Dauphiné; and having ſtay'd there a few Days, and conferr'd with the Duke of Berwick, and the other Generals, he took a Journey thro' Provence, Languedoc, and Guienne, the Three faireſt Provinces of France; and ſo return'd to his ſolitary Reſidence at St. Germains.

The Miniſtry in England advance their Friends to Honours and Preferments.

All this while, the Miniſters in England, with unwearied Application and Induſtry, uſed all poſſible Means to ſtrengthen themſelves, and to weaken their Enemies, by advancing to Honours and Imployments, ſuch Perſons as they thought able and inclined to carry on their new Meaſures. Two Days after the Parliament was up, Sir Thomas Manſel, Bart. Comptroller of the Houſhold, Charles Earl of Winchelſea, Henry Paget, Eſq; and Robert Benſon, Eſq; Chancellor and Under-Treaſurer of the Exchequer, were ſworn of the Privy-Council: As were alſo, a few * Days after, William Bromley, Eſq; Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, and Thomas Lord Raby, who, about this Time, came over from Holland, either for ſecret Inſtructions, or rather, to make his Bargain for future Services. This young Nobleman, the ſurviving Head of the ancient Family of Wentworth Woodhouſe, in Yorkſhire, was, by an unhappy Diſpute between his Father and his Couſin-German, the late Earl of Strafford, cut off from the Eſtate; but, with the Title of Baron Raby, ſeem'd to inherit the bold, towering Spirit, and enterprizing Genius, of his Grand Uncle, the famous Earl of Strafford, who fell the firſt Victim to the Royal Cauſe, in King Charles the Firſt's Reign. He was, beſides, fluſh'd with his priſtine Favour with King William, and with his long, ſucceſsful Embaſſy in Pruſſia; and, having a private Pique againſt the Duke of Marlborough, from whom he had received ſome Diſguſts, both in Flanders and at Berlin, was, therefore, judg'd a moſt proper Perſon to be a Check to his Grace; and, with that View, was appointed Her Majeſty's Ambaſſador to the States-General. To gratify his Ambition, he not only was now made a Privy-Counſellor, but, Three † Days after the Queen had removed from Kenſington to Windſor, ſhe ſigned a Warrant for a Patent creating him Viſcount Wentworth, and Earl of Strafford. Not many Days after, the Lord Dartmouth was created Viſcount Lewiſham, in the County of Kent, and Earl of Dartmouth; Sir Simon Harcourt, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, a Peer of Great Britain, by the Title of Baron of Stanton Harcourt; the Lord Ferrers, Viſcount Tamworth, and Earl Ferrers; and about the end of July, the Earl of Orrery was made a Peer of Great Britain, by the Title of Baron Boyle, of Marſton, in the County of Somerſet. We may here alſo take Notice, that about the beginning of June, a Warrant was ſign'd, directing a Patent to be paſs'd the Great Seal, for creating the Duke of Hamilton, a Baron and Duke of Great Britain, by the Titles of Baron of Dutton, and Duke of Brandon; but a Caveat being enter'd againſt ſuch a Patent, a Stop was, for ſome time, put to the ſame.

Beſides theſe new Titles of Honour, and the Changes in the Publick Employments, we may here take Notice, that about the beginning of June, the Queen order'd a new Commiſſion for Trade and Plantations; whereby Charles Earl of Winchelſea was put at the Head of the Acting Commiſſioners, in the room of the Earl of Stamford; and Francis Gwin, Eſq; was put in the room of John Pulteney, Eſq; About the ſame Mr. Serjeant Baniſter was made Firſt Judge in Upper South Wales Circuit, in the room of Serjeant Whitacre; John Ward, Eſq; Second Judge of Cheſter, in the room of John Pocklinton, Eſq; Edward Jefferies, Eſq; and William Bridges, Eſq; Juſtices for the Counties of Pembroke, Carmaerthen, and Cardigan, in the room of Mr. Serjeant Webb and Mr. Serjeant Hook. Thomas Liſter, Eſq; Firſt Equery to the Queen, being lately dead, was ſucceeded by the Hon. Peter Wentworth, Brother to the new Earl of Strafford; and Captain Hammond was appointed Governor of Languard Fort, in the room of Colonel Jones.

Mr. Wentworth made Firſt Equerry to the Queen, and Captain Hammond Governor of Languard Fort.

On the 12th of June, the Earl of Poulet appear'd the Firſt Time with the White Staff, as Lord Steward of her Majeſty's Houſhold, in the room of the Duke of Buckingham and Normandy, who was made Preſident of the Council, in the room of Lawrence Earl of Rocheſter, lately deceaſed. The next Day Henry Paget, Eſq; kiſs'd the Queen's Hand, upon account of his being made Captain of the Yeomen of the Guard, in the room of the Lord Viſcount Townſhend; and about the ſame time, George Townſhend, Eſq; was remov'd from his Place of Council Learned in the Law for the Affairs of the Admiralty, in which he was ſucceeded by William Ettrick, Eſq; Member of Parliament for Chriſt-Church in Hampſhire; and the Honourable James Bruce, Brother to the Earl of Ailesbury, was made one of the Comptrollers of the Army, in the room of Thomas Broderick, whoſe Brother, Allen Broderick, was lately remov'd from his Place of Lord Chief Juſtice of Ireland. Not many Days after, it was declar'd, that her Majeſty had appointed the Duke of Newcaſtle Lord Lieutenant, and Cuſtos Rotulorum of Bedfordſhire and Middleſex, in the room of the Duke of Bedford, deceas'd; the Lord Duke of Buckingham and Normandy, Lord Lieutenant of the

About the middle of July, Sir George Byng was declar'd Admiral of the White Squadron of her Majeſty's Fleet; Walter Whitfield, Eſq; Paymaſter-General of the Marines, being removed, was ſucceeded in that Office by Sir Roger Moſtyn, Bart. and the Lord Cheyne was made Clerk of the Pipe, in the room of William Perrel, Eſq;.

On the 25th of June, came on, as uſual, the Election of Sheriffs for the City of London; the Candidates being Alderman Caſs and Mr. Lamb on the one ſide, and Alderman Ward and Mr. Gough on the other; and upon the cloſing of the Poll, the Two firſt were declared * duly elected, to the great Joy of High-Church, and of the Friends to the Pretender, upon a Preſumption, that Alderman Caſs was no Ill-wiſher to their Party; becauſe in the Aſſaſſination-Plot, againſt the late King William, Sir John Friend, one of the chief Conſpirators, took Sanctuary, and was apprehended in his Houſe. The Lord Clermont, and his Brother, Captain Middleton, Sons to the Earl of Middleton, who were taken on Board the Saliſbury, in the intended Invaſion of Scotland by the Pretender, laid hold on this favourable Juncture to procure their Enlargement; and upon their humble Petition and Repreſentation of their ill State of Health, occaſion'd by a cloſe Impriſonment of above Three Years, the Queen order'd the Attorney-General to conſent to their being bail'd; which was done accordingly the 20th of June, in the Court of Queen's-Bench; each of them entring into a Recognizance of Four thouſand Pounds, and their Bail, viz. the Dukes of Beaufort, Bolton and Hamilton, and the Earl of Wharton, in Two thouſand Pounds each, for their Appearance at the Queen's-Bench Bar the Firſt Day of next Term. Tho' ſome Perſons repin'd at, and made ſiniſter Conſtructions of this Act of Clemency; yet 'tis certain, that of the Four illuſtrious Perſons who bail'd them, Two were of the High, and Two of the Low-Church Party. About this time, Anthony Hammond, Eſq; was appointed Paymaſter of the Forces in Spain, in the room of Mr. Mead; and the Duke of Kent conſtituted Lord Lieutenant of Bedfordſhire, upon the Deceaſe of the Duke of Newcaſtle, occaſion'd by a Fall from his Horſe, as he was Hunting.

The Office of Lord Privy-Seal becoming thereby vacant, and there appearing a great Competition for it, the Queen, and her prime Miniſter, took ſome Time to conſider of a proper Perſon for that important Place. The Dukes of Buckingham, Shrewsbury, and Leeds, the Earl of Nottingham, the Lord Guernſey, his Brother, the Earls of Clarendon and Jerſey, were named among the Tory Candidates; and, on the other hand, the Duke and Dutcheſs of Somerſet, made great Intereſt for the Lord Somers; and went near to bring the Queen and the Earl of Oxford into that Counſel; at which the Duke of Shrewsbury was ſo diſguſted, that he retired to his Country-Seat in Oxfordſhire. Upon the Death of the Earl of Jerſey, on Sunday the 26th of Auguſt, it was given out, that he was to have been declared Lord Privy-Seal that very Day; but whatever Grounds there were for this, or any ſuch Reports, the Queen, at laſt, reſolv'd to fix her Choice upon a Perſon who had not yet been named among the ſeveral Competitors, viz. Dr. John Robinſon, Lord Biſhop of Briſtol, Dean of Windſor, and Regiſter of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter. This was publickly known in London the 30th of Auguſt; and on the 3d of September his Lordſhip was ſworn at Windſor, both as Lord Keeper of the Privy-Seal, and one of the Lords of her Majeſty's Privy-Council: But tho' this Choice diſguſted ſome Great Men, the Effects of which appear'd not long after; yet it was, at that Juncture, generally applauded; for as, on the one hand, it was acknowledg'd, that his Lordſhip was eminently qualify'd for that Office, as well by his great Abilities and conſummate Experience in Affairs of State, of which, for many Years, he had given ſignal Proofs in his important Negotiations in Sweden and Germany; ſo, on the other hand, his Integrity, and Chriſtian Temper, render'd him ſo conſpicuous, that he was judg'd a moſt proper Inſtrument to allay the preſent Ferment; and, by his Example, to teach over-zealous and pragmatical Clergymen, that Moderation was the beſt way to Preferment. Upon theſe Conſiderations it was, that the Lord Treaſurer uſed all his Intereſt in favour of that Prelate, whoſe Counſels and Aſſiſtance, he thought, would make him amends for the great Loſs he ſuſtain'd by the Death of the late Duke of Newcaſtle, with whom he had contracted an entire Friendſhip. Moreover, he conſider'd, that this Promotion would be grateful to the moderate Party, whom the prime Miniſter never, really, intended to depreſs too low; and that, at the ſame time, it would ſilence the Clamour, and cool the Fury of the oppoſite Party, ſince the Church, whoſe chimerical Danger was the Pretence of the late Diſtractions, ſeem'd now to triumph, by the Advancement of one of her Prelates to that high Station. Nor was the the Lord Treaſurer's Conjecture wrong, as to the Effect of this Choice, among the Whigs, or money'd Men; for, it was obſerv'd, that upon the firſt Notice of it, the Publick Funds began to riſe; all the Well-wiſhers to the moſt illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover, looking upon the Biſhop's Preferment, as an Addition of Strength to their Party, and a farther Security to the Proteſtant Succeſſion. Some time before, there being a warm Competion between Duke Hamilton and the Earl of Mar, for the Place of Secretary of State for North Britain, vacant by the Death of the Duke of of Queensberry, the Queen and her Miniſters thought fit to ſuppreſs that Office.

The Place of Third Secretary of State ſuppreſs'd.

In the mean while, thoſe at the Helm carried on the Negotiation of Peace, which they had clandeſtinely enter'd into with ſome Agents of France, even before the old Miniſters were removed. To this purpoſe, we may take Notice, that Mr. Henry St. John, and, as ſome pretend, Mr. Robert Harley himſelf, had ſeveral private Meetings with the Sieur Gaultier, an obſcure French Prieſt, who, for ſome time, was protected by Count Gallas, and ſuffer'd to ſay Maſs in his Chapel; and who being afterwards employ'd in London by Count Tallard, to receive and forward his Letters between Paris and Nottingham, began to be taken Notice of, and thereupon aſſumed the Title of Abbot. It was the Opinion of many, that when the Lord Treaſurer form'd the South-Sea Project, he had verbal Aſſurances given him, that France and Spain would grant to that Company, either ſome Settlement; or, at leaſt, a free Trade in the Spaniſh Weſt-Indies, provided a Peace were concluded, whereby King Philip ſhould remain in Poſſeſſion of the Monarchy of Spain: Which glittering Bait was, undoubtedly, ſufficient to decoy a Miniſtry, whoſe Intereſt it was to put a ſpeedy End to the War. The Death of the Dauphin of France, which happen'd Three Days before that of the Emperor Joſeph, and was occaſion'd by the ſame Diſtemper, the Small-Pox, proved rather advantageous than detrimental to that Kingdom; both as it allay'd the Factions at Court, and as it made Room for the coming on of his eldeſt Son, the Duke of Burgundy, a Prince of far greater Spirit and Penetration, than his Father, who being thereupon declared Dauphin, applied himſelf, with indefatigable Attention, to publick Buſineſs, particularly to the Finances. The French were ſo confident that the Emperor's Death would alter the Councils of Europe, in relation to the Spaniſh Succeſſion, that their Emiſſaries, every where, gave out, That a ſecret Negotiation of Peace was on Foot, and that in order to facilitate the Succeſs of it, and to procure the Reſtoration of the Elector of Bavaria to his Dominions, King Philip had given him the Sovereignty of Namur and Luxemburgh, the only Two Spaniſh Provinces in the Netherlands, remaining in his Hands, of which the Elector took actual Poſſeſſion, ſome Time after. On the other hand, the Court of France were not wanting in cheriſhing and improving the eager Diſpoſitions towards a Peace, which they found in the new Britiſh Miniſters, for which Purpoſe, towards the End of April, 1711, Monſieur de Torcy tranſmitted into England ſome Propoſitions *, with a remarkable Preamble, importing, "That as it was not to be doubted but the (French) King was "in a Condition to maintain the War with Glory, ſo it would not be eſteem'd a "Sign of Weakneſs, that his Majeſty broke the Silence he had kept ſince the Separation of the Conferences of Gertruydenberg; and that before the opening of the "Campaign, he ſtill gave new Proofs of the Deſire that he had always preſerv'd, "to procure the Reeſtabliſhment of the Repoſe of Europe: But that after the Expe"rience he had made of the Sentiments of thoſe who now govern'd the Republick "of Holland, and of their Endeavours to render the Negotiations fruitleſs, he was "willing to addreſs to the Engliſh Nation, the Propoſitions he thought fit to make to "end the War; and that with this View, the King offer'd to treat of Peace, on "the Baſis of the following Conditions: I. That the Engliſh ſhould have real Securities to exerciſe their Commerce in Spain, to the Indies, and in the Parts of the "Mediterranean. II. That a Barrier ſhould be form'd in the Low-Countries, for the "Security of the Republick of Holland, and to the good Liking of the Dutch. "III. That reaſonable Means ſhould be ſought out, to ſatisfy the Allies of England "and Holland. IV. That as the good State of the Affairs of the King of Spain, "furniſh'd new Expedients to end the Differences touching that Monarchy, Endeavours ſhould be uſed to ſurmount the Difficulties raiſed on this Occaſion. "V. That the Conferences to treat of Peace, ſhould be immediately open'd, and "that the King's Plenipotentiaries ſhould either treat with thoſe of England and "Holland alone, or jointly with thoſe of their Allies, at the Choice of England. "VI. And that his Majeſty propoſed the Cities of Aix-la-Chapelle, and Liege, for "the Place of Treaty, referring it to England, to chuſe one of thoſe Two Cities. Theſe Propoſitions Mr. Secretary St. John immediately tranſmitted to the Lord Raby, Clandeſtine Negotiation of Peace.

Private Conferences between Mr. St. John and the Abbot Gaultier.

King Philip yields up Namur and Luxenburgh to the Elector of Bavaria.

* Dated April 22. N. S. New Propoſitions of France, ſigned De Torcy.

Raby, the Queen's Ambaſſador at the Hague, with Orders to communicate them to the Penſionary, and to aſſure him, "That the Queen was reſolv'd, "in making Peace, or War, to act in perfect Concert with the States. In this "Letter Mr. Secretary deſired, that the Secret might be kept among as "few as poſſible; and confeſs'd, That the Terms of the ſeveral Propoſitions were very general, and that there was an Air of Complaiſance ſhewn to "England, and the contrary to Holland; which might be of ill Conſequence; but "could be of none, as long as the Queen, and the States, took Care to underſtand "each other, and to act with as little Reſerve, as became Two Powers, ſo nearly "ally'd in Intereſt; which Rule ſhould, on the Part of England, be inviolably obſerv'd." In anſwer to theſe Orders, the Lord Raby acquainted † Mr. St. John, "that the Penſionary, and the States-Deputies, had conſider'd Mr. de Torcy's Propoſitions, and the obliging Manner in which her Majeſty was pleaſed to communicate them; that they urged the Neceſſity of an entire Confidence one with another, at this critical Juncture; that they declared themſelves weary of the War, "which, however, they endeavour'd to conceal from the Enemy, leſt he ſhould "make his Advantage by it: And that they were ready to join in any Meaſures "her Majeſty ſhould think proper to obtain a good Peace: But they look'd upon "theſe Propoſitions, as the Secretary did, to be very dark and general, and deſign'd "to create Jealouſies between her Majeſty, that Republick, and the Allies: And, "therefore, depended upon her Majeſty's Juſtice and Prudence to prevent any ſuch ill "Effect, and hoped ſhe would make the French explain more particularly, the ſeveral "Points contain'd in them." The Lord Raby concluded, with adviſing, to go open with the States in this Matter, that they might have no Reaſon to accuſe the Engliſh for taking the leaſt Meaſures without them: But it was not long before Mr. St. John prepared the Lord Raby to lay aſide his Scruples, and to entertain other Sentiments of the Manner of carrying on this Negotiation: For having, a few Days after ‖, acquainted him, with the Queen's Pleaſure, that his Excellency ſhould make all poſſible Haſte to come over; the Secretary frankly told him, That Britain had gone ſo much too far in weaving her Intereſt into that of the Continent, that it would prove no eaſy Taſk to diſentangle our Affairs, without Tearing or Rending. The Lord Raby took the Hint; aſſured the Secretary, That he would venture, and undertake any Thing to ſerve the Queen; and ſo all Correſpondence between England and Holland, concerning the preſent Treaty, ended with the Communication of the firſt Propoſitions of France.

On the other hand, the Britiſh Miniſters were ſo forward, as privately to ſend over to France one of their Agents, Mr. Matthew Prior, a Perſon, who by his natural Abilities, and pregnant Genius, improved by aſſiduous Study, and ſupported by the Beneficence of the late ingenious Earl of Dorſet, had, from a very low Extraction, gain'd a Name among the Wits of the Age; and who, by adapting his flexible Principles to the prevailing Party, had, in the different Changes of the Miniſtry, ſince the Revolution, found Means to raiſe himſelf to ſeveral Employments. Though the Subject Matter and Succeſs of his clandeſtine Negotiation, were, for ſome Time, induſtriouſly kept Secret; yet, it ſeems, his Journey could not: For, about the beginning of Auguſt, upon his return from France, in a ſmall Veſſel, that ſet him aſhore near Deal, going under a borrowed Name, and not producing his Paſs, he was diſcover'd, and ſtopp'd by the Cuſtom-Houſe Officers, 'till he was releaſed by Orders from Above. This Adventure being noiſed Abroad, Count Gallas, the Imperial Miniſter, thought it his Duty to expoſtulate about it with the Earl of Oxford, who told him, He had no Reaſon to be alarm'd; for the Queen would never make a Peace derogatory from her Engagements with her Allies. On the other hand, in order to palliate the Clandeſtine Negotiation between Great Britain and France, which was no longer a Myſtery, and to feel the Pulſe of the Nation, about a Peace, the Agents of the Britiſh Miniſters publiſh'd a Pamphlet, Intituled, A new Journey to Paris: Together with ſome ſecret Tranſactions between the French King, and an Engliſh Gentleman. This Account, under the fictitious Name of Mr. Du Baudrier, was written by Jonathan Swift, formerly Chaplain to Sir William Temple, an Ingenious, but Ambitious Clergyman, who had, ſome Years before, devoted himſelf to the Whigs, and written againſt the Tories; but being diſappointed in his Hopes of Preferment, upon the late Revolution in the Miniſtry, he immediately tack'd about; liſted himſelf in the Service of the High-Church Party; and, with Mr. Prior, Dr. Friend, Mr. Oldſworth, and ſome others, was employ'd in writing a Weekly Paper, call'd the Examiner, the Deſign of which was, to aggravate the Faults of the late Miniſtry, with all the Heightnings of Malice and Rhetorick; to inveigh againſt them with all poſſible Bitterneſs; and to involve the whole Whig-Party in the Accuſation of their Leaders. Having got this Thread, Men of Speculation thought it eaſy to wind up the whole Bottom; and trace the ſecret Negotiation of Peace to its true Cauſes.

Mr. Prior ſent to France.

His Character.

Count Gallas expoſtulates about this clandeſtine Negotiation.

A. D. 1711.

Hereupon they call'd to Mind, that the moſt plauſible Topick, by which the High-Church Party ingratiated themſelves with the People, was the Proſpect they gave them of a ſudden Peace; which their Under-Agents were taught to ſuggeſt, had been kept off by the Duke of Marlborough's and the late Lord Treaſurer's Ambition, and inſatiable Avarice: And to this Purpoſe, they likewiſe remembred, that the Letter to the Examiner, written about a Year before, by Mr. Secretary St. John, contain'd the Hints and Inſtructions, which the Authors of that Paper purſued in their Political Obſervations and Reflections. Among the reſt, they lay great Streſs upon the Examiner of the 26th of April, 1711, wherein the Addreſs of the Houſe of Commons, about Three Years before, againſt a Peace WITHOUT THE ENTIRE RESTITUTION OF SPAIN, was exploded as the higheſt Strain of TEMERITY, FOLLY, and GASCONADE; which very much inflamed the Paper War between the Two contending Parties. The moſt ſober Part of the Nation allow'd, indeed, the Solidity of the Reaſons alledged by the Whigs, for not departing from the Engagements of the Grand Alliance; and were rather inclined to bear the Burden of Taxes ſome Time longer, than by a precarious Peace, to throw up the Fruits of this glorious and ſucceſsful War: But yet the Generality were wrought up by contrary Arguments. They were made to conſider, "That "the Scene of Affairs being, in a great meaſure, ſhifted by the Deceaſe of the late "Emperor, and the Dauphin, it was not impoſſible to put an End to this heavy expenſive War, by a ſafe and honourable Peace, without inſiſting on the Reſtitution "of the whole Monarchy of Spain. That on the one Side, King Charles ſucceeding "in the Empire, and the Hereditary-Countries, and being already poſſeſſed of the "Spaniſh Territories in Italy, the Addition of Spain to his other Dominions, might render the Houſe of Auſtria too Potent; and not only deſtroy the very End for which "this War was undertaken, viz. the preſerving a Balance of Power in Europe, but "alſo, in Time, occaſion a new War to reſtore that Balance. Moreover, it was "urged, that one of the Reaſons for wreſting Spain out of the Hands of King "Philip, viz. its entire Dependance on France, was like to ceaſe, upon the Death of "his Grandfather; when the natural Antipathy between the Two Nations, and "the Jealouſies and Differences which often ariſe between Neighbour Kings, and "are generally the fiercer among near Relations, would, in all Probability, break "the preſent Union of France and Spain. And 'twas obſerv'd likewiſe, that it was "now impracticable to reſtore the whole Spaniſh Dominions to the Houſe of Auſtria; that Monarchy being actually diſmembred, and Part of it yielded to the "Duke of Savoy; and other Parts conquer'd by the Engliſh and Dutch. Upon all theſe Conſiderations, the new Miniſtry thought fit to hearken to ſome Overtures of Peace, which were firſt made to the late Earl of Jerſey, by his old Acquaintance, the Marquis de Torcy, and the latter having deſired, that a Perſon, with whom he might diſcourſe freely, ſhould be ſent over, Mr. Prior was immediately pitch'd upon as the fitteſt for ſuch a private Negotiation, by reaſon of his former Employment at the Peace of Ryſwick; of Secretary of King William's firſt Embaſſy to France; and of his Perſonal Acquaintance with that French Miniſter. He was inſtructed to communicate to France ſome private Propoſitions, or Preliminary Demands * of Great Britain, importing in Subſtance, "That we would "make no Peace, but what ſhould be to the Satisfaction of all our Allies, according to their Agreements and Treaties: That the Trade of Holland ſhould be reſtored, and the Dutch have a Barrier, as well as the Emperor and Duke of Savoy "for their Security: That Care ſhould be taken to keep the Balance in Italy; and "that the Crowns of France and Spain ſhould never be united. In relation to Great "Britain, That our Commerce ſhould be ſettled to the Satisfaction of the Britiſh "Subjects: The Government to be acknowledg'd in France, as now ſettled in "Great Britain: Dunkirk to be demoliſh'd: The Aſſiento to be enjoy'd by Britain, "after the Peace, as the French had it at preſent: Newfoundland to be entirely given "up to the Engliſh: But the Trade of Hudſon's Bay to continue in the Hands of "the French and Engliſh; and all Things in America to remain in the State they "ſhould be found, at the Concluſion of the Peace. That all Advantages of Trade, "granted to the French by the Spaniards, ſhould be equally granted to the Britiſh "Subjects: And, in the laſt Place, That the Secret ſhould be inviolably kept, 'till "allow'd to be divulg'd by the mutual Conſent of both Parties concern'd." With theſe Propoſitions, Mr. Prior was ſent to France, the beginning of July; had a Power ſigned by the Queen; was order'd to return immediately, if the French Court ſtarted any Difficulties, and was particularly directed to ſee, if they had full Powers from Spain. The French not finding him ſufficiently impower'd to treat, were ſhy of diſcloſing their Thoughts to him: For upon his Arrival in France, Monſieur de Torcy, in a Letter † to Mr. Secretary St. John, told him, He ſaw, with great great Pleaſure, Mr. Prior return, after an Interval of ſo many Years; that he could have wiſh'd he had had greater Liberty to employ his great Talents, which, he was perſuaded, he would have made a good Uſe of; but that he hoped Monſieur Meſnager would ſupply what he could not do. Accordingly, Monſieur Meſnager, Deputy of the Council of Commerce in France, accompanied by another Gentleman, (ſaid to be the Abbot du Bois) attended Mr. Prior, upon his Return into England; and being veſted with full Powers, in the ampleſt Form, had frequent private Conferences with the Queen's Miniſters, particularly the Earl of Oxford, Mr. Secretary St. John, the Duke of Shrewſbury, and the Lord Dartmouth. At one of their Meetings *, which was held at Mr. Prior's Houſe, by Order of the Lords of the Committee of Council, and unknown to the Queen, then at Windſor, Monſieur Meſnager deliver'd to the Four Britiſh Miniſters, above-named, the French King's Anſwer to the Demands laſt ſent over by England; which, according to Mr. Secretary St. John's Letter to the Queen, complied with every Article except the Eighth, relating to North America. He added, They found, however, that they ſhould be able to compound this Point, in the manner which her Majeſty, ſome Time before, reſolv'd to paſs it in, provided France gave her Satisfaction upon the Seventh Article, as ſhe had now entirely done. That the Propoſitions to be ſent into Holland, as the Foundation of a general Treaty, they had likewiſe receiv'd from him; and that which was thought moſt liable to Exception, had been very much mended: That my Lord Treaſurer having, however, propoſed ſome further Alterations, in order to make the whole more palatable Abroad, and Monſieur Meſnager ſeeming inclined to agree to them, the Lords of the Council were to conſider of them the next Morning. That this being the preſent Situation of the Treaty, all her Servants were unanimouſly of Opinion, That a Warrant, and full Powers, ſhould that Night be tranſmitted to her Majeſty, in order to paſs the Great Seal the next Morning: And that Mr. Prior ſhould be added to thoſe empower'd to Sign; becauſe, he, having perſonally treated with Monſieur de Torcy, was the beſt Witneſs they could produce, of the Senſe in which the general Preliminary Engagements were enter'd into: Beſides which, as he was the beſt verſed in Matters of Trade, of all her Majeſty's Miniſters truſted in this Secret, if ſhe thought fit to employ him in the future Treaty of Commerce, it would be of Conſequence that he had been a Party concern'd in that Convention, which muſt be the Rule of that Treaty. He concluded, That the reſt of the Plenipotentiaries were all thoſe who had the Honour to ſit in her Majeſty's Cabinet Council, viz. the Earl of Oxford, the Duke of Buckinghamſhire, the Biſhop of Briſtol, the Duke of Shrewſbury, the Earl Poulet, the Earl of Dartmouth, and Mr. Secretary St. John: But, though the Warrant, antidated by Three Days †, was ſigned by the Queen, directing the Lord Keeper to affix the Great Seal to an Inſtrument thereto annex'd, meaning the Full Powers, yet moſt of thoſe who ſo readily concurr'd in treating with the Miniſter of France, declined becoming Parties, when the Treaty was to be concluded; and ſo the ſpecial Preliminaries between Great Britain and France, ſigned by Monſieur Meſnager, on the 27th of September, were accepted and ſigned only by the Earl of Dartmouth, and Mr. Secretary St. John, by virtue of a Warrant, ſigned by the Queen. Moreover, it is obſervable ‖, That neither this, nor any one Paper of Powers or Inſtructions throughout this whole Affair, was counterſign'd by any one Miniſter, but the Queen's Name expoſed to cover all, in Caſe this clandeſtine Negotiation ſhould, at laſt, prove abortive, and be afterwards inquired into: And the Engliſh Miniſtry having, every where, extoll'd the vaſt Advantages that were granted to Great Britain, France made a proper Uſe of it, and declared, that "Theſe Articles were an eventual, or "conditional Treaty only; and that the French King would not be oblig'd to make "them good, but in Caſe of the ſigning of a general Peace. In this Senſe Mr. Meſnager ſigned them; and by this Means, the Queen was brought into this Dilemma, either to go on, through all Adventures, in the Meaſures of France, or they had it in their Power, by divulging the Secret, and expoſing ſuch a notorious Breach of national Faith, to make what Advantage they thought fit among the Allies; who, from this Time, muſt think themſelves diſengaged from the Queen, if they could find their own Account in ſeparate Meaſures. The ſame ·: Day that the ſpecial Preliminaries were thus accepted, another Set of General Preliminary Articles on the Part of France, were ſigned by Monſieur Meſnager; as was alſo a ſeparate Article in Favour of the Duke of Savoy, "Whereby the French King promiſed to reſtore to "that Prince, the Territories which belong'd to him at the beginning of the pre-"ſent War; and to conſent that there be alſo yielded to his Royal Highneſs, ſuch "other Places in Italy, as ſhould be found agreeable to the Senſe of the Treaties "between him and his Allies." From this Time, a perfect Confidence was eſtabliſh'd between the Courts of St. James's and Verſailles: And a Week after, Monſieur Meſnager, and his Companion, took their Leave of the Britiſh Miniſters, in order to return to France, extreamly ſatisfied with their Reception here, the Queen*

M. Tallard has Leave to go to France.

Mr. Meſnager ſpeaks in Favour of the Pretender.

Queen having honour'd Mr. Meſnager with a private Converſation in her Cloſet, and, at his Requeſt, granted to the Mareſchal de Tallard (who was ſuppoſed to have laid the Foundation of this Negotiation) the Favour of going to France for Four Months, upon his Parole; which ended in his Enlargement, without Ranſom. It was confidently reported, "That Mr. Meſnager, by the Encouragement he re- "ceiv'd from Mr. St. John, ſpoke to the Queen in Favour of the Chevalier de "St. George, whom he call'd Her Brother; that Her Majeſty ſeem'd not diſpleas'd "with the Diſcourſe; And that before he left England, he obtain'd, by means "of the Lady Maſham, a verbal Promiſe, That private Inſtructions ſhould be ſent to "the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries, not to inſiſt on the French King's giving up the Inte- "reſt of the Chevalier abſolutely." Moreover, a * Letter from a good Hand in Paris, (which, about that Time, was communicated to me) imported, That, upon his Return thither, Mr. Meſnager was very ſanguine, and affected publickly to affirm, that the Peace was as good as concluded; and that, in particular, he laid great Emphaſis on the Advantages granted in Favour of the Prince of Wales: Which, to ſome People, appear'd very unlikely; eſpecially, when they compar'd the Weight of ſuch an Affair, with the Abilities of Mr. Meſnager, who never was accounted a great Genius. Be that Part of Mr. Meſnager's Negotiation in England what it will, Five † Days after he had taken his Leave, the Government thought fit to communicate the Preliminary Articles he had ſigned, to Count Gallas, and other Foreign Miniſters; from whom a Copy being procur'd, an Engliſh Tranſlation of them was, on the 13th of October, publiſh'd in a News-Paper, call'd the Daily Courant, as follows:

The Seven Preliminary Articles publiſh'd October. 13.

"THE King being willing to contribute all that is in his Power to the re-eſta- "bliſhing of the General Peace; His Majeſty declares,

I. "That he will acknowledge the Queen of Great Britain, in that Quality; "as alſo the Succeſſion of that Crown, according to the preſent Settlement.

II. "That he will freely, and bona fide, conſent to the taking all juſt and rea- "ſonable Meaſures, for hindring that the Crowns of France and Spain may ever "be united on the Head of the ſame Prince; his Majeſty being perſwaded, that "this Exceſs of Power would be contrary to the Good and Quiet of Europe.

III. "The King's Intention is, that all the Parties engag'd in the preſent War, "without excepting any of them, may find their reaſonable Satisfaction in the "Treaty of Peace which ſhall be made: That Commerce may be re-eſtabliſh'd "and maintain'd for the future, to the Advantage of Great Britain, of Holland, "and of the other Nations who have been accuſtom'd to exerciſe Commerce.

IV. "As the King will likewiſe maintain exactly the Obſervation of the "Peace, when it ſhall be concluded; and the Object the King propoſes to him- "ſelf, being to ſecure the Frontiers of his Kingdom, without diſturbing in any "manner whatever the Neighbouring States; he promiſes to agree, by the Treaty "which ſhall be made, that the Dutch ſhall be put in Poſſeſſion of the fortify'd "Places which ſhall be mention'd in the Netherlands, to ſerve hereafter for a Bar- "rier; which may ſecure the Quiet of the Republick of Holland, againſt any Enter- "prize from the Part of France.

V. "The King conſents likewiſe, that a ſecure and convenient Barrier ſhould be "form'd, for the Empire, and for the Houſe of Auſtria.

VI. "Notwithſtanding Dunkirk coſt the King very great Sums, as well to pur- "chaſe it, as to fortify it; and that 'tis farther neceſſary to be at very conſiderable "Expence for razing the Works; his Majeſty is willing, however, to engage, to "cauſe them to be demoliſh'd, immediately after the Concluſion of the Peace; on "Condition, that, for the Fortifications of that Place, a proper Equivalent, that "may content him, be given him: And, as England cannot furniſh that Equivalent, "the Diſcuſſion of it ſhall be referr'd to the Conferences to be held for the Negotia- "tion of the Peace.

VII. "When the Conferences for the Negotiation of the Peace ſhall be form'd, "all the Pretenſions of the Princes and States, engaged in the preſent War, ſhall "be therein diſcuſs'd bona fide, and amicably: And nothing ſhall be omitted, to "regulate and terminate them, to the Satisfaction of all the Parties.

"By Virtue of a full Power from the King, We, the under-written, Knight "of his Order of St. Michael, Deputy of the Council of Commerce, have conclu- "ded, in the Name of his Majeſty, the preſent Preliminary Articles. In witneſs "whereof, we have ſigned. Done at London, the 27th of September, O. S. and the "8th of Octoter, N. S. 1711.

It is hard to expreſs, how ſtrangely the Generality of People, and even ſome Friends of the preſent Miniſtry, were ſurpriz'd at the Publication of theſe Preliminaries, which they look'd upon as captious, inſidious, and inſufficient to ground a Treaty upon; whereas they had been made to expect ſo GLORIOUS and ADVANTAGEOUS Terms for all the Allies, that the Peace would be laſting, ſafe, and honourable. Hereupon, the Writers of the Poſt-Boy, finding that the Publick were miſerably diſappointed, printed, the ſame Day, a Poſtſcript to their Paper; containing, beſides the Preliminaries before-mention'd, the Six following Articles; which, they ſaid, were agreed on, as the Foundation of a future Peace: Viz. 1. That the Kingdoms of Naples, Sicily, and Sardinia, the Dukedom of Milan, the Ports of Tuſcany, that belong'd to the Crown of Spain, and all Flanders, ſhall remain for ever to the Houſe of Auſtria. 2. That King Philip ſhall have all Spain, Majorca, Minorca, and the Weſt-Indies. 3. That for the Security of the Engliſh and Dutch Trade at all Times with Spain, King Philip will conſent, that the City of Cadiz ſhall be always gariſon'd by the Engliſh; with full Liberty to the South-Sea Company, to eſtabliſh themſelves on the Continent of that Country, according to the Act of Parliament. 4. That the Fortifications of Dunkirk ſhall be demoliſh'd, and the Harbour ruin'd. 5. That the Dutch may name Commiſſioners, to treat with the French Commiſſioners, about regulating the neceſſary Barriers: And, 6. That Satisfaction, and Security, ſhall be given to the reſt of the Allies, at the General Congreſs. But theſe Additional Articles were neither communicated to the Foreign Miniſters, nor had any Effect upon the Generality of the Nation, who continued to entertain great Jealouſies about the preſent Negotiation. However, notwithſtanding all the Difficulties and Oppoſition the New Miniſtry foreſaw they would infallibly meet with, both at home and abroad, they reſolv'd to purſue their Scheme; tho' they were ſo cautious as not to declare themſelves, till they had known the Sentiments of the States-General, about the French Preliminaries, communicated to them by the Earl of Strafford; which they did ſoon after, from the Mouth of Monſieur Buys, Penſioner of Amſterdam; whom their High Mightineſſes thought fit, at this critical Juncture, to ſend to Great Britain, as their Envoy Extraordinary; and who arrived in London, Eight Days after the Earl of Strafford had reach'd the Hague.

The Generality ſurpriz'd at the Publication of the French Preliminaries.

Sham Articles ſaid to be agreed on, as the Foundation of a future Peace.

Mr. Buys, Envoy Extr. from the States-General, arrives at London, Oct. 18. and the E. of Strafford at the Hague, Oct. 10.

About this Time, it was whiſper'd about, that a Foreign Miniſter, who, with great Vigilance and Penetration, had early attended the Steps of the Britiſh Miniſters towards a Peace, and who had warmly expoſtulated about it, and, by his Letters, (which were betray'd by one of his Under-Secretaries) awaken'd the Jealouſy of his Maſter; was not agreeable to the Britiſh Court, and that Endeavours were uſed to have him recall'd. Nor was this Report groundleſs: For, on Friday, the 26th of October, Count Gallas, Envoy Extraordinary from the Emperor Charles the VIth, deſigning to diſpatch an Expreſs to his Imperial Majeſty, ſent to Mr. Secretary St. John's Office for a Paſs, upon his Certificate, as uſual: But one of the Under-Secretaries having anſwer'd, They could not grant the ſaid Paſs, without the Queen's Orders, the Expreſs was not ſent away. The next Day, upon the Return of his Excellency's Gentleman of the Horſe, whom he had diſpatch'd to the Emperor at Milan, with an earneſt Deſire that he might have Leave to go home; Count Gallas wrote a Letter to the Earl of Dartmouth, Principal Secretary of State, acquainting him, That he had received his Imperial Majeſty's Commands, to repair to Frankfort; and deſiring to know, when he might go to Hampton-Court, to take his Leave of the Queen, and receive Her Majeſty's Orders? The Earl of Dartmouth anſwer'd, He was ſorry that Letter came too late; having already receiv'd Orders from the Queen, not to have any further Correſpondence with his Excellency; which Mr. Secretary St. John was order'd to notify to him more at large. Accordingly, on Sunday Morning, the 28th, Sir Clement Cotterel, Maſter of the Ceremonies, waited upon his Excellency, and acquainted him, from Mr. Secretary St. John, and by the Queen's Command, That he ſhould no more come to Court; his Behaviour, of late, not being agreeable to Her Majeſty; but that whatever ſhould, for the future, be preſented to Her from his Imperial Majeſty, by the Hands of another Miniſter, ſhould be very well receiv'd. Hereupon, Count Gallas deſir'd to know the Reaſon of Her Majeſty's Diſpleaſure, that he might acquaint his Maſter with it; but being anſwer'd, That the Queen would give his Imperial Majeſty the Reaſons ſhe had for ſo doing, He acquieſc'd. However, being deſirous to know what Anſwer he was to expect, as to his Departure, he ſent to Mr. Secretary St. John about it; who return'd him an Anſwer, That he might go away, when he thought fit: Which his Excellency prepar'd to do, as ſoon as he had receiv'd an Anſwer to the Diſpatches he ſent away the 29th by an Expreſs. This Affair, which was, the next Day, noiſed abroad, occaſion'd various Reaſonings and Speculations: But I ſhall only take notice here, that, abſtracting from the Reaſons that render'd Count Gallas's late Behaviour ungrateful to the Britiſh Court, no Miniſter that ever reſided here, had a better and fairer Character; or was more eſteem'd and belov'd by all who had the Honour of his Perſonal Acquaintance. Nor was his Probity and Punctuality leſs commended by all the Perſons concern'd in the Sileſian Loan, which was procur'd by his Excellency; than his magnificent Way of living, and regular Pay, was extoll'd by all Tradeſmen and Artificers, ſo that his Departure was attended with general Regret.

Upon the Receipt of the Preliminaries ſign'd by Monſieur Meſnager, which Count Gallas tranſmitted to the new Emperor at Milan, his Imperial Majeſty wrote a Circular † Letter to the Electors, and other Princes of the Empire, exhorting them to perſiſt in the Engagements of the Grand Alliance; and, at the ſame time, his Imperial Majeſty wrote another Letter to the States General to the ſame Effect; but with this additional Deſire, That they would join Counſels with him to induce the Queen of Great Britain to reject thoſe Propoſitions, and to continue the War; or, if a Negotiation with the Enemy could not be avoided, that it might be on Condition, that the preceding Preliminaries, propoſed, moſt of them, by the Enemy himſelf, might remain fix'd, and without Alteration: And that ſhe would not truſt the immortal Glory ſhe had gain'd, and the certain Welfare of her People, to the Infidelity of the French Promiſes. Before this Letter reach'd the Hague, Count de Goes, the Imperial Plenipotentiary there, preſented a Memorial to the States General, about the Current Report, "That the "Queen of Great Britain had accepted the Seven Articles propoſed by France, judg- "ing them ſufficient for proceeding to a General Congreſs of Peace; and preſſed "their High Mightineſſes to conſent thereto, and to grant their Paſſports for the "Ambaſſadors of France: Wherefore, he thought it his Duty to aſk of their High "Mightineſſes, Whether this Report were true? And in caſe it was, to deſire them "not to come to any Reſolution but in Conjunction with his Imperial Majeſty, or his "Miniſters, conformable to the Sixth Article of the Grand Alliance." The States General return'd a civil Anſwer both to this Memorial, and to the Emperor's Repreſentations; but the Letter his Imperial Majeſty wrote, at the ſame time, to the Queen of Great Britain, and which was deliver'd by Monſieur Hoffman, did not meet with the like favourable Reception.

The Emperor's Letter not well entertain'd in England.

In this arduous Juncture, Monſieur Buys, Envoy Extraordinary from the States General at the Court of Great Britain, acted his Part with all the Addreſs and Prudence of a Man of Parts, and conſummate Politician. He arrived in London on the 18th of October, and had the next Day a Conference with the Lord High Treaſurer; who, ſome Days before, was ſaid to be taken ill, and who continued, either really or feignedly, indiſpoſed for Five or Six Weeks; which put no ſmall Stop to Publick Buſineſs. Hereupon, Monſieur Buys had frequent Conferences with Mr. Secretary St. John, who, on Sunday the 21ſt of that Month, carried him to Windſor; introduced him to a private Audience of the Queen, by whom he was very kindly received; and entertain'd him that Day and the next, in their Return to London. What paſs'd in theſe, and the ſubſequent Interviews between the Britiſh Miniſters and Monſieur Buys, was then made a Secret, which is not yet fully reveal'd: But, be that as it will, 'tis certain, he had a very difficult Taſk to perform; for he was to treat with Perſons, who, from the Steps made by the States General, in favour of the late Miniſtry, look'd upon the Dutch as officious Intermeddlers; and who, beſides, whether upon that ſcore, or on ſome other Motive, made great Exceptions to the Barrier-Treaty, concluded in the Year 1709, to engage their High Mightineſſes to become Guarantees of the Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover. But both Parties equally diſſembling; the one paſt Injuries, the other preſent Jealouſies, there ſeem'd to be a good Harmony between them: However, notwithſtanding what was artfully ſuggeſted, in order to amuſe the People in Great Britain, 'tis moſt certain, that the Dutch gave, with Reluctancy, their Conſent to a Congreſs; being rather forced to it by Threats, than drawn in by fair Means and Perſuaſions; and that tho' Monſieur Buys might inſinuate in England, that the States would not be againſt the Scheme of a General Peace, by which Spain and the Weſt-Indies ſhould be left to King Philip, provided, they might have an equal Share in the Advantages of Trade offer'd by France to Great Britain; yet he had no Inſtructions to make any ſuch Offers; and if he did, 'twas only to make himſelf the more agreeable to thoſe he was treating with, and thereby dive the deeper into their late Negotiation with France. 'Tis likewiſe certain, that whatever Reports were at firſt ſpread abroad to the contrary, Monſieur Buys's Conduct was, upon his Return to Holland, highly approved by the States General; and if we may believe the Paris Gazetteer, the Dutch attributed the Warmth that appeared in the Houſe of Lords to the Management and nocturnal Negotiations of that Gentleman. But, waving any further Conjectures about Monſieur Buys's critical Negotiation, we muſt take Notice, that the general Diſlike of a Treaty, on the Propoſals made by France, increas'd daily; that the Duke of Shrewsbury declined the being

Mr. Buys's Negotiation.

Mr. Buys's Conduct highly approved by the States. See Poſt-Boy of January 10, $17\frac{11}{12}$.

being named a Plenipotentiary; and that the Earl of Nottingham openly exclaimed againſt thoſe Preliminaries; and, from that time, began not to be in the Confidence of ſome Perſons, with whom he had, of late, been very intimate.

Fourteen Perſons taken up for printing Pamph'ets and Libels, appear at the Bar of the Court of Queen's-Bench.

On the 23d of October, being the Firſt Day of the Term, Fourteen Bookſellers, Printers, or Publiſhers, who had been lately taken up, and committed to the Cuſtody of State-Meſſengers, by Warrants from Mr. Secretary St. John, for Printing and Publiſhing Pamphlets, Libels, and Ballads, ſome of which were, indeed, ſcandalous Invectives againſt the Miniſtry, others repreſented as ſuch, appear'd at the Bar of the Court of Queen's-Bench; where Mr. Nicholas Lechmere, Council for Mr. Darby and Mr. Hurt, Two of the Printers, pleaded with notable Vehemence againſt the Severity of Committing People, without telling them their Crimes; urging, That at this rate the Office of a Secretary of State would become a Spaniſh Inquiſition: But, at the Requeſt of the Attorney-General, all the ſaid Perſons were continued on their Recognizance till the laſt Day of the Term. It is to be obſerv'd, that Mr. Darby and Mr. Hurt were proſecuted on account of a Tranſlation of a memorable Paſſage in Tacitus, about Cecilius Baſſus's deceiving the Emperor Nero, with the Promiſe of an immenſe, but imaginary Treaſure, which was inſerted in a Paper call'd the Obſervator; and was a ſide-wind Reflection on the South-Sea Project. Others were proſecuted on more criminal Accounts, viz. for Publiſhing ſeditious Ballads, call'd, A Welcome to the Medal, Credit Reſtor'd; MAT's Peace, &c. Notwithſtanding theſe Proſecutions, the Pens of both Parties were ſtill buſy; the one, in exploding; and the other, in vindicating the preſent Negotiation of Peace: But, without entring into a Detail of the Arguments uſed by either Side, it is moſt certain, that the Britiſh Miniſtry were not a little uneaſy at the Difficulties they met with, both at Home and Abroad, to ſet a Treaty on foot. However, they ſet a Face of Confidence upon the Matter, and appear'd fix'd in the Reſolution to purſue the Scheme they had laid; and in order to that, uſed their utmoſt Endeavours to engage the States General to come into their Meaſures; for which Purpoſe, the Earl of Strafford (as was hinted before) made very preſſing Inſtances with their High Mightineſſes. The contrary Winds having, for many Days, hinder'd the Packet-Boats from coming over, it was thought fit further to prorogue the Parliament, which from the 21ſt of Auguſt, was prorogu'd to the 9th of October, and afterwards to the 13th of November; on which Day being met, they were farther prorogu'd to the 27th of the ſame Month. The next Day, * Mr. Buys received an Account from Holland, that the States General conſented to grant the Paſſports demanded of them for the French Plenipotentiaries, tho' with ſome Reſtriction in relation to King Philip's Miniſters; with which he acquainted the Britiſh Court. Hereupon a Committee of the Council met on the 19th of November, in which the Lord Treaſurer, now recover'd of his late Indiſpoſition, and Monſieur Buys, were preſent, to concert the Time and Place of the Congreſs; and, the next Morning, Mr. Secretary St. John notified to the Foreign Miniſters reſiding in London, that her Majeſty had pitch'd upon the City of Utrecht for the Place of Congreſs, where the Conferences ſhould begin on the 1ſt of January, O. S. for which purpoſe, the Queen wrote a Circular Letter † to her Allies. On the other hand, as (contrary to King Solomon's ‖ Maxim) the General had the chief Management of former Negotiations; which, in the Opinion of many, was the chief Cauſe of their proving abortive; it was now thought fit to retrieve that Miſtake, by employing a Miniſter of the Goſpel of Peace, in the enſuing Treaty. Hereupon, it was declar'd, that her Majeſty had appointed the Biſhop of Briſtol, Lord Privy-Seal, to aſſiſt at the Conferences at Utrecht, as one of her Plenipotentiaries; and 'tis further obſervable, that the Duke of Marlborough, who, on the 18th in the Morning, arriv'd from Holland, and, the ſame Day, waited on the Queen at Hampton-Court, did not aſſiſt either at the Committee of Council which was held the next Day at the Cockpit, or at any other Conſultation about the preſent Negotiation of Peace. Not many Days after, the Baron de Bothmer, Envoy Extraordinary from the Elector of Hanover, who came over with his Grace, deliver'd to Mr. Secretary St. John a long Memorial; wherein, in his Maſter's Name, he repreſented, "the Neceſſity of preſerving a perfect Union between the Allies, while the Peace ſhould be treating; "of their giving each other a mutual Guaranty upon what ſhould therein be con"cluded; as alſo the pernicious Conſequences, if Spain and the Indies were left to the "Duke of Anjou. This Memorial, a few Days after it was deliver'd, was publiſh'd in a News-Paper ∴, and receiv'd with great Applauſe by all the Well-wiſhers to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, who highly commended the Elector of Hanover for his ſeaſonable Interpoſition, in an Affair which ſo nearly concern'd him: But, on the other hand, as it directly exploded and condemn'd the preſent Scheme of Peace, it gave no ſmall Offence to the Miniſtry, whoſe Agents openly exclaim'd againſt it; ſuggeſting, that it was very impolitick in his Electoral Highneſs, at this Juncture, to intermeddle intermeddle in the Affairs of Great Britain, and ſeem to eſpouſe a Party. Others pretended, that this Memorial had more the Air of an Original in Engliſh, than of a Tranſlation from the French; and ſo concluded, that it was contrived in London, by the leading Men of the Whig-Party, in Concert with Baron de Bothmer, who was perſuaded to preſent it: Which was altogether Groundleſs (a). Nay, ſome were ſo bold, as, in a printed Letter, (from a ſuppoſed Whig Gentleman in the Country, to a Friend in Town) to queſtion the Genuineneſs of that Memorial, and to laugh at it, as a barefac'd Impoſture: With other ſcandalous Reflections on his Electoral Highneſs, and his Envoy. As for the Britiſh Miniſters, they had no manner of Regard to that Repreſentation; nor would the Queen, perhaps, ever have ſeen it, had it not been ſhewn in Print to her Majeſty, by the Duke of Somerſet, before it was laid before her by the Secretary of State; which could not be agreeable either to her Majeſty, or to Mr. St. John, who had, thereupon, an Eclairciſſement with the Baron de Bothmer, about the publiſhing of his Memorial.

The Parliament further prorogued.

The Queen having continued a Month at Hampton-Court, arrived on Saturday, the 24th of November, at St. James's, where a Council being held the 26th, it was debated, whether the Parliament ſhould be further prorogued, or only adjourn'd for a few Days; and it was at laſt carried for a Prorogation, 'till the 7th of December. This Prorogation, at ſo critical a Juncture, and ſo late in the Year, occaſion'd various Reaſonings and Reflections; and ſome People went ſo far, as to ſurmiſe, that the Parliament would ſtill be further prorogued from Time to Time, 'till the Peace was concluded: But they who obſerv'd with moſt Attention, the ſecret Springs of Affairs, were apt to aſcribe this Prorogation to a Diſcovery of a late Coalition of ſome eminent Peers of the High-Church Party, with thoſe of the contrary Side, and of their having concerted a Repreſentation to be laid before the Queen, againſt a Peace on the Foot of the Propoſals made by France; which 'twas thought might be prevented, if not by other Means, at leaſt by the coming up of the Scotch Peers, not above Three or Four of whom were yet arrived in London.

Account of the Effigies of the Devil, the Pope, and the Pretender, being ſeized.

What happened ſome Days before, afforded yet more Matter of Talk and Speculation: Upon Information, that the Effigies of the Devil, the Pope, and the Pretender, were to be carry'd in Proceſſion, and, (according to the Cuſtom of the London Mob) burnt on the 17th of November, the Anniverſary of Queen Elizabeth's Inauguration, the Earl of Dartmouth iſſued out his Warrant, purſuant to which, on the 16th, at Twelve a-Clock at Night, ſome of the Queen's Meſſengers, ſuſtain'd by a Detachment of the Foot-Guards, ſeiz'd thoſe Three Figures, with ſeveral others of Cardinals, Jeſuits, and Fryers, all finely dreſs'd, and carry'd them from an empty Houſe in Drury-Lane, where they had been lodg'd, to the Earl of Dartmouth's Secretary's Office in the Cockpit. It appear'd very ſtrange, that a popular Rejoycing, ſo grateful to this Proteſtant City, and which was never attempted to be quaſh'd, but in the Reign of King James the Second, ſhould, at this Time, be ſuppreſs'd: But the Miniſters were juſtly apprehenſive, that they by whoſe Overthrow they had raiſed themſelves, partly by poſſeſſing the Minds of the Multitude with the Church's imaginary Danger, deſign'd to try the Temper of thoſe giddy Tools, and turn them againſt their Adverſaries, by infuſing into them more real Dangers from an ill Peace, and the Pretender: And in order to heighten thoſe Apprehenſions, particularly with the Queen, the Trained-Bands of London and Weſtminſter, were immediately aſſembled, and continued under Arms Three Days together. At the ſame Time, Endeavours were uſed to render obnoxious an illuſtrious Society of Noblemen and Gentlemen, call'd the KIT-CAT-CLUB, (b) who, for many Years paſt, had diſtinguiſh'd themſelves by their Zeal for the Proteſtant Succeſſion: For which Purpoſe, a mercenary News-Writer * was directed to charge them with a Conſpiracy to raiſe a Mob to confront the beſt of Queens, and her Miniſtry, pull down the Houſes of ſeveral Honeſt, Worthy, Loyal, true Engliſh Gentlemen, having had Money diſtributed amongſt them ſome time before for that Purpoſe, by G. and gave out, That her Majeſty was very ill, if not dead; in order to have acted their Treaſons with greater Freedom. Whereas the Lords and Gentlemen who were at the Expence of the Effigies before-mention'd, had no other Deſign, than to have them carried in Proceſſion, and afterwards burnt with the like Solemnity, as was remarkably practiſed on the 17th of November, 1679, when the Nation was juſtly alarm'd with a Popiſh Plot, and a Popiſh Succeſſor. A. D. 1711.

The Kit-Cat-Club vindicated.

In the mean time *, the Court having receiv'd Intelligence, That notwithſtanding the Difficulties ſtarted Abroad by the Imperial Miniſters, the States-General, out of Reſpect and Deference to her Britannick Majeſty, had, at laſt, reſolv'd to ſend Commiſſioners to the Congreſs at Utrecht, all imaginable Methods were uſed, to remove the Obſtacles which yet obſtructed at Home the preſent Negotiations. In the firſt Place, the Prime Miniſter endeavour'd, by large Offers of Preferment, to engage the Earl of Nottingham (a) in the Court Intereſt and Meaſures: And, at the ſame time, the Queen cloſeted the Dukes of Marlborough, Grafton, and St. Albans, the Earls of Dorſet and Scarborough, the Lords Somers, Cowper, and ſome others, about the dreaded Repreſentation againſt a Peace, by which Spain, and the Weſt-Indies, ſhould be left in the Hands of a Prince of the Houſe of Bourbon: But they all remain'd ſtaunch in their Opinion, and firm in their Reſolution, to the great Diſappointment and Uneaſineſs of the New Miniſtry. Hereupon, in the Council which was held on Wedneſday, the 5th of December, and laſted late in the Night, it was, at firſt propos'd, to cauſe both Houſes to adjourn for a few Days, during which freſh Endeavours might be uſed to defeat the Deſign lately form'd againſt the preſent Scheme; but ſome Members of the Privy-Council having repreſented the Fears and Jealouſies which ſuch an Adjournment, after ſo many Prorogations, might create in the Minds of the People; and, on the other hand, the Miniſtry, either hoping, with the Aſſiſtance of their Scotch Friends, to have a Majority in the Houſe of Lords; or, at leaſt, being ſecure of it in that of the Commons; it was, after a long Debate, finally reſolv'd, That the Parliament ſhould ſit, on the Day to which they were laſt prorogued. Accordingly, a Committee of the Council having met the 6th of December, to conſider of the Queen's Speech, Her Majeſty went the next Day, in a Sedan, to the Houſe of Peers, and the Commons being ſent for up, and attending, her Majeſty ſpoke to both Houſes to this Effect.

The Parliament meets, Dec. 7.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes.

" I Have called you together, as ſoon as the publick Affairs would permit, and " I am glad that I can now tell you, that notwithſtanding the Arts of thoſe " who delight in War, both Place and Time are appointed for opening the Treaty of " a General Peace.

" Our Allies, (eſpecially the States-General) whoſe Intereſt I look upon as inſepa- " rable from my own, have, by their ready Concurrence, expreſs'd their intire " Confidence in me; and I have no Reaſon to doubt, but that my own Subjects " are aſſured of my particular Care of them.

" My chief Concern is, That the Proteſtant Religion, and the Laws and Liber- " ties of theſe Nations, may be continued to you, by ſecuring the Succeſſion to the " Crown, as it is limited by Parliament to the Houſe of Hanover.

" I ſhall endeavour, that after a War, which has coſt ſo much Blood and Trea- " ſure, you may find your Intereſt in Trade and Commerce, improved and en- " larged by a Peace, with all other Advantages, which a tender and affectionate " Sovereign can procure for a Dutiful and Loyal People.

" The Princes and States which have been engaged with us in this War, being " by Treaties intituled to have their ſeveral Intereſts ſecured at a Peace, I will not " only do my utmoſt to procure every one of them all reaſonable Satisfaction, but " I ſhall alſo unite with them in the ſtricteſt Engagements, for continuing the Alli- " ance, in order to render the general Peace ſecure and laſting.

(a) The Friends of the New Miniſtry were ſo enraged againſt the Earl of Nottingham, That they caus'd the following Advertiſement to be inſerted in the Poſt-Boy of December 6. viz. " Whereas a very Tall, Thin, Swarthy Complection'd Man, between Sixty and Seventy Years " of Age, wearing a brown Coat, with little Sleeves, and long Pockets, has lately withdrawn " himſelf from his Friends, being ſeduced by wicked Perſons to follow ill Courſes: Theſe are " to give Notice, That whoever ſhall diſcover him, ſhall have Ten Shillings Reward; or if he " will voluntarily return, he ſhall be kindly receiv'd by his Friends, who will not Reproach " him for paſt Follies, provided he give good Aſſurances, that, for the future, he will firmly " adhere to the Church of England, in which he was ſo carefully Educated by his honeſt " Parents." There were alſo Lampoons, and other Libels, both in Verſe and Proſe, publiſh'd againſt the ſame Peer.

A. D. 1711.

" The beſt way to have this Treaty effectual, will be, to make early Proviſion " for the Campaign: Therefore, I muſt aſk of you, Gentlemen of the Houſe of Com- " mons, the neceſſary Supplies for the next Year's War; and I do moſt earneſtly re- " commend to you, to make ſuch Diſpatch therein, as may convince our Ene- " mies, that, if we cannot obtain a good Peace, we are prepar'd to carry on the " War with Vigor.

" Whatever you give, will be ſtill in your own Power to apply; and I doubt " not, but in a little Time after the opening of the Treaty, we ſhall be able to " judge of its Event.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" As I have had your cheerful Aſſiſtance for the carrying on this long and charge- " able War, ſo I aſſure my ſelf, that no true Proteſtant, or good Subject, will envy " Britain, or Me, the Glory and Satisfaction of ending the ſame, by a Juſt and " Honourable Peace, for Us, and all our Allies.

" Such a Peace will give new Life to our Foreign Trade; and I ſhall do my ut- " moſt, to improve that happy Opportunity to encourage our Home-Manufactures; " which will tend to the eaſing of my Subjects in that exceſſive Charge they now " lie under in maintaining the Poor, and to correct and redreſs ſuch Abuſes, as " may have crept into any Part of the Adminiſtration, during ſo long a War.

" I cannot conclude, without earneſtly recommending to you all, Unanimity; " and that you will carefully avoid every Thing, which may give Occaſion to the " Enemy to think Us a People divided amongſt our ſelves, and, conſequently, pre- " vent our obtaining that Good Peace, of which We have ſuch reaſonable Hopes, " and ſo near a View.

" I pray GOD direct your Conſultations to this End; that, being deliver'd from " the Hardſhips of War, you may become a Happy and a Flouriſhing Peo- " ple."

The Queen ſtays in the Houſe incognito.

As ſoon as the Queen had ended her Speech, ſhe went into an adjacent Room; and having pull'd off her Royal Robes, came back, incognito, to the Houſe of Peers, both to hear the Debates, and, by her Preſence, to moderate any Heats that might ariſe: Which, however, was by ſome obſerv'd to be unuſual, on the Day the Sovereign opens a Seſſion of Parliament. Be that as it will, the Earl of Ferrers having made a Motion, for returning Her Majeſty the Thanks of the Houſe, for her moſt gracious Speech; he was ſeconded by the Earl of Abingdon, and ſe- veral other Lords: Hereupon, the Earl of Nottingham made a long and elaborate Speech, wherein he ſet forth " the Inſufficiency and Captiouſneſs of the late Pre- " liminaries; made a lively Repreſentation of the Danger of Treating upon ſo pre- " carious a Foundation; urg'd the expreſs Engagements, Great Britain had en- " ter'd into with the High Allies, to reſtore the intire Monarchy of Spain to the " Houſe of Auſtria; and the Neceſſity of carrying on the War with Vigor, till " thoſe Engagements were made good:" Adding, " That tho' he had a numerous " Family, he would readily contribute Half his Income towards it, rather than ac- " quieſce in a Peace which he thought unſafe and diſhonourable, to his Country, " and all Europe:" And concluded, with " offering a Clauſe, to be inſerted in " the Addreſs of Thanks, to repreſent to Her Majeſty, as the humble Opinion and " Advice of the Houſe, That no Peace could be ſafe or honourable, to Great Britain, " or Europe, if Spain, and the Weſt-Indies, were to be allotted to any Branch of the " Houſe of Bourbon." The Lord Guernſey, Brother to the Earl of Nottingham, ſaid thereupon, " That ſuch a Clauſe was foreign to an Addreſs of Thanks: " That, in all Probability, few of the Members of the Houſe were prepar'd to " ſpeak to it; but that it might be debated at a more convenient Time, when, ac- " cording to Cuſtom, the Houſe ſhould take into Conſideration the State of the " Nation." He was ſeconded by the Lord North and Grey, and another Peer of the ſame ſide: And the Lord Treaſurer added, That, according to the Rules and Orders of the Houſe, this was not the proper Time to debate ſuch a Motion. Here- upon, the Earl of Wharton appeal'd to that Illuſtrious Aſſembly, whether there were any ſuch Order? And the Duke of Buckingham, the moſt vers'd in the Knowledge of Parliamentary Proceedings, having over-rul'd the Treaſurer's Objection; the Earl of Wharton went on; ſpoke with notable Vehemence againſt the Preliminary Articles offer'd by France; and inſiſted on the Neceſſity of inſerting in the Addreſs the Clauſe offer'd by the Earl of Nottingham. He was back'd by the Earl of Sun- derland, who ſmartly anſwer'd the Objection rais'd by ſome Peers of the oppoſite ſide, viz. That they were not prepar'd to ſpeak to that Motion. What, My Lords, ſaid he, Is it poſſible that any Member of this Illuſtrious Houſe, ſhould be unprepar'd to debate an Affair, which, for theſe Ten Years paſt, has been the principal Subject-Mat- ter of our Conſultations? Do not we ſit in the ſame Houſe? And are we not the ſame

Peers, who have conſtantly been of Opinion, and have often repreſented to Her Majeſty, That no Safe and Honourable Peace can be made, unleſs Spain and the Weſt-Indies be recover'd from the Houſe of Bourbon? 'Tis true, I ſee ſome New Faces among Us: But even that Lord, who ſits on the Wool-Pack, (meaning the Lord Treaſurer) may well remember, that, in the late Reign, Four Lords were impeach'd for having made a Partition Treaty. The Earl of Angleſey (who, with the Duke of Ormond, was juſt come into the Houſe, having, that Morning, travell'd above Thirty Miles, in their Return from Ireland) repreſented the "Neceſſity of eaſing the Nation of the "Burden of this expenſive War; and ſaid, they ought to leave it to Her Majeſty's "Wiſdom, to conclude a Peace, when ſhe thought it convenient for the Good of "her Subjects:" Adding, "That we might have enjoy'd that Bleſſing, ſoon after "the Battel of Ramellies, if the ſame had not been put off by ſome Perſons, whoſe "Intereſt it was to prolong the War." The Duke of Marlborough, who could not but perceive that this Suggeſtion was levell'd againſt him, made thereupon a long, moving Speech; wherein, among other Things, he ſaid, "He thought him- "ſelf happy, in having an Opportunity given him of vindicating himſelf on ſo "material a Point, which his Enemies had ſo loudly and ſo unjuſtly laid to his "Charge, before a Perſon, [meaning the Queen, and making a Bow towards the Place where Her Majeſty was] "who knowing the Integrity of his Heart, and the Up- "rightneſs of his Conduct, would not fail doing him Juſtice. That he could declare, with a ſafe "Conſcience, in the Preſence of Her Majeſty, of that Illuſtrious Aſſembly, and of "that Supreme Being, who is infinitely above all the Powers on Earth; and before "whom, according to the ordinary Courſe of Nature, he muſt ſoon appear, to give "an Account of his Actions; that he ever was deſirous of a ſafe, honourable, and "laſting Peace; and that he was always very far from any Deſign of prolong- "ing the War for his own private Advantage, as his Enemies had moſt falſly inſi- "nuated. That his advanc'd Age, and the many Fatigues he had undergone, "made him ardently wiſh for Retirement and Repoſe, to think of Eternity the "Remainder of his Days: The rather, becauſe he had not the leaſt Motive, to de- "ſire the Continuance of the War; having been ſo generouſly rewarded, and had "Honours and Riches heap'd upon him, far beyond his Deſert and Expectation, "both by Her Majeſty, and her Parliaments. That he thought himſelf bound to "this publick Acknowledgment to Her Majeſty, and his Country, that he ſhould "always be ready to ſerve them, if he could but crawl along, to obtain an honou- "rable and laſting Peace: But that, at the ſame Time, he muſt take the Liberty "to declare, that he could, by no means, give into the Meaſures that had lately "been taken to enter into a Negotiation of Peace with France, upon the Foot of "the Seven Preliminary Articles; For he was of the ſame Opinion with the reſt of "the Allies, viz. That the Safety and Liberties of Europe would be in imminent "Danger, if Spain and the Weſt-Indies were left to the Houſe of Bourbon; which, "with all Humilty, and as he thought himſelf in Duty bound, he had declar'd to "Her Majeſty, when he had the Honour to wait on her, after his Return from Hol- "land: And therefore he was for inſerting in the Addreſs, the Clauſe offer'd by the "Earl of Nottingham." This Speech, deliver'd with a moſt affectionate and hearty Concern, had the greater Weight, in that it was back'd by the eloquent Lord Cowper, late Lord Chancellor, the Biſhop of Sarum, the Lord Halifax, and ſome other Peers of the Moderate Party. On the other hand, the Lord North and Grey urg'd, "That 'tis the indiſputable Prerogative of the Crown, to make Peace or "War; and therefore, they ought to content themſelves with returning Thanks to "Her Majeſty, and leave it to her great Wiſdom, to make Peace, when ſhe ſhould "think it proper for the Good of her People." The Earl of Powlet, and ſome other Courtiers, declar'd themſelves to be of the ſame Opinion; but it was obſerv'd, that the Dukes of Shrewſbury and Buckingham ſaid little or nothing in this memora- ble Debate; which having laſted till near Seven a Clock in the Evening, the pre- vious Queſtion was put, Whether the Queſtion for inſerting the Clauſe offer'd by the Earl of Nottingham, ſhould be put? This previous Queſtion being carry'd in the Affirmative, by the ſingle caſting Vote of that Earl; the main Queſtion was then put, and likewiſe carry'd in the Affirmative, by a Majority of Sixty one Voices, againſt Fifty five, to the great Mortification of the Court-Party. A Motion being made, for mentioning in the Addreſs, the further Security of the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of HANOVER; a Noble Peer ſaid, That what Her Ma- jeſty had been pleas'd to declare thereupon, in her Speech, was ſo ſatisfactory, that

" The beſt way to have this Treaty effectual, will be, to make early Proviſion " for the Campaign: Therefore, I muſt aſk of you, Gentlemen of the Houſe of Com- " mons, the neceſſary Supplies for the next Year's War; and I do moſt earneſtly re- " commend to you, to make ſuch Diſpatch therein, as may convince our Ene- " mies, that, if we cannot obtain a good Peace, we are prepar'd to carry on the " War with Vigor.

" Whatever you give, will be ſtill in your own Power to apply; and I doubt " not, but in a little Time after the opening of the Treaty, we ſhall be able to " judge of its Event.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" As I have had your cheerful Aſſiſtance for the carrying on this long and charge- " able War, ſo I aſſure my ſelf, that no true Proteſtant, or good Subject, will envy " Britain, or Me, the Glory and Satisfaction of ending the ſame, by a Juſt and " Honourable Peace, for Us, and all our Allies.

" Such a Peace will give new Life to our Foreign Trade; and I ſhall do my ut- " moſt, to improve that happy Opportunity to encourage our Home-Manufactures; " which will tend to the eaſing of my Subjects in that exceſſive Charge they now " lie under in maintaining the Poor, and to correct and redreſs ſuch Abuſes, as " may have crept into any Part of the Adminiſtration, during ſo long a War.

" I cannot conclude, without earneſtly recommending to you all, Unanimity; " and that you will carefully avoid every Thing, which may give Occaſion to the " Enemy to think Us a People divided amongſt our ſelves, and, conſequently, pre- " vent our obtaining that Good Peace, of which We have ſuch reaſonable Hopes, " and ſo near a View.

" I pray GOD direct your Conſultations to this End; that, being deliver'd from " the Hardſhips of War, you may become a Happy and a Flouriſhing Peo- " ple.

The Queen ſtays in the Houſe incognito.

As ſoon as the Queen had ended her Speech, ſhe went into an adjacent Room; and having pull'd off her Royal Robes, came back, incognito, to the Houſe of Peers, both to hear the Debates, and, by her Preſence, to moderate any Heats that might ariſe: Which, however, was by ſome obſerv'd to be unuſual, on the Day the Sovereign opens a Seſſion of Parliament. Be that as it will, the Earl of Ferrers having made a Motion, for returning Her Majeſty the Thanks of the Houſe, for her moſt gracious Speech; he was ſeconded by the Earl of Abingdon, and ſe- veral other Lords: Hereupon, the Earl of Nottingham made a long and elaborate Speech, wherein he ſet forth " the Inſufficiency and Captiouſneſs of the late Pre- " liminaries; made a lively Repreſentation of the Danger of Treating upon ſo pre- " carious a Foundation; urg'd the expreſs Engagements, Great Britain had en- " ter'd into with the High Allies, to reſtore the intire Monarchy of Spain to the " Houſe of Auſtria; and the Neceſſity of carrying on the War with Vigor, till " thoſe Engagements were made good:" Adding, " That tho' he had a numerous " Family, he would readily contribute Half his Income towards it, rather than ac- " quieſce in a Peace which he thought unſafe and diſhonourable, to his Country, " and all Europe:" And concluded, with " offering a Clauſe, to be inſerted in " the Addreſs of Thanks, to repreſent to Her Majeſty, as the humble Opinion and " Advice of the Houſe, That no Peace could be ſafe or honourable, to Great Britain, " or Europe, if Spain, and the Weſt-Indies, were to be allotted to any Branch of the " Houſe of Bourbon." The Lord Guernſey, Brother to the Earl of Nottingham, ſaid thereupon, " That ſuch a Clauſe was foreign to an Addreſs of Thanks: " That, in all Probability, few of the Members of the Houſe were prepar'd to " ſpeak to it; but that it might be debated at a more convenient Time, when, ac- " cording to Cuſtom, the Houſe ſhould take into Conſideration the State of the " Nation." He was ſeconded by the Lord North and Grey, and another Peer of the ſame ſide: And the Lord Treaſurer added, That, according to the Rules and Orders of the Houſe, this was not the proper Time to debate ſuch a Motion. Here- upon, the Earl of Wharton appeal'd to that Illuſtrious Aſſembly, whether there were any ſuch Order? And the Duke of Buckingham, the moſt vers'd in the Knowledge of Parliamentary Proceedings, having over-rul'd the Treaſurer's Objection; the Earl of Wharton went on; ſpoke with notable Vehemence againſt the Preliminary Articles offer'd by France; and inſiſted on the Neceſſity of inſerting in the Addreſs the Clauſe offer'd by the Earl of Nottingham. He was back'd by the Earl of Sun- derland, who ſmartly anſwer'd the Objection rais'd by ſome Peers of the oppoſite ſide, viz. That they were not prepar'd to ſpeak to that Motion. What, My Lords, ſaid he, *Is it poſſible that any Member of this Illuſtrious Houſe, ſhould be unprepar'd to debate an Affair, which, for theſe Ten Years paſt, has been the principal Subject-Mat- ter of our Conſultations? that nothing could be added to it; and that he did not doubt, but the illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover entirely relied on the Affections of the Lords. It was by many expected, that the Court-Party would, the next * Day, have the Majority, by means of the Proxies, which Eight Scotch Peers had ſent to the Duke of Hamilton and the Earl of Mar, and, that by that means, the Clauſe before-mention'd would be left out: But the Committee appointed to draw up the Addreſs, having reported the ſame; and a Motion being made, and the Queſtion being put, "That the Conſi- "deration of the ſaid Clauſe be put off till the abſent Peers were come up, it was "carried in the Negative, by a Majority of Twenty two Voices." Three Days after, the Houſe of Lords waited on the Queen with their Addreſs, which was to this Effect.

Tueſday December 11. The Lords Addreſs to the Queen.

"WE your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and "Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, do, with Hearts full of Gratitude and "Loyalty to your ſacred Majeſty, beg Leave to return your Majeſty our moſt hum- "ble and hearty Thanks and Acknowledgments for your Majeſty's moſt tender and "affectionate Concern for all your People, expreſſed in your Majeſty's moſt gra- "cious Speech from the Throne; and for imparting to us your Majeſty's Deſires of "ending this preſent War, by a Peace advantageous to your Subjects, and juſt and "honourable for your Majeſty, and all your Allies: As alſo for your Majeſty's ex- "preſſing ſo particular a Regard for the Intereſt of the States General, as inſeparable "from your own; and that your Majeſty is graciouſly pleaſed to aſſure us, it is your "chief Concern, that the Proteſtant Religion, and the Laws and Liberties of theſe "Nations, may be continued to your People, by ſecuring the Succeſſion to the "Crown, as it is limited by Parliament to the Houſe of Hanover; and that your "Majeſty is pleaſed to ſhew ſo juſt a Reſolution to procure a Satisfaction for all the "Allies, being by Treaties entitled to have their ſeveral Intereſts ſecured at a Peace, "and to unite with them in the ſtricteſt Engagements, in order to render the Peace "ſecure and laſting. And we do beg Leave to repreſent it to your Majeſty, as the "humble Opinion and Advice of this Houſe, that no Peace can be ſafe or honou- "rable to Great Britain or Europe, if Spain and the Weſt-Indies are to be allotted to "any Branch of the Houſe of Bourbon.

Her Majeſty's Anſwer was to this Effect:

My LORDS,

The Queen's Anſwer.

I Take the Thanks you give me kindly, I ſhould be very ſorry any one could think I would not do my utmoſt to recover Spain and the Weſt-Indies from the Houſe of Bourbon.

How agreeable either the Addreſs was to the Court, or the Anſwer to the Majority of the Peers, is not difficult to gueſs: But waving that Matter, we muſt take No- tice, that the ſame Day the Addreſs was preſented ſeveral Court-Lords enter'd their Proteſts againſt it: "1. Becauſe the Nature of it was alter'd, there being no Prece- "dent for inſerting a Clauſe of Advice in an Addreſs of Thanks. 2. Becauſe they "look'd upon it as an Invaſion of the Royal Prerogative, in ſo ſudden a manner to "declare their Opinion in a Matter of ſuch Importance to the Crown, as the making "of Peace and War." As for the Commons, they were more complaiſant than the Lords; for a Clauſe being offer'd to be inſerted in their Addreſs of Thanks, import- ing, "That the Houſe did not doubt, but Care would be taken that Spain and the "Weſt-Indies ſhould not be left in the Hands of any Branch of the Houſe of Bourbon; "which might endanger the Safety of her Majeſty's Perſon and Government; the "Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover; and the Liberties of Europe." After a long Debate, the ſaid Clauſe was rejected, by a Majority of 232 Voices againſt 106; and ſo the Commons, in their Addreſs, not only expreſs'd their Satiſ- faction in what her Majeſty had been pleaſed to declare of the juſt and honourable Peace her Majeſty had in view; but, at the ſame time, aſſured her, that they would uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to diſappoint, as well the Arts and Deſigns of thoſe who, for private Views, might delight in War, as the Hopes the Enemies might have vainly entertain'd of receiving Advantage from any Diviſion among them. The Queen was highly pleaſed with, and returned moſt hearty Thanks for this Addreſs, to the Commons, the Majority of whom being modell'd to the Will and Dictates of the preſent Managers, they were forward not only in granting and providing Supplies, but likewiſe in making ill- natur'd Inquiries, and preparing Matters both to lay a further Odium on the late Miniſtry, and to find fault with the Allies, particularly the Houſe of Auſtria and the Dutch. On the 17th of December, the Act for a Land-Tax of Four Shillings in the Pound, was brought into the Houſe; and had ſo quick a Paſſage, that it received the Royal Aſſent a few Days after.

A. D. 1711.

While things paſs'd ſmoothly in the Houſe of Commons, the Proceedings of the Houſe of Peers made a great Noiſe, and kept the contending Parties at a Bay. The Duke of Hamilton, one of the Sixteen Peers for Scotland, having, as was hinted before, been created Peer of Great Britain, by the Stile and Title of Duke of Brandon, notwithſtanding a Caveat enter'd againſt his Patent; and now claiming a Place in that Quality in the Houſe of Peers, many Lords, who apprehended no ſmall Danger to the Conſtitution, from the admitting into their Houſe a greater Number of Scotch Peers, than were agreed to by the Act of Union, (upon a due Conſideration of the Proportion of Publick Taxes paid by Scotland) reſolved to oppoſe the ſaid Claim. On Monday, December 10. that Matter was taken into Conſideration; and after a few Speeches, the Debate was adjourn'd to the Wedneſday † following; when ſome of the Court-Lords, being ſenſible that the diſcuſſing of this nice Affair, would ſtrike at the Royal Prerogative, made a Motion for adjourning; but it was carried by a Majority of Three Voices, that they ſhould go on with the reſumed Debate: However, after ſome time ſpent therein, the further Conſideration of that Buſineſs was put off till the 20th. In the mean time, an Affair of no leſs Importance was brought before the Houſe of Peers: The Occaſional-Conformity Bill having, as was mention'd before, miſcarried Three times, lay dormant for near Seven Years, till it was revived upon this Occaſion. A Noble Peer, who had all along ſtickled for it, and who never could be eaſy in or out of Place; being diſguſted, both becauſe he was left out upon the Change of the Miniſtry, in 1710, and becauſe he lately ſuffer'd a Repulſe, about the Privy-Seal; this Lord, I ſay, made it one of the Conditions upon which he enter'd into ſtrict Engagements with the Whig-Party, that they ſhould concur with him in bringing in, and carrying thro' his Darling Bill, tho' under another Title, and with ſuch Clauſes, as, he pretended, would enlarge the Toleration, and be a further Security to the Proteſtant Succeſſion. With this laſt Bait, many of the Whig-Lords were unwarily drawn in; and accordingly, on Saturday the 15th of December 1711, the Earl of Nottingham having brought into the Houſe of Peers, a Bill for preſerving the Proteſtant Religion, by better ſecuring the Church of England, as by Law eſtabliſh'd; and for confirming the Toleration granted to Proteſtant Diſſenters, by an Act intituled, An Act for Exempting their Majeſties Proteſtant Subjects diſſenting from the Church of England, from the Penalties of certain Laws, and for ſupplying the Defects thereof; and for the further ſecuring the Proteſtant Succeſſion, by requiring the Practiſers of the Law in North-Britain, to take the Oaths, and ſubſcribe the Declaration therein mention'd: His Lordſhip was back'd by the Earl of Scarborough, the Earl of Wharton, and ſeveral other Lords; ſo that the Bill was receiv'd and read the Firſt Time, without any Oppoſition. The Monday following *, after the Second Reading of the Bill, the Lords took the ſame into Conſideration, in a Grand Committee; and having made ſome Amendments to it, order'd it to be ingroſs'd. The next ‖ Day, the Bill having paſs'd the Houſe of Lords, was ſent down to the Commons, who read it immediately the Firſt Time, and gave it a Second Reading the next ∴ Day. On the Thurſday, (December 20.) a Petition was offer'd to the Houſe in behalf of the Dutch and French Proteſtant Churches, praying that they might be excepted from the Reſtraints laid by this Bill on Engliſh Diſſenting Congregations; but the Queſtion being put, That the Petition be brought up, it paſs'd in the Negative: After which the Commons, in a Committee of the whole Houſe, (which that Morning was very thin) made ſeveral Amendments to the Bill. Theſe Amendments being immediately reported and agreed to, the Bill was thereupon ſent back to the Houſe of Peers; who, the ſame Day, ſent down a Meſſage to the Houſe of Commons, to acquaint them, that they had agreed to thoſe Amendments. The Diſſenters being juſtly alarm'd at this Bill, did, the ſame Morning, make Application to the Earl of Oxford, Lord High Treaſurer, humbly beſeeching his Lordſhip to uſe his powerful Intereſt to prevent the paſſing of it: But tho' his Lordſhip, with moſt of his Family, had, for the greateſt Part of his Life, joined in Communion with the Freſbyterians; yet, on this Occaſion, he thought fit to ſacrifice his religious Principles to his political Views; and ſo the Diſſenters were left in the Lurch. The ſame Day, †† the Lords reſumed the adjourn'd Debate about the Duke of Hamilton's Claim to ſit amongſt them, as Duke of Brandon, the Queen being incognito in the Houſe. After Learned Council in the Law for the Queen, the Houſe of Lords, and the Duke of Hamilton, had been heard, ſeveral Speeches were made on both Sides; ſo that the Debate laſted till near Eight of the Clock in the Evening, when the Queſtion was put, Whether the Twelve Judges ſhould be conſulted with? Which being carried in the Negative by Fourteen Voices, Proxies included, another Queſtion was put, Whether Scotch Peers, created Peers of Great Britain ſince the Union, have a Right to ſit in that Houſe? Which was alſo carried in the Negative, by Five Voices.

Debate about the Duke of Hamilton's Patent.

Judgment given againſt him.

A. D. 1711.

Before this Time, all Hopes of bringing the Duke of Marlborough into the Court Meaſures, being loſt, the Reſolution was taken to lay him aſide; and that his Diſgrace might be attended with the leſs Clamour, all Methods, that Malice and Envy can ſuggeſt, were uſed, to make him appear Criminal. The Commons having, on the 15th of December, order'd that the Commiſſioners for the Publick Accompts, ſhould lay before the Houſe, an Account of their Proceedings in the Execution of that Commiſſion, Mr. Lockhart, from the ſaid Commiſſioners, did, on the 21ſt, make a Report of ſome Practices which they had diſcover'd in their Examinations, relating to the Affairs of the Army, which he read in his Place, and afterwards deliver'd in at the Table, where the ſame was read. After this it was order'd, Firſt, That the ſaid Report be taken into Conſideration upon Thurſday, the 17th of January: And Secondly, That the Commiſſioners of Accompts ſhould lay before the Houſe, the Depoſitions mention'd in the ſaid Report. Purſuant to this laſt Order, Mr. Shippen, from the ſaid Commiſſioners, did, the next Day, preſent to the Houſe, Firſt, "The Depoſition of Sir Solomon de Medina, Knight, proving great Sums of "Money taken by his Grace, John Duke of Marlborough, Adam Cardonnel, Eſq; his "Grace's Secretary, and others, on Account of the Contracts for ſupplying Bread "and Bread-Waggons to her Majeſty's Forces in the Low-Countries. Secondly, Cap-"tain William Preſton's Depoſition about Forage in North-Britain. And thoſe Depoſitions being read, it was order'd, "That the Clerk ſhould carefully keep the "ſame, and not let any Perſon have them out of his Cuſtody: And that he ſhould "deliver Copies thereof, as alſo of the Report of the Commiſſioners, to any of the "Members of the Houſe that deſired the ſame." A Motion being afterwards made, for Leave to bring in a Bill, to repeal the Act of the Seventh Year of her Majeſty's Reign, for the Naturalizing of Foreign Proteſtants; the ſaid Act was read, after which Leave was given to bring in a Bill to repeal it; and Mr. Finch, Mr. Campion, and Mr. Manley, were order'd to prepare and bring in the ſame. The Queen being, at this Time, indiſpoſed, her Majeſty granted a Commiſſion under the Great-Seal, impowering the Lord Keeper, the Lord Preſident of the Council, and other Lords, to give the Royal Aſſent to the Two Bills agreed to by both Houſes of Parliament, viz. the Land-Tax-Bill, and the Act for preſerving the Proteſtant Religion: Which their Lordſhips did accordingly, on the 22d of December. The Commons being return'd to their Houſe, immediately adjourn'd to the 14th of January next; and it being expected that the Houſe of Peers would do the ſame, the Lord Treaſurer, and ſome other Peers, went out of the Houſe; but the Majority of thoſe that ſtaid, reſolv'd to preſent an Addreſs to the Queen, importing, in Subſtance, "That her Majeſty would be pleaſed to give Inſtructions to her Plenipotentiaries, "(in caſe ſhe had not already given ſuch Orders) to conſult with the Miniſters of "the Allies in Holland, before the opening of the Congreſs, that they might con-"cert the neceſſary Meaſures to preſerve a ſtrict Union amongſt them all, the bet-"ter to obtain the great End propoſed by her Majeſty, for procuring to them all "juſt and reaſonable Satisfaction, and for rendring the Peace more ſecure and laſt-"ing, which could only be effected by a geneal Guaranty of the Terms of the "Peace to all the Allies, and of the Proteſtant Succeſſion to theſe Kingdoms, as "ſettled by Act of Parliament. Their Lordſhips having order'd the Lords with the White-Staves to preſent this Addreſs, adjourned no longer than to the 2d of January next, which, as well as the Addreſs, was no ſmall Surprize to the Queen, and her Miniſters.

Dec. 22. Depoſitions againſt the Duke of Marlborough.

A Bill order'd to be brought in, to repeal the Naturalization Act.

Acts paſs'd by Commiſſion, Dec. 22.

The Lords agree upon an Addreſs about the Negotiation of Peace, and the Guaranty of the Treaty.

A Letter which the Duke of Marlborough wrote on the 10th of November, 1711, N. S. from the Hague, to the Commiſſioners of the publick Accompts, in Vindication of himſelf, having, either by his Grace's Order or Connivance, been publiſh'd on the 27th of December, in a News-Paper, call'd the Daily-Courant, and being favourably receiv'd by the unbyaſs'd and unprejudic'd, ſo that many began to cenſure the Houſe of Commons for their late and intended Proceedings againſt his Grace, the Report of the ſaid Commiſſioners was, by way of Anſwer, printed at large Two Days after. Beſides this Piece, which carried the Face of Authenticknes and Authority, ſeveral other Pamphlets and Libels were, at this Time, publiſh'd by the Duke of Marlborough's inveterate Enemies, in order, if poſſible, to caſt a Blemiſh on his ever living Fame; to depreciate his great Services; and to render him obnoxious both to Queen and People: But though they fail'd of Succeſs with the Generality of the Nation, who uſually judge of a Man's Merit by his publick Actions, without regarding his Perſonal Defects; yet it was ſoon known, that his Grace was entirely out of Favour at Court. For on Sunday, the 30th of December, the Queen being in Council, it was declar'd and enter'd in the Books, "That her "Majeſty being inform'd, that an Information againſt the Duke of Marlborough, "was laid before the Houſe of Commons, by the Commiſſioners of the publick Ac-"compts,

The next Day *, her Majeſty was pleas'd to notify to the Duke, by a Note written with her own Hand, her Royal Intention to reſume all the Employments ſhe had entruſted him with; which his Grace received with Heroical Reſignation; and wrote a dutiful Anſwer to her Majeſty, which he ſent by the Counteſs of Sunderland, one of his Grace's Daughters.

Reſolution of removing the Duke of Somerſet, put off.

The Duke of Somerſet was now the only Perſon at Court, who oppoſed the Miniſters; and therefore, in a Conſultation held about the middle of December, it was reſolved to remove him from his Place of Maſter of the Horſe: But the Queen having a ſingular Affection and Eſteem for his Dutcheſs, a Lady of great Virtue, Groom of the Stole to her Majeſty, and firſt Lady of the Bed-Chamber, whoſe Conjugal Love, 'twas thought, would not ſuffer her to remain at Court, if her Conſort were in Diſgrace, the Reſolution of removing him, lay dormant for a while. To this Purpoſe, we muſt take Notice of a very remarkable Paſſage in a LETTER publiſh'd about this Time, and generally conjectur'd to be written by the Lord Keeper Harcourt, by way of ADVICE offer'd to the Members of the OCTOBER-CLUB (a). This Society was form'd about the beginning of this Parliament, and was, mainly, compoſed of Country-Gentlemen, to the Number of about One Hundred and Sixty, who, during the firſt Seſſion, had gone chearfully, moſt of them blindfold, into all the Meaſures of the preſent Miniſters: But many of them being like to fly off, ſome, becauſe they found themſelves deluded with vain Promiſes of Preferment; others, becauſe they look'd upon the Prime Manager to be an ambidextrous Trickſter, who play'd Faſt and Looſe with both Parties, it was thought proper, in order to cement an Union amongſt ſo powerful and ſo uſeful a Body of Men, to give them a ſeaſonable Piece of Advice. The moſt material Part of it was to this Effect:

Account of the October Club.

Remarkable Advice to the October Club.

" Upon the opening of this Seſſion, an Incident has happen'd, to provide againſt " the Conſequences whereof, will require your utmoſt Vigilance and Application. " All this laſt Summer, the Enemy was working Under-Ground, and laying their " Train: They gradually became more frequent and bold in their Pamphlets and " Papers, while thoſe on our Side were dropp'd, as if we had no farther occaſion for " them. Some Time before, an Opportunity fell into their Hands, which they " have cultivated ever ſince; and thereby have endeavoured, in ſome Sort, to turn " thoſe Arts againſt us, which had been ſo effectually employ'd to their Ruin: " A plain Demonſtration of their ſuperior Skill at Intrigue; to make a Stratagem " ſucceed a Second Time, and this even againſt thoſe who firſt try'd it upon them. " I know not whether this Opportunity I have mention'd, could have been pre- " vented by any Care, without ſtraining a very tender Point, which thoſe chiefly " concern'd, avoided by all Means, becauſe it might ſeem a Counterpart of what " they had ſo much condemn'd in their Fredeceſſors: Though it is certain the " Two Caſes were widely different; and if Policy had got the better of good Na- " ture, all had been ſafe, for there was no other Danger in View: But the Conſe- " quences of this were foreſeen from the beginning, and thoſe who kept the Watch, " had early Warning of it. It would have been a Maſter-Piece of Prudence, in " this Caſe, to have made a Friend of an Enemy: But whether it were ever at- " tempted, is now too late to enquire. All Accommodation was render'd deſperate " by an unlucky Proceeding ſome Months ago at Windſor, which was a Declara- " tion of War too frank and generous, for that Situation of Affairs, and, I am told, " was not approved by a certain great Miniſter †. It was obvious to ſuppoſe, that " in a Particular, where the Honour and Intereſt of a ‖ Huſband were ſo cloſely " united with thoſe of a Wife, he might be ſure of her utmoſt Endeavours for his " Protection, though ſhe never lov'd nor eſteem'd him. The Danger of loſing " Power, Favour, Profit, and a Shelter from Domeſtick Tyranny, were ſtrong In- " citements to ſtir up a working Brain, early practis'd in all the Arts of Intriguing. " Neither is it ſafe to count upon the Weakneſs of any Man's Underſtanding, who " is thoroughly poſſeſs'd with the Spirit of Revenge, to ſharpen his Invention: " Nothing elſe is required, beſides Obſequiouſneſs and Aſſiduity, which, as they are " often the Talents of thoſe who have no better, ſo they are apt to make Impreſ-

In the mean Time, the Two late Addreſſes of the Lords about the Peace, and the Apprehenſion, that, at their next Meeting, their Lordſhips deſign'd to come to more vigorous Reſolutions againſt the preſent Adminiſtration, very much alarm'd the Court. Hereupon the † Prime Manager bethought himſelf of a Reſource; which was, to over-power the Whig Lords, by throwing into that Houſe a whole Dozen of Gentlemen, blindly devoted to the Court: Which bold and deſperate Counſel, (whether it met with any, or no Oppoſition in Council) was accordingly put in Execution on Monday Morning, the laſt Day of December, by calling by Writ to the Houſe of Lords, James Lord Compton, Eldeſt Son to the Earl of Northampton, and Charles Lord Bruce, Eldeſt Son to the Earl of Ayleſbury; and by creating Ten New Peers of Great Britain, viz. George Hay, Eſq; (or Lord Duplin in Scotland, the Lord Treaſurer's Son-in-Law) Baron Hay of Bedwarden, in the County of Hereford; the Lord Viſcount Windſor of Ireland, Baron Montjoy of the Iſle of Wight, in the County of Southampton; Henry Paget, Eſq; Son to the Lord Paget, Baron Burton of Burton, in the County of Stafford; Sir Thomas Manſel, Baronet, Baron Manſel of Morgan, in the County of Glamorgan; Sir Thomas Willoughby, Baron Middleton of Middleton, in the County of Warwick; Sir Thomas Trevor, Baron Trevor of Bromham, in the County of Bedford; George Granville, Eſq; Baron Lanſdowne of Biddiford, in the County of Devon; Samuel Maſham, Eſq; Baron Maſham of Oates, in the County of Eſſex; Thomas Foley, Eſq; Baron Foley of Kidderminſter, in the County of Worceſter; and Allen Bathurſt, Eſq; Baron Bathurſt of Battleſden, in the County of Bedford. It had likewiſe been reſolv'd, to advance to the Peerage of Great Britain, Sir Miles Warton, a very wealthy Gentleman; but, it ſeems, he declin'd the Offer of a Dignity, which was now ſo profuſely beſtow'd.

Some Days before, Edward Earl of Clarendon, Archibald Earl of Ilay, William Lord North and Grey, George Earl of Northampton, Thomas Earl of Thanet, and Heneage Finch, Lord Guernſey, were ſworn Lords of the Privy-Council: And, the ſame Day, Henry Duke of Kent, being Lord Lieutenant of the County of Bedford, Bazil Earl of Denbigh, Lord Lieutenant of the County of Leiceſter, and Nicholas Earl of Scarſdale, Lord Lieutenant of the County of Derby, took the Oaths appointed to be taken inſtead of the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy: As did, on the 19th of December, the Lord North and Grey, as Lord Lieutenant of the County of Cambridge. The ſame Day, in order to amuſe the Multitude, a Proclamation was order'd to be publiſh'd, for a General Faſt, to be obſerved throughout England on the 16th of January next, for imploring God's Bleſſing on the intended Treaty, that thereby might be produc'd an Honourable, Secure, and Laſting Peace; and his Aſſiſtance on the Arms of Her Majeſty and her Allies, and her and their Forces both by Sea and Land, till their Enemies ſhould ſubmit to ſuch a Peace. At the ſame Time, another Proclamation was order'd to be publiſh'd, for a General Faſt, to be obſerv'd, for the ſame Purpoſe, in that Part of Great Britain call'd Scotland, on the 25th of January next. The Biſhop of Briſtol, Lord Privy-Seal, Her Majeſty's Firſt Plenipotentiary at the Congreſs of Utrecht, having, after ſome unavoidable Delays, (occaſion'd by the Difficulties ſtarted about the Paſſports, granted by the States-General to the French Miniſters) receiv'd his laſt Inſtructions, and Orders forthwith to repair to Holland; Her Majeſty was pleas'd to deliver the Privy-Seal to Sir George Beaumont, Baronet, Robert Byerley, and Edward Nicholas, Eſquires, as Commiſſioners for executing the Office of Lord Keeper of the Privy-Seal, during that Prelate's Abſence; and, on Sunday the 23d of December, they took the uſual Oaths in Council. The Duke of Marlborough's Diſgrace, and the Creation of a Dozen Peers, open'd the New Year with a large Scene of Speculation. His Grace had, indeed, been ſo impudently aſpers'd and vilify'd in printed Libels, countenanc'd by thoſe in Power, that his Removal muſt certainly have been reſolv'd upon, many Months before; but yet the ſame was now ſo unexpected, that it occaſion'd near as great Surprize, as if it had been altogether unforeſeen: It was, as we hinted before, undoubtedly undoubtedly owing to the Duke's entring very deep into the late Counſels, to obſtruct the Court's pacifick Meaſures; but, on the other hand, it was by many conjectur'd, that his Fall was accelerated, by the Emperor's fix'd Reſolution to ſend over Prince Eugene of Savoy, for the ſame Purpoſe: Upon a Jealouſy, that if the Duke continued in his Employments, the Prince's Negotiation might receive no ſmall Weight from his Grace's Support, if not at Court, at leaſt, in Parliament.

It had been whiſper'd about, that, in a Conſultation held between the leading Whig Lords, it was propoſed, either not to admit into the Houſe the Twelve New Peers, or to proteſt againſt their being made, during the Sitting of Parliament, merely to ſerve a Turn. But neither of theſe Counſels was purſued: For, the Lords being met on the 2d of January, according to their laſt Adjournment, the Twelve Occaſional Peers (as they were then call'd) were introduc'd, and admitted; and the Court-Party having, both by this Reinforcement, and by the coming up of the Scotch Lords, got the Majority, the Houſe acquieſced in the Queen's ſullen Anſwer to their late Addreſs, importing, That Her Majeſty thought her Speech to both Houſes would have given Satisfaction to every body; And that She had given Inſtructions to her Plenipotentiaries, according to the Deſires of that Addreſs. This done, the Lord Keeper deliver'd to the Houſe a Meſſage from the Queen; "That having Matters of great Importance to communicate to both Houſes of Par- "liament, She deſir'd the Houſe of Lords to adjourn immediately to the 14th, "the ſame Day to which the Commons had adjourn'd themſelves." This occaſion'd a very warm Debate, upon the Queſtion, Adjourn, or No? Which was carry'd in the Affirmative, by a Majority of Eighty One Votes, againſt Sixty Eight. It is to be obſerved, that the Meſſage for adjourning, was ſent only to try the Strength of both Parties; Mr. Secretary St. John having been heard to ſay, in the Court of Requeſts, as ſoon as the Debate was over, That if thoſe Twelve had not been enough, they would have given them (meaning the Whigs) another Dozen. However, very bold Reflections were made, both in Print, and in moſt Converſations, on that political Step; many not ſcrupling to ſay, "That tho' the QUEEN had "an undoubted Right to create as many Peers as She pleaſed; yet Her Miniſters "might be call'd to Account, for adviſing Her to abuſe that Right. That Peace "and War were alſo the Prerogatives of the Crown; and yet the engaging in a "ruinous War, or making a treacherous Peace, are Things no Miniſters ever did, "and eſcap'd uncenſur'd, or unpuniſh'd. That the creating Twelve Peers, to ſerve "a Turn, was, in Effect, making a Houſe of Peers a Property to the Court, and "taking away a Negative upon the Crown; which would render our Liberties pre- "carious. That it could not be deny'd, that the new-made Peers were Men of "Noble Fortunes, and that ſome of them had ſhew'd a commendable Zeal for the "preſent Eſtabliſhment; but who would ſecure us, that hereafter, ſuch a Number "ſhould not be made, of Men of a quite different Character? And, in ſhort, that "this was a Precedent, which might be made uſe of to inſlave the Nation, and "to introduce a Popiſh Pretender, or Religion. That if in the Reign of ſuch a "QUEEN, this Abuſe of the Prerogative was ſo much exclaim'd againſt; how "much greater would the Cry have been, had it been done in a ſuſpicious Reign? "Whereas, now, they have an unexceptionable Inſtance to produce, to ſilence any "Clamour or Noiſe. That it was impoſſible for Men, that owed ſo much to Her Ma- "jeſty, for her Share in the late Revolution, to oppoſe a Prerogative, that had ne- "ver been diſputed, becauſe never uſed in that manner: But had any Prince, that "had merited leſs of his Country, began ſuch a Thing, it would, no doubt, have "been oppoſed, and, perhaps, deny'd him." But, after all, the ſevereſt Reflection againſt the Twelve New Peers, was made by the Earl of Wharton; who, the ſame Day they were introduc'd, when the Queſtion about Adjourning was going to be put, very ſhrewdly aſk'd one of them, Whether they voted by their Foreman? Thereby comparing them to a Petty Jury.

It was then ſtrongly reported, that Mr. Thomas Harley, Couſin to the Lord High-Treaſurer, and Coadjutor to the Secretary of the Treaſury, who was named to go to Hanover, was to offer the abſolute Command of her Majeſty's Forces in the Low Countries to that Elector; but the Earl of Strafford, who was employ'd to know his Electoral Highneſs's Sentiments thereupon, having found him entirely averſe to accept that Command, at ſuch a Juncture, when a Peace was reſolv'd upon; the Queen thought fit to appoint the Duke of Ormond Captain-General of all her Forces, at home and abroad. Nine new Writs order'd by the Commons, in the room of the Nine new Peers.

Bill to repeal the Naturalization Act.

The Court having received no News of the Opening of the Congreſs, Councils were held on Saturday and Sunday, the 12th and 13th of January, in which it was debated, Whether the Parliament ſhould ſit, or be deſired further to adjourn themſelves? And it being carried for the latter, a Meſſage, was on the 14th, ſent to both Houſes, importing, That her Majeſty fully determin'd to have been perſonally preſent in Parliament that Day; but being prevented by a ſudden Return of the Gout, her Majeſty, in hopes ſhe might, by the Bleſſing of GOD, be able to ſpeak to both her Houſes of Parliament, on Thurſday next, the 17*th of this Inſtant* January, deſired them to adjourn to that Day. Both Houſes readily complied with this Meſſage; but before the ſame was, by Mr. Secretary St. John, deliver'd to the Commons, they order'd their Speaker to iſſue out his Warrants for new Writs, for the electing as many Members call'd up to the Houſe of Peers, *viz. The Captain was a Man of Senſe, and underſtood Engliſh; but tho' this Letter rather implied a tacit Prohibition, than a poſitive Order, yet being thereby left at Liberty to uſe his own Diſcretion, he thought it his Duty, as he could not but eſteem it an Honour, to carry over ſo great a Hero, as Prince Eugene, who, on the 8th of January, N. set ſail again; and on Tueſday the 1ſt of January, O. S. arrived off of Harwich, where being inform'd that he could not eaſily get all the neceſſary Carriages for his Attendants, he was perſuaded to go up the River of Thames by the Tides. On the Wedneſday, * his Highneſs receiv'd, on Board his Yatcht near the Buoy of Nore, an Account of the Duke of Marlborough's being remov'd from all his Employments, at which his Highneſs was extreamly concern'd; and the next † Morning early, his Highneſs was in ſome Danger of being taken by a French Privateer; but the Man of War that convoy'd the Prince, coming up in Time, his Highneſs got ſafe into the River the next Day. Upon Advice that he was coming up by Water, the Government ſent down Mr. Drummond, a broken Merchant or Stockjobber, a Creature of the Lord Treaſurer, and Mr. Brinſden, an Oculiſt, private Agent to the Lord Bolingbroke, to attend, or rather to be Spies upon the Prince. Brinſden being detained at Greenwich, by an accidental Sprain in his Foot, Drummond only waited on his Highneſs with a Barge that carried his Highneſs from Graveſend to Whitehall; from whence he weent, in a Hackney Coach, to Leiceſter-Houſe, which Count Gallas, who, by this time, was gone over, had order'd to be fitted up for his Highneſs's Reception. Immediately, upon his Arrival, the Prince cauſed it to be notify'd to the Lord High-Treaſurer, the Secretaries of State, and the Foreign Miniſters; and ſome of theſe waited the ſame Evening upon his Highneſs; as did alſo the Duke of Marlborough, to whom the Prince ſhew'd the ſame Friendſhip and hearty Affection, as before his Diſgrace; which demonſtrated to the World, that the Ties by which great Souls and true Heroes are united, are not to be diſſolved by the Caprice of Fortune. To this purpoſe, we muſt take Notice, that the Prince was not over-pleaſed with the Caution Mr. Drummond preſumed to give him, either from himſelf, or from thoſe who ſent him; to wit, That the leſs he ſaw the Duke of Marlborough, the better—— To which the Prince anſwer'd, That as the Miniſtry might depend upon it, that he would not Cabal againſt them; ſo he hoped they did not expect, he ſhould forbear his uſual Familiarity with his good Friend the Duke of Marlborough.

The Duke of Marlborough and the Foreign Miniſters wait on his Highneſs.

His Anſwer to a Caution given him relating to the Duke of Marlborough.

On Sunday ‖ Morning, the Prince received a Compliment from the Lord High-Treaſurer, which his Highneſs return'd immediately by the Baron de Hohendorf. The ſame Morning, after a Viſit from Mr. Secretary St. John, Count Maffey, Monſieur Hoffman, and ſome other Foreign Miniſters, the Duke of Montague, the Earl of Hertford, the Generals Lumley, Webb, Palmes, Harvey, and ſeveral other Perſons of Diſtinction, waited upon his Highneſs; who, about One a-Clock, went to return the Duke of Marlborough's Viſit. The ſame Afternoon, his Highneſs ſent a Gentleman with a Compliment to the Dukes of Buckingham and Ormond, the Earl of Powlet, and ſome other Great Officers of State; and about Seven a-Clock in the Evening went to St. James's Houſe, where he was immediately introduced, by Mr. Secretary St. John, to a private Audience of her Majeſty, at which none were preſent but the Lord High-Treaſurer and Mr. Secretary. After a ſhort Compliment, which her Majeſty anſwer'd very graciouſly, his Highneſs deliver'd to her a Letter from the Emperor, which he deſired her Majeſty to peruſe, becauſe it contained the Subſtance of his Errand. After the reading of this Letter, the Queen was pleaſed to tell the Prince, She was ſorry the State of her Health did not permit her to ſpeak with his Highneſs, as often as otherwiſe ſhe ſhould be glad to do; but that ſhe had order'd thoſe Two Gentlemen (there preſent) to receive his Propoſals, and confer with his Highneſs, as frequently as he ſhould think proper: Whereupon the Prince took his Leave of the Queen. In the mean time, People were variouſly affected by his Highneſs coming to England at this critical Juncture. All the Whigs, and not a few of the Tories, who began to be jealous that a Peace would be concluded upon unſafe and diſhonourable Terms, were extreamly rejoyc'd at his Highneſs's Arrival; hoping, that by the fair Propoſals he was ſaid to bring from the Emperor, ſupported by his conſummate Wiſdom and Dexterity, he would go near, if not to break off the preſent Negotiation, at leaſt to engage Great Britain to make early Preparations to carry on the War with Vigor, as the moſt effectual Means to obtain a ſafe and honourable Peace. Upon this Conſideration, together with the great Fame of his Highneſs's Actions, vaſt multitudes of People crowded to ſee him; and with loud Acclamations, attended him wherever he went. On the other hand, the Friends of France, and of the Pretender, who were equally deſirous of a Peace, upon any Conditions, being apprehenſive that his Highneſs would blaſt their Expectations, could not forbear ſhewing their Diſcontent, and ſome rude Rabble committed ſome Diſorders in Leiceſter-Fields, the Second Night after his Arrival. A more notorious Inſtance of the Spleen and Malice of that Party, was ſeen on Tueſday Morning, in a ſcandalous News-Paper, wherein an Advertiſement was inſerted, moſt vilely reflecting on the Counteſs of Soiſſons, the Prince's Mother; which flagitious Affront his Highneſs overlook'd, with his uſual Magnanimity.

Moreover,

Moreover, by his ſteady Moderation, and diſcreet Carriage, his Highneſs convinc'd all, that he was not come over to meddle with inteſtine Diviſions; but rather to endeavour to bring the Leading-Men of both Parties to ſuch a Temper, as might conduce to remove any Difficulties that might obſtruct the carrying on the Common Cauſe. This wonderfully endear'd his Highneſs to every body; and beſpoke him more Civility and Reſpect, than was ever ſhewn in England to any Foreign Prince; inſomuch, that for Two whole Months, the Nobility and Gentry of both Parties, vied with one another, who ſhould beſt regale and entertain his Highneſs. The Perſons who diſtinguiſh'd themſelves by this generous Emulation, were the Dukes of Marlborough, Ormond, Buckingham, Montague, Schonbergh, Devonſhire, Shrewſbury, Richmond, and Grafton; the Earls of Powlet, Sunderland, Portland, Oxford, Rivers, Wharton, Berkley, Stair, and Orkney; the Lords Lexington, Aſhburnham, Halifax, and North and Grey; Sir Thomas Hanmer; the Honourable Mr. Henry Boyle, Mr. Secretary St. John; General Palmes; the Foreign Miniſters then in London; Dr. Garth, and Dr. Ratcliff, Two of the moſt eminent Phyſicians. It was then currently reported, That when the Prince dined with the Lord Treaſurer, the latter, among other Compliments, told his Highneſs, "That he look'd upon that "Day as the happieſt in the whole Courſe of his Life, ſince he had the Honour to "ſee in his Houſe, the greateſt Captain of this Age: To which the Prince wittily "reply'd, That, if he were, he was obliged to his Lordſhip for it: Shrewdly alluding to the Earl's being the Author of the Duke of Marlborough's Diſgrace; which rid his Highneſs of a Competitor in Military Glory. Beſides thoſe magnificent Entertainments, the Prince went frequently to the Duke of Ormond's Lodge at Richmond, to take the Diverſion of Shooting; and every body ſaw, with extream Satisfaction, the ſeeming growing Intimacy and Friendſhip between his Highneſs and his Grace, looking upon it as a happy Omen for the enſuing Campaign.

Witty Reply of the Prince to the Earl of Oxford.

On the 14th of January, Sir Alexander Cairnes, Baronet, and Sir Theodore Janſſen, Two of the moſt wealthy and eminent Merchants of the City of London, and who had contributed moſt to the Loan made ſome Years before to the Emperor, upon the Security of his Revenues in Sileſia, for the Uſe of the Prince of Savoy, waited upon his Highneſs with a Compliment from that Company. The Prince gave them a very kind Reception, and was pleaſed to tell them, "That he was very much "obliged to them, ſince the raiſing of the Siege of Turin, and the Succeſſes that "follow'd thereupon, were, under GOD, mainly owing to the ſeaſonable Supply of "Money he receiv'd from England:" Thoſe Gentlemen anſwer'd, "That when they "made that Loan, they had not ſo much in View the Improvement of their Mo-"ney, as the Honour of being ſerviceable to the Common Cauſe, and of having an "Opportunity to ſhew their Reſpect for a Prince of ſo great Reputation; and as "they accounted themſelves particularly oblig'd to his Highneſs's Integrity, for "the punctual Payment of their Intereſt and Principal, ſo, if in the Courſe of this "War, his Highneſs ſhould have Occaſion for any greater Sums, their Company "would readily advance them upon his Highneſs's ſingle Security." Concluding, with deſiring his Highneſs to accept of a ſmall Entertainment, which their Company deſign'd to give him in the City, and to fix a Day when it ſhould beſt ſuit with his Highneſs's Conveniency; which his Highneſs promiſed to do. The Lord-Mayor, and Court of Aldermen, having Notice of this Invitation, and deſigning likewiſe to ſhew their Reſpect to the Prince of Savoy, it was * propoſed amongſt them, that ſince moſt of their Court were concern'd in the Sileſian Company, they ought, for greater Magnificence ſake, to make but one united Treat. The Motion was liked, but an unlucky Doubt which was ſtarted, ſpoil'd all: For one of the Court having ſuggeſted, "That they would do well to know, how the Queen would take "ſuch an Invitation to Prince Eugene;" it was thereupon thought proper, to ſend Two of the Court of Aldermen (one of the Sheriffs being then indiſpoſed) to the Earl of Dartmouth, Principal Secretary of State; but there being, it ſeems, ſome want of Formality in the Meſſage, his Lordſhip wrote the following Letter to the Lord-Mayor.

Sir Alexander Cairnes, and Sir Theodore Janſſen, wait on the Prince.

DARTMOUTH.

Upon the Receipt of this Letter, the Court of Aldermen did not think fit to make any further Steps in that Matter, to the great Diſappoinment and Mortification of moſt of the Citizens. By this Time, the Parliament being met † again, a Meſſage from the Queen was deliver'd to both Houſes, importing, Firſt, " That " her Majeſty not having yet recover'd Strength enough, ſince the Return of the " Gout, to be preſent that Day in Perſon, and being unwilling that the Publick " Buſineſs ſhould receive any Delay, ſhe thought fit to communicate to this " Houſe, the Subſtance of what ſhe intended to have ſpoke. 2. That at the open- " ing of this Seſſion, her Majeſty acquainted her Parliament, That both Time " and Place were appointed, for the meeting of the Plenipotentiaries of all the " Confederates, to treat with thoſe of the Enemy concerning a General Peace; and " alſo expreſſed the Care which ſhe intended to take of all her Allies, and the " ſtrict Union in which ſhe propoſed to join with them, in order to obtain a good " Peace, and to guaranty and ſupport it, when obtain'd. 3. That her Majeſty " could now tell them, that her Plenipotentiaries were arrived at Utrecht, and had " begun, in Purſuance of their Inſtructions, to concert the moſt proper ways of " procuring a juſt Satisfaction to all in Alliance with her, according to their ſeveral " Treaties, and particularly with relation to Spain and the Weſt-Indies. 4. That " they might depend on her Majeſty's communicating to her Parliament the Terms " of Peace, before the ſame ſhould be concluded. 5. That the World would now " ſee, how groundleſs thoſe Reports were, which had been ſpread Abroad, by Men " of evil Intentions, to ſerve the worſt Deſigns, as if a ſeparate Peace had been " treated, for which there had not been the leaſt Colour given. 6. That her Ma- " jeſty's Miniſters had Directions to propoſe, That a Day might be fixed, for the " finiſhing, as was done for the Commencement of this Treaty; and, in the mean " Time, all the Preparations were haſtening for an early Campaign. 7. That the " Zeal this Houſe had already expreſſed, was a ſure Pledge that they would pro- " ceed in giving the neceſſary Diſpatch to the Supplies. 8. That her Majeſty found " it neceſſary to obſerve, how great Licenſe was taken in publiſhing falſe and " ſcandalous Libels, ſuch as were a Reproach to any Government; and that the " Evil ſeeming to be grown too ſtrong for the Laws now in Force, it was there- " fore recommended to them, to find a Remedy equal to the Miſchief." After the reading of this Meſſage, the Commons readily voted an Addreſs of Thanks " for " her Majeſty's great Goodneſs and Condeſcenſion, in promiſing to communicate " to her Paliament the Terms of Peace, before the ſame ſhould be concluded; " whereby thoſe groundleſs and ſeditious Reports muſt be ſilenced, which had been " induſtriouſly ſpread abroad, to the Diſhonour of her Majeſty, and to ſerve De- " ſigns, which the Authors of them had not dared publickly to own. And to aſ- " ſure her Majeſty, that they would give the neceſſary Diſpatch to the Supplies; " and take the moſt effectual Courſe to put a Stop to the publiſhing thoſe falſe and " ſeditious Libels, which had expoſed her Majeſty's Government to Danger and Re- " proach." This done, the obſequious Commons proceeded to pay ſtill a greater Compliment to the Court, by cenſuring one of the Creatures of the late Miniſters, who, by his bright Parts, and bold Spirit, had gain'd great Authority in the Houſe; and was like to give no ſmall Uneaſineſs to the preſent Managers. Hereupon, the Houſe took into Conſideration the Report of the Commiſſioners of Publick Accompts, relating to the Contracts for Forage in North-Britain, together with the ſeveral Depoſitions of Mr. Robert Man, a Woollen Draper, Agent to Robert Walpole, Eſq; and then having examined Mr. John Montgomery, and heard Mr. Walpole, in his Place, after a warm Debate, which laſted till paſt Ten at Night, it was reſolv'd, " That " Robert Walpole, Eſq; (a Member of this Houſe) in receiving the Sum of Five hun- " dred Guineas, and in taking a Note for Five hundred Pounds more, on account " of Two Contracts, for Forage of her Majeſty's Troops, quartered in North-Bri- " tain,

" tain, made by him when Secretary of War, purſuant to a Power granted to him " by the late Lord Treaſurer, was guilty of a high Breach of Truſt, and notorious " Corruption. 2. That the ſaid Robert Walpole, Eſq; be, for the ſaid Offence, com- " mitted Priſoner to the Tower of London, during the Pleaſure of this Houſe: And " that Mr. Speaker do iſſue his Warrant accordingly." Then a Motion being made, and the Queſtion put, that the Houſe ſhould adjourn, it paſs'd in the Negative; and after a ſmall Debate, it was reſolv'd, (though but by a Majority of about Thirty Two Voices) " That the ſaid Robert Walpole, Eſq; be, for the ſaid Offence, al- " ſo expell'd the Houſe; and that the Report of the Commiſſioners of publick Ac- " counts be taken into farther Conſideration that Day Sevennight. According to theſe Reſolutions, Mr. Walpole ſurrendred himſelf, the next Morning, Priſoner to the Tower.

The Queen's Meſſage to the Lords, Jan. 17.

The Meſſage the Queen ſent to the Houſe of Lords, was exactly the ſame with that ſent to the Commons; except only, that inſtead of the Seventh Paragraph, about the Supply, her Majeſty took Notice of the Affair relating to the Scotch Peers, in the following Words: There is one Thing in which her Majeſty's Subjects of the North Part of this Kingdom are extreamly concerned: The Diſtinction ſuch of them who were Peers of Scotland before the Union muſt lie under, if the Prerogative of the Crown is ſtrictly barr'd againſt them alone. This is a Matter which ſenſibly affects her Majeſty, and ſhe therefore lays it before this Houſe, earneſtly deſiring their Advice and Concurrence in finding out the beſt Method of ſettling this Affair to the Satisfaction of the whole Kingdom. Hereupon the Lords reſolv'd to preſent an Addreſs of Thanks to her Majeſty, for her Gracious Meſſage; and upon a Motion made by the Lord Somers, it was agreed, that to theſe Words, and particularly with relation to Spain and the Weſt-Indies, the following ſhould be added, viz. Which are of ſo great Concern to the Safety and Commerce of your Majeſty's Kingdoms. The ſame Day, upon a Motion made for giving Satisfaction to the Scotch Peers; a Noble Peer ſaid, he ſhould be glad to know, What Satisfaction that ſhould be? But all being ſilent, that Buſineſs was dropp'd.

* Jan. 19.

Two Days after *, Mr. Lockhart, from the Commiſſioners of Publick Accompts, acquainted the Commons, that when Mr. Robert Man attended them on the Monday before, they directed him to bring to them the Second Note in his Depoſitions, mentioned to be given by Mr. Montgomery to Mr. Walpole; and that upon his attending them the next Day, he refuſed to deliver a Copy of the ſaid Note, or to be examin'd, or to do any Thing more, than what he had done before; ſaying, He was ſo adviſed by Council: Whereupon the Houſe order'd, " That the ſaid Mr. " Robert Man, for having contemptuouſly refus'd to be farther examin'd before the " Commiſſioners of Accompts, be taken into the Cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms " attending the Houſe.

Mr. Robert Man order'd into the Cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms.

Mr. Walpole having been attack'd, found guilty, and puniſh'd, it was rightly conjectured, that the Duke of Marlborough would not eſcape without a Parliamentary Cenſure, which ſeem'd neceſſary to juſtify his Diſgrace. To prepoſſeſs the Minds of the Commons, the Duke's inveterate Enemies ſet all their mercenary Pens at Work, to blaſt his Reputation, and, among the reſt, one of the Writers (a) of the Examiner, who, for ſome Time paſt, had purſued his Grace with unrelenting Fury, and profligate Malice, did, on this Occaſion, publiſh a Satyrical Copy of Verſes, wherein he charged his Grace with Breach of Truſt, and deliver'd him up to Juſtice.

The Duke of Marlborough libelled, and attack'd in Parliament.

Debate in the Houſe of Commons about him.

Accordingly, on Thurſday, the 24th of January, the Commons, in a full Houſe, took into Conſideration that Part of the Report of the Commiſſioners of publick Accompts, relating to the Duke of Marlborough; and having read the Minutes of Mr. Cardonnel's Depoſitions, and the Tranſlations of the Certificates of Two Perſons beyond Sea, about Allowances given by the Contractors for Bread and Bread-Waggons, there aroſe a very warm Debate upon this Queſtion, Whether the taking ſeveral Sums of Money annually, by the Duke of Marlborough, from the Contractors for furniſhing the Bread and Bread-Waggons for the Army in the Low-Countries, was warrantable and legal? The Report of the Commiſſioners ſuggeſted, " That it appeared " by the Depoſition of Sir Solomon de Medina, the preſent Contractor, and by the " Accompts of Antonio Alvarez Machado, who had been a Contractor before him, Abſtract of the Report of the Commiſſioners of publick Accompts.

" that

that from the Year 1702, to the Year 1711, both included, the Duke of Marlborough had receiv'd, upon Account of the Contracts for Bread and Bread-Waggons, the Sum of Six Hundred Sixty Four Thousand, Eight Hundred Fifty One Gilders, and Eight Stivers, which amounted to Sixty Three Thousand, Three Hundred Nine Pounds, Three Shillings and Seven Pence. That some Time after this Evidence was given, they receiv'd, by the Hands of James Craggs, Esq; a Letter * from the Duke of Marlborough, desiring the Commissioners, That when they made their Report, they would lay some Facts before the Parliament in a true Light. That they thought they could not better do him that Justice, than in his Grace's own Words, viz. That the Money he had receiv'd from Sir Solomon de Medina, was no more than what had been allow'd as a Perquisite to the General or Commander in Chief of the Army in the Low-Countries, even before the Revolution, and since: That whatever Sums he had receiv'd on that Account, had been constantly employed for the Service of the Publick, in keeping secret Correspondence, and in giving Intelligence of the Enemy's Motions and Designs. That this had fallen so far short, that he took Leave to acquaint them with another Article that had been applied to the same Use, which arose from the Queen's Warrant; though this did not properly relate to the publick Accompts, being a free Gift of the Foreign Troops. That before the late King's Death, when the Parliament voted Forty Thousand Men for the Quota of England in the Low-Countries, Twenty One Thousand, Six Hundred and Twelve, were to be Foreigners, and the rest English: That for these last, they gave Ten Thousand Pounds a Year for Intelligence, and other Contingencies, without Accompt: But his Majesty being sensible, that this Sum would not, any ways, answer that Service, and being unwilling to apply for more to the Parliament, he order'd that the Foreign Troops should contribute Two and a Half per Cent. towards it, which they readily agreed to, upon Promise that no other Stoppages should be made from their Pay. That the Queen was afterwards pleased to confirm it by her Warrant, a Copy of which was hereto annexed: And that it had been applied, from Time to Time, for Intelligence, and secret Service, with such Success, that, next to the Blessing of God, and the Bravery of the Troops, most of the Advantages of the War must be attributed to the timely and good Advice procured with the Help of that Money. But thereupon the Commissioners observ'd, " That so far as they had been capable to be inform'd, the great Sums annually " paid to the Duke, on Account of the Contracts for Bread, could never be esteem'd " legal or warrantable Perquisites: Nor did they find, that any other English General in the Low-Countries, or elsewhere, ever claim'd or receiv'd such Perquisites; " and if any Instance should be produc'd, they apprehended it would be no Justification of it, because the Publick, or the Troops, must necessarily suffer in Proportion to every such Perquisite; and how agreeable this Practice was to that " Oeconomy with which the Service in Flanders was said to be carried on, remain'd " yet to be explain'd. That the great Caution and Secrecy with which this Money was constantly receiv'd, gave Reason to suspect, that it was not thought a " justifiable Perquisite: For Mr. Cardonnel, the Duke's Secretary, and Auditor of " the Bread Account, had declared on Oath, that he never knew or heard of any " such Perquisite, 'till the late Rumour of Sir Solomon de Medina's Evidence before " the Commissioners. That by the Contracts for Bread and Bread-Waggons, the " General appear'd to be the sole Cheque on the Contractors; he was to take Care " that the Terms of the Contracts were duly performed; he was to judge of all Deductions to be made from an Allowance to the Contractors; and whether in such " Circumstance he could receive any Gratuity or Perquisite from the Contractors, " without a Breach of his Trust, they did not presume to determine? That the General might with equal Reason claim a Perquisite for every other Contract relating to the Army, as for these of the Bread and Bread-Waggons; but his Grace " being silent as to this, the Commissioners ought to suppose he had not received " any such Allowance. As to the Deduction of Two and a Half per Cent. from the Foreign Troops, the Commissioners observ'd, " That the Warrant for it had been " kept dormant for Nine Years, and the Deduction concealed so long from the " Knowledge of Parliament; for which his Grace had not assigned sufficient Reasons. That the calling it a Free-Gift was inconsistent with the Words of the " Warrant, which express an Agreement, and with that Part of his Grace's Letter, " which took Notice, That he being Ambassador and General, stipulated for this very " Stoppage, by the late King's Order: That therefore they were of Opinion, that a " Deduction so made, was publick Money, and ought to be accounted for in the " same Manner as other publick Money. That the Ten Thousand Pounds granted " Yearly for the Contingencies of the Army, was, at first, intended by Parliament " for the Service of the Forty Thousand Men, without Distinction: And was so " far from having always been thought exempt from Accompt, as the Duke had " suggested, that in a Privy-Seal, dated March 5. 1706, there was a Clause to re-

Or whether, admitting it to be ſo, either the Stoppage, or the " Payment, had been regularly made ? That the Warrant directed, that it ſhould " be ſtopt in the Hands of the Paymaſter, or his Deputy, and iſſued thence by the " Duke's Order only : But this Method did not appear, by the Paymaſter's Ac- " counts, to have been at all purſued ; ſo far otherwiſe, that the Payments to the " Foreign Troops were always made compleat, and their Receipts always taken " in full, without any Notice of this Deduction. That if " Mr. Sweet, at Amſterdam, had taken upon himſelf to tranſact the Diſpoſition of his " Two and a Half per Cent. with the Duke of Marlborough ; the Commiſſioners " were of Opinion, that he ought to have tranſmitted conſtant Accounts of it to " Mr. Bridges, whoſe Agent he only was ; and not to have negotiated ſo large " Sums of Publick Money, in ſo clandeſtine a manner. made, and the Queſtion put, That the Houſe do adjourn? It paſs'd in the Negative. After which, it was alſo reſolv'd, by a great Majority, That the Two and an Half per Cent. deducted from the Foreign Troops in Her Majeſty's Pay, was Publick Money, and ought to be accounted for: And that the ſaid Reſolutions be laid before Her Majeſty, by the whole Houſe. Accordingly, on Saturday the 26th of January, the Houſe, with their Speaker, laid the ſaid Reſolutions before the Queen; who, thereupon, was pleas'd to anſwer, That She had a great Regard for whatever was repreſented to Her by her Commons; and would do her Part, to redreſs what they complain'd of.

Laid before the Queen, Jan. 26. The Queen's Anſwer.

The † Day before, the Commons order'd, That the Report of the Commiſſioners of Publick Accounts, be taken into further Conſideration that Day Se'nnight; and reſolv'd to addreſs Her Majeſty, That the Barrier-Treaty with the States-General, might be laid before them. On the 28th, a Bill was order'd to be brought in, to continue the Act of the laſt Seſſion of Parliament, for taking, examining, and ſtating the Publick Accounts of the Kingdom, for one Year longer: And then Mr. Secretary St. John preſented to the Houſe, a State of the War in Flanders, from the Year 1701, to the Year 1711, incluſive; as alſo, States of the War in Portugal and Spain; a State of the Subſidies annually granted by Parliament, and payable to Foreign Princes, purſuant to the reſpective Treaties, from the Commencement of the War; and a State of the Sea-Service. It was afterwards reſolv'd to addreſs Her Majeſty, for an Account how much of the Thirty Five Millions, Three Hundred Two Thouſand One Hundred and Seven Pounds, Eighteen Shillings, and Nine Pence, of the Money granted by Parliament, and iſſued for the Publick Service, to Chriſtmas 1710, which was humbly repreſented to Her Majeſty, by this Houſe, the laſt Seſſion of Parliament, to remain unaccounted for, had been ſince accounted for; and by whom; and when? And alſo, what Obſtructions had ariſen, in accounting for the ſame? The next ‖ Day, Mr. Secretary St. John preſented to the Houſe, a Copy of the Treaty between Her Majeſty and the States-General, for ſecuring the Succeſſion to the Crown of Great Britain, and for ſettling the Barrier for the States-General, againſt France, concluded at the Hague the 29th of October 1709; a Copy of the Separate Article of that Treaty, and a Copy of the Second Separate Article of the ſaid Treaty; as alſo, Tranſlations of the ſaid Treaties. Some * Days before, upon a Motion made for reading the Act of the Firſt Parliament of King William in Scotland, paſs'd the 29th of June 1695, entituled, An Act againſt irregular Baptiſms and Marriages; the ſame was read accordingly: After which, a Bill was order'd to be brought in, to preſerve the Liturgy of the Church of England; and for repealing an Act paſs'd in the Parliament of Scotland, entituled, An Act againſt irregular Baptiſms and Marriages. This Bill was, accordingly, brought in, and twice read; and, on the 29th of January, a Clauſe was order'd to be added to it, to oblige all Perſons who ſhould take the Benefit of this Act, to pray for Her Majeſty, the Princeſs Sophia, and the reſt of the Royal Family; and that all other Preachers and Teachers in Scotland, be obliged to do the ſame. After this, a Petition of William Carſtairs, Principal of the College of Edinburgh, Thomas Blackwell, Profeſſor of Divinity at Aberdeen, and Robert Baillie, Miniſter of Inverneſs, was offer'd to the Houſe, relating to the ſaid Bill; but a Motion being made, and the Queſtion put, That the ſaid Petition be brought up? It paſs'd in the Negative. A Motion was then made, and the Queſtion put, That it be an Inſtruction to the Committee, that they receive a Clauſe, to oblige all Perſons in Scotland, who had any Office, Civil or Military, or any Salary or Place of Profit under the Crown, to attend Divine Service, according to the Law of Scotland; and to reſtrain them from going to Epiſcopal Meetings? Which alſo was carry'd in the Negative. Then the Houſe reſolv'd it ſelf into a Committee of the whole Houſe upon the ſaid Bill; and having made ſome Progreſs therein, the Houſe adjourn'd to the 31ſt of January.

Mr. Carſtairs's Petition not received.

The Church of Scotland was very much alarm'd, at the Deſign of ſetting up the Church of England's Liturgy, and Worſhip, in that Part of Great Britain; and upon the firſt Notice, that a Bill for that Purpoſe was brought into the Houſe of Commons, the Commiſſioners of the late General Aſſembly drew up a large Repreſentation, and Petition to the Queen; wherein, among other Things, they ſet forth, "That the Sixth Act of Parliament, 1707, for Securing the Proteſtant Religion, and "Preſbyterian Government, whereby all the other Acts, in favour of the ſame, are "ratify'd and approved, is declared to be an Eſſential and Fundamental Condition of "the Treaty of UNION, without any Alteration thereof, or Derogation thereto, in any "ſort, for ever, even beyond the Reach of Parliament. That they could not but ex- "preſs their Surprize, and deep Affliction, to hear of a Bill offer'd for ſuch a large, "and almoſt boundleſs Toleration, not only threatning the Overthrow of their "CHURCH, but giving a large Licenſe, almoſt, to all Errors and Blaſphemies, and

" throwing up all good Diſcipline, to the Diſhonour of GOD, and the Scandal and " Ruin of the true Chriſtian Religion, and the infallible Diſturbance of the Quiet, " and to the Confuſion of that Church and Nation: And therefore, with all Hu- " mility, but with the greateſt Earneſtneſs they did beſeech, nay obteſt her " Majeſty, by the ſame Mercy of GOD that reſtored that Church, and raiſed her " Majeſty to the Throne, to interpoſe for the Relief of that Church, and the Main- " tenance of the preſent Eſtabliſhment, againſt ſuch a manifeſt and ruining In- " croachment, in ſuch Manner, as in her Royal Wiſdom and Juſtice ſhe ſhould " think needful." This Repreſentation was immediately tranſmitted to Mr. Carſtairs, Principal of the College of Edinburgh, then in London, who at the delivering the ſame to the Queen, made a ſhort Speech, and receiv'd a very gracious Anſwer from her Majeſty; with further Aſſurances of her Royal Protection to the Church of Scotland.

Preſented to the Queen by Mr. Caſtairs.

Towards the end of December, a Motion was made in the Houſe of Peers, by the Duke of Devonſhire, for a Bill to ſettle the Precedence of the moſt illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover in Great Britain, which lay dormant for ſome time: But when the Lords met again, on the 17th of January, the Lord Treaſurer thinking it Prudence to ſhew his Zeal and Affection for the Proteſtant Heir, preſented to that Houſe a Bill, entituled, An Act for ſettling the Precedence of the moſt excellent Princeſs Sophia, Electreſs and Dutcheſs Dowager of Hanover, of the Elector her Son, and the Electoral Prince the Duke of Cambridge. This Bill was that Day Twice read by the Lords, and the Third time the next Morning; and by the Lord Chief Juſtice Parker, and Mr. Juſtice Eyre, carried down to the Commons, who read it Three times, without any Interruption; and having reſolv'd that it ſhould paſs, Nemine Contradicente, ſent it back to the Lords by Mr. Secretary St. John. On the 21ſt of January, the Lords took into Conſideration, that Part of the Queen's Meſſage of the 17th, relating to the Scotch Peers, made Peers of Great Britain; and, amongſt other Expedients, it was propoſed, that her Majeſty ſhould create Sixteen Hereditary Peers to repreſent the Nobility of Scotland in the Britiſh Parliament, being the Number agreed on by the Act of Union; but this Project being liable to many Inconveniencies, no great Streſs was laid upon it; and after a ſmall Debate, that Affair was put off till the 25th. On that Day, their Lordſhips reſumed the Debate about Duke Hamilton's Patent, and reſolv'd, that that Matter was cognizable by their Houſe only; and then adjourn'd it again to the 31ſt of January, when it was dropt: And ſo it appear'd, that their Lordſhips adher'd to their former Judgment.

The Day before was ſolemniz'd the Anniverſary of King Charles the Firſt's Martyrdom; and the Queen being almoſt perfectly recover'd of her late Indiſpoſition, her Majeſty went, in a Sedan, to her Royal Chapel at St. James's, where Mr. Pawlet St. John, Rector of Yelden, preached a Sermon on Matth. XXII. Verſe xxi. which he concluded with this remarkable Ejaculation: " For thine Name's ſake, O LORD! " by which we have been called; for thy Temple's, where we worſhip Thee, O! " give not up thy Heritage again to ſuch Reproach; but preſerve thy Church from " the Madneſs of their Zeal, who would ruin, by reforming it; and thy Name from " thoſe Hypocrites, who fear not to advance thy Kingdom, by Rebelling; and thy " Glory, by Elaſpheming thee! And from all the ſad and terrible Effects of religious " Rage, pretended Moderation, and independent Loyalty, ſuch as afflicted our Fathers, " or may threaten our Poſterity, Good Lord deliver us! And let all the People of this " Church and Nation, let all the true Lovers of our Queen and Country, ſay, Amen."

Mr. St. John was thank'd for this fine Sermon, and by her Majeſty commanded to print it; and Dr. Gooch, of Gonvil and Caius College in Cambridge, who preach'd before the Commons, on Pſalm XI. Verſe iii. received alſo the Thanks of that Houſe, and was deſired to print his Sermon; nor was that Acknowledgment unmerited at the Hands of the Perſons then in Power. The Biſhop of Norwich preach'd the ſame Day before the Houſe of Lords, on Prov. XVII. Verſe xiv. but not having the good Fortune to pleaſe the Majority of his Noble Auditory, he receiv'd no Thanks for his Sermon; which being miſrepreſented throughout the Kingdom, that Prelate thought fit to publiſh the ſame, for his own Vindication.

And is thank'd for his Sermon.

To reſume the Proceedings in Parliament. On Monday, the 4th of February, the Commons, in a Committee of the whole Houſe, took into Conſideration the State of the War; and having examined the Treaties laid before them, after a long Debate, they came to the following Reſolutions: " 1. That the States General had " been deficient in their Quotas for Sea-Service, in proportion to the Number of " Ships provided by her Majeſty; ſome Years Two Thirds, and generally more " than Half of their Quota. 2. That towards the carrying on the War in Spain, " in order to reduce that Monarchy to the Houſe of Auſtria, neither the late Em- " peror, nor his late Imperial Majeſty, ever had any Forces on their own Account " there,

" there, till the laſt Year, and then only a Regiment of Foot, conſiſting of Two " thouſand Men. 3. That the Forces ſupplied and paid by her Majeſty, for the carrying on the War in Spain, from the Year 1705, to the Year 1711, incluſive, amounted to Fifty ſeven thouſand, Nine hundred ſeventy three Men, beſides Thirteen Battalions, and Eighteen Squadrons, for which her Majeſty had paid a Subſidy to the Emperor. 4. That the Forces ſupplied by the States General, for the Service of the War in Spain, from the Year 1705, to the Year 1708, both incluſive, have amounted to no more than Twelve thouſand two hundred Men; and that from the Year 1708, to this preſent Time, they have ſent thither no Forces at all. 5. That her Majeſty had not only furniſh'd her Proportion of Twelve thouſand Men, according to the Treaty enter'd into for the Service of the War in Portugal, but had taken upon her the Emperor's Proportion, by furniſhing Two Thirds, when the States General only furniſh'd One Third for that Service. 6. That by Treaty with the King of Portugal, there was to be furniſh'd Twelve thouſand Foot, and Three thouſand Horſe, at his own Expence; and in Conſideration of a Subſidy to be paid him, Eleven thouſand Foot, and Two thouſand Horſe more; notwithſtanding which, it appear'd, that the King of Portugal did not furniſh Thirteen thouſand Men in the whole. 7. That ſince the Year 1706, when the Engliſh and Dutch march'd into Caſtile, and return'd no more into Portugal, her Majeſty had replaced more than her Share, according to her Proportion, and the States General had not any Troops in Portugal. 8. That the Firſt Proportion of Three Fifths to Two Fifths, agreed upon between his late Majeſty King William and the States General, for the Service of the War in Flanders, had not been obſerved by the States General. 9. That the States General, during the Courſe of the War, had furniſhed leſs than their Proportion in Flanders, Twenty thouſand, Eight hundred thirty ſeven Men. 10. That the Condition for prohibiting all Trade and Correſpondence between Holland and France, on which the Troops of Augmentation were granted in 1703, and afterwards continued, had not been obſerv'd by the States General. 11. That at the Beginning of this War, the Subſidies were paid in equal Proportions by her Majeſty and the States General, but that her Majeſty had ſince paid more than her Proportion, Three Millions, One hundred fifty five thouſand Crowns." Theſe Reſolutions, which were the next † Day reported by Mr. Conyers, and agreed to by the Houſe, were mainly intended to juſtify the Queen's pacifick Meaſures, and to quicken the ſlow Paces of the Negotiation at Utrecht; and, in order to inforce them with the States General, Sir James Wiſheart was, about this time, ſent back to Holland, under Pretence of ſettling the Marine Quotas between her Majeſty and their High Mightineſſes, for the Service of the Year 1712. At the ſame time, Mr. Thomas Harley was ſent to Utrecht, and from thence to Hanover, with the Act for ſettling the Precedence of the moſt Excellent Princeſs Sophia, &c. which, 'twas thought, would beſpeak him a gracious Reception there, and raiſe favourable Thoughts of the Britiſh Miniſters: But that Court ſaw through this Cobweb Amuſement, which was contradicted by the bare-fac'd Countenance given to the Enemies of the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and the Diſcouragement of its beſt Friends. We may here take Notice, that on the Queen's Birth-Day *, which was celebrated this Year with unuſual Splendor and Magnificence, her Majeſty appointed Lieutenant-General William Stuart, General and Commander in Chief in Ireland, during the Abſence of the Duke of Ormond, in the room of Lieutenant-General Ingoldſby, lately ‖ deceas'd; and, the ſame Day, John Lord Archbiſhop of Tuam, was appointed one of the Lords Juſtices of Ireland, jointly with Sir Conſtantine Phipps, Lord Chancellor there, who openly favour'd the Pretender's Friends. Three Days † after, Dr. John Shadwell was ſworn one of the Queen's Phyſicians in Ordinary, in the room of Dr. Martin Liſter, deceas'd; and Dr. Hans Sloane, was ſworn her Majeſty's Phyſician Extraordinary, in the room of Dr. Shadwell.

On the 7th of February, the Commons read the Third Time the Bill in favour of Epiſcopacy in Scotland; upon which Occaſion, Sir David Dalrymple ſaid, " That ſince " he ſaw the Houſe were reſolved to make no Alterations in the Body of the Bill, he " acquieſc'd; and only deſired that the Title of it might be thus, A Bill for eſta- " bliſhing Jacobitiſm and Immorality in Scotland." After this, a Motion being made, that the Bill do paſs Nemine Contradicente, another Scotch Member oppos'd it, ſaying, " He hoped many of his Countrymen, and, indeed, all good Patriots, would be " againſt a Bill which was ſo diametrically oppoſite to the Treaty of Union; ſince " it repeal'd an Act which was an unalterable Part of that Treaty." But the Queſtion being put, it was carried in the Affirmative, by a Majority of 162 Voices, of which 149 were Engliſh; and 13 Scotch, againſt 17, whereof 14 were Scotch; whereupon Sir Simon Stuart was order'd to carry it to the Lords. limiting the Number of Officers ſitting in the Houſe of Commons; and Mr. Wortley, Mr. Shackerly, Mr. Heyſham, and Mr. Onſlow, were named to prepare and bring in the ſame. On the 9th, a Petition of the People call'd Quakers, praying, that in their preſent ſolemn Affirmation, an Alteration might be made, by leaving out the Name of GOD, was offer'd to the Houſe; but a Motion being made, and the Queſtion put, that the Petition be brought in, it paſs'd in the Negative; After which, Mr. Wortley preſented to the Houſe the Bill for limiting the Number of Officers, which was read the Firſt Time, and order'd a Second Reading. The Queen being, the ſame Day, come to the Houſe of Peers, with the uſual State; and the Commons ſent for up, and attending, her Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to ſeveral Publick Bills.

Acts paſs'd, Feb. 9.

On the 13th of February, Mr. Secretary St. John laid before the Commons, purſuant to their Addreſs of the 11th, a Copy of her Majeſty's Inſtructions to the Duke of Marlborough, and Lord Viſcount Townſhend, about the Barrier-Treaty; Extracts of Letters from Mr. Boyle, to the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, concerning the ſaid Treaty; Differences between the Barrier-Treaty, and the Counter-Project; and a Tranſlation thereof; and alſo, a Copy of the Preliminary Articles to a General Peace; ſigned at the Hague, the 28th of May, 1709; and a Tranſlation of the ſame: The Titles of which Copies, and Extracts of Letters, were read, and referred to the Conſideration of the Committee of the whole Houſe. After this, it was reſolved to addreſs her Majeſty, "For the Letters written by the Lord Viſcount Townſhend to "Mr. Boyle, late one of her Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, dated the "1ſt and 26th of November, 1709; which Mr. Secretary St. John laid before the "Houſe on the 14th of February." The Commons being thus furniſh'd with all the Papers relating to the Barrier-Treaty, took the ſame into Conſideration, in a Committee of the whole Houſe, of which Mr. Anneſley was Chairman: And though it was by many expected, that either a Letter, written ſome Days before, by the Baron de Bothmer, to Mr. Secretary St. John, about the Barrier-Treaty; or the Specifick Explanation of the Offers of France, which was brought to London the 12th of February, and was received with general Indignation, would have moderated the Cenſure of that Treaty, yet the Commons, in Compliance with the Deſires of the Court, thought fit to come to the following Reſolutions: Viz. "I. That in the "Treaty between her Majeſty and the States-General, for ſecuring the Succeſſion to "the Crown of Great Britain, and for ſettling a Barrier for the States-General againſt "France, under Colour of ſecuring the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and providing a ſuffi"cient Barrier to the States-General againſt France, there were ſeveral Articles de"ſtructive to the Trade and Intereſt of Great Britain, and therefore highly diſho"nourable to her Majeſty. II. That the Lord Viſcount Townſhend had not any "Orders or Authority for negotiating or concluding ſeveral Articles in the ſaid "Treaty. III. That the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, who negotiated and ſigned, "and all thoſe who adviſed the ratifying of the ſaid Treaty, were Enemies to the "Queen and Kingdom:" Which Reſolutions were, on the 16th of February, reported by Mr. Anneſley, and agreed to by the Houſe. The States-General uſed all Endeavours to prevent the Cenſure of the Barrier-Treaty: For beſides the Inſtructions they had before given to Mr. Buys; they wrote a Letter to * the Queen of Great Britain, wherein they repreſented, "That during the whole courſe of her Majeſty's "Glorious Reign, they had nothing more at Heart, than to cultivate and main"tain with her a good Friendſhip, perfect Confidence and Union; having always "judged them abſolutely neceſſary, and eſpecially in the preſent Conjuncture. "That they thought they could not give a better Proof of this their Diſpoſition "and Perſuaſion, than that which they lately gave, in agreeing to the Propoſition "which her Majeſty had cauſed to be made to them, to begin the Negotiation of a "general Peace with the Enemy, and in concurring with her Majeſty to facilitate "the bringing together of the Miniſters of all the High-Allies, to the Congreſs at "Utrecht. That they were perſuaded, nothing could more contribute to the Diſpatch and Succeſs of that Negotiation, than a ſtrict Union, and intire Harmony "between her Majeſty and their State. That as they had the Honour to conclude "with her Majeſty, the 29th of October, 1709, the Treaty of mutual Guaranty, "called the Barrier-Treaty, ratified, on both Sides, in the moſt authentick Form; "they looked upon it, not only as a Foundation of their own Safety, for ſecuring "which, they entred into the preſent War, and had carried it on ſo many Years; "but likewiſe as a firm Support of that good Underſtanding and Union between "her Majeſty and their State, which they ſo earneſtly and ſincerely deſired to ſee "continued, ſo that they could never doubt that they ſhould not, at all Times, "enjoy the Effect of the ſaid Treaty. That, however, having not long ſince "been informed, that in England ſome were of Opinion, that ſome Articles of "that Treaty might be prejudicial to her Majeſty's Subjects, they commiſſioned "Mr.

" Mr. Buys, their Envoy Extraordinary, then going to England, to inquire what " thoſe Points were, that might be thought Grievances, and authorized him to treat " about them with her Majeſty's Miniſters, and to remove, if poſſible, the Difficul- " ties by all the Explanations that ſhould appear neceſſary; which they were put in " Hopes would not be very hard to do, when once they ſhould have conſented to concur with " her Majeſty, as they did, to procure a Congreſs for the Negotiation of a general Peace. " But that Mr. Buys, during his Reſidence in England, had the Misfortune not to " be able to finiſh that Affair to reciprocal Satisfaction; and that it having been " remitted to the Hague, no way had hitherto been found to terminate it there nei- " ther; though their High Mightineſſes had ſhewn all the Readineſs to comply " with any juſt Expedient that could reaſonably be expected from them. That ha- " ving learnt that the principal Exceptions taken to the ſaid Treaty, were, that " it might prove prejudicial to the Commerce of her Majeſty's Subjects in the Spa- " niſh Netherlands, and that ſome had entertained an ill-grounded and erroneous Opi- " nion, that the States might deſign to take Advantage by it, to make themſelves " Maſters of the ſaid Spaniſh Netherlands, their High-Mightineſſes did poſitively de- " clare, and by this Letter did voluntarily repeat it, that it never was, nor ever " would be their Intention, to make Uſe of the ſaid Treaty, or of their Gariſons " in the fortified Places of the Country, to prejudice, in any Manner, the Com- " merce of her Majeſty's Subjects: But that their Opinion was, that whatever re- " lated to Navigation and Commerce there, ought to be ſettled on an intire Equa- " lity, that ſo her Majeſty's Subjects might not be charged with higher Duties of " Importation or Exportation, than theirs. That their High-Mightineſſes did again " declare, by this Letter, that they never had a Thought of making themſelves " Maſters of the Spaniſh Netherlands in Whole, or in Part; contenting themſelves " to have Gariſons in the Places mentioned in the Sixth Article, with the Reve- " nues ſpecified in the Eleventh Article, and what was ſtipulated by the others " ſeparate from the ſaid Treaty. That beſides, they had not the leaſt Thought " of making Uſe of the Privilege ſtipulated in the Seventh Article, to put Troops " into other Places, but only in Caſe of the laſt and moſt apparent Neceſſity. That " they hoped by this poſitive Declaration, to remove all thoſe Suſpicions which " might unjuſtly have been entertain'd againſt them, and that they had firm Con- " fidence in her Majeſty's renowned Equity, that ſhe would not do any Thing in pre- " judice of the ſaid Treaty; but rather that ſhe would be pleaſed to remove all Unea- " ſineſs they might be in about it, which they moſt earneſtly deſired of her Maje- " ſty. Adding, that if there were ſome Articles, which, without affecting the " Eſſentials of the Treaty, might be thought to want Explanation, her Majeſty " ſhould find them willing and ready to treat thereupon, and with all the Facility " and Condeſcenſion that could reaſonably be required of them, whatever ſhould " not be of the laſt Importance for the Security and Preſervation of their State. " Intreating, withal, her Majeſty to continue towards them, that very precious " Friendſhip and Good-will, with which ſhe had hitherto honoured them." This Letter, which was ſoon after made Publick, did wonderfully reconcile the States-General to the Generality of the People, ſince it thereby appeared, that they were ſincerely ready to rectify any Thing in the Barrier-Treaty, which might ſeem prejudicial to the Trade of Great Britain: But it had little or no Effect with the Men in Power, who, in order to procure a Peace, uſed all poſſible Methods to in- cenſe the Commons againſt the Conduct of the Allies, during the War.

With this Prepoſſeſſion, on the 15th of February, the Commons, in a grand Com- mittee, took into further Conſideration the State of the War, and reſolv'd, " I. That " it appear'd to this Committee, that the Charge for Tranſport-Service, in car- " rying on the War in Spain and Portugal, from the Year 1702, to the Year 1711, " incluſive, amounted to One Million, Three Hundred Thirty Six Thouſand, Seven " Hundred Nineteen Pounds, Nineteen Shillings and Eleven Pence. Theſe Reſolutions were, by Mr. Conyers, reported on the 18th of February; and, with an Amendment to one of them, agreed to by the Houſe, and a Committee was appointed to draw up the ſaid Repreſentation. Another Committee was appointed to conſider of the Abuſes committed in the Muſters and Cloathing of the Army, and of the Abuſes relating to the Hoſpitals Abroad; and having, in a Committee of the whole Houſe, conſidered of the Supply, they reſolved to addreſs her Majeſty for a Particular of the Pay to the General Officers, and for Waggon and Forage-Money in Flanders. The ſame Day, the Seventh Section of the Act of the Seventh Year of his late Majeſty's Reign, relating to the Multiplying of Voices to vote in the Elections of Members to ſerve in Parliament, being read, a Bill was order'd to be brought in, for the more effectual preventing fraudulent Conveyances, in order to multiply Votes for electing Knights of Shires to ſerve in Parliament. Another Bill was alſo order'd to be brought in, for preventing irregular and corrupt Proceedings in the Elections of Citizens and Burgeſſes to ſerve in Parliament. And, the next Day, the Commons order'd, that the Commiſſion to Sir James Wiſheart, to treat with the States General, in relation to the Quotas for this Year's Service by Sea, be laid before the Houſe. After this, Mr. Campion, from the Commiſſioners of the Publick Accounts, acquainted the Houſe, that they had taken ſeveral Depoſitions, and other Papers, relating to the Matters in their Report, which he preſented to the Houſe; and then that Part of the ſaid Report, and the Papers relating to Mr. Cardonnel, and Sir David Dalrymple, therein named, were read; and Mr. Cardonnel having been heard in his Place, after a long Debate, it was reſolved by a Majority of 125 Voices againſt 99. That the ſaid Adam Cardonnel, Eſq; be, for the ſaid Of- " fence, expell'd this Houſe." Then Sir David Dalrymple having been heard in his Place, that Part of the ſaid Report was read, which related to Mr. Sweet, Deputy-Paymaſter at Amſterdam; after which, it was reſolved, " That the One per Cent. " received by Mr. Sweet, Deputy-Paymaſter at Amſterdam, upon the Payments made " by him to the Contractors for furniſhing Bread, and Bread-Waggons, in the Low " Countries, was Publick Money, and ought to be accounted for:" And order'd, that the ſaid Report of the Commiſſioners of Accounts, together with the Examinations and Depoſitions relating thereto, with the Reſolutions of this Houſe thereupon, and her Majeſty's gracious Anſwer to the Reſolutions laid before her, be printed. The next † Day, the Commons, in a Committee of the whole Houſe, conſider'd further of the Supply; and having made ſome Progreſs in that Matter, reſolved to addreſs her Majeſty for all Treaties or Conventions, for the hiring Foreign Troops in her Majeſty's Pay and Service, to be laid before them.

We ſhall, in its proper Place, attend the Steps of the Negotiation at Utrecht; but, in the mean time, we muſt take Notice, that the ſpecifick Explanation of the Offers of France, delivered by the French Plenipotentiaries, on the 11th of February, N. S. were entertain'd with the higheſt, and almoſt univerſal Indignation in Great Britain; and went near to reconcile the Two jarring Parties, both Whig and Tory ſuſpending their inveterate Feuds, and joining, as it were, in Conſort, to exclaim againſt the Haughtineſs of the Common Enemy; who, when he lay, in a manner, gaſping for Life, ſeem'd to dictate to his Conquerors. Hereupon, all true Britons declared for a vigorous War, rather than accept ſuch diſhonourable Conditions; and, on Friday the 15th of February, the Lord Halifax made a Motion in the Houſe of Peers, for preſenting an Addreſs to the Queen, about the ſpecifick Offers of France, which his Lordſhip call'd, trifling, arrogant, and injurious to her Majeſty and her Allies. He was ſeconded by ſeveral Peers, of both Parties, who ſaid in Subſtance, " That " thoſe

" thoſe Propoſitions ought to be rejected with the utmoſt Scorn and Indignation; " that it plainly appear'd, France had no other Deſign in view, than to amuſe the " Allies; and, in particular, that it was derogatory to her Majeſty's Honour, to enter into any Negotiation with that Crown, before her Majeſty's juſt Title was acknowledg'd." Some Endeavours were uſed to adjourn the Debate to the Monday following; or, at leaſt, till the next Day, by ſuggeſting, " That the Offers that were " handed about, having yet no other Authority, than their being inſerted in the Holland Gazettes, might not be genuine; and therefore the Lords ought not to take " any Notice of them, till ſuch time as the Queen had communicated them to the " Houſe." But this, and other Arguments, were over-ruled; and it was reſolved, without dividing, to addreſs her Majeſty. A Committee was thereupon appointed to draw up that Addreſs, which the ſame Day was reported, and agreed to, and, by the whole Houſe, preſented the next Day to the Queen, as follows.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

" WE your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal Subjects the Lords Spiritual and " Temporal, in Parliament aſſembled, beg Leave humbly to repreſent to " your Majeſty, the juſt Indignation of this Houſe, at the diſhonourable Treatment " of your Majeſty by France, in having propoſed to acknowledge your Majeſty's " Title to theſe Realms, no ſooner, than when the Peace ſhall be ſigned. And we can- " not forbear expreſſing our utmoſt Reſentment at the Terms of Peace offered to your " Majeſty, and your Allies, by the Plenipotentiaries of France: And we do, with the " greateſt Zeal and Affection, aſſure your Majeſty, that this Houſe will ſtand by, and " aſſiſt your Majeſty with our Lives and Fortunes, in carrying on this War, in Con- " junction with your Allies, till a ſafe and honourable Peace can be obtain'd for your " Majeſty and your Allies.

Addreſs of the Lords to the Queen, againſt thoſe Offers.

The Queen's Anſwer was to this Effect:

My LORDS,

I Return you my hearty Thanks for the Zeal you expreſs for my Honour, and for the Aſſurance you give of ſupporting me.

This vigorous Step of the Houſe of Peers, ſomewhat quicken'd Prince Eugene of Savoy's Negotiation, which had met with great Obſtructions and Difficulties: But, at length, Mr. Secretary St. John acquainted the Commons, " That he had received " her Majeſty's Command to communicate to that Houſe a Propoſition made to her " Majeſty by Prince Eugene of Savoy, in the Name of the Emperor, for the Support " of the War in Spain," viz. That his Imperial Majeſty judged that Forty thouſand Men would be ſufficient for this Service; and that the whole Expence of the War in Spain might amount to Four Millions of Crowns, towards which his Imperial Majeſty offered to make up the Troops which he had in that Country to Thirty thouſand Men, and to take One Million of Crowns upon himſelf. It was obſerved, that no Member ſaid any thing to this Meſſage; which made the Prince very uneaſy about the Succeſs of a Negotiation, that had detained him ſo long from other important Affairs on the Continent. On the other hand, the Courſe of the Publick Entertainments, to which his Highneſs was almoſt daily invited, was, by this time, interrupted by the Death of his Nephew, the Chevalier de Savoye, Son to the Count de Soiſſons, who being taken ill of the Small-Pox, on the 20th of February, expired the 25th, in the 21ſt Year of his Age; and on the 27th at Night his Corps was depoſited, without any Funeral Pomp, in the Vault belonging to the Dukes of Ormond in Weſtminſter-Abbey. Prince Eugene bore this Accident with the Fortitude of a Hero; tho' not without great Concern for the Loſs of ſo near a Relation, for whom he had a particular Affection.

On the 13th of February, the Houſe of Peers, before they proceeded to the Second Reading of the Bill paſs'd by the Commons, in favour of the Epiſcopal Communion in Scotland, heard Council in behalf of the Preſbyterians of that Part of Great Britain, who oppoſed the ſaid Bill. The Lawyers alledg'd, in general, " That this Bill an- " nulling an Act ratified by the Act of Union, the ſame might be attended with very " fatal Conſequences; and then made particular Objections to the Bill it ſelf; " as, that it ſeem'd to grant Toleration to all Epiſcopal Miniſters, under colour where- " of, Popiſh Prieſts might pretend to perform the Romiſh Service in Scotland." The Council having done Pleading, the Bill was read a Second time, and committed to a Committee of the whole Houſe, into which the Lords reſolved themſelves the ſame Day. The Lord Halifax, and the Biſhop of Saliſbury, endeavour'd to ſhew the Inconveniencies and Danger of ſuch a Bill, eſpecially at this Juncture: And the Firſt ſaid, among other things, " That he hoped that illuſtrious Aſſembly would never " follow the Example of a neighbouring Prince, in making uſe of the Diſtinction

On the 15th, theſe Amendments were reported, and agreed to by the Houſe of Lords ; who, the next Day, ſent down the Bill to the Commons ; and the latter, having taken theſe Amendments into Conſideration on the 21ſt, agreed to them, with a ſmall Amendment of their own, to which the Lords agreed on the 26th.

Five * Days before, Mr. Auditor Harley laid before the Commons, an Account of how much of the Thirty Five Millions, &c. had been accounted for, before the Auditors of the Impreſts, ſince the Report of the Committee of Parliament in April 1711. This Account had been call'd for, undoubtedly, with Deſign to keep up the Reports of Miſmanagement, Miſapplication, and Embezzlement of the Publick Money, which had been charg'd on the late Miniſters, and were made the chief Ground of Complaint and Cenſure : But, by this Time, Mr. Robert Walpole had undeceiv'd the moſt prejudic'd ; and, in Two long Letters, publiſh'd in Print, had made it appear, " That the great Debt of the Nation, was occaſion'd by abſolute Neceſſity : " That the Good of the Publick, and the Authority of Parliament, requir'd thoſe " extraordinary Expences and Services : That, of the Thirty Five Millions, &c. Ac- " counts had been duly render'd for all but Four : That the Delays which had hap- " pen'd in paſſing moſt of the Accounts, had ariſen only from Neceſſity, and " the Nature of the Services : That the common Courſe and Method of Buſineſs, " made it impracticable for ſeveral Accomptants to comply with the Rules of " the Exchequer : That if, in ſome few Inſtances, all poſſible Care and Diſpatch " had not been uſed to proſecute and finiſh the Accounts, the Blame was, by no " means, to be laid where the general Clamour had fix'd it : That, of all the " Money granted for the Service of this War, and iſſued during the late Admi- " niſtration, it did not appear there had been the leaſt Loſs and Embezzlement : " That there was no Ground to ſuſpect, that, by not compelling the Accomptants " to paſs their Accounts, any Frauds or Miſapplications had been ſkreen'd, or con- " ceal'd : And that, upon the whole Matter, there never was a greater Calumny, " rais'd upon leſs Grounds, than that which he had diſprov'd." Theſe Two Letters could not but give Offence to the Men in Power, who reveng'd themſelves upon the Author, in the manner before related. Nor was their Reſentment fully ſatisfied with Mr. Walpole's Expulſion, and Confinement in the Tower ; for, upon his being rechoſen for King's Lynne, in the County of Norfolk, a Petition of Samuel Taylor, Eſq; and of ſome Freemen and Free Burghers of that Borough, was preſented to the Commons, againſt the ſaid Election. On the 6th of March, the Merits of that Petition were taken into Conſideration ; and a Motion being made, and the Queſtion put, That Council be call'd in ? It paſs'd in the Negative. Then the Writ for electing a Burgeſs for the ſaid Borough, in the room of Robert Walpole, Eſq; expell'd the Houſe ; and alſo, the Sheriff of Norfolk's Precept thereupon, and the Indenture of the Return between the ſaid Sheriff, and the Mayor and Burgeſſes of the ſaid Borough, were read : After which, it was reſolv'd, " That Robert " Walpole, Eſq; having been, this Seſſion of Parliament, committed a Priſoner to " the Tower of London, and expell'd this Houſe, for an high Breach of Truſt in the " Execution of his Office, and notorious Corruption, when Secretary at War, was, " and is incapable of being elected a Member to ſerve in this preſent Parliament. On the 22d and 27th of February, the Commons, in a grand Committee, came to ſeveral Reſolutions about the Supply ; and, on the 29th, conſider'd of Ways and Means to raiſe it ; and, among other Particulars, reſolv'd, " That the Deduction " of Two and a Half per Cent. which had, or ought to have been made from the " Pay, Subſidies, or other Allowances for Foreign Forces in Her Majeſty's Service, " be continued for the Year 1712, and apply'd for the Service of the War, in Aid " of the Proviſion made, or to be made, in this Seſſion of Parliament for that " Purpoſe." This Reſolution was deſign'd to colour the Cenſure already paſs'd on the Duke of Marlborough : And it is obſervable, That tho' ſome of the Foreign Princes, who had Troops in the Queen's Pay, did, ſome Time after, order their Miniſters in London to repreſent, " That the ſaid Two and a Half per Cent. was " their Whilſt the Commons were on Ways and Means, the Lords * read, the ſecond Time, the Bill from the Commons, for ſecuring the Freedom of Parliaments, by limiting the Number of Officers, ſitting in the Houſe of Commons: Which being committed to a Committee of the whole Houſe, their Lordſhips immediately reſolv'd themſelves into that Committee; and, after a Debate, which laſted till Nine a Clock in the Evening, the Queſtion being put, Whether the ſaid Bill ſhould paſs? It was carry'd in the Negative by Five or Six Voices; ſome Peers, who were thought to be for the Bill, being abſent, and not having left their Proxies. The next † Day, Sir Thomas Hanmer laid before the Commons a Repreſentation to be made to Her Majeſty, which, by their Order, had been drawn up in a Committee, upon the ſeveral Reſolutions of the Houſe, relating to the Management of the War; in which, both the Deficiencies and Remiſneſs of the Allies, in furniſhing their reſpective Quotas, and the Miſchiefs which were like to ariſe to Great Britain from the Barrier-Treaty, were ſet forth, with all the Flouriſhes and Heightnings of Oratory. This Repreſentation being ‖ laid before the Queen, by the whole Houſe, Her Majeſty received it as a farther Inſtance of that dutiful Affection to her Service, and Concern for the Publick Intereſt, which this Houſe of Commons had always ſhewn: Aſſuring them, That She would give ſuch Orders, as ſhould effectually anſwer what they deſir'd of Her, in every Particular; Viz. "That, for the future, Her Majeſty would no otherwiſe furniſh Troops, or pay "Subſidies, than in Proportion to what her Allies ſhould actually furniſh and pay, "according to Treaties; And that She would find Means for the explaining and "amending the ſeveral Articles of the Barrier-Treaty, ſo as that they might conſiſt "with the Intereſt of Great Britain." The * Day before, the Lord Keeper, the Lord Treaſurer, and other Lords commiſſion'd by the Queen, gave the Royal Aſſent to ſeveral publick and private Acts.

On the 13th of March, upon a Motion made in the Houſe of Commons, a Bill was order'd, to reſtore the Patrons to their ancient Rights of Preſenting Miniſters to the Churches vacant in that Part of Great Britain, called Scotland. Upon the bringing in of this Bill, there was publiſh'd, An Account of Lay-Patronages in Scotland, and of the fatal Conſequences they have occaſion'd between the Church and Lay-Patrons; with Obſervations on the Arguments for reſtoring them: But notwithſtanding the Reaſons contain'd in this Account, which was ſaid to be written by Sir David Dalrymple; the Majority of the Houſe of Commons ſeem'd reſolv'd to go through with the Bill for reſtoring Lay-Patronages: And, to ſhew yet the more Favour to thoſe of the Epiſcopal Communion, they order'd a Bill to be brought in, for Repealing an Act paſs'd in the Parliament of Scotland, entituled, Act for diſcharging the Yule Vacance; that is, for reſtoring the Obſervation of Chriſtmas Holidays: Which Mr. Carnegie did, accordingly, preſent to the Houſe on the 17th of March; when the ſame was received, and read the firſt Time. to overcome: Be that as it will, his Highneſs had not his Audience of Leave of her Majeſty 'till Thurſday, the 13th of March, in the Evening; to which he was introduced by Mr. Secretary St. John. His Highneſs ſpent the Three next following Days, in receiving and paying Viſits to the Miniſters of State and Nobility; and, among the reſt, the Lord High-Treaſurer waited upon his Highneſs on Sunday Morning. After this, the Prince went to take his Leave of his dear Friend, and illuſtrious Partner in Military Atchievements and Glory, the Duke of Marlborough; and of the Earl of Godolphin; and having din'd with Mr. Boyle, late one of her Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State; and ſupp'd at the Baron de Roſencrans's, his Highneſs, accompanied by the Duke of Grafton, Count Naſſau Woudenburgh, and the Lord Lifford, ſet out in a Coach and Six for Greenwich. Being come there at Three a-Clock in the Morning, his Highneſs immediately went on Board the Peregrine Yatch, with Count de Corſana, and the Baron de Hohendorf, and about Four ſet Sail, with a fair Wind, which juſt ſerv'd him to reach the Coaſt of Holland on the Wedneſday following. There were Two Men of War appointed to convoy his Highneſs; and Two more for the Two Yatchs that carried over, at the ſame time, the one Don Louis da Cunha, Plenipotentiary from the King of Portugal; the other Monſieur Marſchalch de Bieberſteyn, the Pruſſian Plenipotentiary. As for Mr. Thomas Harley, who had another Yatch to carry him over, he ſail'd a Day or Two before the Prince. After his Highneſs's Departure, there were various Speculations and Reaſonings about the Succeſs of his Negotiation: Some affirm'd, not without Probability, that notwithſtanding the ſeveral Memorials he had preſented, and the lively and preſſing Repreſentations he had made, by Word of Mouth, the Britiſh Miniſtry made no Alteration in their Scheme, in relation either to the War, or Peace; and that if any Change happen'd in the latter, it was owing to other Cauſes, particularly the late unexpected Death of Two Dauphins of France. Others were of Opinion, that his Highneſs's coming over at this critical Juncture, was extream beneficial to the Common Cauſe: For as, on the one hand, the univerſal Attention which ſo great a Commander drew after him, ſomewhat abated the Animoſity of the Two contending Parties, ſo on the other hand, the continued Entertainments to which his Highneſs was invited by the Prime Nobility and Gentry of this Nation, gave him an Opportunity to know the Strength and Inclinations of both Parties: Which undoubtedly was of mighty Uſe to a Prince, who had ſo great a Share in the Councils of Vienna, and of the whole Empire. After all, it muſt be acknowledg'd, that though his Highneſs did not go away fully ſatisfied, he obtain'd, however, the beſt part of what he came for, viz. one Third of the Four Millions of Crowns judg'd to be ſufficient for the carrying on the War in Spain; which was, perhaps, more than the Commons would, at this Juncture, have granted to the Emperor, had not Prince Eugene ſollicited for him in Perſon. During the Prince's Stay in England, upon occaſion of ſome Frolicks and Diſorders committed in the Night-time, either by Town Rakes, or drunken Soldiers, a Report was induſtriouſly ſpread, "That there were great Numbers of diſaf-

"ſtruments, and committing many other extravagant Cruelties." At the ſame Time, printed Liſts were handed about, of many Perſons ſaid to have been taken up, and committed to ſeveral Priſons, upon Account of theſe Barbarities, amongſt whom ſome Men of Figure and Titles were inſinuated to be; which gain'd ſo ſtrong a Belief, and ſtruck ſuch a Terror among the credulous and timorous Vulgar, that as ſoon as Night drew on, many were deterr'd from going about on their lawful Occaſions, in the Streets. Hereupon thoſe who ſat at the Helm, thought fit to lay this Matter before the Queen, who, by the Advice of the Privy-Council, iſſued her Royal Proclamation, for the ſuppreſſing of Riots, and the Diſcovery of ſuch as had been guilty of the late Barbarities within the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Parts adjacent; charging and commanding, that the ſaid Offenders be proſecuted with the utmoſt Severity and Rigor of the Law, and promiſing a Reward of One Hundred Pounds, for the diſcovery and apprehending of any Perſon, who, ſince the 1ſt Day of February laſt, had, without any Provocation, wounded, ſtabb'd, or maim'd, or who ſhould, before the 1ſt Day of May, Wound, Stab, or Maim, any of her Majeſty's Subjects. Though this Proclamation, at firſt, fortify'd the Belief of the Barbarities and Riots, for the ſuppreſſing of which it was intended; yet the Conſequence of it ſhew'd, upon what ſlight Grounds that Belief had been entertain'd: For when People, under the Security of this this Proclamation, came to inquire calmly and cooly into the Matter, it was found, that no other Diſorders had happen'd of late, but ſuch as are uſual, and almoſt unavoidable, in populous Cities. But 'tis remarkable, that an officious Oculiſt, and other Agents of Men in Power, were ſhrewdly ſuſpected of having raiſed and improved the Report of this pretended Combination of Mohocks and Hawkubites, in order to throw the Odium of it upon the Whigs; whom, by all poſſible Means, they indeavour'd to render obnoxious to the People. However, in order to juſtify, or, at leaſt, palliate the ſiniſter Proceedings of the Miniſters in this Affair, Two common Pick-Pockets, were try'd, found guilty, and ſeverely fined, for Form-ſake. Nor was this all; for the Lord Hinchingbrooke, then a Youth, and an Officer of the Army, who, at the Deſire, and in Company of a Conſtable, went out one Night in queſt of the pretended Mohocks, were afterwards likewiſe arraign'd and try'd, as Diſturbers of the publick Peace; but their Innocence manifeſtly appearing, the Notion of Mohocks and Hawkubites, was univerſally exploded, to the Shame and Confuſion of thoſe who firſt broach'd, and then endeavour'd to countenance it.

The Report of the Mohocks and Hawkubites found to be ill-grounded. And raiſed only to aſperſe the Whigs.

All this while, the obſequious Commons proceeded in their proper Buſineſs, which was to provide Supplies for the Support of the preſent Miniſtry, and to raiſe Aſperſions to blaſt the laſt. With this Intention, on the 17th of March, the Commiſſioners of publick Accompts laid before the Houſe a Second Report, whereby it appear'd, " That of Twenty Thouſand Pounds Sterling, lent by the Queen to the " Treaſury of Scotland, to be imploy'd for her Majeſty's ſecret Service there in the " Year 1706, while the Treaty of Union was depending, about Twelve Thouſand " Pounds Sterling, had been repaid to the Earl of Godolphin, with which he had not " charg'd himſelf; ſo that, though his Lordſhip had affirm'd, to the beſt of his Re- " membrance, that the Queen's Servants of Scotland prevail'd with her Majeſty " not to require the Remainder of the Twenty Thouſand Pounds, yet the Com- " miſſioners were of Opinion, that the whole remain'd to be accounted for to her " Majeſty." This Report took likewiſe Notice of ſeveral other Overſights in the Management of the Crown Revenues, and publick Monies, both in England and Scotland: But whether upon an Apprehenſion that the Earl of Godolphin might eaſily clear himſelf of all theſe trivial Accuſations, in caſe a Proſecution were order'd againſt him, or upon ſome other Conſideration, no further Notice was taken of that Report, during this Seſſion.

The Earl of Godolphin charg'd by the Second Report of Commiſſioners of publick Accompts, laid before the Commons, March 17. 17$\frac{11}{12}$.

While theſe Things paſs'd in England, the States-General highly reſenting the late Cenſure of the Commons of Great Britain on their Conduct in the War, cauſed a long Memorial to be publiſh'd, in French and Dutch, in their own Vindication, and ſeveral Copies of it having been tranſmitted to England, the Writer of the News-Paper call'd the Daily-Courant, who was privately countenanc'd by the Whigs, adventured to publiſh it in Engliſh. The Miniſtry, and their Friends in the Houſe of Commons, could not but be inraged at the printing of a Writing, which flatly contradicted their former Aſſertions againſt the Dutch; and the ſpreading of which might go near to reſtore to Sight a great many, whoſe Eyes had been faſcinated by falſe Colours, and Miſrepreſentations of Things. " Hereupon a Complaint * being " made to the Houſe of Commons, of a printed Pamphlet, intituled, the Daily- " Courant, Monday, April 7. 1712. reflecting on the Proceedings of this Houſe, the " ſame was brought up to the Table, and the Title of the pretended Memorial there " inſerted, and a Paragraph therein were read: After which it was Reſolved, that the pretended Memorial printed in the ſaid Daily-Courant, is a falſe, ſcandalous, and malicious Libel, reflecting upon the Reſolutions of this Houſe, and Addreſs of this Houſe to her Majeſty thereupon, in Breach of the Privilege of this Houſe. And a Committe was appointed, to inquire who was the Author, Printer and Publiſher of the ſaid Libel, with Power to ſend for Perſons, Papers and Records. On the 11th of April, Mr. Hungerford made his Report from that Committee, That Samuel Buckley, the Writer and Printer of the Daily-Courant, own'd the having tranſlated and printed the ſaid Memorial: Whereupon the Queſtion was put, " That it appearing to this Houſe, " That Samuel Buckley is the Printer of the pretended Memorial in the Daily- " Courant of the 7th Inſtant (which had been adjudged by this Houſe to be a falſe, " ſcandalous, and malicious Libel, reflecting upon the Reſolutions of this Houſe, " and the Addreſs of her Majeſty thereupon, in breach of the Privilege of this " Houſe) he, for the ſaid Offence, be taken into the Cuſtody of the Serjeant at " Arms attending this Houſe;" upon which the Houſe divided, but the ſame was carried in the Affirmative by a Majority of 188 Voices againſt 57. It was then generally reported, that the main Handle for this Cenſure was a Suppoſition, that the ſaid Memorial was not genuine; which appeared, not long after, to be but a poor Pretence, the ſaid Memorial having not only been printed at the Hague, by the Printer Printer to the States in Ordinary, but delivered, by their High Mightineſſes Envoy Extraordinary, to the Queen of Great Britain, by whoſe Order, Mr. Secretary St. John wrote the following remarkable Anſwer.

Mr. Secretary St. John's Anſwer to the Dutch Memorial.

" THE Queen having maturely conſidered the Memorials of the 3d of April, " which were preſented to her Majeſty by the Sieur Van Borſelen, Envoy Extra- " ordinary from the Lords the States General, and the Reſoluton of the ſaid States of the " 22d of the ſame Month, which was communicated to her Majeſty by the Earl of " Strafford, her Ambaſſador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary in Holland, has or- " dered me to give this Anſwer in a few Words.

" That her Majeſty is ſurpriz'd to find, that far from giving the deſerved Praiſes " to the Efforts which her Majeſty has made in Spain and Portugal, Two Theatres of " the War that have been abandon'd by the States for ſo many Years, the ſaid Efforts " are look'd upon only as Quotas which the Queen was obliged to furniſh accord- " ing to Rule of Proportion, which has not the leaſt Foundation. Her Majeſty " agrees, that according to the Principles laid down in the Reſolution above-men- " tion'd, Great Britain will never contribute enough, nor the United Provinces " too little.

" There it is advanced as a Maxim, that the Power of each of the Allies is the " only Rule and Meaſure of the Efforts they are to make; and after this, the States " ſet up for Judges as well of the Power of her Majeſty's Kingdom, as of that of " their own State. 'Tis not difficult to perceive how far this ſort of Logick would " carry us; but her Majeſty, far from being obliged by the Memorial mention'd in " the Reſolution of the 22d of April, to change her Sentiments, thinks fit to renew " the Declarations which the Earl of Strafford made by her Order, and in her Name. " Theſe are not Points which the Queen propoſes as a Subject of Negotiation, but a " Communication to her Allies of a Reſolution ſhe has taken, and of a Rule laid " down, that they may thereupon concert their Meaſures.

" The Houſe of Commons, which is compoſed of Members ſent from each County " of the Kingdom, and who are competent Judges of what Burden the People are " able to bear, have only granted Subſidies for the current Year, according to the " Proportions, and under the Conditions which have been imparted to the States " General.

" Her Majeſty has declared to the Houſe, that ſhe thought thoſe Conditions rea- " ſonable, and has given her Orders according to the Plan; in which, by conſe- " ſequence, there is not the leaſt Alteration to be expected.

" The Queen looks upon an Union betwixt her ſelf and the States to be the " ſtrongeſt Support of the Common Cauſe; and, for that Reaſon, has done all that " ſhe could to traverſe the Deſigns of thoſe factious Spirits, which tended to break " that Union. The Propoſals which have been made by her Majeſty's Plenipoten- " tiaries to the Miniſters of the States General, do uncontrovertibly manifeſt the " Queen's ſincere Deſire to enter into a good Correſpondence and ſtrict Union with " the States. Theſe are all the Steps which her Majeſty could take for that End. " Her Majeſty flatters her ſelf, that they will have the Effect which ſhe ought to ex- " pect from them, and that they will diſſipate all thoſe vain Fears and ill-grounded " Jealouſies which have been diſperſed with ſo much Induſtry throughout the Seven " Provinces. But however that be, her Majeſty will have this Comfort, that ſhe " has neglected nothing of what was in her Power, to contribute towards the Satiſ- " faction of the States General, without abandoning the Intereſt of her own " Kingdoms. Done at Whitehall, May 8--19. 1712. Sign'd, Reſolutions about the Licentiouſneſs of the Preſs.

Nor did the Reſentment of the Commons fall only on Mr. Buckley; for the Majority of the Houſe were ſo exaſperated at the Dutch Memorial being printed in an Engliſh News-Paper, that they thereupon reſolved to reſtrain the Licentiouſneſs of the Preſs; altho' the reigning Party was chiefly indebted to it for their preſent Strength and Popularity. Accordingly, on the 12th of April, the Houſe being reſolved into a Committee, to conſider of that Part of the Queen's Meſſage to the Houſe, the 17th of January laſt, which related to the great Licenſe taken in Publiſhing falſe and ſcandalous Libels; and Sir Gilbert Dolben being the Chairman, they came to the Two following Reſolutions, " 1. That the great Liberty taken in Printing and " Publiſhing ſcandalous and impious Libels, creates Diviſions among her Majeſty's " Subjects; tends to the Diſturbance of the publick Peace; is highly prejudicial " to her Majeſty's Government; and is occaſion'd for want of due Regulation of " the Preſs. 2. That the Printing Preſſes be regiſter'd, with the Names of the " Owners, and Places of Abode; and that the Author, Printer, or Publiſher of " every Book, ſet his Name and Place of Abode thereto." Theſe Reſolutions were order'd to be reported the Tueſday † following; but the ſaid Report was then put off till that Day Sevennight, and afterwards further adjourn'd from time to time; ſome Members having, in the Grand Committee on Ways and Means, ſuggeſted a more effectual Way for ſuppreſſing Libels, viz. the laying a Duty on all News-Papers and Pamphlets, which was afterwards inſerted in a Lottery-Bill. " On the 12th of " April, the Commons order'd their Speaker to write his Circular Letters to the She- " riffs and Stewards of the ſeveral Counties of Great Britain, requiring the At- " tendance of the Members of the Houſe, on Tueſday Fortnight, the 1ſt of May " next following; and that it br ſignified in the Circular Letters, That the Houſe " would proceed with the utmoſt Severity againſt all ſuch Members who ſhould then be abſent, " and whoſe Excuſe ſhould not be allow'd." Which ſtrict Summons occaſioned a Report, and raiſed a general Expectation, that, on the 1ſt Day of May, the Queen would come to the Parliament, to communicate to both Houſes, the final Propoſals of France for a General Peace. In the mean time, the Commons having read the Third * Time, and paſs'd the Bill to reſtore Patrons to their ancient Rights in Scotland, and ſent it up to the Lords, the Agents for the Preſbyterian Miniſters of North-Britain, laid before their Lordſhips a Repreſentation againſt it; but tho' not a few Lords were apprehenſive of the fatal Conſequences of that Law, yet the Majority were of another Opinion, and ſo the Bill was ſent ‖ back with an Amendment, to which the Commons readily agreed. A Week ∴ after, being Eaſter-Monday, the Commons read a Second time, A Bill to appoint Commiſſioners to examine the Value of all Lands, and other Intereſts granted by the Crown ſince the 13th Day of February, 1688-9. and upon what Conſiderations ſuch Grants were made; and committed the ſame to a Committee of the whole Houſe, to whom the Bill to raiſe Money by way of a Lottery, was committed. It appearing by this, that the Commons deſign'd to Tack thoſe Two Bills, notwithſtanding a former Reſolution of the Houſe of Lords againſt ſuch a Practice; which made the Court apprehenſive, that the ſame might occaſion unhappy Differences between both Houſes, ſome of the Commons endeavour'd to prevent it; but the Majority appear'd then to be of a contrary Opinion. The ſame Day, in a Committee of the whole Houſe on Ways and Means, the Commons reſolved, Firſt, That certain Stamp Duties ſhall be laid upon Vellom, Parchment, and Paper, whereupon ſhall be ingroſs'd, regiſter'd, or enter'd, ſeveral Matters and Things, not heretofore charged with any Stamp-Duties. Which Matters and Duties were ſpecified in Seven other Reſolutions. Then, in the Ninth place, it was reſolved, " That a Duty be laid upon all " Pamphlets, and News-Papers, printed or written. 10th, That the ſaid Duty be " One Penny on every ſingle half Sheet, printed or written. 11th, That a Duty " of Twelve Pence be charged for every Advertiſement in any printed Paper. 12th, " That a Duty of Two Pence be laid upon every whole Sheet of any Pamphlet or " News-Paper, printed or written. 13th, That the ſaid Duties be granted for Thirty " Two Years;" with ſeveral other Reſolutions. Theſe Duties on Paper were, undoubtedly, a great Diſcouragement to Arts and Sciences: But, to do this Houſe of Commons Juſtice, we muſt take Notice, that they were induced to it, by the late unbounded Licentiouſneſs of the Preſs; and that they afterwards †† allow'd a Drawback for the Duties laid upon all Paper uſed in the Printing any Book in the Learned Languages, upon the Exportation thereof. Four Days  after, the Lottery-Bill was read a Second time, and committed; and, upon that Occaſion, the Commons reſolved to lay aſide the intended Tax upon Bricks, Tiles, and other building Materials.

About this Time, the principal Congregations of the French Proteſtant Refugees in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, having appointed a Committee of Twelve Perſons, to concert ſuch Meaſures as ſhould be thought proper to engage the Crown of Great Britain powerfully to ſupport their Intereſt in the preſent Negotiation of Peace; and this Committee being inform'd, that ſome unlucky Doubts had been ſtarted, and an odious Parallel made, between the French Refugees, and the Subjects of Great Britain, who had been in open Rebellion, and were Refugees in France: They did thereupon draw up a Petition and Repreſentation, which, on Monday the 21ſt of April, was, by the Secretary of State, laid before Her Majeſty in Council; importing, in Subſtance, " I. That the publick Exerciſe of the Romiſh Religion " was forbidden by the Laws of Her Majeſty's Kingdom; whereas that of the Pro- " teſtant Religion was allow'd in France, by ſolemn Edicts, of which her Royal " Predeceſſors were become Guarantees. II. That the Eſtates of the Engliſh and Iriſh " were confiſcated, on Account of Rebellion; whereas, the French Proteſtants " were never wanting in their Loyalty to their Sovereign. III. That the with- " drawing of the Engliſh and Iriſh was voluntary; when, even after their Rebellion, " they might have enjoy'd the Benefit of the General Pardon: Whereas, the French " Proteſtants were forc'd to fly; for tho' they never were Rebels, they could not

" ſtay in France, without either abjuring their Religion, or being expoſed to " a cruel Perſecution. IV. That theſe Diſparities were ſo evident, That the Court " of France, who, at the beginning of the preſent War, pretended to exchange " Rebels Priſoners, with French Refugees ſettled in England, was obliged to wave " that unjuſt Pretenſion, and brought to acknowledge, that Repriſals could not take " Place, between Perſons in ſo different Circumſtances. Concluding, that the King of " Pruſſia and the States-General having demanded, That the Eſtates of ſuch as were Re- " fugees in their Dominions, be reſtored to them, if they who had the Happineſs to be " Refugees in her Majeſty's Kingdoms, were deprived of the ſame Advantages, " it would occaſion a ſad Inequality in their Condition, and put the Petitioners upon " a worſe Footing than their Brethren, Refugees in other States: And therefore they " hoped, her Zeal and Piety would incline her Royal Heart to give Orders to her " Miniſters to inſiſt, not only on the Reſtoration of the Edicts in their Behalf, par- " ticularly that of Nantes, with the Enlargement of the Sufferers on board the " Gallies, in Goals, and elſewhere, on account of their Religion: But alſo on the " Reſtitution of the Eſtates of which the Refugees had ſo unjuſtly been deprived."

* April 23. The Queen's Anſwer.

Two Days * after, the Earl of Dartmouth, Principal Secretary of State, by the Queen's Command, wrote a Letter to Meſſieurs du Bourdieu and Graverol, Two French Miniſters of the Committeee before-mention'd, acquainting them, " That " the Lord Privy-Seal, and the Earl of Strafford, were already under the ſtricteſt " Orders to ſupport the Intereſts of the French Refugees at the Negotiations of " Peace. That her Majeſty had ſo much Conſideration of their Sufferings, that ſhe " was willing to give any further Directions that might be of Advantage to them; " and had therefore commanded him to inquire into that Part of their Repreſenta- " tion, wherein they ſaid, Her Majeſty's Predeceſſors were Guarantees of the Edicts " for Toleration of the Proteſtant Religion in France; in which his Lordſhip deſired " their Aſſiſtance, it being of great Uſe to the Support of their Intereſts, that that " Matter ſhould be fully explain'd." In Obedience to this Letter, the Committee appointed by the French Refugees in London and Weſtminſter, did, on the 12th of May, lay before his Lordſhip a Memorial, to prove the Guaranty of the Crown of England, for the Edicts in Favour of the Reformed Churches of France: Which Memorial was, in outward Appearance, ſo favourably received, that the Queen was pleaſed to appoint Armand de Bourbon, Marquis de Miremont, Nephew to the late Earl of Feverſham, to go to Utrecht, to take Care, in a particular Manner, and in her Majeſty's Name, of the Intereſts of the French Refugees, with which extraordinary Commiſſion, that Nobleman ſet out for Holland about the middle of June. On the other hand, the French Refugees in London, made Choice of a Miniſter † and a Gentleman to go to Holland, to ſollicit their Affairs there; but finding afterwards, both by the Courſe of the Negotiations at Utrecht, and by the renewing of the Perſecution of their Brethren in France, that they were either but faintly ſupported by Great Britain, or that the Court of France ſhew'd no Regard to her Majeſty's Interceſſion, that Deputation was laid aſide. However, the French Refugees in Switzerland, being big with Hopes, from the Protection of the moſt Powerful Proteſtant States, did, by their Brethren in England, put up a Petition to her Britannick Majeſty, which was, indeed, very graciouſly receiv'd, but had little or no Effect.

To reſume the Proceedings in Parliament, the ſtrict Summons ſent to the Members of the Houſe of Commons, to attend on the 1ſt Day of May, was, it ſeems, but a political Amuſement, to keep ſuch of them as were not in the Secret, and the Bulk of the Nation, in good Humour: For when that Day came, the Call of the Houſe was further adjourn'd to the 8th, then to the 15th, and then again to the 22d of May; the Miniſtry not thinking it proper to declare the Reſult of their Negotiation with France, 'till the Commons had intirely diſpatch'd the Buſineſs of the Supply. In the mean Time, we may take Notice, that though ſome Courtiers in the Houſe of Commons had, on the 21ſt of April, fail'd in their Endeavours to prevent the Tacking of the Bill relating to King William's Grants to the Lottery-Bill; yet upon a Promiſe made by the Lord Treaſurer to ſeveral leading Men, that he would uſe all his Intereſt to procure the paſſing of the firſt of theſe Bills, ſingle, in the Houſe of Lords, on the 6th of May, the Commons reſolv'd, That the Committee of the whole Houſe be diſcharged from the Inſtruction to alter and make thoſe Bills into one: Which was carried by a Majority of Three Hundred Voices againſt Eighty One. Four Days ‖ after, the Grants-Bills, with the Amendments made to it, was order'd to be ingroſs'd; on the 13th of May, the Commons proceeded to the Choice of Seven Commiſſioners to execute the Truſts and Powers in the ſaid Bill; and the Choice, by Balloting, fell upon John Hind Cotton, Eſq; the Honourable James Murray, Eſq; Henry Viſcount Down, of the Kingdom of Ireland; Charles Cholmondley, Eſq; James Bulteel, Eſq; William Levinz, Eſq; and Sir Edmond Bacon, Baronet.

The next * Day, the Commiſſioners Names were inſerted in the Blank left for them in the Bill, which being ingroſs'd, was read the Third Time, paſs'd, and ſent up to the Houſe of Peers. On the 17th of May, their Lordſhips read the ſaid Bill the firſt Time; and the Queſtion being put, that the Bill be read a Second Time, it was carried in the Affirmative, by a Majority of Two Voices. Accordingly, on the 19th, the Bill was read the Second Time, and committed to a grand Committee, into which the Houſe having reſolv'd it ſelf immediately, the Duke of Argyle, the Earl of Wharton, the Lords Cowper and Halifax, and ſeveral other Peers, made Speeches againſt the Bill: But though there were Six or Seven Diviſions in the Committee, yet the Affirmative ſtill carried it by one Voice. The next † Day, upon the Third Reading of the Bill, there aroſe a warm and long Debate, in which the Duke of Argyle, and the Earl of Ilay, his Brother, diſtinguiſh'd themſelves, and ſpoke emphatically in Praiſe of the late King William; from whence it was eaſy to conjecture, that they did not go ſo entirely with the preſent Miniſtry, as they had done the preceding Seſſion. The firſt ſaid, " That if for the Eaſe of the Publick, " it was found proper to reſume the Grants of the Crown, he would readily give " his Vote for it, provided they would go ſo far back, as the Reſtoration of King " Charles the Second. But that he could never agree to limit the Bill to the Grants " of King William; becauſe ſuch an Act would be injurious to the Memory of the " Deliverer of Great Britain, and all Europe; which ought to be had in Reverence " by all honeſt Men." The Peers, above-mention'd, and ſome others, ſpoke likewiſe againſt the Partial Diſtinction between Grants ſince the Revolution, and thoſe before it; adding, that ſuch a Diſtinction gave too much Credit to a Miniſtry, who by the paſſing of the ſaid Bill, would have the Means in their Hands, to ruin and oppreſs thoſe who had not the good Luck to pleaſe them. To this the Earl of Oxford, Lord High-Treaſurer, anſwer'd, That no one had reaſon to be alarm'd at the Bill, ſince the Intent of it was only to examine the Value of the Grants made by King William, and upon what Conſiderations they were given; but that, as it was preſumed, thoſe that enjoy'd them, had render'd very ſignal Service to their Country, ſo it was not to be doubted, but the Parliament would confirm the ſame. The Earl of Wharton reply'd, " That it was alſo to be preſum'd, that thoſe who enjoy'd the Grants of King " Charles the Second, and King James the Second, might have likewiſe done impor- " tant Service to the Nation: Wherefore it would be very proper to look into the " Motives of all thoſe Grants, in order to confirm them to thoſe who had deſerv'd " them." The Lords of the oppoſite Side waved this ſhrewd Suggeſtion; and the Earl of Oxford only obſerv'd, That he had been inform'd, that the Commons had no Deſign abſolutely to reſume the Grants of King William, but only to make the Poſſeſſors pay the Value of Four or Five Years Rent, for which they would have the ſaid Grants confirm'd to them for ever: To which the Earl of Wharton again ſmartly reply'd, " That he " would not at all call in Queſtion, what a Lord of ſuch known Probity and Since- " rity, had advanc'd; but that the Reſumption of all the Grants of Ireland, ſuffi- " ciently ſhew'd, that the Commons had not been content with a Part." Several other Speeches that were made on both Sides, prolong'd the Debate 'till between Six and Seven in the Evening, when the Queſtion being put, that the Bill do paſs, it appear'd upon the gathering of the Votes, that there were Seventy Eight Voices on each Side, viz. Fifty Three preſent, and Twenty Five Proxies for the Affirmative; and Fifty Two preſent, and Twenty Six Proxies for the Negative; ſo that the latter carried it, according to the Uſage of Parliament; to the great Diſappointment and Mortification of the Enemies of the Revolution. It was obſerv'd, that the Loſs of this Bill was, in a great Meaſure, owing to the Vigilance of a Noble ‖ Peer, who was moſt concern'd in that Affair; and who being inform'd, that the Lord Colepper had ſent his Proxy to the Earl of Sunderland, who, by reaſon of his Indiſpoſition, could not produce it, immediately diſpatch'd an Expreſs, who riding Poſt all Night, return'd ſoon enough to deliver the ſaid Proxy to another Lord. On the other hand, many were of Opinion, that had not the Duke of Buckingham, and the Earl of Strafford, abſented themſelves from the Houſe, the Bill had certainly paſs'd. On the 22d of May, the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, with the uſual State, and the Commons attending, ſhe gave the Royal Aſſent to the Lottery-Bill, and to Twenty other publick Bills.

Notwithſtanding the former Diſappointment, it was by many expected, that the Queen would, on that Day, (May 22.) have laid a State of the Negotiation of Peace before the Parliament, the rather, becauſe the Earl of Strafford, one of her Majeſty's Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, arriv'd in London ſome Days before: But, it ſeems, ſome Points were not yet fully ſettled, between the Britiſh Court, and that of France; ſo that her Majeſty did not think fit to make a Speech to her Parliament. It was obſerved, that at the preſenting the Money-Bill, the Speaker of the Houſe

House of Commons, insinuated, in his Compliment to the Queen, "That her "faithful Commons were in hopes, that what they had so chearfully given for her "Majesty's Occasions, would enable Her Majesty to put an End to the present "War, by a safe and honourable Peace." But yet those Hopes were so far abated, by Her Majesty's Silence, that, as soon as the Commons were return'd to their House, * Mr. Benson, Chancellor of the Exchequer, having mov'd, That the Call of the House might be adjourn'd to the 4th of June next; by which Time, he did not doubt, but the Queen would lay before them the Result of the present Negotiation; Mr. Hampden, one of the leading Members of the Whig Party, complain'd, "That "notwithstanding all the Promises, given from Time to Time to the Commons, "we had an unactive and lazy Campaign, and a trifling Negotiation of Peace; so that "we were amus'd by our Ministers at home, and trick'd by our Enemies abroad." Mr. Secretary had too great a Share in the Management of Affairs, not to resent these Insinuations; and thereupon he said, with some Vehemence, "That they "highly reflected on Her Majesty, and her Ministers: But tho' some Members "had been sent to the Tower for less Offences, and that he who spoke last, might "be fond of that Honour, yet, he hop'd, the House would be of another Opi-"nion." Sir Richard Onslow reply'd, That to suppose Her Majesty, or her Ministers, to have any Influence on the Deliberations of that House, was injurious to Her Majesty, and a Violation of the Privileges of that House. In which he was seconded by Mr. Lechmere: But the Debate went no further, in Consideration, (as the Friends of the prevailing Party suggested) that the Session drawing to an End, the Commitment of a Member, at that Time, would rather be a Pride, than a Mortification to him: And so, according to the Motion of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Call of the House was put off till the 4th of June.

Bold Speech of Mr. Hampden.

Answer'd by Sec. St. John.

What pass'd in the mean Time in Flanders, made, some Days after, a great Noise in both Houses of Parliament, and throughout all Europe: But before we give an Account of it, we must, in the first Place, attend the Negotiations of Peace, and what was done in the Netherlands, previous to the opening of the Campaign. On Friday, the 28th of December 1711, the Bishop of Bristol, Lord Privy-Seal, Her Majesty's First Plenipotentiary, and Monsieur Buys, Envoy Extraordinary from the States-General, sail'd, in their respective Yachts from Gravesend; and having reach'd the Coast of Holland, on Tuesday the 1st of January O. S. or 12th N. S. Monsieur Buys went, the same Day, to the Hague. The next Day, the Lord Privy-Seal came to Roterdam; and, on the 14th, went to the Hague; where, together with the Earl of Strafford, he was in Conference with the Grand Pensionary, and then went back to Roterdam; from whence he proceeded, the 15th, to Utrecht: So that he was the first Minister that appear'd at the Place of Treaty. The Earl of Strafford follow'd him thither on the 17th; and, on the 18th, Messieurs Buys and Rensswonde, Two of the Plenipotentiaries of the States-General, arriv'd there also, and immediately paid a Visit to the British Plenipotentiaries. The next Morning, the Mareschal d'Huxelles, the Abbot de Polignac, and Monsieur Mesnager, the Three French Plenipotentiaries, arriv'd at Utrecht; and the Two British Ministers, after having been with the Plenipotentiaries of the States, to return their Visits, went to see those of France, at the Mareschal d'Huxelles's House. They received their Lordships at their Coaches, and conducted them thither again: And about Four in the Afternoon, the French Plenipotentiaries return'd their Lordships Visit, and were receiv'd in the like manner.

Account of the Negotiations of Peace.

We may here take notice, that France having nam'd Three Plenipotentiaries, and Monsieur Mesnager in particular, to take care of Commercial Affairs; the Court of Great Britain had a mind to add Mr. Prior, to their Two Ministers at Utrecht, for the same Purpose; but the high-spirited Earl of Strafford, having absolutely refus'd to be join'd in Commission with a Person of so mean Extraction, and threatning to lay down his Imployment, the Business of Trade was committed to the Lord Privy Seal; who, not being vers'd in those Matters, was obliged to direct himself by the Lights he received from Mr. Arthur Moore.

The E. of Strafford refuses to be join'd in Commission with Mr. Prior.

The Plenipotentiaries nominated by the States-General, were, Monsieur Randwick, for the Province of Gelderland; Messieurs Buys and Vanderdussen, for that of Holland; Monsieur de Moermont, for Zealand; Monsieur de Rensswoude, for Utrecht; Monsieur de Goslinga, for Friezland; the Count de Rechteren, for Over-Yssel; and the Count de Tu and Kniphuysen, for Groningen. We may likewise observe, that Monsieur Buys's dextrous Compliance in England, in order to discover the Secret of Monsieur Mesnager's Negotiation, occasion'd a Report, that his Conduct was not approv'd by the States; which was altogether groundless: For, on the contrary, upon the Report of his Embassy, their High Mightinesses highly applauded his Address and Penetration.

The Britiſh Plenipotentiaries having given Notice of their Arrival to the Magiſtrates of Utrecht, Four of their Deputies waited upon them, on the 20th of January N. S. at their reſpective Houſes; and afterwards, paid the ſame Compliment to the Plenipotentiaries of France. In the Afternoon, a Conference was held between the Britiſh and Dutch Miniſters, at Monſieur de Buys's Houſe: And, the ſame Evening, the Marquis del Borgo, one of the Duke of Savoy's Plenipotentiaries, arriv'd at Utrecht, accompany'd by Monſieur de Salis, Miniſter of the Griſons. The next * Day, the Britiſh, Dutch, and Savoy Miniſters, met together at the Lord Privy-Seal's Houſe, to conſider of the Manner of opening the General Conferences, and the Method of carrying them on: And, on the 22d, the Miniſters of the Allies went to the Town-Houſe, to examine, and give Directions about the Place of Conference, and the Apartments appointed by the Magiſtrates for the Miniſters on both ſides. On the 23d, they had a Conference together; at which they drew up, and agreed to the Project of a Regulation, to be obſerved by all the Miniſters during the Congreſs; which being afterwards communicated to the French Plenipotentiaries, they made ſome Alterations in it, which were comply'd with. Beſides this Regulation, it was agreed, that the General Conferences ſhould begin on Friday, the 29th of January N. S.; and that they ſhould afterwards be held on Wedneſdays and Saturdays, at Ten in the Morning.

On the 27th, the Britiſh Miniſters viſited Meſſieurs Vanderduſſen and Goſſinga, Two of the States Plenipotentiaries, and Monſieur de Mellarede, one of the Duke of Savoy's; who came to Utrecht the Morning before, and immediately notify'd their Arrival to their Lordſhips, whoſe Viſits they return'd the ſame Day. The States of the Province of Utrecht being aſſembled there the 28th, the Regulation agreed to by the Miniſters, to be obſerv'd during the Congreſs, was communicated to them, and to the Magiſtrates of that City; who both promiſed to contribute what lay in their Power, towards putting it in Execution; and to keep ſuch Guards at the Town-Houſe, as ſhould be neceſſary to preſerve good Order, during the Conferences. Theſe Preliminary Points being ſettled, on the 29th of January, at Ten in the Morning, the Firſt Conference was open'd, by Eight Miniſters of the Allies; viz. the Two Britiſh, Four of the States-General's, Two of the Duke of Savoy's, and the Three Plenipotentiaries of France; and laſted till near One in the Afternoon. The Lord Privy-Seal appear'd in a black Velvet Gown, adorn'd with Gold Loops, with a long Train, born up by Two Pages in aſh-colour'd Coats, lac'd with Silver Orris, and Waſtcoats of green Velvet: And, the Plenipotentiaries being aſſembled, his Excellency addreſs'd himſelf to the Miniſters of France, in the following Speech:

First Conference, Jan. 29.

The Biſhop of Briſtol's Speech.

" WE are this Day met together, in the Name of GOD, to lay the Founda" tion of a General Peace, between the High Allies and the King your " Maſter. We bring ſincere Intentions, and alſo poſitive Orders from our Princi" pals, to concur in every Thing on Their Part, which may tend to the Further" ance and Happy Concluſion of ſo Beneficial and Chriſtian-like a Work.

" On the other hand, we are in Hopes, Gentlemen, that you are of the ſame " Mind; and that your Inſtructions are ſo full, as to enable you to anſwer, with" out Loſs of Time, the Expectation of the High Allies, in explaining your
" ſelves clearly and roundly upon the Points, which are to be ſettled in theſe
" Conferences: And that you will do it in ſo plain and particular a manner, that " all and every of the Confederate Princes and States, may find a juſt and reaſon-
" able Satisfaction upon their reſpective Pretenſions.

Speeches of the French Plenipotentiaries.

The Mareſchal d' Huxelles, Firſt Plenipotentiary of France, anſwer'd, " That it " could not be doubted, but his Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty had a ſincere and ardent
" Deſire to give Peace to Europe;" adding, " That, with this View, his Majeſty
" had furniſh'd his Plenipotentiaries with ample Inſtructions, and a full Power, to " come to the Concluſion of ſo beneficial a Work, which was ſo earneſtly deſir'd by " all Europe." After this, the Abbot de Polignac made an elaborate Speech; wherein, among other remarkable Expreſſions, he declar'd, on the Part of the King his Maſter, " That the Seven Propoſitions, which his Colleague, Monſieur Meſnager,
" ſign'd at London, were obligatory to his Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty only, and not to " any of the Allies: Adding, " That upon this Foot, the Miniſters of the ſaid
" Allies might repair to Utrecht, aſſiſt at the Conferences, and produce their De" mands and Pretenſions; and that Endeavours ſhould be uſed, to give them a
" reaſonable Satisfaction." The Earl of Strafford, and the Plenipotentiaries of the States and Duke of Savoy, made alſo Speeches ſuitable to that Solemn Occaſion; after which, the Aſſembly broke up. The next * Day, the Miniſters of the Allies had a Conference together at the Town-Houſe, and agreed to meet there in like manner Twice a Week, during the Congreſs, in order to preſerve Union amongſt them, and to take the neceſſary Meaſures for promoting the Intereſt of the reſpective Princes and States they repreſented. Accordingly, they met again at the Town-Houſe, the 1ſt of February, N. S. and in the Afternoon the Britiſh and Dutch Plenipotentiaries had another Conference at Monſieur Goſlinga's Lodgings: And becauſe the French Miniſters had, in their Speeches, promiſed to deliver, in Writing, the Intentions of their Court, it was reſolved to deliver to them, in the next Conference, a Declaration, importing, "That the Miniſters of the High Allies, "already there, expected, according to the Offers of the Miniſters of France, the "Plan or Scheme they had promiſed; and would not fail to return a particular An- "ſwer thereto, for what concern'd the particular Intereſt of their Principals; and as "to the Miniſters of ſuch of the Allies, who were ſtill abſent, the ſaid Miniſters "had Reaſon to believe, that they would forthwith repair thither, to concur with "them in their Anſwer." This Paper being deliver'd to the French Miniſters, in the Second Conference, they promiſed to give in their Offers for a General Peace; but declared, they wiſh'd that all the Miniſters of the Allies were preſent, that they might, at the ſame time, receive a Counter-Project, or Anſwer, from all the Members of the Grand Alliance. The next † Day, the Count de Metternich, Plenipotentiary of the King of Pruſſia, came to Utrecht; and having notify'd his Arrival, was complimented and viſited by the other Miniſters; for tho' the French had not yet own'd the Title of his Pruſſian Majeſty, it was agreed, as an Expedient, that in the Viſits between the Miniſters of that Prince and thoſe of France, they ſhould uſe ſometimes the Word Maſter, and ſometimes that of King, without the Addition of France or Pruſſia.

Third General Conference, Feb. 6. N. S.

On Saturday, the 6th of February, N. S. was held the Third General Conference, at which Count Metternich aſſiſted; but it did not laſt above an Hour, the Plenipotentiaries on both Sides having agreed to defer the moſt material Buſineſs, till the next General Conference; and thereby allow the more Time to the other Miniſters of the Allies to repair to the Congreſs. Meſſieurs Buys and Goſlinga being, the next Day, in the Evening, returned from the Hague; aſſiſted the 8th, in the Morning, at a Conference of the Miniſters of the Allies; and in the Evening, together with their Colleagues, were in a private Conference with the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries. The ſame Morning *, Monſieur d' Elorme, Miniſter of the King of Poland, Elector of of Saxony, arrived at Utrecht; as did, in the Evening, Monſieur de Randwyck, and Count Kniphuyſen, Two more of the States Plenipotentiaries. Before we proceed, we ought to take Notice, that the Concourſe of Britiſh Gentlemen, and other Perſons, reſiding at Utrecht, who were deſirous to join in the Divine Worſhip, after the manner of the Church of England, was ſo great at the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries, that the Magiſtrates at Utrecht, with a great deal of Civility, made an Offer of St. John's Church, for their better Accommodation; which their Lordſhips having accepted, Divine Service was celebrated there on Sunday the 7th of February, N. The Difficulty the Emperor made of ſending his Plenipotentiaries to the Congreſs, having, at laſt, been remov'd, by the poſitive Declaration made to them by the Earl of Strafford, and confirm'd to Prince Eugene of Savoy, at the Britiſh Court, that the Seven Preliminary Articles, offer'd by France, and ſigned by Monſieur Meſnager, were only bare Propoſals, and ſhould not be admitted as the Baſis of the enſuing Treaty, Count Zinzendorf and Count Conſtruck, Two of his Imperial Majeſty's Plenipotentiaries, came to Utrecht on the 9th of February, in the Evening; and immediately went to a Conference, at which the other Miniſters of the Allies were then aſſembled. The next Day, the Fourth General Conference was held, which laſted from Ten in the Morning till Two in the Afternoon; but tho' the ſame begun with reciprocal Compliments, yet it ſoon turned into a warm Diſpute between the Imperial and French Miniſters. The Mareſchal d' Huxelles made a Speech, importing, That the King, his Maſter, had moſt ſincere Intentions to end this War, to the Satisfaction of the Allies; that in order to that, they ought to deal roundly and † fairly; that he hoped a good Succeſs of this Negotiation, ſince the Ambaſſadors of the Houſe of Auſtria had, at laſt, reſolved to come to the Congreſs; and thereupon, deſired the Miniſters of the Allies to deliver the Propoſals they had to make. Count Zinzendorf very readily anſwer'd, That the Emperor, his Maſter, had no leſs ſincere Intentions to contribute all that lay in his Power, towards ſo deſirable a Bleſſing as a General Peace: But that it ſeem'd Monſieur d' Huxelles, inſtead of dealing roundly and fairly, begun, on the contrary, with a ‖ Fetch, ſince he could not be a Stranger to the Demands of the Allies, nor have forgot where the Conferences at Gertruydenberg broke off; that there was nothing more for them to do now, than to find out Ways and Means to remove the Difficulties that had obſtructed that Negotiation; and ſince the King, their Maſter, had deſired this Congreſs of the Allies, the latter had Rea- ſon to expect, that he had given his Miniſters neceſſary Inſtructions for that end: Thereby inſinuating, that the Allies inſiſted on the Firſt Preliminaries ſigned at the Hague, in the Year 1709. Count Zinzendorf likewiſe took Notice of this Expreſſion, The Ambaſſadors of the Houſe of Auſtria, as derogatory to his Imperial Majeſty. The Abbot de Polignac reply'd, That they ought to talk no more of the Affair of Gertruydenberg, ſince the King had fixed a Time for the Allies to accept his Propoſal; which they not having done, he was under no Engagement. This occaſion'd a high Debate, and the Mareſchal d' Huxelles having, in relation to the Affairs of Spain, adventured to ſay, That they ought to wait the Arrival of the Ambaſſador of that Crown: Count Zinzendorf ſmartly replied, he was preſent, and himſelf was the Perſon. Monſieur d' Huxelles return'd, he acknowledg'd none but King Philip's, which inflam'd the Diſpute; and the Mareſchal having likewiſe made bold to advance, in relation to a Point in Debate, That the Queen of England had engaged her Promiſe: The Lord Privy-Seal took him ſhort, and ſaid, there was no ſuch thing in his Inſtructions. At laſt, the French Plenipotentiaries conſented to deliver their Propoſals in Writing; which they did accordingly the next Day, at an Extraordinary General Conference, being as follows:

Extraordinary General Conference, Feb. 11. N. S. Specifick Explanation of the Offers of France, deliver'd by the French Miniſters.

A Specifick Explanation of the Offers of France for a General Peace, to the Satisfaction of all the Parties concern'd in the preſent War.

THE King will acknowledge, at the ſigning of the Peace, the Queen of Great Britain, in that Quality; as alſo, the Succeſſion of that Crown, according to the preſent Settlement, and in the manner her Britannick Majeſty ſhall pleaſe.

His Majeſty will cauſe all the Fortifications of Dunkirk to be demoliſh'd, immediately after the Peace; provided an Equivalent be given him, to his Satisfaction.

The Iſland of St. Chriſtopher, Hudſon's-Bay, and Streight of that Name, ſhall be yielded up intire to Great Britain; and Acadia, with Port-Royal, and the Fort, ſhall be reſtored intire to his Majeſty.

As to the Iſland of Newfoundland, the King offers to yield up that alſo to Great Britain, reſerving only to himſelf the Fort of Placentia, and the Right of catching and drying Fiſh, as before the War.

It ſhall be agreed, to make a Treaty of Commerce before or after the Peace, as England ſhall chuſe; the Conditions of which ſhall be made as equal between the Two Nations as they can poſſibly.

The King will conſent, at the ſigning of the Peace, that the Spaniſh Netherlands, which are made over and given to the Elector of Bavaria, by the King of Spain, ſhall ſerve for a Barrier to the United Provinces; and to augment it, he will join thereto, Furnes, and Furner Ambaght, or Diſtrict, Knoque, Ypres, and the Caſtellany of Menin, with its Verge: In Exchange, his Majeſty demands, in order to form the Barrier of France, Aire, St. Venant, Bethune, Douay, and their Dependencies.

If the States General are deſirous to keep Gariſons in the fortify'd Places of the Barrier, ſo form'd of the Dominions tranſferr'd to his Electoral Highneſs, and of what France adds thereto of its own; his Majeſty conſents, that they ſhall put their Troops into them in as great Number as they pleaſe; and beſides, that they ſhall be maintain'd at the Expence of the Country.

In Conſideration of this Ceſſion, and of this Conſent, the King, on his ſide, demands, as an Equivalent for the Demolition of Dunkirk, the Towns and Citadels of Liſle and Tournay, with their Caſtellanies and Dependencies.

The Barrier thus regulated between France, and the States General, the King will grant, for augmenting the Commerce of their Subjects, what is ſtipulated by the Treaty of Ryſwick, and the advantageous Tariff of 1664, with an Exception only of Six ſorts of Merchandize, which ſhall be agreed on, and which ſhall remain charg'd with the ſame Duties that are paid at this time; as alſo the Exemption of 50 Sols per Ton on the Dutch Shipping, that come into France, from the United Provinces, and Foreign Countries.

As to the Commerce of Spain and the Indies, the King will engage, not only to the States General, but likewiſe to her Britannick Majeſty, and to all the other Potentates, by virtue of the Power he has in this Particular, that the ſaid Commerce ſhall be allow'd exactly, and carried on in the ſame manner, as it was under the Reign, and till the Death of Charles II. and will promiſe, that the French ſhall ſubmit, as all other Nations, to the ancient Laws and Regulations made by the Kings, his Catholick Majeſty's Predeceſſors, with reſpect to the Commerce and Navigation of the Spaniſh Indies.

His Majeſty further conſents, that all the Potentates of Europe may enter into the Guaranty of this Promiſe, his Majeſty promiſes, that the King, his Grandſon, ſhall renounce, for the ſake of the Peace, all Pretenſions to the Kingdom of Naples and Sardinia, as well as to the Dutchy of Milan, in whoſe Name he will conſent, that the Part of that Dutchy which is made over to the Duke of Savoy, ſhall remain to his Royal Highneſs: Provided, that in Conſideration of this Ceſſion, the Houſe of Auſtria do, in the like Manner, deſiſt from all Pretenſions to the other Parts of the Monarchy of Spain, from whence that Houſe ſhall withdraw their Troops immediately after the Peace.

that

The Frontiers on both Sides upon the Rhine, ſhall be ſettled in the ſame Condition as they were before the preſent War.

In Conſideration of all the Terms above ſpecify'd, the King demands, that the Electors of Cologn and Bavaria, ſhall be re-eſtabliſhed in the full and entire Poſſeſſion of their Dominions, Dignities, Prerogatives, Goods, moveable and immoveable, which they injoy'd before the preſent War: And reciprocally his Majeſty will recognize in Germany, and in Pruſſia, all the Titles which he has not yet acknowledged.

The King will reſtore to the Duke of Savoy, what he has taken from him during this War; as in like Manner, his Royal Highneſs ſhall reſtore to him what he has taken from France; ſo that the Limits on both Sides ſhall be the ſame, as they were before the Declaration of War.

All Things, as to Portugal, ſhall be re-eſtabliſhed, and remain on the ſame Foot in Europe, as they were before the preſent War, as well with regard to France, as to Spain; and as to the Dominions that Crown has in America, if there be any Differences to ſettle, Endeavours ſhall be uſed to agree them amicably.

The King will conſent freely and Bona Fide, to take, in Concert with the Allies, all the moſt juſt Meaſures for hindring the Crowns of France and Spain from being ever united on the ſame Head; that is to ſay, that one and the ſame Prince ſhall never be at once King of both.

All preceding Treaties, that is, thoſe of Munſter, and others, that have been made ſince, ſhall be repeated and confirmed, to remain in their Force and Virtue; excepting only ſuch Articles from which the Treaty of Peace now to be made, ſhall derogate or alter ſome thing.

Signed, HUXELLES.

The reading of theſe Offers occaſions a great Surprize, and many ſhrewd Reflections.

It may eaſily be gueſs'd, what Surprize the reading of this Specifick Explanation, occaſion'd among the Confederate Miniſters, particularly thoſe of the Emperor, and States-General, whoſe Friends obſerved, that if the French had gain'd as many Victories and Conqueſts, as the Allies had done over them for Ten Years paſt, they could hardly have offer'd more extravagant Demands: But, paſſing over the various Reflections that were made on this Occaſion, we muſt take Notice, that Copies of theſe Offers were immediately diſpatch'd by the Miniſters of the Allies, to their reſpective Principals. The Count de Tarouca, the King of Portugal's firſt Plenipotentiary; and Count Maffey, one of the Duke of Savoy's Miniſters, arrived at Utrecht the 11th, as did, the next Day, Count Stadian, for the Elector of Mentz: Baron Dalwich, for the Lord Landgrave of Heſſe-Caſſel; and ſeveral other Miniſters. On the 12th of February, the Two firſt aſſiſted at a Conference of the Miniſters of the Allies: And the next * Day was held the Sixth General Conference, which the Earl of Strafford open'd, with acquainting the Miniſters of France, in Purſuance of what was agreed the Day before, between the Confederate Plenipotentiaries: That they had found it neceſſary to take Time 'till the 5th of March, N. S. to give in the Specifick Demands of the reſpective Parties ingaged in the preſent War: To which the Miniſters of France readily agreed. As during that Interval, the ſubject Matter of the general Conferences was to be of leſs Importance, than at other Times, it was likewiſe agreed, on all Sides, that they ſhould be held only on the Saturdays: But on the other hand, the Plenipotentiaries of the Allies reſolv'd to meet more frequently. On Sunday the 14th, in the Evening, the Count de Zinzendorf, aud Monſieur Conſbruck, viſited each the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries; and the next Morning ſet out for the Hague, where they immediately repair'd to the Congreſs of the Confederate Miniſters, and proteſted againſt the Specifick Offers of France. The ſame Evening Count Denhoff, the King of Pruſſia's firſt Plenipotentiary, arrived at Utrecht, ſo that by this Time, the Congreſs was almoſt compleat.

The firſt Plenipotentiary of Pruſſia arrives at Utrecht.

The Offers of France receiv'd with univerſal Indignation in Holland.

They unite more ſtrongly ſome of the Confederates.

The Propoſitions of France were ſoon diſpers'd in Print in all the United-Provinces; and it is hard to expreſs, with what Indignation they were receiv'd by People of all Ranks. Indeed, the wiſer, and better bred, among the Dutch, either kept their Thoughts to themſelves, or communicated them only to particular Friends; but the giddy Multitude could not forbear venting their bitter Reproaches againſt thoſe from whom they ſuppos'd the French Court had receiv'd Incouragement. Theſe unſatisfactory Offers had, however, this good Effect, that they knitted faſter than ever, the band of Union, which began to grow looſe among ſome of the Confederates: and thoſe among the Dutch, who before were moſt eager for Peace, particularly the Regency of Utrecht, reſolv'd to ſpend their laſt Penny to carry on the War. The People of Amſterdam were, on this Occaſion, ſo inraged, that a menial Servant of one of the French Plenipotentiaries having, on the 12th of February, offer'd to force his Entrance into the Exchange, without paying the uſual Fee after a certain Hour, the Town Bailies diſarmed him, broke his Sword, and laid him on ſo ſeverely, that he had much ado to eſcape with his Life. We muſt here take Notice, that about this Time, died the Duke of Bretagne, who, upon the Deceaſe of his Father, the Duke of Burgundy, ſome Months before, had been declared Duphin of France; ſo that in leſs than one Year, Three Dauphins were laid in their Graves, to the extream Grief of the moſt Chriſtian King, whoſe chief Comfort, of late, lay in his numerous Poſterity; and to the great Conſternation of the French Court and Nation; who were juſtly apprehenſive that the Death of the Two laſt Dauphins would occaſion great Alterations in the Affairs of Europe, and make the Allies ſtiffer in their Demands. Nor were theſe Appprenſions ill grounded: For the Foundation on which the Britiſh Miniſtry had mainly built their Scheme for a General Peace; viz. that the Kingdom of France and Spain ſhould never be united under one Head, was now become very precarious, as depending only on the Life of the French King, who was in a very advanc'd Age, and on that of the young Duke of Anjou, now declar'd Dauphin, who at this Juncture, lay Sick of the ſame Diſtemper that carried off his Two Brothers; and who was obſerv'd to be of a very tender Conſtitution. But whatever was the Reaſon, the Death of thoſe French Princes caus'd no viſible Alteration in the Councils and Meaſures of Great Britain, whoſe Miniſtry purſu'd their Plan with unparallel'd Steadineſs and Reſolution, notwithſtanding the Contradiction and Obſtacles they met in their way

To return to Utrecht: According to what had been agreed the 13th of February, between the Plenipotentiaries of the Allies, and thoſe of France, they met again on the 20th of the ſame Month, at the Seventh general Conference, in which a Method was agreed upon, for the delivering to each other authentick Papers, containing ſuch Things as ſhould be thought neceſſary to be put in Writing, at the General Conferences, viz. that one ſigned by one of the Miniſters of the Allies, ſhould be delivered to thoſe of France; one of whom having, in like Manner, ſign'd another of the ſame Tenor, ſhould give it to the Allies. At the ſame Conference, the manner of granting Paſſports mutually was ſettled, excepting only the Couriers to and from Portugal, who were to paſs through France and Spain, for which an Expedient was afterwards found. The 22d, in the Morning, the Miniſters of the Allies had a Conference among themſelves, at the Town-Houſe, wherein all that were preſent, communicated mutually their ſeveral Powers, and agreed to give in authentick Copies of them to Monſieur Buys, in order to be regiſtred by him, who by common Conſent, was appointed to keep all ſuch Acts and Inſtruments, as ſhould paſs in Writing, during the Congreſs; to which the other Miniſters were to have Recourſe, as there might be Occaſion. The 25th, the Miniſters of the Allies met again at the ſame Place, at which Conference the Plenipotentiaries of the Emperor, who return'd the Evening before from the Hague, were preſent. All the ſaid Miniſters held the uſual Conferences on the laſt of February, N. S. at which the Miniſters of Triers, Munſter and Heſſe, aſſiſted for the firſt Time, and exhibited their full Powers; as did likewiſe the Imperial and Portugueze Miniſters, who were at the Hague when a former Conference was held on this Occaſion. The Miniſters of the Allies did likewiſe in this Conference, agree upon the Manner in which they were to deliver in their Demands to thoſe of France, after they had been mutually communicated to each other; and the ſame Morning a Conference was held at Count Zinzendorf's, of all the Miniſters of the Empire, about Matters relating to the Intereſt of their reſpective Maſters, Members of that great Body. On the 3d of March, another Conference of the Miniſters of the Allies was held at the Town-Houſe, at which Meſſieurs Buys and Goſlinga, and the Count de Rechteren, who, ſome Hours before, return'd from the Hague aſſiſted. At this Conference, a Clauſe of mutual Guaranty, or Claim, was propoſed to be inſerted among the Demands each particular Ally ſhould make upon France; importing, That a juſt and reaſonable Satisfaction ſhould be given to all the Allies, according to Treaties, Ingagements, and other Conventions; which Claim was agreed to, and made part of the reſpective Demands.

Seventh general Conference Feb. 20. N. S.

The Miniſters of the Proteſtant Allies were ſeveral times in Conference together, to concert ſuch Meaſures as might be proper to be taken, during the Courſe of this Congreſs, for the Security of their Religion, and particularly an Abolition of a Clauſe in the Fourth Article of the Treaty of Ryſwick, prejudicial to the ſame: As likewiſe the making ſome Proviſion, in their Negotiations with the Miniſters of France, for the Relief of the Proteſtants of that Kingdom. But though theſe Particulars were mention'd in the Demands of the Proteſtant Allies, yet they were afterwards but faintly inſiſted on; aud, it was obſerv'd, that in this Negotiation, as in moſt former Treaties, the Proteſtants ſhew'd not an equal Zeal for their religious Concerns, as they did for their private worldly Intereſts. The Elector of Hanover having not yet any Plenipotentiary at the Congreſs, Monſieur Nebor, one of his Counſellors, and Secretary at the Hague, went to Utrecht, by Order of his Electoral Highneſs, to deſire of the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries, that what the ſaid Elector had to demand, might be inſerted among the Demands to be made for the Queen; which Deſire, their Excellencies complied with. The next † Morning, the Plenipotentiaries of the Allies had an extraordinary Conference; wherein they communicated, mutually, their reſpective ſpecifick Demands; and Count Zinzendorf again inſiſted, That the Reſtitution of the whole Spaniſh Monarchy ſhould be expreſly mention'd. The Dutch declar'd, they were reſolv'd to make good all their Treaties, made on occaſion of this War, as well thoſe that related to Spain and the Indies, as thoſe made with Portugal; but the Britiſh were the only Miniſters, that did not make any mention of Spain and the Indies, contenting themſelves with a general Declaration concerning the juſt and reaſonable Satisfaction for the Queen's Allies, in Conformity to her Alliances. However, it is obſervable, that a few Days after, upon the earneſt Inſtances of the Imperial Miniſters, the Britiſh and Dutch Plenipotentiaries made a Declaration, (which was regiſtred in the Protocol, kept by Monſieur Buys) importing, That by the Clauſe of mutual Guarantee, or Claim, agreed to on the 3d, and inſerted in their reſpective Demands, they underſtood the Reſtitution of Spain and the Indies to the Houſe of Auſtria. A General Conference being held the 5th of March, N. S. the Miniſters of the Allies deliver'd, in Writing, their ſpecifick Demands to the French Plenipotentiaries, who promiſed to explain themſelves further, at the next General Conference, which was agreed to be held on Wedneſday, the 9th of March, N. S. When they met, the Portugueze Miniſter complain'd, that the Correſpondence with his Court lay under greater Difficulties than any other, for want of Paſſports: To which the French Plenipotentiaries anſwer'd, they had writ upon that Subject to Madrid; and hoped, they ſhould ſoon be able to give the Miniſters of Portugal Satisfaction. They likewiſe took occaſion to ſay, that for want of Paſſports, they had not been able to ſend the Demands of the Allies to their Court; whereupon, the Miniſters of the States General deliver'd them Paſſports for Six Couriers, for One Month only, as they had been deſir'd. Then the French Plenipotentiaries declared, "That they could not give in the Specifick Explanation, upon ſo many De- "mands of the Allies, till they had received new Inſtructions from the Courts of "Verſailles and Madrid; and therefore deſired a further Time of Three Weeks:" Which none of the Miniſters of the Allies thought fit to object againſt; and thereupon, the French Plenipotentiaries promiſed to deliver their Specifick Anſwer, or Explanation, on the 30th of March, N. S. The Grand Negotiation being, in the mean time, at a ſtand, ſeveral Miniſters went to the Hague, and, among others, thoſe of the Emperor and Portugal; notwithſtanding which, the Miniſters of the Allies held private Conferences among themſelves, on the uſual Days.

The French demand Three Weeks to give in their Specifick Anſwer to the Allies.

The French exclaim againſt the Demands of the Allies.

The French Miniſters, and their Partizans, exclaim'd againſt the Demands of the Allies, as Unreaſonable and Exorbitant; but they excepted, in a particular manner, againſt the Pretenſions of the Allies, in favour of the French Proteſtants. The Abbot de Polignac, who had a Cardinal's Cap in view, and therefore could not fail, on all Occaſions, to ſhew his Zeal for the Romiſh Church, appeared the ſtiffeſt on that Article; and diſcourſing one Day with Monſieur Vanderduſſen, one of the Dutch Plenipotentiaries, about the Demand, That the French Proteſtants on Board the Gallies, or detain'd in Priſon, ſhould be ſet at Liberty, aſk'd him, Whether the States would ſet at Liberty the People detain'd in their Spinhuiſes and Raſphuiſes; (that is, the Houſes of Correction,) if the French King ſhould demand it? Monſieur Vanderduſſen, juſtly reſenting that odious Compariſon, told him, "That if the French Court would own the Peo- "ple detain'd in the ſaid Houſes for their Brethren, as the States own'd for ſuch the "Proteſtants in the Gallies, whom they interceded for, he did not queſtion but their High Mightineſſes would ſet at Liberty thoſe Malefactors." The French Abbot was abaſh'd and confounded; and turn'd off the Diſcourſe to other Matters.

Witty and ſharp Repartee of Monſieur Vanderduſſen, in relation to the French Proteſtants.

On the 30th of March, all the Plenipotentiaries in Utrecht held a General Conference; and ſuch of the Miniſters of the Allies as were not in the Secret, were full of Expectation, that thoſe of France would give in their ſpecifick Anſwer to the ſpecifick Demands of the Confederates; but they were not a little ſurpriz'd, when, inſtead of communicating any ſuch Writing, the Mareſchal d' Huxelles, after a long Speech, wherein he made freſh Proteſtations of the King his Maſter's ſincere Diſpoſitions for Peace, concluded with declaring, "That reciprocal Propoſitions having been de- "liver'd in on both Sides, they thought they were now able to enter into Negotiation "with all the Allies, according to the Method uſed in former Treaties." Count Zinzendorf anſwer'd the Mareſchal d' Huxelles's Speech, and endeavoured to ſhew, Tenth General Conference, in which the French refuſe to deliver their Specifick Anſwer in Writing.

That the Method of Treating by word of Mouth, was looſe and uncertain, and therefore more apt to multiply and prolong, than to end Diſputes: After which, the Plenipotentiaries of the Allies took down in Writing the verbal Anſwer of the French Miniſters; to which they reply'd, That they muſt have an Anſwer in Writing. The Abbot de Poligrac ſaid thereupon, That the ſame was uſeleſs, and they were not obliged thereto; but that they were always ready to enter into Negotiation. Hereupon the Miniſters of the Allies being withdrawn into an Apartment by themſelves, conſulted together what Anſwer they ſhould return, which Mr. de Mellerode, one of the Plenipotentiaries of the Duke of Savoy, at the deſire of the Aſſembly drew up in the following Words; We expected, that after having deliver'd to you our ſpecifick Demands in Writing, as you deſir'd, you would alſo have deliver'd to us your ſpecifick Anſwers in Writing, which we ſtill expect. Having communicated this Anſwer to the French Miniſters, Mr. de Poligrac, reply'd, That ſuch an Expectation would be vain, for they would not anſwer in Writing, their Inſtructions being only to treat verbally. Whereupon one of the Plenipotentiaries of the States-General ſaid, that then the better way was, to break up the Congreſs: But they were ſoon TAKEN DOWN by the Britiſh Miniſters, who could not agree with the Dutch in that Particular; but ſaid, on the contrary, that they might enter into Negotiation, by way of Dictating, as was done at the Hague, in the Conferences with the Deputies of their High-Mightineſſes. Notwithſtanding this ominous Wrangling, after the General Conference was at an end, the Miniſters of the Allies reſolv'd to meet that Evening at the Lord Privy-Seal's, and the next Morning at the Town-Houſe, to concert, among themſelves, what was proper for them to do on this critical Point; and after the Earl of Strafford had been earneſtly intreated by the Dutch Plenipotentiaries, to be once, at leaſt, on the ſide of the Allies, they unanimouſly agreed upon a Declaration, wherein they inſiſted, "That an Anſwer be deliver'd them in "Writing to their ſpecifick Demands." This Declaration was, in the General Conference held on Saturday, the 2d of April, N. S. deliver'd by Monſieur Buys to the French Plenipotentiaries, who anſwer'd, as they had done before, That as they had reciprocally given each other their Pretenſions in Writing, they could not perceive how they were obliged to give any further Anſwer in Writing; but declar'd themſelves ready to enter into a Negotiation with the Allies, in the uſual Form obſerv'd in other Treaties.

Declaration of the Miniſters of the Allies. Eleventh General Conference, April 2. N. S.

The French ſtill refuſe to anſwer in Writing, which occaſions a warm Debate.

This Refuſal of the French, rais'd a very great Heat in the Aſſembly; and ſome Miniſters gave it as their Opinion, That ſuch Trifling was a ſufficient Ground to diſſolve the Congreſs; for the French Plenipotentiaries refuſing to anſwer in the Method all the Miniſters of the Allies had agreed on, it would be fruitleſs, as well as diſhonourable, for the latter to remain at Utrecht. It was alledg'd beſides, that the French had promiſed to give a ſatisfactory Anſwer; and no Anſwer could be eſteem'd ſo, that was contrary to the Method the Allies had unanimouſly reſolv'd to proceed in; and this was urged with ſo great Strength of Reaſon and Judgment, that it drew the Mareſchal d' Huxelles to a plain Confeſſion, "That if any ſuch Promiſe had been made, it "would but be juſt to perform it; but then a very doubtful Queſtion would ariſe, "Whether any Promiſe of that Nature could be proved?" Monſieur Meſnager, lately made Count de St. John, ſeconded him; and pretended to ſhew, out of the Protocol of the former Conference, that there was no ſuch Promiſe; which Argument was ſoon overthrown by ſome of the Miniſters of the Allies, who ſhew'd, by undeniable Inſtances; and, among others, by the Reſolutions taken in the Firſt Conference, inſerted in the Protocol, That all Propoſals, on both Sides, ſhould be ſigned by One of the Plenipotentiaries; which Reſolution would have been uſeleſs, not to ſay ridiculous, if both Parties had not then intended to treat in Writing. The Reply made to this, was very weak, being only a Pretence, that the Reſolutions to be enter'd, were in relation only to the Specifick Offers they had made, and the Specifick Demands they had received from the Allies. In ſhort, thoſe who ſought to allay the Ferment, found no way ſo effectual, as the propoſing to break up the Aſſembly for that time, and referring the Diſpute till the next General Conference on the 6th of April.

Before that Day came, the Miniſters of the Allies had a very long Conference among themſelves, and moſt of them perſiſted in their former Reſolution, of obliging the French to anſwer in Writing. However, the Britiſh Miniſters were of Opinion, that the Negotiations might be managed on the Foot propoſed by France; but when they obſerv'd that the Tide ran too ſtrong againſt them, and that the Generality were of contrary Sentiments, they concurr'd with the reſt, and declar'd, that they had poſitive Inſtructions to conform themſelves to the general Opinion of the Miniſters of the Congreſs. According to this Reſolution, the next Day, Mr. Buys deliver'd a Second Declaration, in the Name of all the Allies, wherein they perſiſted "To demand an Anſwer in Writing to their ſpecifick Demands. In anſwer to this, the French Miniſters declared, That as they had poſitive Inſtructions not to ingage themſelves in a Negotiation in Writing, they could not do it without new Orders from from the King their Maſter; to which End, they would immediately diſpatch a Courier, to acquaint him with this laſt Reſolution of the Allies. Some of the Miniſters of the Allies reply'd, That they had Reaſon to have expected, they had not wanted ſuch Inſtructions; but, however, they were willing a longer Time might be taken, if it were deſigned with purpoſe to anſwer effectually. The French Miniſters reply'd, That they could promiſe no more, than to follow the Inſtructions they ſhould receive, ſince they did not expect the Allies would have dealt with them in ſo tyrannical a Manner. Adding, That they pleaded for no more than what was practiſed at the Treaties of Munſter, Nimeguen, and Ryſwick: But their Aſſertion was prov'd to be wrong, with reſpect to thoſe Treaties, where every Thing was not altogether tranſacted by Word of Mouth, without Writing. Beſides, it was urged, That there were Mediators at thoſe Treaties, whereas there was none at Utrecht, which made this an irregular ſort of a Congreſs: The Mareſchal d' Huxelles anſwer'd, That they had no Reaſon to deliver any Thing in Writing, ſince the Confederates made a bad Uſe of the laſt, to inflame the People againſt them: To which one of the Imperial Miniſters reply'd, That the French had no more to do, but to give in juſt and reaſonable Propoſals in Writing, and then it would inflame the People againſt the Allies, if they refus'd to accept them. One of the Dutch Miniſters having been ſo plain, as to tell the Mareſchal d' Huxelles, that the French Court would be deceiv'd, if they expected a Peace, by tampering with ſome of the Allies, in order to divide them from the reſt: The Mareſchal d' Huxelles warmly reply'd, That not only the preſent King of France, but even the whole Royal Family would enter into a Vow to be revenged upon the Dutch, if they obſtructed the Peace: To which one of the Confederate Miniſters anſwered, That ſuch menacing Diſcourſes would only ſerve to keep the Dutch on their Guard, and arm them againſt all future Revenge, by inducing them to lay hold on this Opportunity to cruſh the Power that now threatned them. When theſe unlucky Heats were over, the French Miniſters promis'd again to write to the King, their Maſter, in order to know his Pleaſure on the Subject in Hand, in which the Miniſters of the Allies were oblig'd to acquieſce; but it was agreed, that unleſs ſome extraordinary Occaſion requir'd it, no general Conference ſhould be held the 9th of April.

Thirteenth General Conference on the 13th.

On the 13th, another general Conference was held, in which nothing material was done; and the French Miniſters, whoſe only Buſineſs, it ſeems, was to gain Time, propoſed that the next General Conference, which was to be held the 16th, might be put off, as had been done before, unleſs the Allies had ſomething particular to offer.

Fourteenth General Conference, April 16.

This Propoſal not being agreed to, the General Conference was held, as uſual, on the 16th, and the Miniſters of the Allies inquiring again of thoſe of France, whether they were ready to give Specifick Anſwers in Writing, the French Plenipotentiaries ſtill excus'd themſelves, on Pretence of their not being yet fully inſtructed from the King their Maſter, on that Subject. The Truth is, they knew very well, that their Buſineſs was not to be done at Utrecht, but by a Negotiation carried on, directly between London and Verſailles, the Particulars of which they were let into, by the Abbot Gaultier, who, as well as Mr. Thomas Harley, arrived at Utrecht about the beginning of April.

Plan of general Peace.

A few Days after, the French Plenipotentiaries communicated to the Lord Privy-Seal, and Earl of Strafford, under the higheſt Obligation of Secrecy, a Plan for a general Peace, which the Britiſh Miniſters accepted, as a Mark of the great Confidence France repoſed in them; readily engaged not to diſcover any Thing of it to the reſt of the Allies; and, under the ſame Caution, tranſmitted it to Mr. Secretary St. John. But 'tis highly probable, that this Plan was concerted between France and England, ſent by Mr. Harley to Utrecht, and by Abbot Gaultier to Paris, whilſt the Allies were amuſed with a Diſpute about the Method of anſwering.

S. His Highneſs receiv'd Viſits from all the Miniſters reſiding there, and having return'd them, ſet out the 18th, with Count Zinzendorf, for the Hague, where he ſtill impatiently waited the Arrival of the Duke of Ormond; but in the mean Time, his Highneſs gave ſome neceſſary Directions to Lieutenant-General Cadogan, and other Officers.

Faſt in Holland April 20.

The 20th of April, N. S. being appointed by the States-General for a Solemn Faſt, to implore the Bleſſing of GOD on their Arms, and thoſe of their Allies, no General Conference was held that Day.

The Earl of Strafford's Conferences at the Hague.

Four Days before, the Earl of Strafford went from Utrecht to the Hague; and in ſeveral Conferences he had with the Penſionary, and the other Miniſters of the States, earneſtly preſs'd their High-Mightineſſes to come into the Queen's Meaſures. This, together with the ſecret Methods that were uſed, to hinder the States of Brabrant from ſupplying the Imperial Troops, that were marching into the Netherlands, with Bread and Forage, did not a little increaſe the Jealouſies of the States-General, who thereupon thought fit to ſend * a ſolemn Deputation of their Body to the Earl of Strafford, to know what the Queen's Meaſures were? The Earl not having yet Orders to explain himſelf, and being under an Ingagement of Secrecy with the French Plenipotentiaries, made no Scruple to declare, in Conformity to a late Letter from the Queen to the States, That her Majeſty's Intentions were, that her Troops ſhould act with the ſame Vigor againſt France, as if there were no Negotiation on Foot. This Declaration his Excellency repeated the ſame Evening, in another long Conference with Prince Eugene of Savoy, Count Zinzendorf, the States Deputies, and the Council of State; and on the 21ſt of April, return'd to Utrecht. Several other Miniſters that went to the Hague, to confer with Prince Eugene, return'd alſo to the Place of Congreſs, in order to aſſiſt at the General Conference, which was held there the 23d of the ſame Month. The Miniſters of the Allies having again inquired of thoſe of France, whether they were yet ready to give their Anſwer in Writing, and being anſwered in the Negative; it was thereupon propos'd and agreed to, that the general Meetings ſhould, for ſome Time, be ſuſpended, 'till the French Plenipotentiaries ſhould give Notice that they were prepared. In the mean Time, the Confederate Miniſters held ſome intermediate Conferences among themſelves, and made frequent Journeys from Utrecht to the Hague, and back again from the Hague to Utrecht; not without well-grounded Jealouſy of the Intimacy and cloſe Correſpondence which appear'd to be between the Miniſters of France, and thoſe of Great Britain: The Effects of which were ſoon after manifeſted, to the Amazement of all Chriſtendom.

Fifteenth General Conference.

The Confederate Troops having begun, about the middle of April, to march into the Field, Prince Eugene of Savoy ſet out from the Hague on the 22d of that Month, in order to put himſelf at the Head of the Army. Two Days before, (April 9. O. S.) the Duke of Ormond ſet out from Whitehall, to imbark at Harwich; from whence having ſail'd the 23d, N. S. with a Convoy of Seven Men of War, Two Yatchs, and about Forty Tranſports, with Recruits, Horſes and Cloathing, he arrived at the Mouth of the Maeze the 25th, in the Morning, and there meeting with a contrary Tide, his Grace took the Boat, went directly to Rotterdam, and about Ten in the Evening, arrived at the Hague, accompanied by ſeveral General Officers, and other Perſons of Quality. His Grace went the next Morning to viſit the Preſident of the Week, and the Great Penſionary; and, according to his Inſtructions, expreſs'd to the Latter the Queen's Reſolution of puſhing the War with all poſſible Vigor, until the Enemy ſhould agree to ſuch Terms of Peace, as might be ſafe and honourable for her, and for her Allies. His Grace alſo aſſured that Miniſter, That he was prepared to live in a perfect and good Correſpondence with all the Generals of the Allies, particularly with thoſe of the States, and hoped to find the ſame Inclination on their Part; and then the Duke deſired the Penſionary to inform him, What Plan had been agreed upon for the Operations of the Campaign? But he was anſwer'd, " That there was no particular Project form'd; and that the " Meaſures for opening the Campaign, were left to be adjuſted by the Generals and " Deputies of the States, who could beſt judge what was fit to be done, when they " were in the Field." The next Day †, the Earl of Strafford came from Utrecht to the Hague, to wait on the Duke, who, on the 28th, had a Conference with the Deputies of the States, in order to be informed of the Reſolutions taken with Prince Eugene of Savoy, who, ſome Days before the Duke's Arrival, was gone to Tournay. They expreſs'd " their great Satisfaction with the Declarations he repeated to them from " the Queen, and deſired that he would take the firſt Opportunity of putting him- " ſelf at the Head of the Army; but, as to the intended Operations, referred him, " as the Penſionary had done, to their Field-Deputies and Generals, who were in- " truſted with the Conduct of the War, and ſhould be ordered to concert every thing " with his Grace, in like manner as they had before been directed to take their " Meaſures in Concert with the Prince of Savoy, for the Good of the Common Cauſe." Upon this Occaſion, the Preſident of the Week, made ſome Excuſes for the States having given the Command of their Army to that Prince; which he endeavour'd to ſoften, by adding, That, however, as to the Point of Command, his Grace and the Prince were now on the ſame Foot: But the Duke was not ſo dull of Apprehenſion, as not to be ſenſible, that the States had ſtrong Suſpicions of him, and therefore gave the Command of their Army to Prince Eugene. Before we enter into the Detail of what paſs'd in the Field, we muſt take Norice, that while the Plenipotentiaries were buſy at Utrecht, the Earl of Albemarle, Governor of Tournay, and Lieutenant-General Cadogan, ſignaliz'd their Vigilance, Activity and good Conduct, in an Expedition which ſeem'd to promiſe the Allies a very proſperous Campaign: I mean the burning the great Magazines the French had laid up in Arras. But whether Mr. Cadogan's forward Zeal, and enterprizing Genius, was inconſiſtent with the preſent

Schemes, or upon ſome other Conſiderations, he had been left out of the Eſtabliſhment of Lieutenant-Generals, lately made in England. Hereupon he wrote to the Duke of Ormond, deſiring his Grace's Intereſt, for his being imploy'd under him this Campaign: And tho' his Grace could not but be ſomewhat uneaſy, to have ſo clear-ſighted a Witneſs of all his Conduct near him, yet not being willing, on the other hand, to want the Aſſiſtance of ſo experienc'd an Officer, in caſe of an inevitable Action; and being ſenſible, at the ſame Time, that the denying his Requeſt, would render his Grace ſtill more ſuſpected; upon theſe Conſiderations, the Duke obtain'd the Queen's Leave for his ſerving in that Poſt. His Grace, reſolving to take the Field as ſoon as poſſible, left the Hague the 30th of April N. S.; arrived at Ghent the 3d of May; and, after a Stay there of Two or Three Days, and ſecuring the Government of the Citadel in Engliſh Hands, went to Tournay; where he met Prince Eugene, and the Deputies of the States. We may here obſerve, That the Jealouſies which People entertain'd of the Duke, were not a little increas'd, by his being accompany'd by Sir Thomas Hanmer, Bart. a leading Member of the Tory Party in the Houſe of Commons, and who was known to have had no ſmall Share in the late pacifick Meaſures: Nevertheleſs, the Earl of Albemarle's ſucceſsful Expedition at Arras, ſo elevated the Confederates, that many talk'd of no leſs than reducing Arras, or Cambray; or, at leaſt, Queſnoy, Landrecy, and Maubeuge, this Campaign, and of taking Winter-Quarters in the Heart of France. But it pleas'd the over-ruling Providence to blaſt thoſe fond Hopes, by one of the moſt memorable Turns that ever happen'd in human Affairs.

The Duke of Ormond, having held at Tournay ſeveral Conferences with Prince Eugene of Savoy, and the other Generals, concerning the Operations of the Campaign, his Grace and the Prince ſet out from that Place on the 21ſt of May; and having view'd the Fortifications of Douay, went from thence to the Confederate Army; which, to the Number of about a Hundred and Twenty Two Thouſand Men, had been aſſembling between this laſt Town and Marchiennes. The 23d, his Grace review'd the Right Wing of the firſt Line of his Army, conſiſting of all the Britiſh Troops then in the Camp, and Six Squadrons of the Dragoons of the Auxiliary Troops in the Queen's Pay; all which made a very fine Appearance. After the Review was over, his Grace entertain'd Prince Eugene, and the General Officers of both Armies, at Dinner; and, the next Day, went to Bouchain, to view the Fortifications, and General Fagel's Camp on the other ſide the Scheld. On Thurſday, the 26th of May, N. S. the Two Armies broke up from their Camps between Douay and Marchiennes, and march'd each in Four Columns; that, commanded by Prince Eugene, conſiſting of One Hundred and Fifty Seven Squadrons, and Seventy Seven Battalions, (beſides the Huſſars) paſs'd the Scheld at Neuville; and the other, under the Duke of Ormond, conſiſting of One Hundred and Thirty Eight Squadrons, and Seventy Battalions; went over the ſame River at Souches, between Bouchain and Denain. The Prince incamp'd with his Right at Noyelles, and his Left at Montrecourt; the Lines paſſing by Aveſnes-le-Secq and Haſpre; at which laſt Place, his Highneſs took his Quarters; and the Duke of Ormond plac'd his Right at ſome Diſtance from the Left of the Prince, and extended his Left as far as the Briaſe, on the River Selle; his Grace's Quarters being at Solemnes. The Body of Troops commanded by General Fagel, at Lien St. Amand, for the Security of Bouchain, join'd the Armies upon their coming to this Camp, and took their Poſt in the Lines: But Thirteen Battalions, and Thirty Squadrons, were left incamp'd between Souches and Denain, to cover the Bridges, and ſecure the Communication with Marchiennes. For this Purpoſe alſo, Forty or Fifty Men out of each Battalion of both Armies, were imploy'd to throw up a ſtrong Line, to take in the Champion between Denain and Marchiennes; to which laſt Place was brought a great Convoy of Proviſions, Artillery and Ammunition, conſiſting of an Hundred Forty Seven Boats, that came from Ghent to Tournay, and was afterwards conducted to the Army by the Palatines, commanded by Count Vhelen, and a Detachment of the Gariſon of Tournay. By all theſe Diſpoſitions, the Allies ſeem'd determin'd, either to attack the Enemy; who, with inferior Forces, (at leaſt, in Numbers) lay incamp'd, with the Right at Caſtelet, and their Left near Cambray, with the Scheld before them; or, if that was found impracticable, to undertake a Siege. Prince Eugene of Savoy, and the States Field-Deputies, (who were in Earneſt, but ſuſpected the Duke of Ormond's private Inſtructions) reſolv'd to loſe no Time in declaring their Doubts; and thereupon his Highneſs propos'd to his Grace, the ſending out a Detachment to view the Situation of the Enemy. Tho' the Duke had, by this Time, receiv'd a * Letter from Mr. Secretary St. John, with the Queen's Command, That he ſhould avoid ingaging in any Siege, or hazarding a Battel, till he receiv'd further Orders from England; and tho', as he was directed, he had return'd an acquieſcing Anſwer to a Letter from Ma-reſchal de Villars, acquainting him, That they were no longer Enemies: Yet, being told, at the ſame Time, by Mr. Secretary, That the Queen would have him diſguize the Receipt of that Order; ſince he could not want Pretences for conducting himſelf, ſo as to anſwer her Ends: His Grace concluded, He could not refuſe giving his Conſent to the Prince's Propoſal, without giving him, and the Field-Deputies, a ſtrong Suſpicion of what he was order'd to diſguize; and he the more readily conſented to it, upon a Belief that no Action could happen, the Enemy being poſted behind the Scheld. Hereupon, Four Thouſand Horſe were * detach'd from the Two Armies, under the Command of the Imperial General Fels, who advanc'd to the ſide of Caſtelet; and being return'd without meeting any of the Enemy, reported, that tho' the Diſtance between the Spring-Head of the Somme, and that of the Scheld, was not above a League and a Half, and all plain Ground, the Enemy had not yet offer'd to throw up any Intrenchment. The Prince of Savoy, finding by this Report, that the Opportunity was as fair as could be deſir'd, to attack the Enemy with Advantage, his Highneſs † made all the neceſſary Diſpoſitions for that Purpoſe, on Saturday the 28th of May, in the Morning; and communicated his Deſign to the Duke of Ormond, aſking his Advice thereupon. The Duke, with ſome Concern, anſwer'd, He could not give his Opinion immediately, but would do it in the Afternoon: And he deſir'd the Prince, Count Tilly, and the States Deputies, to dine with him. In the mean Time, his Grace had alſo detach'd all the Grenadiers of his Army, under the Command of Lieutenant-General Withers, with a Deſign, as it was given out, to drive the Enemy from the Woods of Bohain, below Caſtelet; but, tho' on their Approach, the French Army was under the deepeſt Conſternation, and were preparing to fly behind the Somme; for which Purpoſe, with much Precipitation, they ſent a Body of their beſt Horſe, to ſecure their Retreat; ſo that had Prince Eugene's Deſign been executed, the Confederates might have beſieged Cambray, with a great deal of Eaſe: Yet that Detachment return'd, without effecting any Thing; being, they ſaid, unable to come at the Enemy, by reaſon of ſome Defileés, and uneven Ground, wherein they were advantageouſly poſted; and reported, That the French had made ſome Works near Bohain, to hinder the Confederates paſſing the Scheld. This furniſh'd the Duke of Ormond with plauſible Objections againſt Prince Eugene's Propoſals: But, being preſs'd, both by his Highneſs and the Field-Deputies of the States; the beſt Excuſe he could make, was, "That the Lord Strafford's ſudden "Voyage to England, gave him Reaſon to believe, that there muſt be Something "of Importance then tranſacting, which Four or Five Days would bring to light; "and therefore he deſir'd, They would defer this Undertaking, or any other, till "he ſhould receive freſh Letters from England, ſince ſo ſhort a Delay could not be "of any ill Conſequence." Hereupon, both the Prince and the Deputies told his Grace plainly, "That his Anſwer was agreeable to the Suſpicions they had, for "ſome Time, entertain'd; particularly, ſince the Expreſs of the 24th, which, "they knew, had brought him Letters from England: And they were the more "confirm'd in theſe Suſpicions, becauſe Monſieur Villars, who had, on all Occaſi-"ons, ſhewn himſelf very vigilant, did not ſend out one Man to obſerve their Mo-"tions, nor take any other Precautions to ſecure his Camp, where it lay ſo "much expos'd: And he could not be ignorant, how ſtrong a Detachment had "been abroad on that ſide." The Duke could not divert the Propoſal which had been made, to fall upon the French Army, by offering to undertake a Siege; ſince Queſnoy, the Place to be attack'd, was within leſs than Three Leagues of the Army, and all Things neceſſary for a Siege were already at Marchiennes: So that the Conſequence of this Offer would have been, the immediate inveſting of that Place; which was as contrary to the Queen's laſt Orders, as a Battel: But Prince Eugene, and the Deputies, ſeem'd extreamly diſſatisfy'd with the Duke's Anſwer; and ſaid, They were oblig'd to give an Account of what had paſs'd, and of the Delays made by the Duke, to their Maſters, by Expreſs.

The D. of Ormond refuſes to join with P. Eugene, in fighting the French, May 28.

In this Poſture, Things continued for ſome Days; But, on the 4th of June, Two of the Deputies made a Viſit to the Duke, and, in the Evening, ſent him a long Memorial, importing, in Subſtance, "That, by Order of their Maſters, they "repreſented to him, with how great a Degree of Surprize, the States had receiv'd "the News of his declaring, he would undertake nothing, till he had Letters from "England; and of his refuſing to aſſiſt, either in a Siege, or a Battel: That it "ſeem'd to them incomprehenſible, and unaccountable, why the Allies ſhould "loſe ſuch an apparent Opportunity they had, as well in Regard to the Goodneſs "and Number of their Troops, as the Situation of the Armies, to gain ſome "great Advantage over the Enemy; which, if once neglected, might for ever be "irretrievable. That they could, by no means, conceive, his Orders were ſo "ſhort, as to tye up his Hands, when ſo fair an Occaſion of annoying the Ene-

" my preſented it ſelf; and, that in their Opinion, ſuch Orders ought to be under" ſtood in the beſt Senſe, ſo as to injoin the declining any Attempt for ſome little " time, provided no great Prejudice might redound, by that means, to the Com" mon Cauſe, but in no wiſe to juſtify the ſitting ſtill with their Arms acroſs, in " ſuch a Situation, where Inaction would cut off all Hopes of their being able to at" tempt any thing for the future; ſince, if the Army continued unactive for any time,
" the Forage would be conſumed, and the Operations for the reſt of the Campaign
" would be rendred not only difficult, but impracticable: Beſides, the Enemy
" would have time to intrench and fortify their Camp, as much as they pleaſed.
" That the States had ordered them to inforce theſe Arguments, with others, and par" ticularly with this, That the Army his Grace commanded, conſiſted not only of " her Majeſty's National Troops, but, for the moſt part, of ſuch as were in the " Joint Pay of her Majeſty and the States; the Command of which, indeed, be" longed to his Grace, as General in Chief; but as thoſe Troops were engaged by " both Parties jointly to make War, and act againſt the Enemy, they could not be " exempted from that Service by his Grace alone, without the Knowledge and Con-
" ſent of the States; at leaſt, without contradicting the Treaties, and the Ends, by,
" and for which, they were engag'd. That not only the Treaty of the Grand
" Alliance, but others, made between her Majeſty and the States, obliged her Majeſty
" to puſh on the War with Vigor; but the Declaration his Grace made, That he " could not act till further Orders, at a Time, when, by his Grace's own Approba-
" tion, they had march'd juſt within ſight of the Enemy; and when there was ſo
" fair a Proſpect of Succeſs, if ſomething were attempted, could not, they thought,
" be reconciled either with thoſe Treaties, or the repeated Aſſurances, which her
" Majeſty had given them, by Letters, by my Lord Strafford, and by his Grace, " lately at the Hague. Therefore, they deſired his Grace, if he had any Regard to
" thoſe Treaties and Aſſurances, which ought to be kept ſacred, to puſh on the War
" with Vigor, offenſively againſt the Enemy; but that if his Grace perſiſted in his
" Reſolution, of not acting offenſively, they deſired to know, Whether he would conſent,
" that the Troops under him might be imployed to cover a Siege, which they would " undertake; and whether he would give a Promiſe to attack the Enemy, if they " came to diſturb them? That, in caſe his Grace refuſed, they did, in the moſt ſo-
" lemn manner, and in the ſtrongeſt Terms, proteſt againſt the irreparable Damage,
" which ſuch a Conduct would occaſion to the Confederacy. That, in order the bet" ter to guide themſelves, they demanded to know preciſely, What his Orders were,
" how far they reached, and what Dependance the States might have on her Majeſty's
" Troops for the future? And, laſtly, they required, on their part, That his Grace
" would not hinder the Troops, in the Joint-Pay, from acting agreeably to the Reaſon
" of War, and their ſolemn Treaties and Engagements. The Concluſion of the " Memorial was, That the States had ordered this Repreſentation to be made in " Writing to his Grace, that all the World, and Poſterity, might ſee, that they had " been ſo far from being guilty of the great Injury which the Common Cauſe recei" ved from the preſent Inaction, that they had done all in their Power to prevent it;
" and that others were to anſwer for all the unhappy Conſequences of it." To the Subſtance of this Memorial, expreſſed before by the Deputies, in their Diſcourſe with the Duke, his Grace could only anſwer, That before he enter'd upon Action, he ſhould be glad to receive Letters from England, which he expected every Moment: Which was all the Satisfaction he was then at Liberty to give to their Demands, being ſo bound up, as he was, by his laſt Inſtructions. On the other hand, the Prince of Savoy and the Dutch Deputies continually preſſed the Duke for a poſitive Anſwer; repreſenting, at the ſame time, the Goodneſs and Superiority of the Confederate Troops, which could not be contradicted; and, rightly concluding, " That the Duke muſt
" have Orders not to do any thing, tho' he would not own them, ſince he could not,
" otherwiſe, anſwer for his Inaction." In debating this Matter, one of the Deputies took the Liberty to cenſure the Proceedings of England, which the Duke reſented, and deſired him to forbear.

While his Grace was under this Uneaſineſs, on the 7th of June, N. S. a Letter came to him from Mr. Secretary St. John, dated the 17th of May, O. S. " which expreſ-
" ſed the Impatience her Majeſty was in, to hear, whether the Orders ſent on the " 10th of May, came ſafely and early to his Hands; and the Aſſurance ſhe had
" of his Grace's punctual Obedience to her Commands, in ſo nice and important a " Conjuncture." His Grace return'd an Anſwer, the next Day, repreſenting, " That " Things were now come to great Extremity; that he could not avoid ſeeing, every " Day, freſh Marks of the ill Blood and Diſſatisfaction cauſed among the Allies, by
" the Meaſures he was obliged to obſerve; that many of them did not ſcruple to ſay,
" WE WERE BETRAYING THEM; and this Ferment ſeemed rather likely to in-

" creaſe, than diminiſh; and, conſidering the preſent Circumſtances, it was hard to ſay, " what might be the Conſequences of it. That let the Peace, which he was in daily " Expectation to hear of, be never ſo advantageous, he was apprehenſive, that if the " Allies ſhould pretend to diſlike it, he could not depend upon any Troops, but thoſe " compoſed of her Majeſty's own Subjects; and, what confirmed him in this Opi- " nion, was, that he was well-inform'd, That, if the Elector of Hanover did not ap- " prove of the Peace, his Troops would have Orders to ſerve with the Dutch, and " would likewiſe be augmented by all that Prince could ſpare from other Parts: And, " he was not without Suſpicion, that Endeavours were likewiſe uſing to gain the " Danes. The Cloſe of his Letter was in theſe Words, By this, and my former, you " may gueſs, how uneaſy a Situation I am in; and, if there be no Proſpect of Action, I do " not ſee of what Uſe I am here; and, if it ſuits with her Majeſty's Service, I ſhould be glad " I might have Leave to return to England: But, in this, and all other Matters, I ſhall " readily ſubmit to her Majeſty's Pleaſure.

By this time, the Dutch Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, having, by Order from the States, expoſtulated with the Biſhop of Briſtol, about the Duke's refuſing to aſſiſt the Confederates in any Undertaking againſt the Enemy: The Biſhop anſwer'd, That he knew nothing of the Matter, and would repreſent it to the Queen; but, at the ſame time, he took occaſion to let them know, That Two Days before, he had received an Expreſs, with a Letter from her Majeſty, in which ſhe complained, that notwithſtanding all the Advances ſhe had made, from time to time, to the States, in order to engage them to enter with her upon a Plan of Peace, " Their High Mightineſſes had not anſwer'd her as they ought; " and as her Majeſty hoped they would. That therefore they ought not to be ſurprized, if " her Majeſty did now think her ſelf at Liberty to enter into ſeparate Meaſures, in order to " obtain a Peace for her own Conveniency." Hereupon, the Plenipotentiaries of the States repreſented to the Biſhop, " That ſuch a Step would be contrary to all the Al- " liances and Treaties betwixt their High Mightineſſes and the Queen; that they thought they " had merited otherwiſe, by the Deference which, on all Occaſions, they had ſhew'd to her " Majeſty; and that they knew nothing of the Advances which the Biſhop ſaid her Majeſty " had made towards the States, on the Subject of a Plan of Peace." To this the Biſhop replied, " That he muſt not forget to tell them his Inſtructions did further bear, that conſi- " dering the Conduct of the States towards her Majeſty, ſhe thought herſelf diſingaged from " all Alliances and Engagements with their High Mightineſſes. In the manner the Biſhop " expreſſed himſelf on this Subject, it could not be well underſtood, whether the " Queen would renounce her Engagements, as to the Methods of treating about Peace, or " if it were her Intention to renounce her Engagement concerning the Barrier-Treaty, and " all her other Alliances with this State: But the latter ſeemed to be moſt probable.

The Biſhop of Briſtol's Declaration to the Dutch Plenipotentiaries, June 2. N. S.

The Lord Privy-Seal's Anſwer and Declaration being, by an Expreſs, brought to the Hague, the Night between the 2d and 3d of June, was, the next Morning, communicated to the Miniſters of the Allies; whereupon ſeveral Conferences were held, and private Meaſures concerted between their High Mightineſſes, the Elector of Hanover, the Landgrave of Heſſe Caſſel, and ſome other Princes of the Empire, for the ſubſiſting and maintaining the Foreign Troops, in the Pay of Great Britain: So that the Confederate Army ſhould ſuffer no other Diminution, than by the Troops of the Britiſh Nation, which did not amount to above Twelve thouſand Men. In the mean time, the States General wrote a long Letter to the Queen of Great Britain; which, on the 5th of June, they ſent by an Expreſs to their Envoy Extraordinary in London, with Orders to deliver it into her Majeſty's Hands. And Count Zinzendorf, who had likewiſe received an Account of what had paſſed in the Army, went from Utrecht to the Hague, on the 1ſt of June, N. S. and diſpatched the next Day Three Expreſſes; one to the Emperor, his Maſter, the other to Prince Eugene, and the Third to the Imperial Miniſter in London. Moreover, the Baron de Hohendorf, Adjutant General to Prince Eugene, who came with a Commiſſion from Vienna, to ſollicit the Payment of the Subſidy voted by the Houſe of Commons for the War in Spain, being on his Departure for London, Count Zinzendorf gave him alſo freſh Inſtructions about the preſent Juncture of Affairs.

The States General write a long Letter to the Queen on the preſent Juncture of Affairs.

The Britiſh Court having, on Sunday Morning, the 25th of May, O. S. received an Expreſs from Holland, the Queen did not come, as uſual, to St. James's Chapel, but held a Council at Kenſington. Two Days † after, the Baron Hohendorf arrived in London, and in the Afternoon was in Conference wit the Lord High-Treaſurer, who gave him fair Hopes, and invited him to dine with him the next Day. The ſame Afternoon, Monſieur Van Borſelen, Envoy Extraordinary from the States General, was alſo in Conference with the Lord Treaſurer, on the Subject Matter of what he had repreſented the Evening before, in a private Audience he had of her Majeſty; upon which, Orders were ſent to the Duke of Ormond, to concur with the Generals of the Allies in a Siege. In the mean Time, the News of what had happen'd in the Army, being ſpread Abroad, and having occaſion'd a general Surprize, and great Murmurings, on Tueſday, the 27th of May, the Lord Halifax acquainted the Houſe of Peers, That he had Matters of great Importance to lay before them; and deſired that the Members of that illuſtrious Aſſembly might be ſummon'd to attend the Service of the Houſe the next Day. This being order'd accordingly, great, if ever, though various, was the publick Expectation of the Debate and Reſolutions of the enſuing Day. In the mean Time, ſome ill-wiſhers to the preſent Managers were ſo ſanguine, as to whiſper about their fond Hopes, that a great Man, meaning the Lord Treaſurer, would be ſent to the Tower: But that crafty Stateſman ſo beſtirr'd himſelf, in that critical Juncture, and made ſo many nocturnal Viſits, that he intirely defeated the Deſigns of his leſs active, and leſs vigilant Enemies. The Peers being met * in a full Houſe, the Lord Halifax made a Speech, wherein, he firſt took Notice of the ſtrange Declaration made in the Army by the Duke of Ormond; then ſhew'd the ill Conſequences of ſuch a Proceeding, and the Neceſſity of carrying on the War with Vigor, and concluded with a Motion for an Addreſs, "Humbly to deſire her Majeſty to lay before "the Houſe, the Orders ſhe had ſent to her General, and to order him to act offen-"ſively, in concert with the Allies." When he had done ſpeaking, ſome Court Lords raiſed Objections, as to the Matter of Fact; but though the Lord Halifax did not want Proofs, having, among others, a Copy of the Prince of Savoy's Letter, yet he did not think proper to produce it; and ſome other Whig Lords contented themſelves with preſſing thoſe in the Miniſtry to acquaint the Houſe, whether any Orders of Reſtraint had been ſent to the Duke of Ormond? The Lord Treaſurer, who was the moſt concern'd in this Affair, anſwer'd, "That they who "had the Honour to ſerve the Queen, could not reveal the Orders ſhe gave to her "General, without a particular Direction from her Majeſty; and that, in his Opinion, "thoſe Orders were not fit to be divulg'd. That, however, he would adventure "to ſay, that if the Duke of Ormond had refuſed to act offenſively, he did not "doubt but he had follow'd his Inſtructions: And it was Prudence not to hazard a "Battel, upon the Point of concluding a good Peace; eſpecially conſidering they "had to deal with an Enemy, ſo apt to break his Word. The Earl of Wharton ſaid thereupon, He was extream glad to find that Noble Lord ſo candid, as to acknowledge the Inſincerity of France: But that, in his Opinion, this was a ſtrong Reaſon for keeping no Meaſures with ſuch an Enemy, but rather for puſhing him with the utmoſt Vigor, 'till he was reduced to the Neceſſity of dealing honeſtly. The Lord Treaſurer replied, "That though the Duke of Ormond might have refuſed to hazard a general "Action, yet he could be poſitive, that he would not decline joining with the Al-"lies in a Siege, Orders having been ſent to him for that Purpoſe. Hereupon the Duke of Marlborough ſaid, That he did not know how to reconcile the Orders, not to hazard a Battel, and to join in a Siege, to the Rules of War: Since it was impoſſible to make a Siege, without either hazarding a Battel, in Caſe the Enemy attempt to relieve the Place, or ſhamefully raiſing the Siege. The Duke of Argyle, on the contrary Side, excuſed the Orders given to the Duke of Ormond, and, among other Things, ſaid, "That, in his Opinion, ſince the Time of Julius Cæſar, there had not been a "greater Captain than Prince Eugene of Savoy: But that nevertheleſs, conſidering "the different Intereſts of the Houſe of Auſtria, and of Great Britain, it might "not conſiſt with Prudence, to truſt him with the Management of the War, becauſe "a Battel, won or loſt, might intirely break off a Negotiation of Peace, which, "in all Probability, was near being concluded. That, according to his Knowledge, "nothing was more uncertain, than the Iſſue of a Battel, where Victory was ſtill "wavering, and ſo often chang'd Sides, that they who, after Five or Six ſucceſful "Charges, thought themſelves ſure of gaining the Day, had, at laſt, been routed, "and put to Flight. Adding, That Two Years before, the Confederates might have "taken Arras, or Cambray, inſtead of amuſing themſelves with the inſignificant Conqueſts of Aire, Bethune, and St. Venant." The Earl of Nottingham declared on the other Side, "That he could not comprehend why Orders had been given to our "General not to fight, unleſs certain Perſons were apprehenſive of weakning the "French, ſo far as to diſable them to aſſiſt them in bringing about Deſigns which "they durſt not yet own." The Duke of Devonſhire ſaid, on the ſame Side, "That by the Proximity of Blood, he was more concern'd for the Duke of Or-"mond's Reputation, than any other; and therefore he could not forbear declaring, "he was ſurpriz'd to ſee any one dare to make a Nobleman of the firſt Rank, and "of ſo diſtinguiſh'd a Character, the Inſtrument of ſuch a Proceeding. The Earl of Powlet anſwer'd, "That no body could doubt of the Duke of Ormond's Courage "and Bravery, but that he was not like a certain General, who led Troops to the

" Slaughter, to cauſe a great Number of Officers to be knock'd on the Head in a " Battel, or againſt Stone-Walls, in order to fill his Pocket, by diſpoſing of their " Commiſſions." This Reflection, ſo viſibly levell'd at the Duke of Marlborough, could not but touch him to the Quick: But his Grace contain'd his Reſentment for a while, and remain'd ſilent. On the other hand, the Lord Cowper made a long Speech, wherein he complain'd of their being kept ſo long in the Dark about the Progreſs of a Negotiation of Peace; and ſome other Whig Lords having preſs'd the Earl of Strafford to give the Houſe an Account of it, his Lordſhip excus'd himſelf, as not having the Queen's Orders for it: But the Lord Treaſurer aſſured them, That, in a few Days, her Majeſty, according to her Promiſe, would lay before her Parliament, the Conditions on which a Peace might be made, which he doubted not would give intire Satisfaction to every Member of that Houſe, and to all true Engliſhmen. Some Lords having, thereupon, declared their Apprehenſions of a ſeparate Peace, the Lord Treaſurer aſſured them further, That nothing of that Nature was ever intended, and that ſuch a Peace would be FOOLISH, VILLAINOUS, and KNAVISH; of which the Earl of Wharton deſired that illuſtrious Aſſembly to take Notice. The Lord Halifax obſerving the Diſpoſition of the Houſe, would have dropp'd his Motion, without dividing; but the Court Party being ſure of a Majority, inſiſted to have the Queſtion put for adjourning the Debate, which being carried in the Affirmative, by Sixty Eight Voices, againſt Forty, Twenty Five of the latter enter'd their Proteſt againſt the Orders given to the Duke of Ormond. This Point being gain'd, the Earl of Strafford ſuggeſted, " That before the Houſe enter'd upon the Negotiation of " Utrecht, they would do well to examine into thoſe of the Hague, and Gertruydenberg: Upon which he would communicate to them Two Obſervations he had " made, during his Reſidence in Holland: Firſt, That at the Hague, the French Miniſters conferr'd only with the Great Penſionary, who, having made his Report " to the States-General, communicated no more of it to the Miniſters of the Allies, " than what was judg'd proper to let them know; ſo that the Dutch were abſolute " Maſters of the Secret of that Negotiation, as they were afterwards of that of " Gertruydenberg. Secondly, That the States-General had conſented to give Naples " and Sicily to King Philip, which ſhew'd, that even at that Time, the Recovery " of the whole Monarchy of Spain, was look'd upon as impracticable. Concluding " with a Motion for addreſſing her Majeſty, That ſhe would be pleaſed to cauſe the " Papers relating to the Negotiations of the Hague and Gertruydenberg, to be laid before " the Houſe: Which was carried without dividing. As ſoon as the Houſe was up, the Lord Mohun went to the Earl Powlet, and told him, that the Duke of Marlborough deſired to have an Eclairciſment with his Lordſhip, about ſome Expreſſions he had uſed in that Day's Debate; and therefore deſired him to go and take the Air in the Country. The Earl, who readily underſtood the Meaning of ſuch an Eclairciſment, ask'd my Lord Mohun, Whether he brought him a Challenge? To which he anſwer'd, That his Meſſage wanted no Explanation, and that he would accompany the Duke of Marlborough. The Earl Powlet being return'd Home, with ſome Emotion, and having given his Lady a Hint of what had paſs'd, the Earl of Dartmouth, Secretary of State, was ſoon acquainted with it; and went immediately to the Duke of Marlborough, and deſired him not to ſtir Abroad. At the ſame Time, his Lordſhip cauſed Two Centries to be placed at the Earl Powlet's Houſe; and having inform'd the Queen of the whole Affair, her Majeſty ſent him back to the Duke of Marlborough, to deſire him, that this might go no further. His Grace gave his Word of Honour, that he would comply with her Majeſty's Commands: But though this Quarrel ended without Bloodſhed, yet many began to apprehend the Conſequences of the Heats and Animoſities of the Two Parties, which daily increaſed. The Duke of Marlborough was afterwards * ſeverely cenſured, for ſetting the Example of Party-Duels: But, on the other-hand, the Tongues of moſt People were very free with the Duke of Ormond: And, to this Purpoſe, we may take Notice, that an Alehouſe-Keeper in Weſtminſter, having, either for a Jeſt-ſake, or out of mere Simplicity, ſet up for his Sign his Grace's Head, with this Inſcription, the General of Peace, the Government order'd the ſame to be taken down.

Hereupon, Mr. Secretary St. John gave the Commons Aſſurances much to the ſame purpoſe with thoſe the Lord Treaſurer had given to the Lords; and, in anſwer to what was ſuggeſted by a Member, That the preſent Negotiation had been carried on in a clandeſtine and treacherous manner, he ſaid, " he hoped, it would not be accounted Treachery to act for " the Good and Advantage of Great Britain; that he gloried in the ſmall Share he " had in this Negotiation; and, whatever Cenſure he might undergo for it, the bare " Satisfaction of acting in that View, would be a ſufficient Recompence and Com- " fort to him, all his Life's Time." Negotiation about the Renunciation, and the Ceſſation of Arms. See the Report from the Committee of Secrecy, p. 12. & ſeq.

While the Diſputes that had been raiſed at Utrecht, were induſtriouſly kept on foot, the Negotiations were carrying on directly between England and France; and the Two great Points upon the Anvil, were, the Renunciation of the Spaniſh Monarchy, and the Ceſſation of Arms. As the Propoſal that the Crowns of France and Spain ſhould never be united, was one of the Firſt Articles ſent over by Mr. Prior, ſo the Expedient for preventing that Union, to wit, a Renunciation, was alſo propoſed by England, in a Memorial carried to Paris by Abbot Gualtier, about the middle of March. In anſwer to this Memorial, the Marquis de Torcy declared to Mr. Secretary St. John, " That the Renunciation deſired, would be null and invalid by the fundamental " Laws of France; according to which, the neareſt Prince to the Crown, is, of Ne- " ceſſity, the Heir thereto; which Laws, GOD only can aboliſh; That therefore, if " the King of Spain ſhould renounce, for the ſake of Peace, and in Obedience to the " King, his Grandfather, they would deceive themſelves, that received it as a ſufficient " Expedient to prevent the Miſchief they propoſed to avoid. And then he propoſed, " That the Diſpoſition of the Succeſſion to the Crown of Spain, made by King Philip, " and regiſter'd in the Councils of Spain, might be confirmed by the preſent Treaty " of Peace, and ratified by the Cortes, or the States of the Kingdom of Spain." But Mr. St. John rejected this Propoſal; and, notwithſtanding Monſieur de Torcy's frank Declaration about the Nullity of the Renunciation, inſiſted ſtill upon it, and told Monſieur de Torcy, " He would give us Leave to be perſuaded in Great Britain, that " a Prince may depart from his Right by a voluntary Ceſſion; and that he, in whoſe " Favour that Renunciation is made, may be juſtly ſupported in his Pretenſions, by " the Powers that become Guarantees of the Treaty. Hereupon, the French Miniſter " began to think, it could not be impoſſible to find an Expedient, to ſettle this great " Affair, and propoſed, That when the King of Spain ſhould become either imme- " diate Succeſſor, or preſumptive Heir to the Crown of France, he ſhould then de- " clare his Choice, either to maintain his Right to that Crown, or keep that of Spain; " that King Philip ſhould become Party to the Treaty, wherein the Succeſſion to the " Two Crowns ſhould likewiſe be ſettled; and that all the Powers of Europe ſhould " enter into an Engagement with France to maintain it. Mr. St. John ſtill inſiſted, " That nothing could effectually ſecure Europe from the Dangers wherewith it was " threatned by the Union of the Two Monarchies, unleſs the Prince in Poſſeſſion of " Spain, made his Choice at this very Inſtant; and thereupon, propoſed, That if the " Crown of Spain ſhould be his Choice, this Declaration ſhould be made during the " Congreſs at Utrecht; but if King Philip preferr'd the Expectation of the Crown of " France, to the preſent Poſſeſſion of Spain; in ſuch a Caſe, he ſhould forthwith " withdraw, with his Family, out of Spain, the Poſſeſſion of which, and the Indies, " ſhould be given to the Duke of Savoy; that King Philip ſhould have the Kingdom

" of Sicily; and the Hereditary Dominions of the Duke of Savoy, together with the " Montferrat, and Mantua, all which Dominions he ſhould remain poſſeſſed of, tho' " he became King of France; excepting Sicily, which, in that Caſe, ſhould return " to the Houſe of Auſtria." Monſieur de Torcy ſtill ſeeming to comply with the Meaſures of England, promiſed, that the King of France would immediately ſend to King Philip, to know his Mind upon the Two Alternatives, as propoſed by Mr. St. John; and that the Treaty of Peace ſhould be made upon one of thoſe Two Propoſitions: And, in the End, King Philip choſe to make the Renunciation to the Crown of France. But, it is unaccountable, that the Engliſh Miniſtry ſhould rely upon it; when they were ſo expreſly told, that what they aſked, to prevent the Union of the Two Monarchies, was utterly inſufficient, and would be for ever null and void, by the unalterable Laws of France. Two Expedients had, indeed, been propoſed, to add ſome Security to the Renunciation; which were, to have it ſolemnly accepted by the States of France, and confirmed by a General Guaranty of all the Powers of Europe, ingaged in the preſent War: But the Firſt, upon the Refuſal of France, was intirely given up by the Engliſh Miniſters; and the Second, by their way of negotiating, and Treatment of the Allies, was render'd impracticable. It had alſo been ſuggeſted to Mr. St. John, by the Engliſh Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, " That an Obligation upon " King Philip, to renounce the Regency, as well as the Crown of France, for himſelf, " and his Poſterity, would amount to ſome degree of real Security:" But no Endeavours ſeem to have been uſed to obtain this. During this Negotiation, the French Miniſter made a dextrous Uſe of Mr. St. John's Forwardneſs, ſlily † inſinuating, " That " as they muſt expect Obſtructions from thoſe who would willingly break the Confe- " rences, he believed, the beſt way to diſappoint them, would be, for the Queen of " Great Britain to propoſe immediately a Suſpenſion of Arms; for it would be very " unhappy, if any Event, during the Campaign, ſhould diſturb the good Diſpoſi- " tions that were ſeen at preſent for eſtabliſhing the Publick Repoſe." Hereupon, without waiting the Return of the Courier ſent to Madrid, to know whether King Philip accepted either of the Two Alternatives, Orders were readily ſent * to the Duke of Ormond, by Mr. St. John, to avoid ingaging in any Siege, or hazarding a Battel; and, a few Days after, Orders were likewiſe ſent to the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries, to declare to the States General, That the Queen was now under no further Obligations to them. It is, however, obſervable, that ſome time before ‖, the Earl of Strafford had propoſed to Mr. St. John, " to ſtop the Operations of the Army for a Month, till the " Negotiation with the Dutch, about ſettling a Plan of a Peace was ended one " way or other; urging, that there was now no Pretence, that it could be a Pre- " judice to the Allies; the French being better poſted, and ſtronger; and the Impe- " rialiſts not yet come up. That if upon theſe, and other Conſiderations, a Ceſſa- " tion was thought neceſſary, the Queen muſt not propoſe it; but, at the ſame " time, be reſolved to put it in Execution on her ſide, if it be agreed to by the " French; becauſe ſuch a Propoſition would be ſure to meet with Oppoſition, and " might make thoſe who delighted in War, undertake, with the greater Precipitation, " ſome deſperate Attempt." Upon this bold Overture, the Earl of Strafford was thought a proper Perſon to be conſulted, and intruſted with the Queen's moſt ſecret Intentions; and he was ordered forthwith to repair to London.

The Britiſh Miniſters being preſs'd in Time, and finding it neceſſary for the Queen to make the Communication ſhe had promiſed to her Parliament, of the Terms on which a Peace might be made, Mr. St. John acquainted ∴ Monſieur de Torcy with the Steps her Majeſty was reſolved to take, provided the moſt Chriſtian King would make them practicable for her; and, at the ſame time, ſpecified the Conditions upon which ſhe conſented to make ſuch deciſive Declarations to her Parliament. But, it is obſervable, that altho' it was pretended, and the People made to believe, that the great Advantages in Trade ſecured to Great Britain, were the chief Inducements to the Miniſtry, to ingage in theſe Meaſures with France; Mr. St John, on this Occaſion, declar'd, They were more intent upon the General Peace, than any particular Advantages: And whereas it had been laid as a Principle, from which the Queen would never depart, That the Intereſts of Great Britain ſhould, in the Firſt place, be adjuſted; yet no Mention was made of our Trade in Spain; the ſettling of the Commerce in general, was poſtponed; and all Points in diſpute, were to be referr'd to Commiſſaries. Acts paſs'd, June 6.

This Preliminary being ſettled; on Friday, the 6th of June, the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, with the uſual Solemnity; and having given the Royal Aſſent to Three publick, and Six private Acts, Her Majeſty made the following Speech to both Houſes of Parliament:

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes, containing a Plan of the enſuing Peace.

" THE making Peace and War, is the undoubted Prerogative of the Crown; " yet ſuch is the juſt Confidence I place in you, that, at the opening of this " Seſſion, I acquainted you, That a Negotiation for a General Peace was begun; " and, afterwards, by Meſſages, I promis'd to communicate to you the Terms of " Peace, before the ſame ſhould be concluded.

" In Purſuance of that Promiſe, I now come to let you know, upon what Terms " a General Peace may be made.

" I need not mention the Difficulties which ariſe from the very Nature of this " Affair; and it is too apparent, that theſe Difficulties have been increas'd by other " Obſtructions, artfully contrived to hinder this great and good Work.

" Nothing, however, has mov'd Me from ſteadily purſuing, in the firſt Place, " the true Intereſt of my own Kingdoms; and I have not omitted any Thing, " which might procure to all our Allies what is due to them by Treaties, and what " is neceſſary for their Security.

" The Aſſuring of the Proteſtant Succeſſion, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, in the Houſe of " HANOVER, to theſe Kingdoms, being what I have neareſt at Heart; particular " Care is taken, not only to have that acknowledg'd in the ſtrongeſt Terms, but to " have an additional Security, by the Removal of that Perſon out of the Dominions " of France, who has pretended to diſturb this Settlement.

" The Apprehenſion that Spain and the Weſt-Indies might be united to France, was " the chief Inducement to begin this War; and the effectual preventing of ſuch " an Union, was the Principle I laid down at the Commencement of this " Treaty.

" Former Examples, and the late Negotiations, ſufficiently ſhew, how difficult " it is to find Means to accompliſh this Work. I would not content my ſelf with " ſuch as are ſpeculative, or depend upon Treaties only; I inſiſted on what is ſolid, " and to have at Hand the Power of executing what ſhould be agreed.

" I can therefore now tell you, That France, at laſt, is brought to offer, that " the Duke of Anjou ſhall, for himſelf, and his Deſcendants, renounce for ever all " Claim to the Crown of France: And that this important Article may be expoſed " to no Hazard, the Performance is to accompany the Promiſe.

" At the ſame Time, the Succeſſion to the Crown of France is to be declared, " after the Death of the preſent Dauphin and his Sons, to be in the Duke of Berry " and his Sons, in the Duke of Orleans and his Sons; and ſo on, to the reſt of the " Houſe of Bourbon.

" As to Spain and the Indies, the Succeſſion to thoſe Dominions, after the Duke " of Anjou and his Children, is to deſcend to ſuch Princes, as ſhall be agreed " upon at the Treaty; for ever excluding the reſt of the Houſe of Bourbon.

" For confirming the Renunciations and Settlements before-mention'd, it is fur- " ther offer'd, That they ſhall be ratify'd in the moſt ſtrong and ſolemn manner, " both in France, and Spain; and that thoſe Kingdoms, as well as all the other Powers " engag'd in the preſent War, ſhall be Guarantees to the ſame.

" The Nature of this Propoſal is ſuch, that it executes it ſelf. The Intereſt of " Spain is to ſupport it; and, in France, the Perſons to whom that Succeſſion is to " belong, will be ready and powerful enough to vindicate their own Right.

" France and Spain are now more effectually divided than ever: And thus, by " the Bleſſing of GOD, will a real Balance of Power be fix'd in Europe, and re- " main liable to as few Accidents, as human Affairs can be exempted from.

" A Treaty of Commerce between theſe Kingdoms and France has been enter'd " upon; but the exceſſive Duties laid on ſome Goods, and the Prohibitions of " others, make it impoſſible to finiſh this Work ſo ſoon as were to be deſir'd. " Care is, however, taken, to eſtabliſh a Method of ſettling this Matter; and, in " the mean Time, Proviſion is made, that the ſame Privileges and Advantages, as " ſhall be granted to any other Nation by France, ſhall be granted in like man- " ner to Us.

" The Diviſion of the Iſland of St. Chriſtopher, between Us and the French, ha- " ving been the Cauſe of great Inconveniency and Damage to my Subjects; I have " demanded to have an abſolute Ceſſion made to Me of that whole Iſland; and " France agrees to this Demand.

" Our Intereſt is ſo deeply concern'd in the Trade of North America, that I have " us'd my utmoſt Endeavours to adjuſt that Article in the moſt beneficial man- " ner. France conſents to reſtore to Us the whole Bay and Streights of Hudſon; " to deliver up the Iſland of Newfoundland, with Placentia; and to make an abſolute " Ceſſion of Annapolis, with the reſt of Nova Scotia, or Accadia.

" The Safety of our Home-Trade will be better provided for, by the Demolition " of Dunkirk.

" Our Mediterranean Trade, and the Britiſh Intereſt and Influence in thoſe Parts, " will be ſecur'd by the Poſſeſſion of Gibraltar and Port Mahon, with the whole " Iſland of Minorca; which are offer'd to remain in my Hands.

" The Trade to Spain, and to the Weſt-Indies, may, in general, be ſettled, as it " was in the Time of the late King of Spain, Charles the Second; and a particular " Proviſion be made, That all Advantages, Rights or Privileges, which have been " granted, or which may hereafter be granted by Spain, to any other Nation, ſhall " be, in like manner, granted to the Subjects of Great Britain.

" But the Part which We have born in Proſecution of this War, intitling Us to " ſome Diſtinction in the Terms of Peace; I have inſiſted, and obtain'd, That the " Aſſiento, or Contract for furniſhing the Spaniſh Weſt-Indies with Negroes, ſhall be " made with Us for the Term of Thirty Years, in the ſame manner as it has been en- " joy'd by the French for theſe Ten Years paſt.

" I have not taken upon Me to determine the Intereſts of our Confederates; Theſe " muſt be adjuſted in the Congreſs at Utrecht, where my beſt Endeavours ſhall be " imploy'd, as they have hitherto been, to procure to every one of them all juſt " and reaſonable Satisfaction. In the mean Time, I think it proper to acquaint " you, That France offers to make the Rhine the Barrier of the Empire; to yield " Briſac, the Fort of Kehl and Landau, and to raze all the Fortreſſes, both on the " other ſide of the Rhine, and in that River.

" As to the Proteſtant Intereſt in Germany, there will be, on the Part of France, " no Objection to the Reſettling thereof, on the Foot of the Treaty of Weſt- " phalia.

" The Spaniſh Low-Countries may go to his Imperial Majeſty: The Kingdoms of " Naples and Sardinia, the Dutchy of Milan, and the Places belonging to Spain on " the Coaſt of Tuſcany, may likewiſe be yielded, by the Treaty of Peace, to the " Emperor.

" As to the Kingdom of Sicily, tho' there remains no Diſpute concerning the Ceſ- " ſion of it by the Duke of Anjou, yet the Diſpoſition thereof is not yet de- " termin'd.

" The Intereſts of the States-General, with reſpect to Commerce, are agreed to, " as they have been demanded by their own Miniſters; with the Exception only " of ſome very few Species of Merchandiſe; and the entire Barrier, as demanded " by the States in 1709, from France, except Two or Three Places, at moſt.

" As to theſe Exceptions, ſeveral Expedients are propoſed; and I make no doubt, " but this Barrier may be ſo ſettled, as to render that Republick perfectly ſecure " againſt any Enterprize on the Part of France; which is the Foundation of all my " Engagements upon this Head with the States.

" The Demands of Portugal depending on the Diſpoſition of Spain, and that Arti- " cle having been long in Diſpute, it has not yet been poſſible to make any conſide- " rable Progreſs therein; but my Plenipotentiaries will now have an Opportunity " to aſſiſt that King in his Pretenſions.

" Thoſe of the King of Pruſſia are ſuch, as, I hope, will admit of little Diffi- " culty on the Part of France; and my Endeavours ſhall not be wanting, to pro- " cure all I am able to ſo good an Ally.

" The Difference between the Barrier demanded for the Duke of Savoy in 1709, " and the Offers made by France, is very inconſiderable: But that Prince having " ſo ſignally diſtinguiſh'd himſelf in the Service of the Common Cauſe, I am en- " deavouring to procure for him ſtill further Advantages.

" France has conſented, that the Elector Palatine ſhall continue his preſent Rank " among the Electors, and remain in Poſſeſſion of the Upper Palatinate.

" The

" The Electoral Dignity is likewiſe acknowledg'd in the Houſe of Hanover, ac" cording to the Articles inſerted, at that Prince's Deſire, in my Demands.
" And, as to the reſt of the Allies, I make no doubt of being able to ſecure their " ſeveral Intereſts.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" I have now communicated to you not only the Terms of Peace, which may,
" by the future Treaty, be obtained for my own Subjects, but likewiſe the Pro-
" poſals of France for ſatisfying our Allies.

" The former are ſuch as, I have Reaſon to expect, to make my People ſome
" Amends for that great and unequal Burthen which they have lain under through
" the whole Courſe of this War; and I am willing to hope, that none of our Con-
" federates, and eſpecially thoſe to whom ſo great Acceſſions of Dominion and Power
" are to accrue by this Peace, will envy Britain her Share in the Glory and Advan" tage of it.

" The latter are not yet ſo perfectly adjuſted, as a little more Time might " have render'd them; but the Seaſon of the Year making it neceſſary to put " an end to this Seſſion, I reſolved no longer to defer communicating theſe Matters
" to you.

" I can make no doubt but you are fully perſuaded, that nothing will be neg" lected, on my Part, in the Progreſs of this Negotiation, to bring the Peace to " an happy and ſpeedy Iſſue, and I depend on your intire Confidence in me, and " your chearful Concurrence with me.

The Publick ſurprized at the Terms of Peace propoſed in the Queen's Speech.

This Speech occaſion'd a general Surprize, even among the High-Church Party: Inſomuch that the publick Funds, which, upon the Expectation of better Conditions of Peace, had, that Morning, riſen Four or Five per Cent. fell immediately to their former Value. It was now eaſy to diſcern, what Reaſons induced ſome Perſons to keep Secret the Reſult of the Negotiation between Great Britain and France; for if ſuch a Plan had been communicated to the Parliament, before a Majority had been ſecured in both Houſes, and the Minds of the People prepared, by a long Train of artful and plauſible Inſinuations, to receive it, it would, in all Probability, have been exploded with Indignation. But by the admirable Dexterity of the prime Managers, Things were brought to ſuch a Paſs, that though in the Houſe of Commons, One or Two Members having propoſed the taking the important Matters, mention'd in her Majeſty's Speech, into Conſideration, their Mouths were preſently ſtopp'd, by a general Cry for an Addreſs of Thanks: Whereupon it was unanimouſly reſolved, That an humble Addreſs be made to her Majeſty, acknowledging her great Condeſcention in communicating the Terms upon which a general Peace might be made; expreſſing the Satisfaction of this Houſe, in what her Majeſty had already done, and their intire Confidence in her Majeſty's ſteady purſuing the true Intereſt of her Kingdoms, and, in her Majeſty's Endeavours to procure for all her Allies, what is due to them by Treaties, and neceſſary for their Security; and humbly to deſire her Majeſty, that ſhe would be pleaſed to proceed with the preſent Negotiation for the obtaining a ſpeedy Peace. Hereupon a Committee was appointed immediately, to draw up that Addreſs, which Mr. Freeman, their Chairman, did ſoon after report, and which, with ſome Amendments, being agreed to, was preſented by the whole Houſe to the Queen, who return'd the following Anſwer.

The Commons vote an Addreſs of Thanks.

The Queen's Anſwer.

" I Have the Safety and Intereſt of all my People ſo much at Heart, that I can" not but take a great deal of Pleaſure, in this your dutiful and prudent Ad-
" dreſs; and I thank you moſt kindly for it.

" I have ſtudy'd your Welfare, and by this you will find the good Effects of that " Confidence which you place in me, and which ought always to remain between
" ſo affectionate a Prince, and ſuch faithful Subjects.

Debates in the Houſe of Lords.

Things went not altogether ſo ſmoothly in the Houſe of Peers: for as ſoon as the Queen was withdrawn, it being moved, that Thanks be return'd to her Majeſty for her Speech, the Earl of Wharton ſaid, They had all the Reaſon in the World to do it; eſpecially for that Part of her Majeſty's Speech, wherein ſhe was pleas'd to declare, That the aſſuring the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, to theſe Kingdoms, was what ſhe had neareſt at Heart: But that her Majeſty's Speech containing many other Particulars of the greateſt Conſequence, he was of Opinion, the Houſe would do well to take it into ſerious Conſideration the next Day: Which was readily agreed to. The Lords being met accordingly, on the 7th of June, the Earl of Wharton propos'd, That the Letter from the States-General to her Majeſty, inſerted in the Slip of the Amſterdam French Gazette, which arrived that very Morning, might be read: But this was oppos'd; it being ſuggeſted, That the Houſe ought not to take Notice of a Writing that carry'd no Authority with it. After this, the Lords took her Majeſty's Speech into Conſideration, which occaſioned a warm Debate. Among the reſt, the Duke of Marlborough repreſented, "That the Meaſures purſued in Eng- "land for a Year paſt, were directly contrary to her Majeſty's Ingagements with

"the Allies, ſullied the Triumphs and Glories of her Reign, and would render the "Engliſh Name odious to all other Nations:" Whereupon the Earl of Strafford ſaid, That ſome of the Allies, (meaning the Dutch) would not ſhew ſuch Backwardneſs to a Peace, as they had hitherto done, but for a Member of that illuſtrious Aſſembly, (meaning the Duke of Marlborough) who maintained a ſecret Correſpondence with them, and endeavoured to perſuade them to carry on the War; feeding them with Hopes that they ſhould be ſupported by a ſtrong Party here. The Lord Cowper anſwered this Speech; and becauſe the Earl of Strafford had not expreſs'd himſelf in all the Purity of the Engliſh Tongue, he took from thence Occaſion to ſay, "That that Noble Lord had "been ſo long Abroad, that he had almoſt forgot, not only the Language, but the "very Conſtitution of his own Country. That according to our Laws, it could "never be ſuggeſted as a Crime, in the meaneſt Subject, much leſs in any Member of "that auguſt Aſſembly, to hold Correſpondence with our Allies: Such Allies eſpe-
"cially, whoſe Intereſt her Majeſty had declared to be inſeperable from her own, in "her Speech at the opening of this Seſſion; whereas it would be a hard Matter to
"juſtify, and reconcile, either with our Laws, or the Laws of Honour and Juſtice,
"the Conduct of ſome Perſons, in treating clandeſtinely with the Common Enemy,
"without the Participation of the Allies." The Lords took afterwards into Conſideration, the Advantages offer'd by France to Great Britain, particularly in ſettling the Trade to Spain, and to the Weſt-Indies, as it was in the Time of the late King of Spain, Charles the Second. To this Purpoſe the Earl of Godolphin ſaid, "He "did not pretend to any great Knowledge in Trade; but that during the Time he "had the Honour to be in the Adminiſtration of Affairs, he had obſerv'd, and he "could eaſily make it out by the Books of the Cuſtom-Houſe, that the ſingle Trade
"to Portugal brought to England, in Times of War, double the Wealth of the Trade
"to Spain, in Times of Peace: So that, whatever might be ſuggeſted, to caſt a "Miſt before the Eyes of the People, it was to be preſumed, that the Trade to "Spain would ſtill yield leſs for the future, becauſe the French had made themſelves
"abſolute Maſters of it." After ſome other Speeches, a Motion was made, "That "an humble Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, to return her Majeſty the Thanks
"of this Houſe, for her moſt Gracious Speech, and for her extraordinary Conde-
"ſcention in communicating to her Parliament the Terms upon which a General
"Peace might be made: And to expreſs the intire Satisfaction of that Houſe in her
"Majeſty's great Care, for ſecuring the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Ha-
"nover; and for her Majeſty's ſteady purſuing the true Intereſt of her own King"doms, and for endeavouring to procure to her Allies what was due to them by
"Treaties; and to aſſure her Majeſty, that this Houſe did intirely rely on her Ma-
"jeſty's Wiſdom to finiſh this great and good Work." Some Exceptions were made to the Words intirely rely; and the Houſe was moved, that at the cloſe of the foregoing Motion for an Addreſs, theſe Words might be added, viz. And in order to that, that her Majeſty would take ſuch Meaſures in Concert with her Allies, as might induce them to join with her Majeſty in a mutual Guaranty: But after a Debate, in which the Earl of Oxford, and the Earl Poulet, on the one Part, and the Earl of Nottingham and the Lord Cowper on the other, made excellent Speeches, the Queſtion being put, Whether thoſe Words ſhould be added? It was reſolv'd in the Negative, by Eighty One Voices, againſt Thirty Six. On the 10th of June, the Lords preſented their Addreſs to the Queen, who told them, "That the Satisfaction they had
"expreſs'd in what ſhe had laid before them, would contribute very much to re"move the Difficulties which had ariſen, in the Courſe of this Negotiation: And "that the Confidence they placed in her, would enable her better to finiſh this "great Work, for the Advantage of her own People, and the Safety and Intereſt
"of her Allies." Several Lords enter'd a Proteſt againſt the rejecting the Guaranty Clauſe offer'd to be added to the Addreſs, and ſigned their Reaſons for it, which were ſoon after publiſh'd in Print: But this gave ſo great Offence to the Majority of the Peers, that on the 13th of June, the Queſtion being put, "Whether the ſaid
"Proteſt be expung'd out of the Books of the Houſe? It was carry'd in the Affirma"tive, by a Majority of Sixty Six Voices, againſt Thirty One preſent, and of "Ninety Votes againſt Fifty Four, Proxies included." The next * Day, upon a Complaint made in the Houſe of Lords, that both the ſaid Proteſt, and the former, concerning the Orders produc'd by the Duke of Ormond, were publiſh'd in Print, a Committee was appointed, to inquire who were the Printers and Publiſhers of the ſame; but this Committee not having been able to make any Diſcovery in that Matter, the Lords apply'd themſelves by Addreſs to the Queen, for that Purpoſe.

Nor were the Commons leſs offended than the Lords, at ſeveral Papers publiſh'd about this Time: For on the 10th of June, after the Bill for reſtraining the great Licenſe taken in publiſhing falſe and ſcandalous Libels, was read the firſt Time, a Complaint being made to the Houſe of the Preface to a Book, intituled, Four Sermons, I. On the Death of Queen Mary, 1694. II. On the Death of the Duke of Glouceſter, 1700. III. On the Death of King William, 1701. IV. On the Queen's Acceſſion to the Throne, in 1702. By William, Lord Biſhop of St. Aſaph, the Book was brought up, and the Preface was read; which, among others, contain'd the following remarkable Paragraphs.

The Preface to the Biſhop of St. Aſaph's Four Sermons read in the Houſe of Commons.

" Another Reaſon of my publiſhing theſe Sermons at this Time, is, that I have " a mind to do my ſelf ſome Honour, by doing what Honour I could to the Me- " mory of Two moſt excellent Princes, and who have very highly deſerved at the " Hands of all the People of theſe Dominions, who have a true Value for the Pro- " teſtant Religion, and the Conſtitution of the Engliſh Government, of which they " were the Great Deliverers and Defenders. I have lived to ſee their illuſtrious " Names very rudely handled, and the great Benefits they did this Nation, treated " ſlightly and contemptuouſly. I have lived to ſee our Deliverance from Arbitrary " Power and Popery, traduced and vilify'd by ſome, who, formerly, thought it was " their greateſt Merit, and made it part of their Boaſt and Glory, to have had a " little Hand and Share in bringing it about: And others, who, without it, muſt " have lived in Exile, Poverty, and Miſery, meanly diſclaiming it, and uſing ill " the Glorious Inſtrument thereof. Who could expect ſuch a Requital of ſuch Merit? " I have, I own it, an Ambition of exempting my ſelf from the Number of Un- " thankful People; and, as I loved and honoured thoſe Great Princes living, and la- " mented over them when dead; ſo I would gladly raiſe them up a Monument " of Praiſe, as laſting as any thing of mine can be; and I chuſe to do it at this " Time, when it is ſo unfaſhionable a Thing to ſpeak honourably of them.

" The Fourth Sermon was preached upon the Queen's Acceſſion to the Throne, " and in the Firſt Year in which that Day was ſolemnly obſerved (for, by ſome Ac- " cident or other, it had been overlook'd the Year before); and every one will know, " without the Date of it, that it was preached very early in this Reign, ſince I was " able to promiſe and preſage its future Glories and Succeſſes, from the good Appear- " ances of Things, and the happy Turn our Affairs began to take; and could not then " count up the Victories and Triumphs, that for Seven Years after, made it, in the Pro- " phet's Language, a Name and a Praiſe among all the People of the Earth. Never did " Seven ſuch Years together paſs over the Head of any Engliſh Monarch, nor cover it " with ſo much Honour: The Crown and Scepter ſeemed to be the Queen's leaſt Or- " naments; Thoſe, other Princes wore in common with her; and her great perſonal " Virtues were the ſame before and ſince; but ſuch was the Fame of her Admini- " ſtration of Affairs at home; ſuch was the Reputation of her Wiſdom and Felicity " in chuſing Miniſters; and ſuch was then eſteemed their Faithfulneſs and Zeal, their " Diligence and great Abilities in executing her Commands: To ſuch a Height of " military Glory did her Great General and her Armies carry the Britiſh Name " Abroad; ſuch was the Harmony and Concord betwixt her and her Allies; and ſuch " was the Bleſſing of GOD upon all her Councils and Undertakings, that I am as " ſure as Hiſtory can make me, no Prince of ours was ever yet ſo proſperous and " ſucceſsful, ſo loved, eſteemed, and honoured by their Subjects and their Friends, " nor near ſo formidable to their Enemies. We were, as all the World imagined " then, juſt entred on the Ways that promiſed to lead to ſuch a Peace, as would have " anſwer'd all the Prayers of our religious Queen, the Care and Vigilance of a moſt " able Miniſtry, the Payments of a willing and obedient People, as well as all the " glorious Toils and Hazards of the Soldiery; when GOD, for our Sins, permitted " the Spirit of Diſcord to go forth; and, by troubling ſore the Camp, the City, and " the Country, (And oh, that it had altogether ſpared the Places ſacred to his Wor- " ſhip!) to ſpoil, for a Time, this beautiful and pleaſing Proſpect; and give us, in its " Stead, I know not what — Our Enemies will tell the reſt with Pleaſure. It will " become me better to pray to GOD to reſtore us to the Power of obtaining ſuch a " Peace as will be to his Glory, the Safety, Honour, and the Welfare of the Queen " and her Dominions, and the general Satisfaction of all her High and Mighty " Allies.

Cenſure paſſed upon it.

After the Reading of this Preface, the Commons reſolv'd, " 1. That it was malicious " and factious, highly reflecting upon the preſent Adminiſtration of publick Affairs, " under her Majeſty, and tending to create Diſcord and Sedition amongſt her Sub- " jects. 2. That the ſaid Preface be burnt by the Hands of the Common Hangman, " in

" in the Palace-Yard, Weſtminſter; and that the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex, do " aſſiſt the Serjeant at Arms attending this Houſe, in the Execution thereof:" Which was accordingly perform'd. It was obſerv'd, that when the Biſhop's Friends brought him the News of the Vote, far from appearing ſurpriz'd or diſturb'd at it, he ſaid, He eſteem'd himſelf very happy to ſuffer with the Duke of Marlborough, the Earl of Godolphin, and ſo many other illuſtrious Patriots, whoſe Reputation their Enviers indeavour'd to blaſt. On the other hand, this Treatment of a Prelate of ſuch ſignal Merit, ſo unblameable a Life, and ſo univerſally eſteem'd, particularly by the Queen her ſelf, who, before, was uſed to call him her Biſhop, was highly reſented by many true Sons of the Church. But the Commons carried ſtill further their Obſequiouſneſs to the Miniſtry: For, the ſame ∴ Day, upon a Complaint of a printed Paper, intituled, A Letter from the States-General to the Queen of Great Britain, which was read; it was reſolv'd, " To addreſs her Majeſty, to aſſure her of the juſt Senſe this " Houſe had of the Indignity offer'd to her, by printing and publiſhing a Letter " from the States-General to her Majeſty, and to deſire her, that ſhe would ſo far " reſent ſuch Indignities, as to give no Anſwer, for the future, to any Letters or " Memorials that ſhould be printed and publiſh'd. But the Day before , the " Queen had thought fit to anſwer the Letter of the States-General: And it was obſerv'd, that a Cenſure was paſt upon it, merely to gratify Mr. Secretary St. John, though, on the other hand, ſeveral Speeches were made ††, to juſtify the Conduct of the States-General: Which gave Occaſion to ſome People to ſay, That a Vote of the Commons was the only Anſwer that could be return'd to their High-Mightineſſes Letter.

Not many Days * after, Mr. Hampden made a Motion, " That an humble Ad- " dreſs be made to her Majeſty, humbly acquainting her, that this Houſe had a " grateful Senſe of her Majeſty's Care for her People, in the Aſſurances ſhe ſo lately " made from the Throne, that the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, " was neareſt at her Heart: And being convinced, that the Safety of the Proteſtant " Succeſſion muſt, in a great Meaſure, depend on the Event of the preſent Treaty " for a general Peace, they moſt humbly beſought her Majeſty, that ſhe would be " pleaſed to give particular Inſtructions to her Plenipotentiaries, That in the Con- " cluſion of the ſaid Treaty, the ſeveral Powers in Alliance with her Majeſty, " might be Guarantees for the Proteſtant Succeſſion to the Crowns of theſe Realms, " as ſettled by Act of Parliament, in the illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover. The Miniſtry, and the Majority of the Commons, had lately expreſs'd ſo great an Averſion to a Foreign Guaranty, that Endeavours were uſed to have this puzzling Motion dropp'd; but Mr. Hampden, and ſome of his Friends, inſiſting to have the Queſtion put, the ſame was done accordingly, and carried in the Negative, by a Majority of One Hundred Thirty Three Voices, againſt Thirty Eight: After which it was reſolv'd, " 1. That this Houſe had ſuch an intire Confidence in the repeated " Declarations her Majeſty had been pleaſed to make, of her Concern for aſſuring " to theſe Kingdoms the Proteſtant Succeſſion, as by Law eſtabliſhed, in the Houſe " of Hanover, that they could never doubt her Majeſty's taking the proper Mea- " ſures for the Security thereof; and that this Houſe would ſupport her Majeſty " againſt Faction at Home, and her Enemies Abroad; and that this Houſe did " humbly beſeech her Majeſty, that ſhe would be pleaſed to diſcountenance all " thoſe who ſhould endeavour to raiſe Jealouſies between her Majeſty and her Sub- " jects, eſpecially by miſrepreſenting her good Intentions for the Welfare of her " People. 2. That the ſaid Reſolution be laid before her Majeſty by the whole " Houſe." The Commons having attended † the Queen with the ſaid Reſolution, her Majeſty was pleaſed to return the following Anſwer:

Reſolution about the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

† June 19.

GENTLEMEN,

" I Return you hearty Thanks for this Reſolution, which is very becoming you, " who truly repreſent all my Commons.

" You have ſhewn your ſelves honeſt Aſſertors of the Monarchy, zealous Defen- " ders of the Conſtitution, and real Friends to the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

" What I have ſaid and done, is ſufficient to ſatisfy any Perſon who is in earneſt " for the Succeſſion, as by Law eſtabliſhed, in the Houſe of Hanover, that I need " not be put in Mind of doing any Thing which may contribute to render that Suc- " ceſſion ſecure.

Two Days after ‖, the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, with the uſual Solemnity, and, having given the Royal Aſſent to ſeveral publick and private Acts, made the following Speech to both Houſes:

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" THE laſt Time I was here, I ſpoke ſo fully, and afterwards received from " both Houſes ſuch ſatisfactory Addreſſes, that there remains little more " for me to ſay, at the cloſe of this Meeting of Parliament, but to repeat my hear- " ty Thanks for your late ſolemn Aſſurances. They will give me Strength to " ſtruggle with any Difficulties which may yet be raiſed, and, I hope, that nei- " ther they who envy the making a good Peace, nor who think it their Intereſt to " continue the War, will be able to defeat our joint Endeavours for the Honour and " Advantage of Britain, and the Security of all our Allies.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

" At the ſame Time that I thank you moſt kindly for the Supplies you have " chearfully granted, I cannot but let you know my Satisfaction in the near View " I have of a Peace, ſince it will, in ſome Meaſure, recompence my Subjects for " their vaſt Expences, and alſo lighten that heavy Burden they have born during " the War.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" You have expreſs'd how ſenſible you are of the Advantage and Security which " accrue to Britain, and our Allies, by the Terms propoſed for a Peace. And I " need not mention to you, the Miſchiefs which muſt follow the breaking of this " Treaty. Our Burdens would be at leaſt continued, if not increaſed; the preſent " Opportunity would be irrecoverably loſt, of Britain's eſtabliſhing a real Balance " of Power in Europe, and improving our own Commerce; and if any one of our " Allies ſhould gain ſomething by ſuch a Proceeding, the reſt would ſuffer in the " common Calamity. But, I hope, by GOD's Bleſſing, ſuch fatal Deſigns will be " diſappointed.

" You are now returning into your reſpective Countries, and I perſuade my ſelf, " you will not be wanting in your Endeavours to obviate the Deſigns of any ill " minded Perſons, who may attempt to ſow Sedition amongſt my Subjects, and " under ſpecious Pretences, carry on Deſigns they dare not own.

" I hope, at your next Meeting, there will be an Opportunity of perfecting " what I have recommended to you, which you have left unfiniſhed in this " Seſſion.

" I cannot conclude without aſſuring you, that nothing ſhall move me from ſted- " dily purſuing the true Intereſt of ſo dutiful and affectionate a People.

Both Houſes adjourn'd to the 8th of July.

Afterwards, the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal ſignified her Majeſty's Pleaſure, That both Houſes ſhould forthwith ſeverally adjourn, until Tueſday, the 8th Day of July next, which they did accordingly. This Adjournment, inſtead of a Prorogation, occaſioned various Diſcourſes, ſome ſurmizing, that it was intended as a further Mortification to Mr. Walpole, who rather choſe to continue Priſoner in the Tower, than to make his Submiſſion; and whoſe Firmneſs was imitated by Mr. Man, and Mr. Buckley, who were likewiſe continued in the Cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms. Others imagined it was intended, That at the Expiration of the Adjournment, the Houſe ſhould ſit again, for the Diſpatch of Buſineſs; but whatever Ground there was for the firſt of theſe Conjectures, it appear'd there was none for the latter: For at their next * Meeting, after the Commons had order'd Writs to be iſſued out for new Elections, in the room of ſuch of their Members as had accepted Places of Honour and Profit, the Parliament was, by Commiſſion, prorogued to the 31ſt of July. The Perſons who were under Confinement by order of the Commons, being in Courſe ſet at Liberty, Mr. Walpole took that Opportunity to publiſh his Caſe, in which he made his Innocency, as to the Charge of Bribery, fully appear; and in a Poſtſcript to it, concerning what paſs'd after his Expulſion, upon his being re-choſen Member of the Houſe of Commons, he advanc'd to ſhew, " That as no " Law or Uſage made Expulſion an Incapacity, nothing but a Declaration of Par- " liament can do it; which having not been made previous to Mr. Walpole's Second " Election, there could be no Incapacity at the Time of the Election; and there- " fore ſuch a Declaration, ſubſequent to the Election, was, in other Words, a Se- " cond Expulſion." To corroborate this Aſſertion, the Author brought in the Inſtances both of " Mr. Wollaſton, who was Expell'd, Re-elected, and ſat in the ſame Par- " liament unmoleſted; and of Sir Robert Sawyer, who was likewiſe Expell'd, and " Re-elected immediately after the Sentence of Expulſion was paſs'd, in the Vacancy " occaſioned by his own Expulſion." We may here take Notice, that the frequent Viſits which the Duke and Dutcheſs of Marlborough, the Earl of Godolphin, and other Perſons of Diſtinction, made to Mr. Walpole in the Tower, were very ungrateful to the Court.

* July 8. The Parliament Prorogued.

Mr. Walpole's Caſe publiſh'd.

A. D. 1712.

On the 12th of June, at an Aſſembly of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of the City of London, a Motion was made, for addreſſing her Majeſty about the Peace: Againſt which, ſome Objections were ſtarted by Sir Gilbert Heathcote, and Sir Charles Peers; who alledg'd, "That the making Peace or War, "being the Prerogative of the Crown, they ought not to meddle with it." But the Majority, who knew that ſuch a Step would be very acceptable to the Court, being of a contrary Opinion, it was carried, that they ſhould make the ſaid Addreſs; which being, Two Days after, preſented, with another from the Lieutenancy, the Queen return'd them moſt gracious Anſwers, and beſtow'd the Honour of Knighthood on John Caſs, and William Stuart, the preſent Sheriffs, and on Samuel Clark, Eſq;. Experience having ſufficiently convinc'd the World, that Addreſſes, generally ſpeaking, are but Compliments owing to the Prevalency of a Party; and upon which, therefore, no Streſs ought to be laid, I ſhall paſs over the Multiplicity of thoſe that were preſented on this Occaſion. However, as theſe ſolemn Applications to the Throne are, for the moſt part, procured by the Friends and Agents of the Miniſters, in order to juſtify any Counſels and Meaſures they have enter'd upon, and deſign to purſue, ſome Addreſſes ſo far deſerve the Attention of the Publick, as they are ſhrewd Indications of the Sentiments and Views of thoſe at Helm. But then there are others, which only reſult from the Humour, or Caprice of a Set of Men, or of ſome private Perſons, who happen to have a paramount Intereſt in a Borough, Town, or Corporation; and which, therefore, are generally inſignificant, if not fooliſh and extravagant.

Addreſs of the City of London, June 14.

Reflection upon Addreſſes.

Neither the vaſt Number, nor the great Noiſe of Addreſſes, which, during the remaining Part of this Year, were preſented to the Queen, were able to drown the Murmurings of the Whig-Party, and even of many Tories, who did not like the Terms of Peace contain'd in her Majeſty's Speech. On the other hand, the Aſtoniſhment, not to ſay Indignation, with which that Speech was receiv'd in Holland, is hardly to be expreſs'd; as appears from the following Abſtract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Amſterdam. "We are at laſt at full Certainty as to the good Intentions "of Great Britain towards this State, ſet forth, at large, in the Queen's Speech to "her Parliament. The Emperor finds likewiſe in it, very ſenſible Proofs of Affe- "ction for him, ſince he may be left in Poſſeſſion of the Milaneze, Naples, Sardi- "nia, and the Low-Countries. But it unluckily falls out, that neither the Imperia- "liſts, nor the Dutch, will put a favourable Conſtruction on theſe good Intentions. "On the contrary, they ſay, that 'tis very hard for a Prince, who begins his "Reign ſo gloriouſly as the Emperor, to ſee himſelf abandon'd, and reduc'd to "give up Catalonia without any Equivalent; ſince he is not to have even Sicily, "which, it ſeems, is to be kept in Petto, the better to allure the Duke of Savoy, in "Caſe he ſhould ſtand out: Beſides the ſecuring to him the Succeſſion to the Spa- "niſh Monarchy, after the Duke of Anjou, and his Iſſue, by excluding for ever, "the Houſe of Auſtria from its Rights to Spain. As for the Dutch, they complain, "that they are not allow'd even the Barrier agreed on, between them and the "Queen, in 1709: That by the Two or Three Places, which are to be excepted from "that Barrier, Liſle and Tournay may be meant; beſides the Towns they have ta- "ken ſince 1709; which will reduce that Barrier almoſt to nothing: And that the "Exception of ſome Species of Merchandize, from the Tariff of 1664, which they in- "ſiſt upon, may reach their Fiſh, Linnen, and Spices, whereby they may be exclu- "ded from all their profitable Trade, the other Branches being more advantageous to "France, than to Holland. Theſe are the chief Exceptions of the Imperialiſts and "Dutch; nor is it altogether without Reaſon, that the latter take it ill, that the "Duke of Savoy's, and King of Pruſſia's Services to the Common Cauſe, are only men- "tion'd and extoll'd in the Queen's Speech; and that no manner of Notice is taken "of this State, which hitherto has ſignaliz'd its Reſolution and Conſtancy, and ne- "ver offer'd to break either its Promiſes or Engagements, by treating ſeparately "with France, though powerful Sollicitations have not been wanting to induce "them to it." The Exceptions of the Imperialiſts againſt the Scheme of Peace propos'd in the Queen's Speech, were afterwards fully expreſs'd in a Book, intituled, The Sighs of Europe, which was publiſh'd in Holland by Count Zinzendorf's Direction.

The Terms of Peace propoſed in the Queen's Speech, receiv'd with great Aſtoniſhment in Holland.

Exceptions of the Imperialiſts againſt that Scheme.

Exceptions of the Dutch.

The States-General having rightly concluded, from the late Declarations of the Britiſh General in the Army, and of the Biſhop of Briſtol at Utrecht, that the Miniſters of Great Britain had agreed upon a Suſpenſion of Arms with France, and would impoſe it on the Allies, by withdrawing from the Confederate Army, not only their National Troops, but alſo the Auxiliaries in their Pay; which would make them abſolute Maſters of the Negotiation of Peace: Their High-Mightineſſes took early Meaſures to prevent it. Having conferr'd with the Miniſters of the chief Potentates, whoſe whoſe Troops were in Britiſh Pay; they ſent Meſſieurs Van Welderen and Hop to the Army, both to concert with Prince Eugene of Savoy, proper Methods to ingage the Generals of thoſe Troops, and to provide for their Subſiſtence; which Commiſſion was executed with equal Dexterity and Succeſs. The Duke of Ormond having caus'd Bread for Six Days to be diſtributed to the Army under his Command, (which ſhew'd he deſign'd to make ſome Motion) Prince Eugene aik'd the Generals of the Auxiliaries, "Whether they had any Orders from their Sove-"reigns to regulate themſelves by, in caſe the Engliſh ſhould withdraw?" It appear'd, by their Anſwer, either that they had receiv'd ſecret Inſtructions long before, or that they had been lately tamper'd with: For, Two only excepted, they unanimouſly aſſur'd the Prince, "That they would not march with the Britiſh "General, without communicating the Orders they ſhould receive from him to "his Highneſs: And in caſe the ſame were not agreeable to the Intentions and "Intereſt of the High Allies, they would not follow the Duke, but would look up-"on themſelves as diſengaged from his Command." On the other hand, their High Mightineſſes having reſolv'd to proſecute the Operations of War, the Trenches were open'd before Queſnoy, the Night between the 19th and 20th of June, N. S. and the Siege carry'd on with all imaginable Vigor, under the Command of General Fagel.

Queſnoy beſieg'd.

On the 21ſt of June, N. S. the Duke of Ormond was invited to a Conference, that was held that Day between the States Deputies, the Prince of Savoy, and Count Tilly; but his Grace excuſed himſelf, on Pretence of a ſmall Indiſpoſition, that he might avoid concerting any further Meaſures with them: And having, Four † Days after, received a Copy of the Articles, ſign'd by the Marquis de Torcy, (tho' not intirely as the Queen had demanded) his Grace immediately directed the Earl of Orkney, to prepare himſelf to march with Ten Battalions, in order to take Poſſeſſion of Dunkirk. The ſame Day, the Duke viſited the Prince of Savoy and the Dutch Deputies, and told them, "That the French King had agreed to ſeveral "Articles demanded by the Queen, as a Foundation for a Suſpenſion of Arms; "and, among others, the giving up immediately into our Poſſeſſion the Town of "Dunkirk. That the Duke therefore could no longer cover the Siege of Queſnoy; "being oblig'd, by his Inſtructions, to march with the Queen's Troops, and thoſe "in Her Majeſty's Pay, and to declare a Ceſſation of Arms, as ſoon as Dunkirk "was deliver'd up: And he hop'd, they would readily concur therein; which "would be the moſt powerful Motive, to induce the Queen to take all poſſible "Care of their Intereſts at the Peace. And he likewiſe endeavour'd to ſhew them, "That Dunkirk, as a cautionary Town, was a Place of greater Conſequence to "the Allies, than Queſnoy." The Deputies deſir'd Five Days Time, to conſult their Maſters upon ſo important a Matter; which the Duke would have allow'd them, if, in the mean Time, they would have agreed to deſiſt from the proſecuting of the Siege, or, at leaſt, to make ſome Delay in it; which, they ſaid, was not in their Power. However, he at laſt conſented to give them Three Days; that being no Hindrance to the Execution of his Orders; becauſe he could not expect to have an Account, before that Time, from the French Court, how Dunkirk ſhould be deliver'd up to him. The Deputies refus'd to let a Detachment go through any of their Towns, in the way to Dunkirk: And both they, and the Prince of Savoy, told his Grace, "That his marching away with the Queen's Troops, and "the Foreigners in her Pay, would leave them to the Mercy of the French; but "that they were ſure, the Foreigners would not march." The Duke having taken the firſt Opportunity to ſound the Generals of the Foreign Troops in the Queen's Pay; they ſeem'd, at firſt, well inclin'd to continue ſteady to Her Majeſty's Intereſt; and particularly General Bulou, who commanded the Hanoverians, as ſoon as he had read the Queen's Speech, told him, He was ready, with his Maſter's Troops, to follow all ſuch Orders, as his Grace ſhould think fit to give him. But, upon diſcourſing with him now, the Duke found, that Means had been us'd to prevail upon him, as well as the reſt; who agreed in making Excuſes; pretending they could not ſeparate from the Confederacy, without expreſs Directions from their Maſters, to whom they had ſent Couriers; and alledg'd, "That neither the Grand "Alliance, nor the particular Conventions, admitted of any Parties treating of, "or making Peace, or even a Suſpenſion of Arms, without the Conſent of the "others." The Duke thought it belong'd not to him, to enter into theſe laſt Particulars; but inſiſted on the Commands he had receiv'd from the Queen, and on the Engagements they were under to aſſiſt him, their General, in an effectual Compliance with them; repreſenting, at the ſame Time, the juſt Reaſons the Queen had to reſent, and the ill Conſequences that would attend their Refuſal. However, the Duke finding, that the Foreign Troops would obey no Orders, but what they they themſelves, in Conjunction with the Prince and the Deputies, ſhould approve, countermanded the Detachment deſign'd for Dunkirk; and, in the Afternoon, ſent to Monſieur Villars an Account of the Reſult of his Viſit, and deſir'd to know of him more particularly, "In what manner Dunkirk was to be put into his "Hands, in caſe the Engliſh Troops march'd alone, without the Auxiliaries; who, "he had ſome Reaſon to ſuſpect, might ſcruple to go along with him:" Adding, "That he hop'd, he would not defer ſending the neceſſary Orders for the "Delivery of that Town; which would be a Means to make every Thing, rela-"ting to the Peace, go on the more eaſily, and the Ceſſation of Arms take Ef-"fect the ſooner.

It is obſervable, That the Mareſchal de Villars having, at this nice Juncture, caus'd ſeveral Bridges to be laid over the Senſet, the ſame occaſion'd a Surmize, that he might intend to attack the Confederate Army, in caſe the Auxiliaries, in Britiſh Pay, had march'd off with the Duke of Ormond. On the other hand, it was apprehended, that the Britiſh General might have a Deſign upon ſome of the ſtrong Towns gariſon'd by the Dutch; whereupon Prince Eugene ſent for General Hompeſch, Governor of Douay, and deſir'd him to take care, that the Engliſh Troops deſign'd for Dunkirk, might not go thro' Douay: And the like Caution was given to other Dutch Governors, in relation to the Britiſh Forces.

Caution given to the Dutch Governors about the Britiſh Troops.

Upon the * Arrival of Two Expreſſes, from the Confederate Army, at the Hague, with an Account of the Duke of Ormond's Declaration about a Ceſſation of Arms, the States-General were extraordinarily aſſembled; and, the ſame Evening, Invitations were ſent to the Miniſters of the Allies at Utrecht, to concert Meaſures on the preſent Poſture of Affairs; and Meſſengers diſpatch'd with Circular Letters, to the ſeveral Towns of Holland and Weſt Friezland, to ſummon an extraordinary Meeting of the States of that Province, on the Firſt of July N. S. The City of Amſterdam, which, as they contribute moſt towards Publick Expences, ſo have they the greateſt Sway and Influence in all Conſultations, ſent an unprecedented Deputation to the Hague, conſiſting of Three Burgomaſters, and as many principal Magiſtrates. Before their Departure, the Regent Burgomaſter held an Aſſembly; in which Monſieur Corver, their Senior, a Perſon no leſs venerable for his Age, (being Eighty four Years old) than for his Integrity and Wiſdom, made an excellent Speech; wherein he pathetically laid before them the Neceſſity of carrying on the War, without which, their Commonwealth was like to be irrecoverably ruin'd.) He ſaid, "He "was an old Man, upwards of Fourſcore, and had ſeen far more difficult Times: "For, he had ſeen the French at their very Gates; but, by the Bleſſing of "GOD on their Firmneſs and Reſolution, they had hitherto preſerv'd their free "State. That he had no private Intereſt in Trade, nor any other Concern, "but the Good of his Country, and the Common Cauſe; yet he would give the "Half of what he had in the World, nay, All, rather than ſuffer the Loſs of their "Liberties. But if, at laſt, added he, we are overpower'd; then let us lay our Cities "under Water, betake our ſelves to our Ships, and ſail to the Eaſt-Indies: And let thoſe "who ſee our Country laid waſte, ſay, There liv'd a People, who choſe to loſe their "Country, rather than their Liberty!" It is eaſy to gueſs what Effect this memorable Speech had on the Aſſembly, and, afterwards, on thoſe of the States-General, and of the Province of Holland and Weſt Friezland; but tho' the Majority of the Cities had given their Deputies Inſtructions to reject the Propoſal of a Ceſſation of Arms, yet their High Mightineſſes thought fit not to come to any Reſolution about that important Buſineſs; but rather to gain Time, at leaſt till the Reduction of Quesnoy; for which Delay, the Earl of Strafford's Abſence from the Hague, and the Expectation of his ſudden Return thither, gave them a very colourable Pretence. In the mean while, their High Mightineſſes receiv'd Aſſurances from the Princes, who had Troops in Britiſh Pay, "That they would maintain them "wholly at their own Expence, under Prince Eugene's Command, for one Month; "and afterwards continue them in the Service, and pay Half the Charge, provi-"ded the Emperor and the States-General would pay the other Half:" To which the Dutch were ready enough to conſent.

Mr. Corver's memorable Speech at Amſterdam.

In the mean time, the Biſhop of Briſtol diſcharg'd his Inſtructions at Utrecht with the ſame Punctuality as the Duke of Ormond in the Army; and a Conference being held at that Place on the 27th of June, between the Miniſters of the Allies, that Prelate, in a ſolemn manner, communicated to them the Conceſſion which the Queen, his Miſtreſs, had prevailed on France to make to the Allies; and propoſed to them a Suſpenſion of Arms for Two Months, in order to treat with the French, and, in a friendly manner, adjuſt the Demands of all the Confederates. None of the Miniſters there preſent having thought fit to return him an Anſwer, all of them looking on one another with Surprize, and Speechleſs, the Lord Privy-Seal left them to conſult together; upon which ſome of them ſpoke very ſmartly againſt the Propoſal made to them. In the Afternoon, the Britiſh Plenipotentiary was in Conference with the reſt of thoſe Miniſters, and urged to them the Neceſſity of a Ceſſation of Arms; but he found them ſtanch and unanimous in their Anſwers, That they had no Inſtructions about that Matter, and muſt wait for freſh Orders from their Principals. The † next Day, the Plenipotentiaries of the Allies met at the Deputies of the States General; and having concerted ſome Meaſures, moſt of them repaired afterwards to the Hague, to aſſiſt at the great Conſultations that were held in that Place.

† June 28. N. S.

The Duke of Savoy's Miniſters deny the Reports of their Maſter's having agreed to a Ceſſation of Arms, &c.

And here we may take Notice, that the Duke of Savoy's Miniſters were ſo highly offended at the Report that had induſtriouſly been ſpread, that their Maſter had agreed to a Suſpenſion of Arms, and to the Terms of Peace concerted between Great Britain and France, that they publickly diſown'd it, as falſe and ſcandalous; and, on the contrary, declar'd, "That his Royal Highneſs, their Maſter, would remain "firm in the Grand Alliance, being ſenſible, he had been impoſed upon by the In"ſinuations of a certain Miniſter." On the other hand, Count Zinzendorf, the Firſt Imperial Plenipotentiary, did, on the 30th of June, N. S. preſent to the States General a Memorial, which he call'd, His Sentiments upon the Affairs of the preſent Conjuncture: Wherein having ſhew'd, "the Tendency of the Queen of Great Bri"tain's Speech to her Parliament, and touch'd upon the Declarations of the Duke of "Ormond, and the Biſhop of Briſtol, he inſiſted on the Danger that would reſult to "the Common Cauſe from a Ceſſation of Arms; commended their High Mighti"neſſes for approving what Prince Eugene of Savoy and their Deputies had "done in the Army; and, in particular, their High Mightineſſes having furniſhed "Bread to the Foreign Troops in Engliſh Pay; exhorted them to perſevere in theſe "generous and vigorous Reſolutions; and, in order to maintain a ſtrict Union "among the Allies, he propoſed the Five Points following: 1. That the Alliance "ought to be renew'd, in order to compaſs theſe Ends, viz. the Recovery of the "Spaniſh Monarchy to the Houſe of Auſtria; the Security of that State, by a Bar"rier in the Netherlands, and of their Trade in Spain and the Weſt-Indies; the pro"curing a Tariff with France; the Performance of the Treaties with the King of "Portugal and the Duke of Savoy, with relation to the Spaniſh Monarchy; as alſo "thoſe with the King of Pruſſia, the Elector Palatine, the Elector of Hanover, and "all the other Confederate Princes; and that likewiſe for the Security of the Aſſo"ciated Circles. 2. That all the Allies ſhould be invited to join in it. 3. That it "was neceſſary to form a Plan of the War, ſo as it might be carried on with moſt "Succeſs and leaſt Expence. 4. That they ſhould come to ſome Reſolution about "the War in the North, ſo as they might be ſure of the Aſſiſtance of the Princes "ingag'd in it, moſt of whom furniſh'd Troops againſt France. And, 5thly, That "after thoſe Meaſures were concerted, Repreſentations ſhould be made to the Queen "of Great Britain, requeſting her Majeſty to perform her Engagements, and to per"ſuade her, that 'twas the Intention of the other Allies to maintain the Common "Cauſe with inviolable Firmneſs; and that they deſired nothing ſo much, as that "her Majeſty would be pleaſed to perſiſt in what ſhe had done hitherto ſo gloriouſly "for that End. He afterwards aſſured the States, that the Emperor would continue "to furniſh 20000 Men in Savoy, 30000 in Spain, 14000 on the Rhine, 24000 in the "Netherlands, 8000 in Lombardy, 8000 in Naples, and 4000 in Bavaria, in all 108000 "Men; that he would furniſh the Third of Four Millions of Crowns for the War in "Catalonia; that he would endeavour to bring more of his Troops into the Field "againſt France than hitherto, and do his utmoſt to ingage the Empire in general, "and all the Princes and States in particular, to make new Efforts." But no great Streſs was laid upon theſe magnificent Promiſes.

Major-General Groveſtein makes a ſucceſsful Incurſion into France.

While theſe Things paſs'd in Holland, Major-General Groveſtein, Governor of Bouchain, who had been detach'd by Prince Eugene with about 1500 Horſe, Dragoons, and Huſſars, made a ſucceſsful Incurſion into France; and having ravag'd, plunder'd, and burnt ſeveral open Towns and Villages in Champagne, and the Country of Metz, and ſtruck Terror and Conſternation as far as Paris, made his Retreat by Traerbach, and from thence through the Biſhoprick of Liege to Maeſtricht, where he depoſited a great Number of Hoſtages he carried away with him for Contributions; and then marched to Bruſſels, in order to rejoin the Confederate Army. On the other hand, the Siege of Queſnoy was carried on with extraordinary Vigor and Succeſs; and the Duke of Ormond foreſeeing that the Reduction of that Place might ſwell the Hopes of the Allies, and obſtruct the Britiſh Meaſures for a General Peace, ſent to acquaint Prince Eugene, "That his Troops ſhould continue in the Army, provided he "would give over the Siege of Queſnoy:" But his Highneſs anſwer'd, That inſtead of putting a Stop to that Siege, he would cauſe it to be proſecuted with all imaginable Vigor, and that he would let his Grace be Eye-witneſs of another Expedition, immediately after the taking taking of that Town. From this Time, all Correſpondence ceas'd between Prince Eugene and the Britiſh General; and the Firſt perceiving, that frequent Expreſſes went between the Duke and the French Army, which might prove detrimental to the Confederate Cauſe, his Highneſs had private Conferences with other Generals, in order to ſeparate their Forces from the Engliſh, and inſinuated, "He ſhould be glad if the "latter would march off, they being now only a Burden to the Netherlands, ſince "they had declared, they would not fight againſt France." Theſe Paſſages were not altogether unknown to the Duke of Ormond, who, on the 28th of June, N. S. ſent his Adjutant with a written Order to the Generals of the Foreign Troops in Britiſh Pay, commanding them to hold themſelves, and the Forces under their Command, in a Readineſs to march; but, excepting Major-General Berner, who commanded Four Squadrons and One Battalion of the Troops of Holſtein Gottorp; and Major-General Waleſ, Colonel of a Regiment of Dragoons of the Troops of Liege, who had the Queen's Commiſſion, all thoſe Generals unanimouſly anſwer'd, as they had done before, That they could not follow his Grace, nor ſeparate from Prince Eugene, without expreſs Orders from their reſpective Princes. Among the reſt, the Hereditary Prince of Heſſe-Caſſel, bid the Adjutant tell his Grace, The Heſſians deſired nothing more than to march, provided it were to fight the French; and that he would wait upon the Duke the next Day, to give him his Reaſons for not obeying his Orders at that time. On the 1ſt of July, N. S. the Confederates ſtorm'd and carried the Counterſcarp of Queſnoy in Four Places; and, on the 3d, Monſieur Labadie, the Governor, conſented to ſurrender the Place; and that his Gariſon ſhould remain Priſoners of War.

The Generals of the Auxiliaries in Britiſh Pay, refuſe again to march with the Duke of Ormond.

Queſnoy ſurrender'd, July 3. N. S.

The Earl of Strafford having ſet out from London on the 23d of June, O. S. landed at the Brill on the 6th of July, N. S. and arriving the ſame Evening at the Hague, amidſt the Diſcharges of Cannon and Small Arms, and other ſolemn Rejoicings for the Surrender of Queſnoy, he aſk'd, and was told the Reaſon; to which he anſwer'd, That they made a great Noiſe for a paltry Town. His Excellency went immediately to the Great Penſionary's, with whom he was in Conference above an Hour and a half; and the next Morning, gave a Viſit to the Preſident of the Week, and deſired that their High Mightineſſes would name Deputies to confer with him about Matters of the laſt Importance, which he had to lay before them. Accordingly, the States General made a ſolemn Deputation from their own Body, conſiſting of Meſſieurs de Lathmar, Fagel, Counſellor-Penſionary Heinſius, Koninck, Schoonhaven, Burum, Steenbergen, Steenhuyſen, and Regiſter Fagel, to whom the Earl of Strafford propoſed a Suſpenſion of Arms for Two Months, and the entring into the Negotiations for a Peace upon the Offers of France. After a long Conference, the Deputies return'd to the Aſſembly of the States General, and having made their Report, the Preſident waited again on the Earl of Strafford; and in the Evening, the Dutch Plenipotentiaries were in Conference both with their High Mightineſſes Deputies and the Council of State. The Lord Privy-Seal, upon the News of the Earl of Strafford's Arrival, came to the Hague the ſame Evening from Utrecht, and their Lordſhips went together to the Great Penſionary. The next Morning, at the Deſire of the States General, their Lordſhips were again in Conference with their High Mightineſſes for about Three Hours, and were afterwards entertain'd at Dinner by Count Zinzendorf. The Britiſh Plenipotentiaries having ſignify'd, that, for the future, they would not confer with ſo many Deputies at a time, and that Three or Four were enough; this was comply'd with, tho' it be the Cuſtom of that Government, that there be one Deputy for every Province at leaſt. Accordingly, on the 9th of July, N. S. in the Morning, the Great Penſionary, the Regiſter Fagel, Monſieur Buys, and Monſieur Slingerland, Deputies of the States General, had another long Conference with the Two Britiſh Plenipotentiaries: In all which Interviews, there were great Debates about a Ceſſation of Arms, and the Conditions which France might be brought to grant to the States, if they would treat of a General Peace. As to the Firſt, the Britiſh Miniſters urg'd, that Dunkirk would be deliver'd up to the Engliſh, as a Security for the Performance of what the French had promis'd; to which it was anſwer'd, That there ought to be a Security for the States, and other Allies, as well as for the Engliſh; and to that purpoſe, Mention was wade of Strasburg to the Germans; and Namur, Charleroy, and Ypres to the Dutch. It was replied, that Maubeuge and Condé might be put into the Hands of the States General: But this was rejected, becauſe it was ſuggeſted, in the other Part of the Debate, that their High Mightineſſes ſhould ſurrender to the French, Douay, Liſle, and Tournay. The Dutch Deputies being ſtartled at this Propoſal, which, they ſaid, was more in Favour of France, than of the Allies, the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries anſwer'd, they hoped France might be prevail'd with to be contented with Liſle and Douay, as an Equivalent for Dunkirk; and, upon that Condition, to grant to their High-Mightineſſes the Barrier they demanded in 1709, and the Tariff of 1664, excepting only the following Species of Merchandize, which the Dutch ſhould not be permitted to import into France, viz. Whale-Oyl, Soap, Sugar, and Dry-Fiſh; as alſo the Duty of Fifty Sols per Tun, which the French King would not remit. The Earl of Strafford did likewiſe inſiſt, that the States General ſhould withdraw their Forces from Spain and Portugal, and that they ſhould forthwith return a Cathegorical Anſwer to their Propoſals. During the Debates, the States General ſent to the Miniſters of Pruſſia and Hanover, to know what they might depend upon, as to the Troops of their Maſters; to which they not only return'd a favourable Anſwer, but, at the Deſire of the States, wrote Letters to the Generals of thoſe Forces, to act according as thoſe Miniſters had promiſed they ſhould. On the other hand, the Emperor's Miniſter, ſuſpecting what would be propos'd, ſignify'd to their High-Mightineſſes, that if they agreed to a Ceſſation of Arms, Prince Eugene had Orders immediately to march off with all the Emperor's Forces into the Empire, and leave the Dutch to the Mercy both of their old and new Enemies. This, together with the Remonſtrances of the great Penſionary, the Regiſter Fagel, and Monſieur Slingerland, inclined the States of the Province of Holland and Weſt-Friezland, to come to * an unanimous Reſolution, importing, "That they were intirely diſpoſed to put an End to this "bloody and expenſive War, by a good Peace; that in order to that, they were "ready to liſten to ſuch Propoſals, as France ſhould be willing to make in Writing, "in anſwer to the Specifick Demands of the Allies; that if the ſame were juſt and "reaſonable, in ſuch a Caſe, their High-Mightineſſes would readily conſent to a "general Peace; but that they would never depart from their Engagements with "their Allies, without whoſe Conſent, they could not agree to a Ceſſation of "Arms. This Reſolution was ſo great a Mortification to the Britiſh Miniſters, that the Earl of Strafford ſaid thereupon, with ſome Vehemence, That he would go to the Army, and execute his Orders. This occaſion'd a ſmart Reply: but, however, he was deſired to defer his Journey for one Day, which he refuſed, unleſs Prince Eugene were deſired to forbear Hoſtilities. After ſome Deliberation, he was told, that an Expreſs ſhould be ſent to Prince Eugene, to deſire that he would undertake nothing 'till Forty Eight Hours after the Earl of Strafford's Arrival in the Army. About this Time, a Report was ſpread in Holland, that the Engliſh had form'd a Deſign to ſeize Oſtend: Which Rumour was undoubtedly occaſion'd, by Sir Thomas Hanmer's repairing to that Town towards the latter end of June, N. S; his cauſing the Depth of the Harbour to be ſounded; and his viewing the Fortifications with the Burgomaſter Bawens, who was ſuppos'd to be in the Britiſh Intereſt. Whatever Ground there might be for this Surmize, Sir Thomas Hanmer having ſpent ſome Days at Bruges and Ghent, where his Preſence was thought neceſſary to prepare Matters for future Deſigns; that Gentleman, who from this Time, began to appear with the Title of the Queen of Great Britain's Miniſter, repair'd to Bruſſels; where the Earl of Strafford arrived the 11th of July, N. S. under a triple Diſcharge of the Artillery. Having receiv'd the Compliments of ſeveral Perſons of Diſtinction, his Lordſhip proceeded for the Duke of Ormond's Army, then encamped at Chateau Cambreſis, where he arrived the 12th, and found it was high Time to ſeparate the Britiſh Forces from the Germans, between whom there had been frequent Quarrels; in wnich many Men, and even ſome Officers, were kill'd on both Sides. The Day † before, a Council of War was held at Prince Eugene's Quarters at Haſpre, wherein it was agreed, that the Army ſhould make a Movement the 15th, to attack Landrecy; that the Prince of Anhalt Deſſau, ſhould command the Siege of that Place; and that if the Engliſh retired from the Army, nothing ſhould be omitted, to carry on the War with the utmoſt Vigor, in order to take Winter-Quarters in Picardy. The Earl of Strafford foreſeeing what a Martial Anſwer he muſt expect, in Caſe he ſhould propoſe a Ceſſation of Arms, continued at the Duke of Ormond's Quarters, where he conferr'd with none of the Commanders of the Auxiliary Troops, except the General of the Hanoverians, who was inſtructed to declare, that his Maſter, as an Elector of the Empire, was obliged to follow the Reſolutions of the Head and Members of that great Body. Whether the Earl of Strafford expected the firſt Viſit from Prince Eugene, and the States Deputies, is uncertain; but if he did, he was diſappointed; and his Excellency having notify'd to them his Arrival in the Duke of Ormond's Camp, no ſooner than the 14th of July, his Highneſs and the Deputies, contented themſelves with returning his Excellency a Compliment thereupon.

The News of the Auxiliaries refuſing to obey the Duke of Ormond, variouſly entertain'd in England.

The News of the Auxiliaries in Britiſh Pay, refuſing to march with the Duke of Ormond, was variouſly entertain'd in England, according to the different Inclinations and Views of the contending Parties. Thoſe who had either oppoſed or diſapproved the late Meaſures, could not but rejoice at it: The moſt ſanguine amongſt them, openly declaring their Hopes, that the Confederates would carry on the War with-without England; others with leſs Diſcretion, ſpreading Reports of the Duke of Ormond's having been threatned by ſome German Generals: And others again whiſpering about their ſecret Wiſhes, under the Notion of Apprehenſions of a Deſign form'd by thoſe Generals, to confine his Grace for their Arrears, and even to diſarm the Britiſh Troops, leſt they ſhould join the French Army. Whether ſuch a Thought was ever entertain'd by any of thoſe Commanders, is very difficult to determine: But 'tis certain no ſuch Thing was ever propos'd to the States Deputies; and 'tis more than probable, that if it had, it would have been rejected with Indignation. However, 'tis obſervable, that the Friends of the new Miniſtry were apt enough to ſuſpect ſuch a Deſign, and very induſtrious in infuſing the Belief of it, in order to render the Allies ſtill more odious to the People.

All this while, the Duke of Ormond found himſelf in a very uneaſy Poſture: His Grace, upon a Suppoſition that the Mareſchal de Villars would ſend him a ſatisfactory Anſwer, and that the Foreign Troops would perſiſt in their Refuſal to obey his Orders, deſign'd to march with all the Engliſh Troops, and the Artillery, to Dunkirk, where he thought they would be moſt ſecure, and would have the Sea open, in caſe the Queen ſhould think fit to recall them. But the 27th and 29th of June, his Grace receiv'd Letters from the Mareſchal de Villars, and the Marquis de Torcy, the firſt of which imported, "That the King (of France) might very well be aſtoniſh'd, that in Caſe of a Ceſſation, the Generals of the Auxiliary Troops ſhould make any Difficulty to ſeparate from Prince Eugene; and that 'twas ſurprizing, that the Dutch ſhould have more Power over Men, whom they did not pay, to make them hazard their Lives, than the Queen, who had paid them theſe Dozen Years, ſhould have to perſuade them not to expoſe themſelves to any Danger." The Marquis urged, that in the Articles agreed on, it was expreſs'd, "That the Ceſſation ſhould be between the Armies in the Netherlands: That 'twas upon this View of a general Ceſſation, that ſo important a Place as Dunkirk, was to be deliver'd up: That the chief Motive which made England and France agree to a Ceſſation, was, that nothing might happen between the Armies, to interrupt the Meaſures that were taken for a Peace: To effect which, nothing but a general Ceſſation would be ſufficient; and if the Enemies of Peace had ſtill the Liberty and Power of acting left them, the Condition upon which the King was to ſurrender Dunkirk to the Queen, would not be comply'd with on her Majeſty's Part: That the King always thought the Queen was intire Miſtreſs of the Troops which compos'd her Army; and that they had all Orders to follow the Duke of Ormond's Directions; and therefore upon a Ceſſation, were to forbear Action, as well as the Engliſh: That in Caſe the Engliſh alone left the Army, Prince Eugene finding himſelf the ſole General, at the Head of great Numbers of Men, would hazard any Thing to come to an Action; and would not at all ſcruple to ſacrifice Troops, which his Maſter did not pay, and which were to be under the Prince's Command, only during the remainder of the Campaign. Therefore ſince theſe Propoſals of a Ceſſation, neither anſwer'd the Meaſures which the Queen had hitherto taken for a Peace, nor agreed to the Articles which had been concerted between her Majeſty and the King, upon that Subject, the King was perſuaded, that the Queen would give the Duke of Ormond full Inſtructions to ſeparate the whole intire Army, which was in her Majeſty's Pay, and actually under the Duke's Command, from that of Prince Eugene: And when this was done, the King would be ready to deliver up Dunkirk." The Sight of this laſt Letter very much perplex'd the Duke of Ormond; the rather, becauſe he had lately receiv'd Inſtructions from Mr. Secretary St. John, That in Caſe the French ſhould not comply with the Articles propoſed by her Majeſty, his Grace underſtood himſelf to be at Liberty to act as if no reſtrictive Orders had ever been ſent him. The French now declining to perform the main Article, which was the delivering up Dunkirk, he might have thought himſelf immediately at Liberty to act in Conjunction with the Allies: But he durſt not take upon himſelf to make a Step of that Conſequence, without the Queen's expreſs Orders. While he was in this Uncertainty, he receiv'd Letters * from Mr. St. John, acquainting him, "That France had comply'd with the Queen's Demands, to her Satisfaction; if therefore his Grace had any Difficulties, as ſeveral were foreſeen, which might ariſe in taking Poſſeſſion of Dunkirk, he might keep his Army intire; and the Meaſures were ready in England, for ſending over Troops ſufficient for that Service. That nothing could be more dreadful to the Dutch, than this Town in Engliſh Hands; but that in the preſent Ferment, he had better lie ſtill, and let Dunkirk be poſſeſs'd firſt, and the Clamour happen afterwards. And that the Queen had order'd my Lord Strafford to make all poſſible haſte to the Army, with neceſſary Inſtructions in this critical Juncture." At the ſame time, the Secretary gave the Duke an Account of the following remarkable Paſſage.

The Britiſh Miniſters being fully reſolved ſteadily to purſue their Scheme, and cut ſhort all Difficulties, Mr. Secretary St. John deſired the Miniſters of ſuch Foreign Princes as had Troops in the Pay of Great Britain, to meet him at his Office, where he told them, "That her Majeſty had received undoubted Information, which made "her judge the preſent Poſture of Affairs to be ſuch, that the Conditions of Peace "or War were no longer the Matter in Queſtion, but only, Whether her Majeſty "ſhould have the Management and Secret of the Negotiations of Peace; or, whe-"ther the ſame ſhould be left to the States General? And the latter, in order to break "the Meaſures ſhe had taken, pretending to over-rule the Allies, whoſe Generals in "Flanders obey'd P. Eugene, to carry on the War, and refuſed to follow the Duke of Or-"mond's Orders, in caſe the Queen ſhould think fit to agree to a Suſpenſion of Arms for "the Good of the Peace: Her Majeſty had commanded him to acquaint the Mini-"ſters of the Princes who had Troops in Flanders, either intirely in the Queen's Pay, "or jointly with the States, that ſhe would look upon ſuch a Refuſal as a Declara-"tion againſt her ſelf; and that ſhe had reſolv'd not to pay any more any Sub-"ſiſtence, Subſidy, or Arrears, to thoſe that ſhould make ſuch a Refuſal. That her "Majeſty deſired the ſaid Miniſters to make this Declaration known to the Com-"mander in Chief of their reſpective Maſter's Troops; and that an Expreſs would "forthwith be diſpatch'd to the Duke of Ormond, with her Majeſty's Orders to "take Poſſeſſion of ſuch Towns as France had offer'd to deliver up to her Majeſty, "as a Security for the Performance of the Scheme propoſed in her Speech to her "Parliament on the 6th of June laſt; which Places, as they could not be taken in "Two Years War, were far more advantageous than any that could now be reduc'd; "which gave her Majeſty Hopes, that the High Allies would think it more for their "Intereſt to concur with her, than to take other Meaſures; ſince, whatever the Conſe-"quence might be, the Queen would never depart from the ſaid Scheme." The Foreign Miniſters having no Inſtructions about that Matter, return'd the uſual Anſwer, That they would acquaint their reſpective Maſters with the ſaid Declaration.

Mr. Secretary St. John's Declaration to the foreign Miniſters, about the Auxiliaries in Britiſh Pay, June 20. O. S.

June 26. O. S. Some Days after, the Court receiv'd Advice from Paris, "That altho' Her Bri-"tannick Majeſty had not yet been able to procure a general Suſpenſion of Arms; "yet the King of France, to ſhew his ſincere Intentions for Peace, and the Confi-"dence he repos'd in Her Majeſty, was willing to deliver up Dunkirk into her "Hands; not doubting, but Her Britannick Majeſty would take the neceſſary Mea-"ſures to bring the Allies into the Plan concerted between the Crowns of Great Bri-"tain and France." Hereupon Sir John Leake * ſet out for Deal, to take upon him the Command of Her Majeſty's Fleet in the Downs; and to provide Tranſports for the Troops that were appointed to take Poſſeſſion of Dunkirk, under the Command of Brigadier Hill, Brother to the Lady Maſham; viz. a Battalion of the Scotch Guards, about a Thouſand Men detach'd from ſeveral Regiments of Marines, and the Regiments of Hill, Deſaulnay, and Kane. At the ſame Time, Sir James Abercrombie, a Creature of Duke Hamilton, and Colonel King, were ſent to Dunkirk, to regulate Matters with Count de l' Aumont, the French Governor; who, on the 7th of July N. S. caus'd a Royal Order to be publiſh'd there, by which the French Troops in that Town, and in the Citadel, Riſbank, and other Forts, were injoin'd to be in a Readineſs to march out, on the Appearance of the Engliſh. The Day on which the Earl of Strafford arriv'd in the Duke of Ormond's Camp, his Grace receiv'd Advice from Dunkirk, that Sir James Abercrombie and Colonel King were come there from England; whereupon the Britiſh General immediately ſent thither Colonel Lloyd, one of his Aids-de-Camp; who return'd the 15th of July N. S. in the Evening, with Intelligence, That the Count de l' Aumont had receiv'd the French King's Orders to reſign the Town and Forts to Her Majeſty's Troops, as ſoon as they came to demand Poſſeſſion. Accordingly, Brigadier Hill, having imbark'd on Sunday the 6th of July O. S.; Sir John Leake, with the Squadron under his Command, ſail'd early the next Morning, and, at Two in the Afternoon, came to an Anchor off of Dunkirk. About Six in the Evening, the Pilots, who were ſent from thence to conduct the Yachts and Tranſports into the Harbour, came on board the Fleet; whereupon the Diſpoſition was concerted for landing the Troops the next Morning, as ſoon as the Tide would permit; which was accordingly done at Eleven of the Clock, and by Twelve, moſt of the Troops were diſimbark'd. At Three in the Afternoon, the Guards of the Citadel, Fort Louis, and the Riſbank, were reliev'd; as were, ſoon after, the Guards of all the other Gates and Forts. This done, and the French Gariſon having paraded towards the Port-Royal, Count de l' Aumont took his Leave of Brigadier Hill, and deliver'd up to him the Keys of the Town; after which, the Brigadier accompany'd him to the ſaid Gate, where the Count put himſelf at the Head of the French Gariſon, and march'd to Winoxberg. Immediately upon this, the Queen's Colours were hoiſted in Three ſe-veral Places of the Town; Tho' 'tis to be obſerv'd, that not only the Civil Government was continued in the Hands of the French, and ſeveral of their Ships and Gallies permitted to ſtay in the Harbour, with Two or Three Battalions of Marines in the Town, on Pretence of guarding the Stores; but the Privateers of that Place were indulg'd the Liberty of going in and out, provided they brought no Engliſh Prizes into the Port. A. D. 1712.

But the Civil Government continued in the Hands of the French.

On the 14th of July, in the Evening, Prince Eugene ſent an Aid de Camp, to acquaint the Duke of Ormond, That he was oblig'd to decamp on the 16th, both for want of Forage, and to proſecute the Operations of the Campaign; and, if his Grace intended to do the like, and concert with him thereupon, his Highneſs would confer with him at ſuch a Place as his Grace ſhould pleaſe to appoint. The Duke ſent an Anſwer, the next Day, in Writing, "That he thought it ſtrange, ſuch a "Meſſage ſhould be ſent him by an ordinary Aid de Camp, and that only Twelve "or Thirteen Hours before the Prince was to march; becauſe no Meaſures had "been concerted between them, relating either to their Motions, or to any fur"ther Undertaking: For which Reaſons, his Highneſs ought not to expect, that he "ſhould accompany him, or be aſſiſting in any Operations wherein he had not been "conſulted. That he gave the Prince this Notice, that he might regulate himſelf "accordingly; and not attribute to him any Misfortune which might happen. And "that he alſo thought it proper to let his Highneſs underſtand, That if the Impe"rial Army march'd away, and left him, he ſhould be obliged to take the beſt Me"thods he could for the Security of the Queen's Troops; and, in order to that, to "change his Camp." Upon the Receipt of this Anſwer, the Prince ſent Count de Althan, an Imperial Major-General, and Quartermaſter-General, with the Meſſage before-mention'd; to which he added, That his Highneſs had already acquainted his Grace, Three Days before, that he would paſs the River Eſcaillon, and aſk'd him, if he would confer about it; ſo that his Grace could not ſay, the Notice came too late.

Meſſages between P. Eugene and the D. of Ormond.

On the 16th of July N. S. the fatal Epoch of the Declenſion of the Confederate Cauſe, the Prince of Savoy broke up from his Camp at Haſpre, and march'd off with the Troops under his Command; being follow'd by all the Danes, Pruſſians, Saxons, Hanoverians, and other Auxiliaries in Britiſh Pay; except Four Squadrons of Vander-Nath, and a Battalion of Berner, of the Troops of Holſtein Gottorp, and Baron Waleſ's Regiment of Dragoons. His Highneſs incamp'd at Atre, near Landrecy; which Place the Prince of Anhalt-Deſſau inveſted the next Day, with Thirty Four Battalions, and as many Squadrons; whereupon the Duke of Ormond decamp'd, the ſame Morning, from Chateau-Cambreſis, and came to Aveſne le Secq. In his March, his Grace order'd a Ceſſation of Arms, for Two Months, to be declar'd between the Queen's Forces and thoſe of France; at which the Troops were ſo far from rejoicing, that they could not forbear ſhewing their Concern for parting with their Fellow-Conquerors. The ſame Evening, Mareſchal Villars ſent an Aid de Camp, to acquaint the Duke of Ormond, that he had, that Day, declar'd likewiſe a Suſpenſion of Arms with her Britannick Majeſty's Troops, purſuant to the Agreement he had made with his Grace. On Monday, the 18th of July N. S. the Britiſh Forces march'd from Aveſne le Secq to Flines; being join'd on the way by Two Battalions and Two Squadrons of Great Briaain, which made Part of the ſeparate Body poſted at Denain, under the Command of the Earl of Albemarle. Before the Separation of the Confederate Forces, the Deputies of the States ſaid openly, That they hop'd the Duke of Ormond did not intend to march thro' any of their Towns: But notwithſtanding this Declaration, the Earl of Strafford, and ſome Engliſh Officers, having, that Day, offer'd to paſs thro' Bouchain, for the more commodious Performance of their Journey, they were refus'd Entrance at the Gates, and told by the Guard, That poſitive Order was given, to let no Engliſhman into the Town. The Officers not being ſatisfy'd, ſent to the Commandant himſelf, who return'd the ſame Anſwer. When the Britiſh Army came near Douay, they met the like Treatment from the Commandant of that Place; which was the more ſurprizing, becauſe the Britiſh Forces had their Hoſpital, and great Quantities of Stores in that Town: Whereupon the Duke of Ormond, the better to provide for the Security and Subſiſtence of the Troops that were with him, as well as for thoſe in the Town and Citadel of Ghent, where Part of his Artillery and Ammunition was kept; made the Diſpoſition for marching towards that Place, and came, the 19th, to Theomoulin near Orchies. Prince Eugene, and the Deputies of the States, were ſo alarm'd at the Duke's Intention of going towards Ghent, that they ſent Count Naſſau Woudenbourg, to excuſe the inſolent Behaviour of the Commandants of Douay and Bouchain; and to inform him, that what had been done, was without Authority. Soon after, Count Hompeſch, Governor of Douay, came in Perſon to wait upon his Grace, and aſſured him, that he had not given the Commandant any Orders to refuſe the Britiſh Officers Admittance into that Town. But theſe Apologies and Excuſes made no Impreſſion on the Duke of Ormond, who, from the Declaration of the Dutch Deputies, beforemention'd, rightly concluded, that the Commandants had expreſs Orders for what they had done; and it appeared, that thoſe Orders were general, ſince the ſame Difficulties happen'd, afterwards, at Tournay, Oudenarde, and Liſle; as well as at Bouchain and Douay. The next † Day, his Grace purſued his March to Fleurival, near Tournay, being accompanied by Count Hompeſch, who was inſtructed to take that Opportunity to obſerve his Grace's Motions, and to form ſome Conjecture of his future Deſigns. Five Days * after, the Duke received a Letter from Mr. St. John, lately created Lord Viſcount Bolingbroke, acquainting him, "That, for many Reaſons, the Queen thought it moſt adviſeable, "that he ſhould march to Dunkirk, unleſs ſome Objection, unforeſeen in England, "might ariſe; that his Grace ſhould withdraw the Queen's Forces and Stores that "were in Ghent; and that he ſhould concert every thing with Monſieur Villars, and "to promiſe him full Satisfaction for whatever the Queen's Forces ſhould take of "the Subjects of France:" But before this Letter came to the Duke's Hands, his Grace had purſued other Meaſures. The Report was then ‖ current, that before the Duke of Ormond declar'd the Ceſſation of Arms, the Earl of Strafford went incognito to the French Camp, to concert Meaſures with the Mareſchal de Villars; and that amongſt other things, it was agreed, that the Britiſh Troops ſhould make themſelves Maſters of Ghent and Bruges, whereby they ſhould have the Command of the Navigation of the Lys and the Scheld; and be able to put an effectual Stop to any further Progreſs of the Confederate Army under the Prince of Savoy, in caſe the French General found it impracticable to relieve Landrecy. That this was the Deſign of the Britiſh General, in bending his March towards Ghent, is little to be doubted; but whether or no the ſame was concerted by the Earl of Strafford and Monſieur Villars, 'tis certain, that the former ſuggeſted that Counſel to the Duke of Ormond; nor is it leſs certain, that the States General were extreamly alarm'd at it.

True Deſign of the Duke of Ormond's marching to Ghent.

On the 19th of July, N. S. upon the Duke of Ormond's coming to Theomoulin, the Earl of Strafford, accompany'd by Lieutenant-General Cadogan, went to Tournay; from thence, the next Day, to Liſle, at both which Places, he was received with great Demonſtrations of Reſpect; and, on the 21ſt, join'd the Britiſh Forces at their Camp at Fleurival. The next Day, in the Afternoon, the Britiſh Troops moved to Petteghem, near Oudenard, and deſired Paſſage thro' that Town; but the Commandant having no Orders about it, thought fit to keep the Gates ſhut, which occaſion'd bitter Reflections againſt the Dutch. It appear'd, indeed, at firſt, very ſtrange, that the Britiſh Officers ſhould be refuſed Entrance into thoſe Towns which her Majeſty's Forces, in Conjunction with thoſe of her Allies, had conquer'd this War: But this Precaution of the Dutch, proceeded from an Apprehenſion, that if the Engliſh were poſſeſs'd of any of their ſtrong Towns, they ſhould be compell'd to ſubmit to the Scheme of Peace concerted between Great Britain and France. On the 23d, in the Evening, the Duke of Ormond's Army purſued their March towards Ghent, by the way of Lede and Auvegem. The Night before, Lieutenant-General Cadogan arrived at Ghent, where he found, that Major Labene, who commanded in the Caſtle, had, purſuant to his Orders, made the neceſſary Diſpoſitions for the Security of that Poſt. On the 23d, in the Morning, General Lumley came alſo to Ghent; as did, in the Afternoon, the Duke of Ormond, attended by the Earl of Strafford, and ſeveral General Officers, under a Triple Diſcharge of the Cannon on the Ramparts. They were all entertain'd at Dinner by the Engliſh Commiſſary Hudſon; and complimented by the Magiſtrates, the Preſident of the Council of Flanders, and the Magiſtrates of that City, who made great Profeſſions of Zeal for the Queen's Service, and of their Readineſs to promote her Majeſty's good Intentions for the Common Benefit of all her Allies. About Seven in the Evening, the Duke rode out to Nazareth, a League and a half from Ghent, where the Troops under his Command being arrived that Day, Two Detachments were made; one to reinforce the Engliſh Gariſon in the Caſtle of Ghent; the other to take Poſt about Mariekerken, along the Canal of Bruges; which they did accordingly the 24th of July, N. S. The ſame Day, Sir Thomas Hanmer, who had not been idle all this while, ſet out from Bruſſels, and in the Evening arrived in the Britiſh Camp, where he conferr'd with the Duke of Ormond, and the Earl of Strafford. Upon his Grace's approaching Ghent, and the Report that was ſpread from Namur, that Mareſchal de Villars had received Orders, in caſe he could not relieve Landrecy, to ſend a ſtrong Detachment into Brabant, there was no ſmall Conſternation in Bruſſels among the Friends of the Hollanders; and, on the other hand, the Partizans of France, who were not the leaſt in Number, were wonderfully elated; upon a fond Expectation, that the Britiſh Troops would join and aſſiſt the French. But the Duke of Ormond contented himſelf with marching his Forces to ∴ Drongen, where they incamp'd in a plentiful Country, between the Lys and and the Canal of Bruges, near Ghent. On the 27th, the Earl of Strafford left the Army, to return to his pacifick Poſt at Utrecht, where he arrived the 29th. About the ſame time, the Duke of Ormond thought fit to put Four Battalions into Ghent; and, with as many, to take Poſſeſſion of Bruges, where his Grace was received with the ſame Demonſtrations of Reſpect, as were paid him at the former Place. This done, he detached Six Battalions to reinforce the Gariſon of Dunkirk, and ſent thither a Train of Artillery, with ſome Ammunition; the French having drawn off moſt of their Cannon from the Ramparts of that Place; which, together with the Force they had ſtill in it, render'd our Poſſeſſion of it, for ſome time, precarious. The Council of State of Brabant and Flanders having ſent Deputies to agree with the Duke of Ormond about the Methods for furniſhing his Forces with Forage, the ſame was regulated on the ſame Foot as was agreed to in the late War, when Prince Vaudemont commanded.

The Earl of Strafford returns to Utrecht, July 29.

The Duke of Ormond takes Poſſeſſion of Bruges, and ſends Six Battalions and a Train of Artillery to Dunkirk.

It was not long, before the Allies felt the diſmal Effects, either from their Separation from, or, as they term'd it themſelves, from their being abandon'd by the Britiſh Forces. The Mareſchal de Villars having received Orders to raiſe the Siege of Landrecy, at any rate, and his Army being reinforc'd with Part of the Gariſons of ſeveral Places, he reſolved to attack the ſmall Body of the Confederate Troops incamp'd at Denain, which kept an open Communication between Prince Eugene's Army and the Village of Marchiennes, through which all their Artillery, Ammunition, and Proviſions, muſt neceſſarily paſs; rightly judging, that if he could poſſeſs himſelf of theſe Stores, the Allies would not be in a Condition to carry on their Siege. In order to put this Deſign in Execution, he paſſed the Scheld the 19th and 20th of July, N. S. and incamped on the Selle, towards Chateau-Cambreſis; the 21ſt and 22d, he ſet 1500 Men to work to inlarge and level the Roads towards the Sambre, and to lay Bridges over that River; and then cauſed his Right to advance beyond Mazenghien. Theſe Motions having given the Allies ſome Jealouſy, as if he deſign'd to attack them in their Camp, near Landrecy, Prince Eugene of Savoy cauſed a great Intrenchment to be made before his Left, poſted behind it General Fagel, with Forty Battalions; and cauſed his Right to move up nearer about Three Leagues, that he might be in a Condition to maintain the Siege with all his Forces. The 23d, at Seven in the Evening, the Mareſchal order'd Count Coigny to paſs the Sambre, to advance towards Cartignies, to ſend out ſmall Parties at Day-break, to ſcour the Country within view of the Confederate Camp; and after they had alarm'd them, and had rejoin'd him, to retire towards Guiſe, to cover the Frontier. The ſame Day, Monſieur Villars commanded Count de Broglio to advance along the Selle, with Forty Squadrons, cauſing all the Paſſages of that River to be guarded, to the end none of the Confederate Parties might paſs, and obſerve his Motions; order'd the Marquis de Vieuxpont, Lieutenant-General, to march with Thirty Battalions of the Left, ſome Artillery and Pontons, and lay Bridges at Neuville, over the Scheld, between Bouchain and Denain; and cauſed him to be followed by Count Albergotti, Lieutenant-General, with Twenty other Battalions, and by all the Army, in Four Columns of Troops, and a Fifth of Artillery, having, ſome Days before, ſent the heavy Baggage to St. Quintin. Notwithſtanding the Marquis de Vieuxpont made all poſſible Expedition, he could not reach Neuville till the 24th, at Eight in the Morning, the Count de Broglio arrived about Nine, with his Forty Squadrons; as did likewiſe the Mareſchal de Villars, who order'd him to paſs over before the Infantry, which he did with great Toil, by reaſon of a Moraſs beyond the Bridge.

The Precautions the Mareſchal had uſed, to conceal his true Deſign, and his March from the Confederates, ſucceeded ſo well, that Prince Eugene of Savoy had no Intelligence of either, 'till the 24th, at Seven a Clock in the Morning, when being inform'd that the Enemy laid Bridges over the Scheld, he haſten'd immediately to the Camp of Denain, after having given Orders to the Troops he had drawn to ſome Diſtance from it, to follow him. His Highneſs view'd the Camp and Intrenchments at Denain; gave the Earl of Albemarle ſuch Directions as he thought neceſſary, for the Defence of that important Poſt; reinforc'd the Eleven Battalions that were there, with Six more from the great Army; and judging that Fourteen Sqnadrons, which were alſo in the Intrenchments, would be uſeleſs, he caus'd them to retire with the Baggage: After which he went away himſelf, to haſten the March of his Troops, in order to attempt to ſuccour the Earl of Albemarle, or at leaſt to ſave part of the Infantry. The Prince of Savoy was hardly got out of the Lines, when Count de Broglio attack'd thoſe between Neuville and Denain, which he entred almoſt without Reſiſtance; Four Battalions of Palatines, and other German Auxiliaries that were poſted there, throwing down their Arms upon the firſt Diſcharge. He found within theſe Lines, Four or Five Hundred Waggons loaden with Bread for the Confederate Army, guarded by Five Hundred Horſe, and Five Hundred Foot, who making a Shew of defending themſelves, were ſurrounded, and moſt of them them either kill'd, or taken. Upon the firſt Appearance of the Enemy on that Side, the Earl of Albemarle advanc'd, with part of his Forces, to defend the Convoy, and ſuſtain the Four Battalions before-mention'd; but finding that the latter had cowardly left that Poſt, and that a great Body of French Infantry were advancing, he return'd into his Camp, the Approach of which was defended by Twelve Pieces of Cannon. The French Infantry having paſs'd the Scheld, and the Line which Count de Broglio had gain'd, Mareſchal de Villars made the Diſpoſitions for the Attack, with Thirty Six Battalions, in Three Columns, diſtant Two Hundred Paces from each other; with a Reſerve of Six Battalions, marching in a Second Line, and the Cavalry behind to ſupport them.

The Camp of Denain forc'd, and the Forces in it totally defeated, July 24. N. S.

The Mareſchal de Villars put himſelf at the Right of the Infantry, as did the Mareſchal de Monteſquiou, and Count Albergotti at the Left. The Marquis de Vieux-pont, the Count de Dreux, and Mr. Brindelay, Lieutenants-General; the Prince de Iſenghien, the Marquis de Mouchy, the Duke de Mortemar, and the Marquis de Nangis, Major-Generals, with the Brigadiers, marched at the Head of the Troops, as did the Count de Villars, Lieutenant-General, who ſerv'd as Volunteer, near the Mareſchal, his Brother. The Signal being given, the whole Line advanced, and marched towards the Intrenchments, without Firing: And being come within half Muſket-ſhot of the Confederates, who lined the Rampart, bore the Diſcharge of their Cannon, loaded with Cartridge-ſhot, and Three Diſcharges of their Muſquets, without being diſorder'd. Coming up within Fifty Paces of the Intrenchment, the Piquets, and the Grenadiers, leaped into the Ditch, followed by the Battalions; and after a pretty long Reſiſtance, they entred the Camp, cutting down all who made Head againſt them. The reſt retired into the Village, and the Abbey, where they were forced, and purſued ſo cloſe, that intire Battalions threw themſelves headlong into the Scheld, ſo that of thoſe Seventeen Battalions, hardly Three Thouſand Men eſcaped, all the reſt being kill'd, taken or drown'd. The Action was hardly over, when Count Albergotti, and the Marquis de Nangis, marched and poſſeſſed themſelves of the Redoubt and Bridge which the Confederates had built at the Village of Provi, by Reaſon of a Moraſs lying over againſt Denain, in order to cut off the Retreat of the Runaways, and hinder their being ſuccour'd by Prince Eugene's Army, which was ſeen advancing in Columns, on the other Side of the Scheld. Immediately upon his Arrival, his Highneſs caus'd that Redoubt to be attack'd, but that Poſt being defended by the Regiment of Navarre, ſuſtain'd by part of the French Army, poſted on the Bank of the Scheld with Artillery, he was obliged to draw off, and to go and encamp the next Day near Queſnoy and Bavay, to ſupport the Troops imploy'd in the Siege of Landrecy. The Loſs of the French, (if we may credit their own Accounts) did not amount to above Four Hundred Men killed or wounded; among whom were no Perſons of Diſtinction, beſides the Marquis de Tourville, Son of the late Mareſchal of the ſame Name, kill'd; the Marquis de Meuſe-Choiſeul dangerouſly wounded; the Chevalier de Teſſé, Colonel of the Regiment of Champagne, and Monſieur de Gauſſac, wounded. As to the Confederates, 'twas reckon'd that they had about One Thouſand kill'd, Two Thouſand Five Hundred taken Priſoners, and near One Thouſand Five Hundred drown'd; among which laſt, was the brave Count Dhona, Lieutenant-General and Governor of Mons, and among the Slain Count Corneille of Naſſau, otherwiſe call'd Count Naſſau-Woudenbourg, a Major-General, and an Officer of great Merit, and in great Eſteem with Prince Eugene. Among the Priſoners were reckon'd the Earl of Albemarle, General, the Prince of Anhalt, (Brother of the Prince of Anhalt-Deſſau) the Prince of Naſſau-Siegen, Lieutenant-Generals; the Prince of Holſtein, the Baron d' Albert, and Mr. Sobel, Major-Generals; and ſeveral other General and Inferior Officers. In the Camp were found Twelve Braſs Cannon, a vaſt Quantity of Ammunition and Proviſions; a great Number of Horſes, and a conſiderable Booty, which was given to the Soldiers.

Prince Eugene finds it impoſſible to ſuccour the Earl of Albemarle.

Loſs on both Sides.

The Conduct of the Confederate Generals blamed.

As 'tis uſual, with moſt Men, to judge of Events, thoſe of War, eſpecially, by the Succeſs, ſo many were apt to blame Prince Eugene, both for ſeeming to deſpiſe the Enemy, and leaving the Earl of Albemarle expoſed, at a great Diſtance from the main Army: And for ſending him no greater Reinforcement than Six Battalions. As to the firſt, 'tis certain his Highneſs was not inſenſible of the Danger the Earl was in, and therefore, he had propoſed the removing the Stores of Artillery, Ammunition and Proviſions, from Marchiennes to Bouchain; but, it ſeems, the States Deputies, through Parſimony, were againſt that Counſel. As to the Second, his Highneſs, with ſeveral other experienc'd Generals, having view'd the Intrenchments at Denain, could not but think Seventeen Battalions ſufficient to defend that Poſt, 'till he came up to their Aſſiſtance, with the whole Confederate Army; which they would infallibly have done, had the Battalions, attack'd by Count Broglio, perform'd form'd their Duty. Very ſevere Reflections were alſo made on the Earl of Albemarle, as if he had ſuffer'd himſelf to be ſurprized, and had got but one Bridge between Bouchain and Valenciennes, for his Troops to retire over, in Caſe of Need: But Prince Eugene's being at Denain about an Hour before the Action, and making the neceſſary Diſpoſitions, in concert with the Earl, ſufficiently clears the latter of the firſt Charge. As to the Second, 'tis certain he had not ſo many Bridges, as, by the Event, would have been neceſſary; but this was partly owing to the Engliſh that went from him, and carried away half the Pontons: And, on the other hand, Prince Eugene's fruitleſs Attack of the Bridge of Prouvi, ſhews, that the Allies had more than one, though, in the Hurry, they made Uſe of no more. However, this diſintereſted Apology of the Confederate Generals, is not meant, in the leaſt, to derogate from the juſt Glory the French Commanders gain'd on this Occaſion: For the moſt partial muſt own, that Mareſchal de Villars's, or, as ſome would have it, Mareſchal de Monteſquiou's Project, was admirably well concerted, and executed with no leſs Expedition than Secrecy, Vigor, and good Conduct. It ſeem'd, indeed, as if the French, being now rid of the Enemy they dreaded moſt, the Engliſh, were animated with a new Spirit, and deſpiſed the reſt of the Confederates, which appear'd in the vigorous Proſecution of their Advantage at Denain.

Juſt Praiſe of the French Generals.

On the other hand, the Duke of Ormond's Conduct, in poſſeſſing himſelf of Ghent and Bruges, was ſo agreeable to the Queen, and her Miniſters, that the Lord Bolingbroke, by a Letter of the 18th of July, acquainted him, "That, though the "Orders he tranſmitted to his Grace in his laſt, did appear to her Majeſty, at that "Time, to be the moſt proper, the Methods he had purſued, were ſo rightly judg'd, "and ſo well adapted to the preſent Conjuncture of Affairs, that they anſwer'd in "every Point, what ſhe would have wiſh'd. That ſhe was unwilling to reſtrain his "Grace, by particular and poſitive Inſtructions, who made uſe of the diſcretionary "Power given him, ſo much to her Honour, and the good of her Subjects. That "the News of Dunkirk's being in our Hands, could not have been follow'd by any "more agreeable, than that of his Grace's having directed his March towards "Ghent: For as by the Poſſeſſion of the former Place, we ſhould treat with the "French under great Advantage; ſo by the Steps which he had taken for ſecuring "the latter, the Dutch and Imperialiſts, would be brought to a more decent way of "Behaviour to the Queen, than they had hitherto been in. That her Majeſty re-"commended to his Grace, the ſecuring to himſelf the Poſſeſſion of Ghent, as long "as might be thought neceſſary; as alſo the reinforcing the Gariſon of Dunkirk, "and the furniſhing that Place with what Stores he might ſpare, and the Gariſon "want. The Secretary likewiſe acquainted his Grace, of a Letter the Marquis "of Torcy had diſpatch'd to him, upon the receiving the News of the Earl of Albe-"marle's Defeat at Denain: In which the French Miniſter took Notice of the Ad-"vantage which her Majeſty had at this Time over the Dutch; and inſinuated, "That ſhe might give the Law to thoſe People, provided ſhe made the right Uſe of Ghent "and Bruges, which his Grace was in Poſſeſſion of." That the Secretary's Anſwer to that Part of the Marquis's Letter, by her Majeſty's Command, was no more than this; "That the Queen would take all the Meaſures that were conſiſtent with Juſtice, and "with Honour, to overcome the Obſtinacy of her Allies, and to oblige them to conſent to "a General Peace; and that already he had writ to his Grace to be upon his Guard, and "to ſecure the Poſſeſſion of the Poſts he was now Maſter of." That his Grace would "eaſily perceive the Drift of Monſieur Torcy's Propoſition, and the Meaning of his "Anſwer. That it was the Intereſt of the French, and there were, perhaps, ſome "of her Majeſty's Subjects ſo unhappy, as to think it theirs too, that the Queen "ſhould join her Forces with thoſe of France, and in that manner give the Law to "the Confederates; but her Majeſty's Conduct would continue to the laſt, what it "had been from the firſt, equally juſt, and equally firm to all Parties; towards "Friends, as well as Enemies: She could not think of co-operating with the lat-"ter, to diſtreſs the former, how great ſoever the Provocation ſhe had receiv'd "from theſe might have been; and ſhe was willing to hope, that, at laſt, they "would ſee their Error, and concur with her Majeſty, from whom they could never "ſeparate, but to their own Diſadvantage." Not many Days after, the Lord Treaſurer himſelf complimented the Duke of Ormond, in a very lofty and uncommon (a) Strain: And, indeed, it muſt be own'd, that the ſecuring Ghent in Engliſh Hands,

The Duke of Ormond's Conduct highly extoll'd in England.

The Letter which the Earl of Oxford wrote to the Duke of Ormond, was as follows:

My LORD, Auguſt 5. 1712.

"NO Pen, nor Tongue, is able to expreſs the great Pleaſure I took in your Grace's Succeſ-"ſes. It was a very great Satisfaction to ſee ſo much done for the Publick; to ſee ſuch

Hands, was ſo far from being a juſt ground of Uneaſineſs to the States General, that, on the contrary, their Safety, in ſome Meaſure, depended upon it: For, if the Duke of Ormond had not firſt taken Poſſeſſion of Ghent, the French would certainly have made themſelves Maſters of it, after the Defeat at Denain; and conſequently having the intire Command of the Scheld and the Lys, would have ſtarv'd the Confederate Camp, by intercepting all the Convoys from Holland.

The French improve their Victory at Denain.

As ſoon as the Action at Denain was over, Mareſchal de Villars order'd Count Broglio to inveſt Marchiennes; Count Albergotti to attack St. Amand; and ſent other Detachments to poſſeſs themſelves of the reſt of the Poſts which the Confederates had on the Scarpe. On the 26th of July, N. S. Two Hundred Men, poſted in the Abbey of Anchin, and Pont-à-Rache, yielded themſelves Priſoners of War: A Hundred more in the Abbey of Haſnon, ſurrendred to Count L'Eſparre; Count Albergotti poſſeſs'd himſelf likewiſe of Mortagne, where he took a Hundred Men, and then of St. Amand, defended by Eight Hundred, who were made Priſoners of War. There being in Marchiennes Six or Seven Battalions, and Three Squadrons of Palatine Cuiraſſiers, Brigadier Berkoffer, who commanded in the Place, made a Shew of a vigorous Reſiſtance: But Mareſchal de Villars having made Preparations for an Aſſault, the Beſieged beat a Parley, and ſurrendred alſo * Priſoners of War. 'Tis almoſt incredible, what vaſt Quantities of Warlike Stores and Proviſions were found in this Poſt: Let it ſuffice to ſay, that there was a Magazine of all Neceſſaries for Two Sieges with above a Hundred Bilanders, or great Boats; above Two Hundred Cannon; Three Hundred Waggons, with their Harneſſes; and the Hoſpital of the Army. Prince Eugene, finding it impoſſible to relieve Brigadier Berkoffer, made a Movement with his Army, poſting his Right at Bavay, with an Intention to draw the Convoys and Proviſions from Mons, by which Means many hop'd the Allies would ſtill be in a Condition to carry on the Siege of Landrecy: But it ſoon appear'd that the Loſs of Marchiennes was irreparable. For the Convoy which on the 30th of July, N. S. was brought from Mons to the Confederate Camp at Poix, not being ſufficient to ſubſiſt the Army; and on the other hand, Prince Eugene being inform'd of the Enemy's Deſign to beſiege Douay, his Highneſs laid aſide his Enterprize againſt Landrecy; and having put the Town of Queſnoy in as good a Poſture of Defence as Time would permit, and provided it with Neceſſaries, broke up the 2d of Auguſt, N. S. and incamp'd between Sar and Bavay, the Center of the Army being at Tanieres. The 3d, his Highneſs advanc'd to Belian; and having, on the 4th, paſs'd the Haine near Mons, march'd to Cambron, where he halted the 5th, and the next Day came and incamp'd at Leuſe, in order to ſuccour Douay, which was inveſted by Mareſchal de Villars on the 3d. The Gariſon of that important Place having been drain'd, and conſiſting then only of Two Battalions, beſides Six Companies of Brouay, Five Battalions more were ſent to reinforce it; and had the good Fortune to get into the Place, with Count Hompeſch, the Governor; but Brigadier des Roques, and Two other Ingineers, who attempted the ſame, could not effect it. On the 7th of Auguſt, N. S. Prince Eugene paſs'd the Scheld, near Tournay, advanc'd to Trojenne; and the 8th incamp'd with his Right at Seclin, and the Left at Peronne on the Marque, where he continued ſome Days, to give his Troops ſome Reſt, after the Fatigue of their long March, and to expect ſome Reinforcements from the Dutch Gariſons, in order to attempt the Relief of Douay. In the mean Time, General Dopft, who was ſent on the 9th of Auguſt, N. S. with a ſtrong Detachment, to obſerve the Poſture of the Enemy, reported, That they had caſt a Line, beginning from the Scarpe at Pont-à-Rache, going by the Caſtle of Belleforiere, to Pont-Oby, on the Deule; cover'd by Two large Ditches full of Water; and ſo well guarded, that there was no Poſſibility of relieving Douay on that Side; that Mareſchal de Villars, with the greateſt Part of his Army, was intrenching himſelf in the Plain of Lens, and having a vaſt Number of Pioneers with him, intended to caſt a Line along the Souchet, to Mount St. Eloy and Arras, for the Security of his Convoys; and that he had put ſome Troops into the Town of Lens, which he deſign'd to fortify.

" an Example of ſteddy Conduct, in ſo great a Nobleman, and ſo courageous a Heart, is what " has made you envy'd by ſome, dreaded by your Enemies, and applauded by all Men of Know- " ledge and Underſtanding. Your Grace's March to Ghent, &c. is a Coup de Maitre; it is own'd " to be ſo in France and Holland: And I muſt own, I take a double Pleaſure in it, becauſe it is " done by the Duke of Ormond, to whoſe Perſon I have ſo intire a Friendſhip, and in whoſe " Succeſs I take ſo particular an Intereſt. Monſieur Torcy wrote a very juſt Compliment on the " Affair of Denain, That the Allies might now ſee, what they had loſt by her Majeſty's withdrawing her " Forces, and what Value they ought to put upon a Nation, which every where led Victory with it. I am, " with the utmoſt Reſpect and Attachment, &c.

A. D. 1712.

While the Two Armies were in the Neighbourhood of Douay, the French reſolv'd to retaliate the late Incurſion of Major-General Groveſtein; and committed the Execution of their Deſign to Major-General Paſteur, a famous Partiſan, who proſecuted it with all imaginable Secrecy, Diligence and Succeſs. For though he had Fifteen or Sixteen Thouſand Men with him, the Allies had not the leaſt Notice of his March from Namur, 'till he was advanc'd beyond Bergen-op-Zoom, and had plunder'd Tertholen, an Iſland belonging to Zealand, with the Town of that Name, and ſeveral other open Places. Upon the Alarm of this Inroad, Thirty Battalions were detach'd from the Confederate Army; and all the Gariſons were drawn out to intercept the Enemy; but Monſieur Paſteur took ſuch right Meaſures for his Retreat, that he came * back ſafe to Namur, with a conſiderable Booty, and Hoſtages for Contributions.

Major-General Paſteur's ſucceſsful Incurſion into Zealand.

* Aug. 27. N. S.

It was expected, by the Courts of Great Britain and France, that the great Turn of Affairs in the Field, would occaſion an Alteration in the Negotiation at Utrecht; and that the Dutch would, at laſt, agree to a Suſpenſion of Arms; for which, the Britiſh Miniſters made very preſſing Inſtances: But, on this Occaſion, the Hollanders ſhew'd a Firmneſs worthy of the Old Romans, or, to ſay more, of the firſt Founders of their own Republick. The States of Holland and Weſt Friezland having agreed to take upon them the paying moſt of the Auxiliaries lately in Britiſh Pay, and reſolv'd to treat of Peace Sword in Hand; the States-General order'd their Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht to inſiſt on ſeveral Points, as further Preliminaries of the Treaty; particularly, on the reſtoring of Straſburgh to the Empire, and on the Demolition of all the fortify'd Places poſſeſs'd by France on the Rhine. On the 6th of Auguſt, N. S. Count Zinzendorf, the Emperor's Firſt Plenipotentiary, had a Conference at the Hague, with all the Miniſters of the Empire, to acquaint them with the Sentiments and Reſolutions of the States-General, which were communicated to him by the Penſionary Heinſius. This was, by many, thought to be a Strain of Policy, artfully contriv'd between the Imperial and Dutch Miniſters, to ingage the German Princes to make greater Efforts than hitherto they had done: For the Count, at the ſame Time, imparted to them a Project concerted with their High Mightineſſes, to carry on the War with more Vigor than ever; in which was ſpecify'd what each Prince, in particular, was able to do, to reduce France to the Terms of a good, ſafe, and laſting Peace; recommending to them, in the moſt lively and pathetick Expreſſions, to repreſent to their reſpective Maſters, that unleſs the Dutch were timely and powerfully aſſiſted, they would be forc'd to make their private Peace, even without the Reſtoration of Straſburgh; whereby the Empire would ſtill remain open to any Invaſion from France. The Payment and Subſiſtence of the German and Daniſh Troops in the Service of Great Britain, that had join'd the Forces under Prince Eugene, being the moſt preſſing Affair, ſeveral Conferences were held about it, between the Miniſters of the Princes to whom thoſe Troops belong'd, the Deputies of the States, and the Imperial Miniſters. The latter were not wanting to repreſent the great Difficulties their Maſter had labour'd under, ſince the Death of the late Emperor, his Brother; and the vaſt Charge he had been indiſpenſibly oblig'd to be at, by his Coronations at Frankfort and Preſburgh, and other growing Expences, for the Preſervation of the Principality of Catalonia, whereby the Imperial Treaſury was quite exhauſted: That, however, his Imperial Majeſty offer'd to contribute Three Hundred Thouſand Crowns towards the Subſiſtence of the Troops before-mention'd, provided the City of Amſterdam would advance that Sum, under the Security of the States, for the Payment of which, he was willing to mortgage the Funds in Sileſia, that had punctually anſwer'd both the Principal and Intereſt of the Loan made ſome Years before by the Engliſh. But though no poſitive Anſwer was then return'd to the Imperial Miniſters, yet, ſome Months after, their Propoſal was cloſed with. The King of Pruſſia offer'd to maintain his Troops at his own Charge, provided the States General would give him Satisfaction, as to his Pretenſions to the Inheritance of the late King William; and the Elector of Hanover offer'd, in the firſt Place, to maintain, during the War, at his own Expence, one half of the Troops he had in the Service of Great Britain, beſides the Regiment of Dragoons of Bothmer, and to agree for the maintaining of the reſt upon eaſy Terms. The King of Denmark took no leſs vigorous Reſolutions, than any of the Princes of the Empire, it being his Intereſt not to diſoblige the Emperor, and his Allies, at a Juncture when his Daniſh Majeſty, and the Czar of Muſcovy, were threaten'd with a powerful Confederacy of France, Spain, Great Britain and Sweden, in order to reſtore the King of Sweden to all his Dominions. And here we may obſerve, that in the Month of July, the Lord Viſcount Bolingbroke did warmly expoſtulate with the Daniſh Miniſter in London, about "His Maſter's "Troops deſerting the Queen's General, notwithſtanding the many Favours and "Kind-

" Kindneſſes his Daniſh Majeſty had received from her Majeſty, both during the " Life of the late Prince George, and ſince his Deceaſe; her Majeſty having ſup- " plied him with conſiderable Sums of Money out of her own Privy-Purſe; adding, " that her Majeſty highly reſented, and would find Means to revenge ſuch a Piece of " Ingratitude; for which purpoſe, ſhe had ſent Orders to her Fleet to inſult the " Coaſts and Shipping of Denmark." The Daniſh Miniſter, abaſh'd and alarm'd at this Reprimand, and Declaration, gave ſpeedy Notice of it to Monſieur Alefeld at the Hague, who immediately diſpatch'd Mr. Van Stoken to acquaint the King of Denmark with the ſame.

The Britiſh Plenipotentiaries inſiſt on the Admiſſion of thoſe of King Philip to the Congreſs.

On the other hand, the Britiſh Miniſters in Holland propos'd, and inſiſted on the Admiſſion of King Philip's Plenipotentiaries to the Congreſs at Utrecht; and 'twas given out, That if the ſame was not ſhortly agreed to, the Congreſs would be tranſferr'd to a Town, whither the Spaniſh Miniſters might repair without any Oppoſition; and Dunkirk was ſaid to be the Place. But the States-General, not thinking it their Intereſt to diſoblige the Emperor ſo far, as to yield a Point ſo derogatory from his Title to the Spaniſh Throne, the Court of Great Britain reſolv'd to purſue other Meaſures, to bring the Dutch to Compliance; or, if that fail'd, to conclude the Peace upon the Scheme near agreed on with France and Spain. In order to that, it was judg'd neceſſary to renew the Suſpenſion of Arms that was near expiring; and the Lord Bolingbroke having had the chief Management of the preſent Negotiation, his Lordſhip was pitch'd upon to go incognito to the Court of France, to " remove the Obſtructions that hinder'd the General Ceſſation of Arms from taking " Place; and to concert with the French Miniſters the moſt proper Means of pre- " venting ſuch other Differences as could be now foreſeen, and of ſettling the Treaty " of Peace in ſuch a Courſe, as might bring it to a happy and ſpeedy Concluſion. He was, in particular, inſtructed, 1ſt, to inſiſt, " That full Satisfaction be given " to the Duke of Savoy, both as to his Succeſſion to the Crown of Spain and the " Weſt-Indies, immediately after Philip and his Children; and as to the Ceſſion of " Sicily, 2dly, To adjuſt the ſpeedy Diſpatch of the Renunciations in France and " Spain. And, 3dly, To agree to the Reſtoration of the Elector of Bavaria to all " he injoy'd in the Empire, except his Rank of Firſt Elector, and except the Upper " Palatinate; and to conſent that he might have the Iſland of Sardinia, as an Equiva- " lent for the Places and Territories he was poſſeſs'd of in the Netherlands: But he " was to have Care to avoid intangling the Queen in any new Engagements, that " might oblige her to make War, eſpecially with her Old Allies; for tho' her Ma- " jeſty was willing to enter into the Common Guaranty for ſupporting that Settle- " ment of Europe, which ſhould be ſtipulated by the General Peace; yet ſhe would " not do any thing like impoſing the Scheme offer'd by France upon the Allies, or " debarring them from the Liberty of endeavouring to obtain ſtill better Terms for " themſelves." With theſe Inſtructions, the Lord Bolingbroke ſet out for Dover on the 2d of Auguſt, accompanied by Mr. Prior, and the Abbot Gualtier. The next Day, his Lordſhip landed at Calais, under the Diſcharge of the Cannon of the Caſtle, and was received with all imaginable Demonſtrations of Joy from the Inhabitants, and particular Marks of Reſpect by the Governor. On the 15th of Auguſt, N. S. his Lordſhip proceeded on his Journey to Paris, where he arrived the 17th, and alighted at the Houſe of the Marquis de Torcy, Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, where an Apartment was prepared for him. The French Miniſter received the Britiſh with uncommon Civility and Kindneſs; and aſſured him, " That the King, his Maſter, had ever entertain'd a great Eſteem and Reſpect for the " Queen of Great Britain, to which Sentiments he now added ſo perfect a Friendſhip, " that notwithſtanding the late Succeſſes of his Arms in Flanders, he was ſtill wil- " ling to make her Britannick Majeſty the Umpire of the General Peace." Compliments being paſs'd on ſides, the Two Miniſters enter'd upon Buſineſs; and having adjuſted the principal Intereſts of the Duke of Savoy, and of the Elector of Bavaria; and ſettled the Time and Manner of the Renunciations, agreed † to a Treaty for a Suſpenſion of Arms between Great Britain and France, both by Sea and Land, for the Space of Four Months. The next Day *, the Lord Bolingbroke was, by the Marquis de Torcy, conducted to Fontainebleau, where the King of France then was with his Court, and the Apartment formerly belonging to the Mareſchal de Boufflers, was magnificently fitted up for his Lordſhip, who was received with greater Marks of Diſtinction than were ever ſhewn to any Perſon of his Character, who made no publick Appearance. His Lordſhip was, the next ‖ Morning, introduced to a private Audience of the King, to whom he preſented the Queen's Letter. The French Monarch received him in a very gracious manner, and aſſured him, " That he ever " had the higheſt Eſteem for the Queen; that ſhe had proceeded in ſuch a manner, " as to turn that Eſteem into the ſincereſt Friendſhip; and, he hoped, ſhe was ſa- " tisfied

In this Audience, the Lord Bolingbroke made ſuch pertinent Anſwers, and behaved himſelf ſo well, that his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, afterwards, expreſs'd his intire Satisfaction with the Penetration, ready Wit, and Politeneſs of the Britiſh Miniſter. The Elector of Bavaria, who arrived at Paris the 16th, and repair'd to Fontainebleau the ſame Day that the Lord Bolingbroke went thither, was alſo in Conference with his Lordſhip, whom he deſired to recommend both his and his Brother, the Elector of Cologn's Concerns, to her Britannick Majeſty. The French Courtiers, in Imitation of their Sovereign, vy'd with each other, who ſhould beſt entertain the Britiſh Miniſter; and, among the reſt, the Duke of Noailles, gave his Lordſhip a moſt magnificent Supper, at which the Perſons of the Firſt Rank, of both Sexes, were invited; as was alſo General Stanhope, who being lately exchang'd for the Duke of Eſcalona, took Fontainebleau in his way to England. The Lord Bolingbroke offer'd that General to preſent him to the King of France; but Mr. Stanhope thought fit to decline it, contenting himſelf with ſeeing that Monarch as he went a Hunting in his Chaiſe, with a bright Retinue of Ladies of the Firſt Quality, like Amazons on Horſeback. What was tranſacted in the private Conferences between the moſt Chriſtian King, or his Miniſters, and the Lord Bolingbroke, beſides the Treaty for a Suſpenſion of Arms, was kept very ſecret; ſave only, that it was agreed, that the Court of Great Britain ſhould pay the annual Sum of Threeſcore thouſand Pounds by way of Dower, to the late King James's Queen; and that the Chevalier de St. George ſhould retire out of France. On the 24th of Auguſt, N. S. the Lord Bolingbroke took his Leave of the King of France, who preſented him with a fine Diamond Ring, valued at about 4000 l. Sterling, which formerly belong'd to the Dauphin, Son to his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty; and on the 25th, his Lordſhip return'd to Paris, being ſtill accompany'd by the Marquis de Torcy.

Two Days after *, one of the Queen's Meſſengers that attended the Lord Bolingbroke, brought the Treaty to Whitehall; and the Lord Treaſurer having, the next Day, carried the ſame to the Queen at Windſor, to be ratify'd, her Majeſty, in Council, ſigned ‖ a Proclamation, declaring the Suſpenſion of Arms, as well by Sea as Land, and injoining the Obſervance thereof. This Proclamation was publiſh'd on the 19th of Auguſt, both by it ſelf, and in the London-Gazette; in which laſt, an Order of Council was ſubjoin'd, bearing the ſame Date, importing, That for preventing any Inconveniencies to which her Majeſty's Subjects might be liable, by miſapprehending the Purport or Effect of the ſaid Proclamation, and for the Improvement and Security of the Commerce of her loving Subjects, her Majeſty was pleaſed to declare, that as ſoon as Paſſes could be interchanged, they would be deliver'd to ſuch of her Subjects as ſhould deſire the ſame. Upon Peruſal of this Order, which laid on Engliſh Merchants a Neceſſity of buying French Paſſes, many were at a loſs to find out wherein the Benefit of the Suſpenſion conſiſted, unleſs it were in gratifying the Avarice of the Secretaries of State, who ſold, at a dear rate, what had coſt them nothing. Beſides, it is obſervable, that the French Court not having ſent over the Paſſes ſo ſoon as the Engliſh Miniſters tranſmitted theirs thither, it happen'd, that ſeveral French Ships which were taken by Sir Thomas (a) Hardy, were releaſed, upon producing of the Engliſh Paſſes, while ſeveral Engliſh Ships were, at the ſame time, made Prize, for want of French Paſſes.

greateſt Concourſe of Nobility and Gentry, that was ever known in that Metropolis. We may here take notice, That while the Peace was negotiating, various Reports were ſpread about the Chevalier de St. George; who, after the Stile uſed in the Queen's Speech to her Parliament, on the 6th of June, was now call'd, the * Perſon who has pretended to diſturb the Settlement of the Proteſtant Succeſſion of the Houſe of Hanover. About the latter End of June, the World was inform'd from Utrecht, that that Prince had been obliged to leave St. Germains, and was already on his way to Lorrain: However, about the Middle of Auguſt, he made a Viſit to the King of France at Fontainebleau; but upon the News of the Lord Bolingbroke's landing at Calais, it was thought fit that the Chevalier ſhould again retire from St. Germains, without his ordinary Guard, and go to the Caſtle of Livry.

Various Reports about the Chevalier St. George.

* See Lond. Gazette, June 21. 1712.

Not many Days after, the Chevalier came to Paris; and going to the Opera, ſat in the French King's Box, that had been appointed for the Lord Viſcount Bolingbroke, who thereupon ſat in another Box; which, when known, occaſion'd no ſmall Noiſe in England. It was alſo advis'd from Paris, that the Britiſh Miniſter had a private Interview with the Queen Dowager of England; which, together with the Rumour of the Chevalier's taking upon him the Title of Duke of Gloceſter, and retiring to Rheims in Champagne, occaſion'd various Speculations. Whatever Grounds there were for theſe, and other Reports, 'tis certain that the Chevalier's Friends in Great Britain were, at this Juncture, wonderfully fluſh'd with the Hopes of his Reſtoration; and ſome News-Writers in Holland, and, after them, others in London, did not ſcruple to take notice of what was ſaid in Paris, That the Pretender was to be aſſociated with Her Majeſty in the Sovereignty.

A Report about his being aſſociated in the Sovereignty.

On the 28th of Auguſt N. S. the Lord Bolingbroke ſet out from Paris, where he left Mr. Prior to take care of ſome private Affairs, ſtill under Negotiation; and, with Mr. Hare, and the Abbot Gaultier, ſet out for Dunkirk; where, on the 21ſt, arriv'd Six of Her Majeſty's Ships, with the William and Mary Yacht, from the Downs, to wait for his Lordſhip's Return, in order to convoy him to England. The Marquis de Torcy accompany'd the Britiſh Miniſter a Day's Journey from Paris: The next Night, his Lordſhip lay at Bologne; din'd at Calais the 30th, and, the ſame Evening, arriv'd in a Poſt-Chaiſe at Dunkirk; being conſtantly guarded by a Troop of Horſe. At his Entrance into Dunkirk, he was ſaluted by the Guns of the Citadel; and went directly to the Governor's Houſe, where he took up his Lodgings. The next Morning, the Intendant of the Province, who, by the French King's Order, came from Ypres to Dunkirk, to compliment the Lord Bolingbroke, waited upon his Lordſhip; as did all the Magiſtrates of the Town: But we may here obſerve, that, by a Letter written from thence, and giving an Account of his Lordſhip's Entertainment, it ſeem'd as if the French were ſtill more Maſters of Dunkirk, than the Engliſh; which was afterwards further evidenc'd, in ſeveral other Inſtances.

The Lord Bolingbroke's Reception at Dunkirk.

We may alſo here take notice, That, in the Opinion of many, tho' the concluding a Treaty for a Ceſſation of Arms, appear'd to be the publick, yet the main Buſineſs of the Lord Bolingbroke's Journey to Paris, was, meanly to ſue for the altering the Dates of former Agreements, in order to palliate ſome forward and unwarrantable Advances which the Engliſh Miniſters had made in this clandeſtine Negotiation. Be that as it will, the Lord Bolingbroke, having imbark'd at Dunkirk on the 21ſt of Auguſt O. S. arrived at London the next Day; and, after a Conference with the Lord Treaſurer, the ſame Evening waited on the Queen at Windſor; where, Four Days before, General Stanhope had the Honour to kiſs Her Majeſty's Hand, being introduc'd by the Earl of Dartmouth, Principal Secretary of State.

Main Buſineſs of the Lord Bolingbroke's Journey.

He arrives at London, and goes to Windſor, Aug. 22.

It was by many expected, that the Concluſion of an Armiſtice between Great Britain and France, which ſeem'd to give the Engliſh a viſible Advantage in Trade over the Dutch, would have induc'd the latter to come into the Queen's Meaſures: But, about this Time, a trifling Quarrel happen'd at Utrecht, between the Servants of Monſieur Meſnager, and of Count Rechteren, one of the Dutch Plenipotentiaries; of which the French made a politick Uſe, both to retard the Progreſs of the Negotiation, and to purſue their Succeſſes in the Field. The Venetian Miniſters immediately offer'd their Mediation, to accommodate the Matter; and, at the ſame Time, Meſſieurs de Randwick and Buys engaged the Biſhop of Briſtol to interpoſe his good Offices in this Affair. But the French Miniſters having conſulted together, refuſed to hearken to any private Accommodation, before they had receiv'd Inſtructions from their Court; who, having recover'd their priſtine Spirit, reſolved to improve a trivial and ordinary Squabble between Footmen, into a ſolemn State-Quarrel: And thereupon, the French Plenipotentiaries were directed to inſiſt upon a publick Satisfaction, and on the Recalling of Count Rechteren; and that another ther Plenipotentiary be nominated in his Place. The States-General not thinking it conſiſtent with their Dignity to ſubmit to thoſe Demands, the Negotiations at Utrecht were ſuſpended; whilſt the Earl of Strafford, and ſome other Miniſters, us'd their Endeavours at the Hague, to find out an Expedient to modify the Satisfaction inſiſted upon by France. A. D. 1712.

In the mean Time, the French Army in Flanders having, on the 14th of Auguſt N. S. open'd the Trenches againſt the Town of Douay and Fort Scarpe, batter'd the latter with Eighty Pieces of Cannon: But tho' the Gariſon of that Fort conſiſted only of Four Hundred Men, they held out till the 28th, when they were forc'd to ſurrender Priſoners of War. Hereupon, the French attack'd the Town with redoubled Vigor; but General Hompeſch defended himſelf with ſo much Bravery, and knew ſo well how to make up by Induſtry and Vigilance, what he wanted in Men, that 'twas the 8th of September N. S. before he beat a Parley, and agreed to ſurrender on the ſame Terms that the Allies had granted to the Gariſon of Queſnoy: So that, in the Opinion of all impartial Men, the Conquer'd had the largeſt Share in the Honour of this Siege. It muſt be own'd, at the ſame Time, that the Prince of Savoy had the Mortification to be a Spectator of this Loſs; but then 'twas not his Highneſs's Fault, if a vigorous Attempt was not made to prevent it; for which Purpoſe, he march'd, the 12th of Auguſt N. S. from Seclin to Ribaucour, where he continued till the 26th. During this Time, his Highneſs us'd all poſſible Endeavours to ingage the Enemy; but the French had ſo ſtrongly fortify'd their Camp on the one hand, and the Dutch were ſo cautious of running any Hazards, in this tickliſh Juncture, that the Prince of Savoy ſeeing no Poſſibility of coming to Action, he return'd the 26th to his Camp at Seclin; from whence ſeveral Detachments were made, to ſecure Liſle, Mons, Bethune, Aire, St. Venant, and other Places.

Douay beſieg'd;

And ſurrender'd.

P. Eugene finds it impoſſible to relieve Douay.

All this while, the States-General had under Conſideration, the Satisfaction demanded by France, on Account of the Quarrel between M. Meſnager and the Count de Rechteren; and, upon Peruſal of the ſeveral Papers that were laid before them, relating to that Affair; their High Mightineſſes came, at * laſt, to a Reſolution, ſuggeſting, That they had heard the Count de Rechteren, who believing that he had juſtify'd himſelf by a Memorial preſented to their High Mightineſſes, and declaring he ſhould be ſorry the Publick ſhould ſuffer the leaſt Inconveniency, upon his Account; and yet more, to be made, perſonally, the Obſtacle to the Advancement of the Peace; reſign'd his Commiſſion of Plenipotentiary, into the Hands of their High Mightineſſes; in hopes that the States of Overyſſel, by whoſe Nomination he had obtain'd it, would not be diſpleas'd at his reſigning it: The whole being taken into Deliberation, it was reſolv'd, "That the Copy of that Memorial, and the Papers annex'd thereto, be "ſent to the Plenipotentiaries of their High Mightineſſes at the Congreſs, to be "communicated to the Britiſh Miniſters: And that they ſhould declare on the "Part of the States, that that Affair being in ſuch a State, they did not judge it neceſ-"ſary to decide, how far either the one or the other of the Parties were in the "right, or in the wrong; but that their High Mightineſſes could not have be-"liev'd, that a Quarrel of ſuch a Nature as this, could have been an Obſtacle to "retard ſo great a Work as that of the Peace. That they never had any Account "of this Quarrel, before they receiv'd the Letter mention'd at the Beginning of "this Reſolution; ſo far were they from giving any Order about it to the "Count de Rechteren; that therefore they diſavow'd all that was done on that Occa-"on; and could wiſh that this Affair had not been further proſecuted, nor carry'd "before his Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty; but that, ſince it was gone ſo far, they per-"ſuaded themſelves, however, that tho' they had the Misfortune to be at War "with the King of France, his Majeſty would do them the Juſtice to believe, that "they never loſt the Reſpect, nor high Eſteem, which a Republick owes to a "great King; and they ſhould be really very much troubled, if his Majeſty had "other Thoughts. That, in the mean while, to demonſtrate their Deſire, and their "Inclination for the Advancement of the Peace, the Count de Rechteren ſhould not "be imploy'd as a Plenipotentiary. That they would give Explanations in Wri-"ting to the Plenipotentiaries of Great Britain, to be communicated to the Ple-"nipotentiaries of France: And that, withal, they ſhould repreſent, how much "their High Mightineſſes had at Heart the removing all Obſtacles, that might re-"tard the Treaty of Peace.

* Sept. 20. N.S. Reſolution of the States-Gen. about the Quarrel between M. Meſnager and Count de Rechteren.

The Explanations mention'd in this Reſolution, were, on the 22d of September, N. S. deliver'd to the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries, and by the latter communicated to thoſe of France, who, finding they came ſhort of the Satisfaction they had Orders to inſiſt upon, were hardly prevail'd with, by the Biſhop of Briſtol, and the Earl of Strafford, to tranſmit them to their Court. On the other hand, the States General ſeem'd ſeem'd reſolv'd not to make any further Advances; being, at the bottom, deſirous to draw this Diſpute into Length, that they might avoid entring into a Negotiation of Peace, which they thought muſt be detrimental to their private Intereſt, and the Common Cauſe; and ſtill hoping, that ſomething might happen, that would cauſe ſome favourable Alteration in the Affairs of Europe. To this Purpoſe it was obſerv'd, that at the opening of the Aſſembly of the States of Holland, on the 13th of September, N. S. the Grand Penſionary Heinſius, in a very Pathetick Speech, "ſhew'd the Impoſſibility of concluding a Peace at this Juncture, without loſing "the Fruits of all the Blood and Treaſure they had expended in the preſent Quar- "rel; and expoſing their Country, and the Liberties of all Chriſtendom, to immi- "nent Danger: Urging, That, as of Two Evils, they ought to chuſe the leaſt, ſo "they muſt make extraordinary Efforts to carry on the War, 'till a ſafe and honou- "rable Peace ſhould be obtain'd; and concluding, That, Thanks to the Almighty, "they were not yet wholly deſtitute of Means for that Purpoſe, provided they "would act with the ſame Conſtancy, and Harmony, which the Republick had ex- "erted on ſo many Occaſions." This Speech had its Effect, both with the States of Holland, and the States General; for the Earl of Strafford having ſignify'd to them, "That the Queen, his Miſtreſs, was willing to endeavour to engage France to ad- "mit them, or any other of the Allies, into the Suſpenſion of Arms;" Their High-Mightineſſes anſwer'd, That they could not reſolve any Thing upon it, without the Emperor, and the other Allies; and that it would be too great a Diſgrace to the Confederacy, to aſk a Suſpenſion of Arms without being aſſured of obtaining it. As to the Earl of Strafford's Propoſition of granting Paſſports to the Plenipotentiaries of King Philip, the States General had an Excuſe ready at hand, to wit, that they could not comply with it, without doing a manifeſt Injury to the Emperor, who had, at leaſt, an equal Title with King Philip, to the Crown of Spain.

The Grand Penſionary's Speech, ſhewing the Danger of making a Peace at this Juncture.

The States General decline the Suſpenſion of Arms.

And to grant Paſſports for King Philip's Plenipotentiaries.

About this Time, another Accident happen'd at Utrecht, which was like to prove a new Obſtruction to the Negotiation of Peace. The Earl of Strafford had, by his lofty Carriage, made himſelf very obnoxious to the Dutch; and it being given out, that the Duke of Savoy had abandon'd the Allies, and agreed to a Suſpenſion of Arms, ſome of the Mob did, in, the Night-Time, break the Windows, both of the Marquis del Borgo, one of his Royal Highneſs's Plenipotentiaries, and of the Earl of Strafford; and as a further Indignity to the latter, they ſet up a Wheel on the Rails before his Houſe, with a Paper on it, in which was written the Dutch Word Straff-art, alluding to his Excellency's Name, and implying, that he deſerv'd the Puniſhment denoted by the Wheel: The Word Straffen, in Dutch, ſignifying, to puniſh, or chaſtize. This villainous Inſult was highly and juſtly reſented by the Bri- "tiſh Plenipotentiaries; but the Magiſtrates of Utrecht having thereupon publiſh'd a Placaert, promiſing a Reward of Four Hundred Gilders, to any one that ſhould diſcover the Authors of it; and that the Name of the Informer ſhould be conceal'd; the Britiſh Court thought fit not to take any Notice of the Affront at this Juncture; the rather, becauſe it was by many ſuſpected, that the French Emiſſaries were at the bottom of this outragious Inſult, in order to irritate the Britiſh Nation againſt the Dutch. 'Tis certain, that France, having gather'd Strength, by the Diviſions among the Confederates, was, by this Time, become intire Miſtreſs of all future Negotiations; a pregnant Inſtance of which, appear'd in their inſiſting on the Reſtitution of Tournay; which the Britiſh * Plenipotentiaries conceiving to be inconſiſtent with what the Queen had declar'd, refus'd to open the Conferences, until they had further Orders. When this came to be conſider'd in England, it occaſion'd great Warmth in the Cabinet Council; but the Lord Bolingbroke, inſtead of taking Meaſures for preſerving the Town, as Part of the Barrier of the States General, which was ſo intended in the Queen's Speech, propoſed Expedients, whereby the Town might be reſtor'd to France, without the Queen's becoming a Party to a Thing, which was contradictory to what ſhe had once advanc'd: And gave his Advice to Monſieur de Torcy, by what Management Tournay might be ſecur'd to the King of France, although the latter had conſented, in a Memorial deliver'd by Abbot Gaultier, ſo early as the 18th of November, 1711, not to inſiſt upon Tournay. However, the Meaſures and Counſels relating to this Affair, were afterwards alter'd, upon great Conceſſions made to France, and advantageous Terms procured for the Elector of Bavaria: But that Tournay was, at laſt, obtain'd for the Dutch, was principally owing to the Firmneſs and Reſolution of the States; and, ſecondarily, to the Honour and Spirit of the Earl of Strafford, who, purſuant to his Inſtructions, having once ingaged his Promiſe to inſiſt on the Ceſſion of that Place, refuſed to ſign the Treaty without it: Whereby his Lordſhip, in ſome Meaſure, retriev'd the unwarunwarrantable Steps he had made in the Progreſs of this Negotiation; and for which he receiv'd the ſolemn Thanks of the States.

Inſult offer'd to the Marquis del Borgo, and the Earl of Strafford.

While the Negotiation of Peace was at a Stand, the French proſecuted their late Advantages in Flanders, with all poſſible Vigor. The Prince of Savoy having found it impoſſible to relieve Douay, the Confederates under his Command, decamp'd from Seclin on the 3d of September, N. S. and poſted themſelves, with the Right towards Pont-a-Bouvines, and the Left at Ere and Froyenne, near Tournay, in which Situation it was intended they ſhould remain 'till the Concluſion of the Siege of Douay; but all the Forage being conſum'd in the adjacent Country, they paſs'd the Scheld, and on the 7th incamp'd at Leuſe. The next Day they advanc'd to Cambron, and on the 9th towards the Haiſme; and having paſs'd that River, they incamp'd near Mons, with the Left at Nimy, and the Right at Givry, the Head-Quarters being at Havre. Intelligence being that Night brought to Prince Eugene, that the Gariſon of Douay capitulated the Day before, and that the main Body of the French Forces had taken the Camp of Crepin, his Highneſs detach'd the 10th, Forty Squadrons, to go and view the Poſture of the Enemy towards Queſnoy; and about Nine in the Morning, the whole Army were on their Arms; the heavy Baggage being left near Mons. Upon Advice that the Enemy were advanc'd to Malplaquet, and poſted on the ſame Ground where the famous Battel of that Name was fought, Three Years before, a Diſpoſition was made to diſlodge them from thence, and prevent the Siege of Queſnoy; but the Enemy having, with great Diligence, advanc'd within half a League of Queſnoy, and taken a very advantageous Camp, Prince Eugene thought fit to ſtop his March, near the Wood of Dour, and to incamp with the Right near St. Guilain, the Left at the Mill of Saart, near the Wood of Lagniere, and the Head Quarters at Belian. The Mareſchal de Villars having, with the utmoſt Care, ſecur'd all the Paſſes, and fortify'd his Camp, the neceſſary Diſpoſitions were made for carrying on the Siege of Queſnoy, which was inveſted the 8th of September, N. S. The Trenches were open'd the 18th, at Night, and the French expected to have made themſelves Maſters of the Town in Eight or Ten Days; but Major-General, and Quarter-Maſter-General Ivoy, who commanded in the Place, with Seven Battalions, made ſo good Uſe of the numerous heavy Artillery which the Allies left there, after the taking of the Town, that it was the 14th of October, N. S. before he was oblig'd to beat a Parley, and to ſubmit to the ſame Conditions on which Douay had been ſurrendred, viz. that the Gariſon ſhould remoin Priſoners of War; the Officers being allow'd their Swords, with their Baggage and Equipage. The French gave out, that they found in the Place One Hundred and Sixteen heavy Cannon, a great Number of others of ſmall Size; Forty Mortars; Five Hundred Thouſand Weight of Powder; a great Quantity of Bullets, Bombs, Grenadoes, and Proviſions of all ſorts; the whole being valued at Three Millions of Livres; and that this Gariſon compleated the Number of Forty Battalions of the Allies, kill'd, or made Priſoners, ſince the 24th of July, N. S. on which happen'd the unfortunate Affair of Denain. This prodigious Turn of AFFAIRS in Flanders, wherein thoſe who had ſo often been Victorious, were forc'd to be on the Defenſive, and where they now made rapid Conqueſts, who, for Ten Years together, had loſt every Battel they fought, or Town they defended, did not a little elevate the Spirits of the French, who, from their late Succeſs, and the Neutrality of Great Britain, began to form towring Projects, and inſult over their Enemies.

The French elated upon their Succeſſes.

On the 28th of September, Three Ships with Sugar, from Nevis, bound for London, arriv'd at Kinſale, and reported, that when they left Nevis, which was on the 18th of Auguſt, they had receiv'd Intelligence there, "That Monſieur Coſſart, after "having plunder'd Montferrat, had been at Guadeloupe to refreſh his Men; and be- "ing that Day, (Auguſt 18.) come down to Antegoa with Thirty Sail of Ships, "anchor'd before the Harbour of Falmouth, in that Iſland; and that it was expected "the Place would be attack'd that Night." But though Monſieur Coſſart did no further Miſchief in her Majeſty's Plantations, yet many thought it a very impolitick Step in the French, to offer ſuch Inſults to a Nation, to whom they ow'd their being lately preſerv'd from inevitable Ruin. However, it is obſervable, that the Court of Great Britain having complain'd to that of France, of the Hoſtilities committed by Monſieur Coſſart, they thought fit to diſown his Proceedings.

The Iſland of Montferrat, &c. plunder'd by the French.

To return to Flanders; while the French were fluſh'd with Succeſs, Mareſchal de Villars was ſaid to have threaten'd to beſiege Bethune, and even ſome Place of greater Importance; but, it ſeems, he was contented to end his glorious Campaign with the Retaking of Bouchain, which he caus'd to be inveſted before the Surrender of Queſnoy. Whilſt the French were making the neceſſary Preparations for this Siege, Monſieur de la Ruë, a famous Partiſan among the Allies, ſurprized the Fort of Knoque, an important Poſt at the Junction of the Canals of Ypres and Furnes, above Dixmuyde;

Dixmuyde; of which the Mareſchal de Villars having Intelligence, he order'd a ſtrong Detachment of his Army to march that Way. The Prince of Savoy having done the like, thoſe Detachments were follow'd by others from the reſpective Armies; which might have occaſion'd an Action on that Side; but the French General having Notice that Fort Knoque had been ſupply'd with Men and Proviſions, he prudently gave over the Thoughts of retaking it, and wholly apply'd himſelf to the Reduction of Bouchain. The Beſiegers open'd the Trenches on the 10th of October, N. S. and the Gariſon, commanded by Major-General Groveſtein, being extream weak, and cut off from any Relief, and the Attacks carry'd on with ſo much Vigor, that the French made themſelves Maſters of the Cover'd-Way the 18th, and having made the neceſſary Diſpoſitions for ſtorming the Body of the Place, the next Day, the Gariſon thought fit to prevent it, by ſurrendering Priſoners at Diſcretion. This Action concluded the Campaign in the Netherlands: For a few Days after both Armies ſeparated, and march'd to their reſpective Winter-Quarters; and Prince Eugene of Savoy having ſtaid ſome Days at Bruſſels, to ſettle ſeveral Matters with the Council of Brabant, his Highneſs proceeded from thence to the Hague.

About this Time, Mr. Prior was, by the Marquis de Torcy, introduced to a private Audience of the King of France, in the Quality of her Britannick Majeſty's Plenipotentiary; in which Capacity, he obtain'd a favourable Interpretation of a Clauſe inſerted in the late Treaty, for a Suſpenſion of Arms, which had raiſed a Clamour among the Merchants in London. For it having been ſtipulated, That none of the Queen's Men of War, or Merchant-Ships, ſhould tranſport or convoy into Portugal or Catalonia, or any of the Places where they made War at preſent, any Troops, Arms, Cloaths, Proviſions, or Ammunition: The Engliſh Traders were juſtly apprehenſive, that under that Pretence, they might be debarr'd from their uſual Traffick of Corn and Fiſh; of which there are great Demands at Liſbon and Barcelona, in Time of Peace, as well as in War. Mr. Prior was ſo intirely devoted to the French Court, that towards the latter end of October, without either Leave or Orders from the Queen, his Miſtreſs, he came over into England, at the deſire of the King of France, who thought him a proper Perſon to be intruſted with the great Secret of prevailing with her Majeſty, by her Credit to obtain, what his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty demanded for the Elector of Bavaria; for which Purpoſe, he brought a ſort of Credential Letter, importing, That his Conduct was very agreeable to that Monarch.

Mr. Prior Plenipotentiary in France.

He returns to London, Oct. 25.

And goes back to France.

About the middle of November, Mr. Prior was ſent back to France with new Inſtructions, wherein the Propoſal of a Neutrality in Italy, was one of the chief Articles: And that he might act in all Things, conformable to the Queen's preſent Reſolutions and Counſels, a Copy of the laſt Inſtructions to the Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, was given him. He likewiſe carried a Letter from the Queen, to the King of France, wherein, among other Things, ſhe aſſured her good Brother, That Mr. Prior, in continuing to conduct himſelf in the manner that ſhould be intirely agreeable to his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty did no more than execute to a Tittle, the Orders ſhe had given him, and was a Proof of his Duty and Zeal for her Service.

Endeavours to bring the Duke of Savoy into the Queen's Meaſures.

About this Time, in order to conquer the Obſtinacy of the Dutch, it was induſtriouſly given out in England and Holland, that the Duke of Savoy had agreed to a Suſpenſion of Arms; which Report had, as yet, no other Foundation, than the earneſt Endeavours of the Britiſh Miniſters to bring his Royal Highneſs into the Queen's Meaſures; for which, the Emperor's Backwardneſs to give his Royal Highneſs Satisfaction about ſome Claims, not ill-grounded, gave them a very plauſible Handle. The Differences that had been long depending between the Courts of Vienna and Turin, having been very prejudicial to the Confederate Intereſt, becauſe the Duke of Savoy, in juſt Diſcontent, rather choſe to ſtand ſtill, than, by going into the Field, to promote the Intereſt of an Ally, who ſtill put off the Performance of his Ingagements to his Royal Highneſs: The Maritime Powers left no Stone unturn'd, to put an end to thoſe fatal Diſputes. Both Parties were, at laſt, prevail'd with to refer the Controverſy to the Arbitration of the Queen of Great Britain, and of the States General, whoſe Envoys Extraordinary, Mr. Stanyan, and Mr. Vander Meer, having met, at Milan, the Commiſſioners Plenipotentiaries of the Emperor and the Duke of Savoy, and maturely weigh'd the Allegations on both Sides, they agreed * on a Sentence of Arbitration, importing, in Subſtance, that either the Town of Vigevano, or an Equivalent for it, ſhould be given to his Royal Highneſs, together with ſeveral other Diſtricts. The Duke of Savoy readily acquieſced in this juſt and prudent Deciſion, for which he return'd his Thanks to the Britiſh and Dutch Miniſters: But the Imperial Commiſſioners ſolemnly proteſted againſt it; which was very ill reliſh'd at the Court of Great Britain. While this Affair was depending, the Duke of Savoy order'd Count Maffey, his firſt Plenipotentirry at Utrecht, to repair † to London, to ſollicit the Arrears of Subſidies due to his Royal Highneſs; and, the better to ſucceed in his Negotiation, that able Miniſter did not fail inſinuating, that his Maſter was inclinable to enter into the Britiſh Meaſures. Upon this Hint, Mr. Secretary St. John, who catch'd at all Opportunities to mortify the Houſe of Auſtria, ſtarted the Propoſal of giving the Kingdom of Sicily to the Duke of Savoy, as an infallible Lure to decoy his Royal Highneſs: And, therefore, though the French Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, had early * offer'd that Iſland to the Emperor, yet the Britiſh Miniſter declared to the Marquis de Torcy, that the Queen abſolutely demanded it for the Duke of Savoy, whoſe Intereſt her Majeſty had moſt at Heart. It is, however, obſervable, that his Royal Highneſs was ſo far from reliſhing this Propoſition, that he declared to the Earl of Peterborow, at Turin, "That he was not "ſo vainly impatient of the Title of King, as to loſe or hazard any real Intereſt "for an empty Name, but that he thought it much more extraordinary, that a "Prince beaten Ten Years together by his Enemies, ſhould remain, at laſt, with "the Prize contended for, and which ſo often by Parliament, had been declared the "juſt and unavoidable Motive of the War." To calm the Uneaſineſs of Mind the Duke of Savoy was in, the Lord Peterborow, in a Memorial, repreſented to his Royal Highneſs, "That in refuſing thoſe Offers, he muſt fall out with the Queen, "and the Engliſh Miniſters, whom his Lordſhip indeavour'd to excuſe from the Re"proaches caſt upon them, as if they were Perſons devoted to France. That for "the Support of what was propoſed, a ſufficient Fleet ſhould be furniſh'd, either by "England or France, or by both Powers jointly; and that his Royal Highneſs ſhould "be guaranteed and protected againſt any Power that ſhould oppoſe this Project, "or ſhould inſult him for having accepted theſe Offers." The Arguments of the Britiſh Miniſters did, at length, prevail with the Duke of Savoy; and, if their Deſign was effectually to diſable the Emperor from ſupporting himſelf againſt France, after the Separation of the Engliſh, by forcing into the Intereſt of France, an Ally ſo conſiderable as the Duke of Savoy, theſe Meaſures were, certainly, extreamly well calculated for ſuch an End. This Forwardneſs of the Britiſh Miniſtry, to make England a Guarantee for Conditions advantageous only to France, and which muſt naturally have ingaged the Nation in a War with the Emperor, was the more extraordinary, in that during the whole Courſe of this Negotiation, no Endeavours were uſed to procure a Guaranty of the Allies to ſecure the Proteſtant Succeſſion, which had been addreſs'd for by both Houſes of Parliament. While the Earl of Peterborow ply'd the Duke of Savoy with the glittering Bait of Sicily, the French indeavour'd to draw him off by open Force: But the Duke of Berwick, after an unſucceſsful Attempt to ſurprize Fort Edmund and Coni, and the plundering of the Neighbourhood of Saluces, which occaſion'd a warm Skirmiſh, was oblig'd to repaſs the Alps with inconſiderable Booty. On the other hand, Count Maffey having, with great Addreſs, obtain'd from the Britiſh Court a large Sum of Money, in Part of the Arrears due to his Maſter, he return'd to his Poſt at Utrecht, towards the End of September, O. S. by which Time the Emperor had ſent Orders to his Miniſters at Milan, to give the Duke of Savoy intire Satisfaction: But this prepoſterous Condeſcenſion had no Effect upon a Prince, who was already ſtagger'd by the Gold and Promiſes of Great Britain.

The Engliſh Miniſters, and their Emiſſaries, were not equally ſucceſsful in ſome Courts of Germany: Mr. Thomas Harley, a near Relation of the Lord Treaſurer, who, about the beginning of this Year, had been appointed to go to Hanover, with a ſecret Commiſſion, having ſtaid ſome Months in Holland, to watch the Progreſs of the Negotiations at Utrecht and the Hague, ſet out, at laſt, about the beginning of July, for Germany. On the 12th of that Month, N. S. he arrived at Hanover, accompanied by Mr. St. John, Brother to the Lord Bolingbroke, and ſome other Engliſh young Gentlemen, who were all nobly entertain'd at the Elector's Expence. Three Days after †, Mr. Harley, who from the Station of Coadjutor to the Secretary of the Treaſury, was now raiſed to the Character of Ambaſſador Extraordinary, had a publick Audience of the Elector, and afterwards of the Princeſs Sophia, Electreſs Dowager, and of the Electoral Prince and Princeſs, by whom he was receiv'd with diſtinguiſhing Marks of Favour, as one ſo nearly related to the Prime Miniſter in Great Britain. The Deſign of this Embaſſy was to perſuade the Elector to come into the Britiſh Meaſures, which Mr. Harley preſs'd Home, and, amongſt other Arguments, told his Electoral Highneſs, That the contrary would do him an Injury in the Minds of the People, who were ſet upon Peace: But the Elector remain'd firm in the Sentiments, which he formerly expreſs'd in the Memorial preſented about a Year before by the Baron de Bothmer, his Envoy Extraordinary, and anſwer'd Mr. Harley to this Effect, ——— "I do not put my ſelf upon the Foot of "one preetnding immediately to the Throne of Great Britain. The Queen "is a young Woman, and, I hope, will live a great many Years: When "ſhe

A. D. 1712.

" ſhe dies, my Mother is before me. Whenever it pleaſes GOD to call me " to that Station, I hope to act as becomes me, for the Advantage of the People: " In the mean Time, ſpeak to me, as to a German Prince, and a Prince of the " Empire: As ſuch, I muſt tell you, I cannot depart from what I take to be the " true Intereſt of the Empire, and the Dutch." Mr. Harley continued Two Months and a Half at Hanover; and having taken his Audience of Leave of the Elector, the Electreſs Dowager, and the Electoral Prince and Princeſs, and receiv'd conſiderable Preſents of Gold Medals and Jewels from the Two firſt; he ſet out from thence, the next Day, to return to Great Britain.

Endeavours were alſo us'd, about this Time, to bring the King of Pruſſia into pacifick Meaſures, with no better Succeſs, than at the Court of Hanover: But notwithſtanding theſe, and other Diſappointments, the Britiſh Miniſters purſu'd their Scheme with wonderful Steadineſs and Reſolution; and the ſame being mainly founded on King Philip's RENUNCIATION to the Crown of France; the Lord Lexington was appointed to go to Spain, to preſs, and be Witneſs of the Performance of that important Preliminary.

New Scheme of Peace propos'd by the Dutch.

Tho' the publick Negotiation at Utrecht was, for ſome Months, at a Stand, upon Account of the Diſpute between Monſieur Meſnager and Count de Rechteren; yet ſome private Steps were made, in the mean while, for bringing the War to a Concluſion: For, on the 9th of October N. S. the Miniſters of the States-General declar'd to thoſe of Great Britain, " That, for the Good of Peace, their High Mightineſſes were willing to yield Liſle to France, and recede from their Pretenſions " to have Douay, Valenciennes, and Maubeuge, which they had hitherto inſiſted upon; provided Condé and Tournay were included in their Barrier, the Tariffs of " 1664 reſtor'd; and that Sicily be yielded to the Emperor, and Straſburgh to the " Empire." This Propoſal was immediately tranſmitted to the Court of Great Britain, where it was favourably entertain'd, and look'd upon as more reaſonable than any of the former Schemes. On the other hand, the Imperial Miniſters finding the States-General ſo forward to yield Spain and the Weſt-Indies to King Philip, to which they knew their Maſter was unwilling to conſent; Count Zinzendorf propos'd a Plan, according to which, his Imperial Majeſty, and the States of the Empire, ſhould furniſh Four Millions of Crowns; which were ſuppos'd to be ſufficient to put their Forces in a Condition to act offenſively, and to maintain moſt of the Auxiliaries lately in the Britiſh Pay: But it having been found, by long Experience, that there was no great Dependance to be made on ſuch Promiſes; ſome of the Princes, to whom thoſe Troops belong'd, reſolv'd to recal them, upon various Pretences.

The French Court does not accept the Satisfaction offer'd by the Dutch, about Count Rechteren.

About this Time, the French Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, in a Conference with the Britiſh, held on the 10th of October N. S. intimated, " That the Moſt Chriſtian " King inſiſted, that the Count de Rechteren ſhould be recall'd by a ſolemn Reſolu" tion, and another Plenipotentiary appointed in his Room; whereas it appear'd, " that he had himſelf deſir'd to lay down his Commiſſion: But that as his Majeſty " would, as much as poſſible, facilitate this Accommodation, he deſiſted from his " former Demand, that all the Plenipotentiaries of the States ſhould wait upon his, " at one of their Houſes; and would be ſatisfy'd; if Three only ſhould go, and " there diſown what the Count de Rechteren had done." The Dutch Plenipotentiaries having, the ſame Day, been in Conference with the Britiſh, the latter communicated to them the new Orders the French Miniſters had received from their Court; which they tranſmitted to their Principals: But whether this new Overture, or Demand, was, by their High Mightineſſes, judg'd as exorbitant as the former, or for ſome other Reaſon, it does not appear that they caus'd any Anſwer to be return'd to the French Miniſters.

E. of Strafford comes to England.

On the 15th of October N. S. one of the Queen's Meſſengers arriv'd at Utrecht, with Diſpatches for her Miniſters; and, in the Afternoon, all thoſe of the States, who were in that Town, met at the Lord Privy-Seal's Houſe, and were in Conference with his Lordſhip and the Earl of Strafford. Next Morning, the Earl of Strafford ſet out for the Hague; which Place he left the 17th, in the Morning, to imbark for England. On Saturday Night, the 11th of October O. S. his Lordſhip landed at Aldborough in Suſſex; and on the 13th, about Two in the Afternoon, arriv'd at Whitehall.

Various Conjectures about the E. of Strafford's Journey.

Miſunderſtanding at Court.

His Lordſhip's ſudden Departure from Holland occaſion'd various Speculations, both at home and abroad: The general Opinion was, That he was ſent for, to give the Queen, and her Miniſters, a verbal Account of the Diſpoſition in which he left the Dutch, as to Peace and War, and to receive Her Majeſty's Inſtructions in relation to their late Scheme: But thoſe who obſerv'd what paſs'd at Court, aſcrib'd his coming over, to a Miſunderſtanding which, about this Time, appear'd to be among the the Queen's Servants. For, the Lord High-Treaſurer being indiſpos'd with Rheumatick Pains, and the Gravel, kept his Chamber from the 2d to the 14th of October, when he went to give a Viſit to the Lady Maſham, who, about the Beginning of that Month, was come from Windſor to Kenſington, where ſhe intended to lye in; but whoſe going from her Royal Miſtreſs, was, by many, otherwiſe interpreted. At the ſame Time, the Lord-Keeper went to his Seat in Oxfordſhire; the Earl of Poulet, Lord Steward, to his Seat at Hinton St. George, in Devonſhire; and the Lord Viſcount Bolingbroke, and Sir William Windham, went a-hunting at Aſhton-Park in Berkſhire: So that, for about a Fortnight, the Court was very thin at Windſor. During this Solitarineſs, the Queen * remov'd to her little Garden-Houſe, on the South ſide of the Caſtle of Windſor; where, the next Day, ſhe was ſeiz'd with a violent Fit of the Gout: But, on Sunday the 12th of October, Her Majeſty was ſo eaſy, that ſhe was able to hold a Cabinet-Council; where the Lord Keeper, the Earl Poulet, the Lord Bolingbroke, (who that Day return'd to Court) and all the other Members aſſiſted, except the Lord High-Treaſurer. The different Opinions about his Lordſhip's real, or feign'd Indiſpoſition, occaſion'd various Reports about the apparent Jars among the Courtiers: But the true Reaſon of them was, that the Lord Bolingbroke, who already bore a Grudge to the Lord Treaſurer and Lady Maſham, for not having been made a Peer ſooner; was grown jealous of Mr. Thomas Harley's Embaſſy to Hanover, without any Inſtructions, but what he privately receiv'd from the Lord Treaſurer; And the Secretary took now a freſh Diſguſt at the intended Creation of Knights of the Garter; particularly, that the Earl of Strafford was to be one, and, for that very Purpoſe, was ſuddenly ſent for over. However, the crafty Treaſurer having found Means to pacify the Lord Bolingbroke; on the 14th of October, a long Conference was held between thoſe Two Miniſters, the Earl of Strafford, and Mr. Thomas Harley, who, the Day before, arrived from Hanover, by the way of Calais; and, the next Day, they all went to Windſor, to attend the Queen. Five Days after, David Earl of Portmore, and John Hill, Eſq; Major-General, and Governor of Dunkirk, were, by Her Majeſty's Command, ſworn of Her Majeſty's Privy-Council: And, on Sunday the 26th, was held at Windſor-Caſtle, a Chapter of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter; where the Queen, Sovereign of the Order, and ſeveral of the Knights Companions, being preſent; Henry Duke of Beaufort, Captain of the Band of Gentlemen-Penſioners; James Duke of Hamilton and Brandon, Maſter-General of the Ordnance; Henry Duke of Kent; John Earl Poulet, Lord Steward of the Houſhold; Robert Earl of Oxford and Earl Mortimer, Lord High-Treaſurer of Great Britain; and Thomas Earl of Strafford, one of Her Majeſty's Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, and Firſt Lord-Commiſſioner of the Admiralty; were elected Knights Companions of the Order; having been firſt introduc'd into the Chapter, (except his Grace the Duke of Hamilton, who had formerly received the Honour of Knighthood, when he was inveſted with the Order of St. Andrew, or the Thiſtle) and knighted by the Sovereign with the Sword of State; and they were afterwards ſeverally inveſted with the Garter and George, with the uſual Ceremonies. The Duke of Hamilton made a private Application to the Queen, deſiring that he might be permitted to wear both the Garter, and the Order of the Thiſtle; but was anſwer'd, that the ſame was unprecedented; and that the Duke of Argyle had laid down the Thiſtle, upon his being made Knight of the Garter.

The Lord Lexington, having imbark'd at Portſmouth on the 15th of September, on Board the Litchfield Man of War, landed, on the 23d of the ſame Month, at Paſſage Harbour; and, on the 18th of October N. S. arrived at Madrid; where he was receiv'd, and entertain'd, as he had been in all other Places ſince he came aſhore, with great Marks of Honour and Diſtinction. Before his Arrival at Madrid, upon Information that Sir —— Burke reſided there, as Miniſter of the King of England, whoſe Arms he had ſet up before his Houſe; the Lord Lexington complain'd of it to the Court, and demanded not only that he ſhould lay aſide that Character, (which was immediately comply'd with) but alſo, that he ſhould depart Madrid; which he was order'd to do. This ſmall Difficulty being remov'd, the Lord Lexington had ſeveral Conferences with King Philip's Miniſters, about that Prince's Renunciation; which being drawn up in Form, and agreed to, his Majeſty ſign'd it on the 5th of November N. S. and ſwore, upon the Holy Evangeliſts, to obſerve it, in Preſence of the Council of State, and of the Chief Nobility. The Cortez, or States of Spain, having been ſummon'd to meet at Madrid, in order to enact this Renunciation into a Law; King Philip, attended by the Preſident of Caſtile, and Council of State, went to their Aſſembly, about Three that Afternoon, and told them, "That "the Efforts which the Nation made, with ſo much Zeal and Fidelity, to ſecure "his

" his Crown on the Two perilous Occaſions when it was tottering, were of ſuch a " Nature, as never to be forgotten: And that, to ſhew his Gratitude, to procure " Peace for his People, and to be never ſeparated from them, He renounced " all Pretenſions, which either himſelf, or his Iſſue, might have to the Crown " of France; and deſir'd them to give their Conſent to it." The Motives that had ingaged his Catholick Majeſty to make this Renunciation, having afterwards been more fully explain'd, by a Declaration read to them by the Secretary of the Camera; the Repreſentative of the City of Burgos, in the Name of the reſt, return'd an Anſwer to his Majeſty, full of Acknowledgments for his Affection to the Spaniſh Nation, in preferring their Crown to that of France: Which done, the Cortez adjourn'd, and agreed to meet again, in order to confirm and approve the ſaid Act of Renunciation. The Queen, and Prince of Aſturias, and the Lord Lexington, were preſent at the whole Solemnity: But, 'tis to be obſerv'd, that his Lordſhip did not yet take upon him any Character; and that, ſome Time before, King Philip ſent Orders to the Marquis de Monteleone, who was then at Paris, to repair to the Court of Great Britain.

The Marquis de Monteleone appointed by K. Philip to go to the Britiſh Court.

While theſe Things were tranſacting, Endeavours were us'd to bring the Crown of Portugal into the preſent Meaſures of Peace; and, leſt fair Means and Perſuaſions ſhould fail, it was thought proper to uſe more forcible and prevailing Arguments. In order to that, the Marquis de Bay, who commanded King Philip's Forces in Eſtremadura, having caus'd a Detachment of Three or Four Thouſand Horſe to advance to la Fuente de los Zepateros, march'd with the reſt of his Army; and having paſs'd the Caya and the Cayola, incamp'd, the 22d of September N. S. within Half a League of Elvas. To increaſe the Jealouſy, which, by this March, he had given the Portugueze, as if he deſign'd to beſiege that Place, he went to take a nearer View of it, with ſome Officers and Ingeniers; and then return'd to his Camp, where he continued till the 27th. On the other hand, the Portugueze, deceiv'd by theſe Appearances, work'd hard in repairing the Fortifications of Elvas, and convey'd into it Two Battalions, drawn out of Campo-Major; which being the Town the Marquis de Bay had a Deſign upon, he march'd, the 28th, at Day-break, with the whole Army, towards that Place; which, before Night, was inveſted; and ſuch Diligence was uſed in getting all Neceſſaries for the Siege, that the Trenches were open'd the Night between the 4th and 5th of October N. S. This Irruption of the Spaniards, to the Number of near Twenty Thouſand Men, at a Juncture, when Great Britain (the main Support of Portugal, for many Years paſt) had reduc'd all her Forces in that Country, (Two Regiments only excepted) could not but make the Court of Liſbon very uneaſy. Orders were, indeed, immediately ſent to the Commanders of the ſeveral Provinces, forthwith to aſſemble the Troops under their reſpective Commands; but theſe Forces appear'd ſo very inconſiderable, and in ſuch a wretched Condition, that ſome of the Prime Nobility thought it their Duty to repreſent to the King the ill State of the Kingdom, and the Miſmanagement of the Miniſtry, eſpecially of the Inquiſitor General, who was the Chief Favourite, and by whoſe Direction all Affairs were govern'd. Hereupon, his Portugueze Majeſty declar'd, " He would " take care to apply the beſt Remedy he could, to the Dangers with which the " State was threaten'd; and even, if Occaſion requir'd, take the Field in Perſon." But, nevertheleſs, the Conſternation the Court was under, very much increas'd, upon the News that the Spaniards had inveſted Campo-Major, the moſt regular Fortification on the Frontiers of Portugal; but which, at that Time, was not provided either with a ſufficient Gariſon, or with Ammunition and Proviſions for a long Siege. However, on this Occaſion, the Portugueze exerted themſelves with ſuch Vigor and Reſolution, as they ſeem'd to have been wholly Strangers to during the Courſe of this War: Which was, in great meaſure, owing to the Bravery and Conduct of Major-General Hogan, an Iriſh Gentleman, and of Brigadier Maſſey, an experienc'd French (Proteſtant) Ingineer; who being at that Time at Liſbon, preparing to go to Brazil, form'd (with the Count de Ribeira, and ſeveral other Officers of Note) the Deſign of getting into Campo-Major; which was executed with very good Succeſs, at the Head of Two or Three Hundred Portugueze Grenadiers, a Day or two after the Enemy had open'd the Trenches. Major-General Hogan having alſo got into the Town with a Supply of Four or Five Hundred Men; the Count de Ribeira, who commanded there in Chief, made the neceſſary Diſpoſitions to defend the Place to the laſt Extremity; and was ſo well ſeconded by the Officers, Ingeniers, and Troops under him, that he had at laſt the good Fortune to oblige the Marquis de Bay to raiſe the * Siege. This good Succeſs, together with the ſafe Arrival of the Brazil Fleet, very richly laden, and the Queen's happy Delivery of a Prince, all which happen'd about the ſame Time, occaſion'd

S. at Liſbon, from whence Admiral Baker ſail'd, a few Days after, for England. And tho' the Enterprize of the Spaniards upon Campo-Mayor, miſerably miſcarry'd, it had yet the principal Effect, which the Courts of France, Spain, and Great Britain, expected from it, in quickning the Paces of the Portugueze Miniſters at Utrecht, towards an Agreement for a Suſpenſion of Arms; which by the good Offices of the Lord Privy-Seal, was, at laſt, brought about, and ſign'd at his Lordſhip's Houſe, by the French and Portugueze Plenipotentiaries, on the 7th of November, N. S. This Treaty was, the ſame Day, communicated to the Miniſters of the Allies, by the Count de Taronca, who excuſed this forward Step, as the Effect of preſſing Neceſſity.

A. D. 1712.

The Portugueze come into the Suſpenſion of Arms.

Thus ended the War in Portugal; but the Endeavours which, at the ſame Time, were us'd, to bring it to a Concluſion in Catalonia, were not equally ſucceſsful; the Emperor appearing reſolv'd to keep Poſſeſſion of that Principality, where Count Staremberg, though ſtreighten'd for want of Proviſions and Forage, not only maintain'd his Ground, but kept Gironne block'd up for a conſiderable Time. On the other hand, frequent Councils were held in France and England, and ſeveral Expreſſes diſpatch'd from one Court to the other, about a new Plan of Peace, that might bring in the reſty and obſtinate Dutch. In order to cement the growing Friendſhip and Intimacy between the Two Crowns, the Queen of Great Britain appointed Duke Hamilton her Ambaſſador Extraordinary to the Court of France; and, the better to enable him to ſupport the State and Splendor of that Character, beſtow'd † upon his Grace the Office of Maſter General of the Ordnance, vacant by the Death of the Earl Rivers, which happen'd about the middle ‖ of Auguſt. § On the other hand, the moſt Chriſtian King named the Duke d' Aumont, Firſt Gentleman of his Bed-Chamber, to go to England, with the ſame Character: And 'tis obſervable, that the Choice of thoſe Two Ambaſſadors, was very agreeable to the Pretender's Friends, whoſe Cauſe and Intereſt, they both openly favour'd. All this while, the Duke of Ormond continued in his Quarters in Ghent, where Monſieur Vegelin Van Claerbergen, one of the Dutch Field-Deputies, waited upon him on the 7th of September, N. S. being ſent by his Colleagues, to ſound his Grace upon ſeveral Points. His firſt Queſtion was, whether the Engliſh Troops were to ſtay at Ghent and Bruges the whole Winter, or how long? To which the Duke anſwer'd, he could not tell, but ſaw yet no Appearance of their being withdrawn. He aſk'd next, Whether the Duke would conſent to the States putting ſome of their Troops into Ghent, to take Care of their Convoys, and guard them to their Frontier Gariſons? But the Duke having ſtrict Orders to keep Poſſeſſion of his own Acquiſition, told him, "He "thought himſelf obliged not to ſuffer any Troops, but thoſe of the Queen, to "come into that Town: That, however, he had no Intention to obſtruct the Dutch "Convoys; and that their Troops might ſtill come to the Counterſcarp of the "Town, and receive whatever was to be carried to the Camp, as had been pra"ctiſed, ever ſince Ghent was in the Hands of the Allies." The Deputy's next Queſtion was, Whether his Grace would let part of the Daniſh Troops take their Quarters in Bruges, as they had done, ever ſince the Reduction of that Place? To which the Duke anſwer'd in the Negative. The Lord Bolingbroke highly applauded his Conduct on this Occaſion, and told ∴ him, The Queen had receiv'd ſo much ill Uſage, with reſpect to the Commerce of her Subjects in the Netherlands, and had ſo much Reaſon to expect more of the ſame Kind, that ſhe was reſolv'd to treat upon that Head, with theſe Pawns in her Hands: But upon Recollection, the Lord Bolingbroke, in a Second Letter, of the ſame Date, acquainted the Duke, "That the poſitive Order con"tain'd in his Firſt, was not ſent to prevent the Admiſſion of other Troops, beſides "her Majeſty's, into Ghent and Bruges: That the Queen was ſatisfied, that his "Grace would take effectual Care to preſerve thoſe cautionary Places, which could "alone ſecure to her any tolerable Conditions, with reſpect to the Netherlands, in "the Terms of Peace: But, he confeſs'd, he thought it could be no ways unne"ceſſary, to give his Grace a very poſitive and clear Order, in an Affair, which "might, perhaps, make a great Noiſe. The Duke not only punctually obey'd the Orders he receiv'd from England, but was alſo very forward in aſſiſting the Queen's new Friends, the French, even at the Expence of her old Allies. For being inform'd of a Deſign, which the Dutch, "from the late Succeſs of their Enterprize "upon Fort Knoque, had been encouraged to form, for ſurprizing Newport or Furnes; and that the fortifying Dixmuyde was made uſe of as a Pretence, for aſſembling a Body of Troops, to put the Deſign in Execution: His Grace acquainted "* the Lord Bolingbroke with this Affair, and left it to his Lordſhip to judge of its "Impor-

" Importance, and of the Uſe that was to be made of it: But ſuggeſted, that if it " were thought for the Queen's Service, to prevent that Deſign being put in Exe- " cution, ſome Means ſhould be found to give Advice of it to Mareſchal Villars, " who might think we owed him that good Office, in requital of ſome Informations " he had given his Grace, with a Deſign to ſerve her Majeſty." The Queen was of the Duke's Opinion, concerning the ſecret Intelligence he had receiv'd; of which, however, no Uſe was made, becauſe the Campaign was, by this Time, at an End. Both the French and Confederate Armies going now into Winter-Quarters, his Grace aſk'd, and readily obtain'd Leave to return to England; and having taken a View of Dunkirk, imbark'd there, landed at Dover the 2d of November, arriv'd in London the next Day, and on the 4th waited on the Queen at Windſor, where he met with a moſt gracious Reception.

The Duke of Ormond returns to England.

The ſame Day, being the Anniverſary of the Nativity of King William the Third, great Rejoycings were made, in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, by the well-affected to the Revolution, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion. Among the reſt, a conſiderable Number of Lords, Gentlemen, and Citizens, being met at the Three-Tuns and Rummer in Grace-Church-Street, to celebrate that Feſtival, caus'd a great Bonefire to be made before the Houſe, and gave Beer to the Mob, to pledge the Healths they drank on the Balcony, to the Queen, the Houſe of Hanover, and the Memory of King William. The High-Church Party were, it ſeems, offended at it, and raiſed an oppoſite Mob, who offering to diſturb the Rejoycings round the Bonefire, a Scuffle inſu'd, in which the Aggreſſors were repuls'd, with ſome broken Heads and bloody Noſes; but the Train'd Bands being that Day under Arms, the Fray was ſoon parted, and all was quiet, 'till the Bonefire was conſum'd, and the Company in the Tavern retired, when part of the Mob that had before been worſted, finding no Oppoſition, they reveng'd themſelves on the Glaſs-Windows of the Tavern; but the Train'd-Bands again interpoſing, the Houſe receiv'd no further Damage. However, this ſolemn Rejoycing was, by the Tories, repreſented as a ſet Deſign to diſturb the Government: But what was yet more ridiculous, a Report was ſpread of a ſtrange Conſpiracy againſt the Life of the Lord Treaſurer, by ſending him, on that very † Day, a Band-Box, with Three Piſtols charg'd and cock'd, whoſe Trigger being tied to a Pack-Thread faſten'd to the Cover, the Piſtols would have gone off, and done Execution, at the opening of the Box, had not the ſame been miraculouſly prevented, by Dr. Jonathan Swift, who being then in the Room, while his Lordſhip was Shaving, ſuſpected ſomething, and open'd the Box in ſuch a Manner, that no Miſchief was done. This was the firſt Story that was whiſper'd about: But the Belief of ſuch an extravagant Plot, was ſoon exploded; when it was found that the Three Piſtols were no more than a Steel ſet on a Piſtol-Stock, to ſtrike Fire, and Two Inkhorns, or Squibs; ſo that Jonathan Swift, the lucky Diſcoverer, was, by many, ſuſpected to have been the ingenious Contriver of this political Machine.

Another Accident happen'd about this Time, which the Miniſters, and their Mercenary Writers, eagerly laid hold on, to improve a private Animoſity, if not into a Conſpiracy againſt the Government, at leaſt into a Party-Quarrel. A Law-Suit, which, for about Eleven Years, had been depending between the Duke of Hamilton, and the Lord Mohun, as all Domeſtick Differences generally do, had created much ill Blood between thoſe Two Noblemen; ſo that on the 13th of November, at a Meeting at Mr. Orlebar, a Maſter in Chancery's Chambers in the Rolls, the Duke having reflected on Mr. Whitworth, (Father to Mr. Whitworth, her Majeſty's late Ambaſſador to the Czar) who was examin'd as a Witneſs on the Lord Mohun's Side, ſaying, He had neither Truth nor Juſtice in him: The Lord Mohun thought himſelf oblig'd to vindicate that Gentleman, which he did, by ſaying, He had as much Truth as his Grace. The Duke having made no Reply, all ſeem'd to end amicably; for his Grace and the Lord Mohun continued in the ſame Place above half an Hour, in all Appearance, very friendly; and at parting, the Duke, going out firſt, made a low Bow to the Lord Mohun, who, in like manner, return'd his Grace's Civility: So that none of the Perſons there preſent, ſuſpected any Conſequence from what had paſs'd. But the next Day, Lieutenant-General Maccartney went Twice to the Duke of Hamilton's Houſe, with a Challenge to his Grace from the Lord Mohun; and in the Evening the Duke, accompany'd by Colonel John Hamilton, went to meet General Maccartney at the Roſe Tavern, and was a few Minutes in private with him; whilſt the Lord Mohun and the Colonel were in ſeparate Rooms. Mr. Maccartney went ſeveral Times between the Duke and Lord Mohun; from which, and other Circumſtances, his Enemies took Occaſion to give out, That he rather inflam'd, than endeavour'd to compoſe the Quarrel. But all that can be fairly conjectur'd, is, that the Time and Place of the Duel were there fix'd, and agreed on. The Lord Mohun and General Maccartney lay that Night at the Bagnio in Long-Acre, and on Sunday, the 15th of November, about Seven of the Clock in the Morning, went in a Hackney-Coach, to the Lodge in Hide-Park, where being ſoon after met by the Duke of Hamilton, and his Second, Colonel Hamilton, they all jump'd over a Ditch, into a Place call'd the Nurſery. It ſeems my Lord Mohun would not have the Seconds bear a Part in the Engagement; but the Duke inſiſted, that Mr. Maccartney ſhould have a Share in the Dance; which ſtrengthen'd the Suggeſtion, that he was the Inſtigator of this fatal Duel. All having drawn immediately, the Two Principals made ſuch violent and deſperate Paſſes at each other, being rather intent to give, than to parry Thruſts, that they ſoon fell down, both mortally wounded; ſo that the Lord Mohun died on the Spot, and the Duke, as his Servants were carrying him to his Coach. The Two Seconds either did not fight at all, as one of the Witneſſes depos'd, or fought with ſuch Caution, that Colonel Hamilton receiv'd only a ſmall Wound in the Inſtep; which, he ſaid, happen'd by his own Sword, as he was parrying down a full Paſs that General Maccartney made at him.

Both the Duke and the Lord Mohun kill'd.

The High-Churchmen, and the Chevalier de St. George's Friends, were ſo ſenſibly touch'd with the Loſs of one of their principal Champions, that they charg'd this unhappy Duel on the whole Whig-Party: ſuggeſting *, "That having try'd all other "Methods in vain, they return'd to their laſt Expedient, of Murder, and imploy'd "Treachry and Violence at once. That their General (the Duke of Marlborough) ſet "the Example of Party-Duels, which was only to give them a Sanction; and de- "puted that infamous Meſſenger of his Challenge, to be the general Bully of the "Faction. That that Bravo, Maccartney, was forced to keep up his Patron's, (the "Lord Mohun's Courage) with Wine, till within very few Hours of their meeting "in the Field. And that the mortal Wound which the Duke receiv'd, after his "Adverſary was run through the Heart, could not be given by any but Maccartney." This laſt Accuſation being like to lay an indelible Odium on the Whigs, great Induſtry, and, indeed, all indirect Means were uſed, to propagate the Belief of it. In order to that, Colonel Hamilton depoſed before the Privy-Council, That he ſaw Maccartney make a Paſs at his Grace: Upon which an Advertiſement was publiſh'd by the Government, for the Diſcovery of Lieutenant-General Maccartney, ſuggeſting, That it had appear'd upon Oath, that the Wound whereof the Duke dy'd, was given him by the ſaid Maccartney. On the other hand, it was alledg'd, in Vindication of the Whigs in general, and of General Maccartney in particular, "That Duke Hamilton, and "the Lord Mohun, purſued their private Animoſities, occaſion'd by the Law-Suit be- "fore-mention'd, that had been depending many Years; which plainly appear'd, "from the Duke's having often been forewarn'd to avoid the Lord Mohun's Com- "pany. That the latter might, probably, have been inclin'd to decide the Matter "by the Sword, upon an Apprehenſion either that the Duke would, at laſt, remove "the Cauſe to the Houſe of Peers, where he might hope to ſupply by Friends and "Intereſt, what he wanted in Juſtice and Equity; or that upon his Return from "his Embaſſy to France, he might beg and obtain of the Crown, the late Earl of "Macclesfield's Eſtate, which was the Prize contended for, upon a Pretence, that "the Outlawry againſt that Earl, was not revers'd in due Form." As to the Suggeſtion that General Maccartney ſtabb'd Duke Hamilton, the Falſity of that horrid Imputation ſufficiently appear'd, both from the ſeveral Depoſitions taken at the Coroner's Inqueſt, and from the Reports and Declarations of Two or Three eminent Surgeons, who were unanimous, That the Wound the Duke receiv'd in his Right-Arm, and which was allow'd, on all hands, to have been given by the Lord Mohun, was the immediate Occaſion of his Grace's Death. Colonel Hamilton foully prevaricated at his Tryal, on Account of this unhappy Duel, and perſiſted in accuſing General Maccartney: But his Silence at the Place where they fought, and where they both continued a conſiderable while, taking Care of their reſpective Principals, raiſed an unanſwerable Objection to Colonel Hamilton's Evidence, and fix'd upon him an infamous Character, either for charging a Murder upon an innocent Man, or for ſuffering the Murderer of the Noble Perſon, whoſe Second he was, to make his Eſcape, when it was in his Power to ſecure him. Under this juſt Imputation, Colonel Hamilton lived obſcurely the remainder of his Days; and his Death was attended with viſible Marks of Divine Vengeance. (a) But leaving the Seconds, we ſhall conclude the Account of this fatal Duel, with a Sketch of the Characters of the Two Noble Principals. James, late Duke of Hamilton and Brandon, was the firſt Duke and

Prince of the Blood-Royal of Scotland, next to the Line of the Stuarts. He had a Soul equal to his Birth; and his Perſon, though not much above the middle Stature, being well made, well proportion'd, and of a vigorous and healthy Conſtitution, he made ſuch a Proficiency in the Gentlemanly Exerciſes of Riding and Fencing, and by liberal Education, temper'd ſo well his innate high Spirit, with a polite Carriage and Affability, that he was accounted one of the moſt accompliſh'd Noblemen of King Charles the Second's Court. That diſcerning Prince made him Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber, and afterwards ſent him his Envoy Extraordinary to the Court of France. His Grace was univerſally lamented by his Countrymen; and very juſtly by the Anti-Revolutioners: For when the Prince of Orange, upon the late King James's Receſs, had aſſembled ſuch of the Scotch Nobility and Gentry, as were then in London, and after having declar'd the Motives of his coming, had aſk'd their Advice, the Duke of Hamilton, then Earl of Arran, (though his Father was Preſident of that Aſſembly) propoſed to them, That they ſhould move the Prince to deſire the King to return, and call a Free Parliament, which would be the beſt way to ſecure the Proteſtant Religion, and their Properties, and to heal their Breaches. This Counſel being oppoſite to the Prince of Orange's Undertaking, his Grace was never afterwards in Favour with that Prince; and adhering to his Sentiments of ſtrict Loyalty to the direct Royal Line, he could not but be obnoxious to the Sticklers for the late Revolution, and the ſubſequent Settlement; who knew he held a conſtant Correſpondence with the Court of St. Germains. As for the Lord Mohun, he was Son of Charles Lord Mohun, by Philippa, one of the Daughters of Arthur Anneſley, Earl of Angleſey, Lord Privy-Seal, and the Off-ſpring of a moſt Noble and Ancient Family, of which Sir William de Mohun, who accompany'd the Norman Conqueror, was the firſt Founder in England, after it had flouriſh'd long before in France. He had the Misfortune to loſe his Father in his tender Infancy, which depriv'd him of the Advantage of an Education ſuitable to his Birth, whereby his natural Parts and Genius remain'd uncultivated; and his great Spirit, together with the Narrowneſs of his Paternal Eſtate, having led him early to Arms, he fell into licentious Company, ſo that his Youth was mark'd by many unlucky Sallies, and even Criminal Exceſſes. But if juvenile Follies were to determine a Man's Character, the Council-Board would often be depriv'd of its wiſeſt Heads; the Bench of its beſt Judges; and the Church of its brighteſt Luminaries; and many a Name would either be loſt in Oblivion, or ſtigmatiz'd with Infamy, that makes a ſhining Figure in Hiſtory. Certainly all equitable Perſons will give Allowances for the Eruptions of youthful Blood; and not charge a Man of Forty, with the Faults he committed before Twenty; which Age my Lord Mohun had not reach'd, when Mr. Mountford, the famous Comedian, was barbarouſly murther'd by his Lordſhip's Companions; and it plainly appear'd upon the ſolemn Tryal before the Lords, in Weſtminſter-Hall, that his Lordſhip's Hands were not imbru'd in his Blood. Some Years after, my Lord Mohun had alſo the Misfortune to be involv'd with the late Earl of Warwick, in an Indictment for the Murther of Mr. Coote, for which they were both try'd by the Peers in Weſtminſter-Hall: But, according to a Learned * Divine, The Lord Mohun, with great Compoſedneſs and Elocution, made his Innocency ſo well appear, that he was acquitted by the unanimous Suffrage of the Peers, and liv'd to be a great Example of Sobriety, and Publick Spirit. And, indeed, my Lord Mohun, after this laſt Misfortune, did wonderfully reclaim; and what by his Reading, what by his Converſation with the ableſt Stateſmen, ſo well improv'd his natural Parts, that he became a ſtrenuous Aſſerter of the Cauſe of Liberty, and of the late Revolution; which, however, could not but raiſe him many Enemies, and was the main Reaſon why his Memory has been ſo unfairly, and ſo barbarouſly treated. He behav'd himſelf ſo diſcreetly at the Court of Hanover, whither he accompany'd the late Earl of Macclesfield, thht he left an excellent Character behind him with that Elector, and the Princeſs Sophia, his Mother; and when his Electoral Highneſs was to be inſtall'd Knight of the Garter, he appointed the Lord Mohun to be his Proxy. Upon the whole Matter, the Lord Mohun was no leſs regretted by the Whigs, than Duke Hamilton was by the other Party.

False Rumours of Plots.

In the mean Time, they who were about the timorous Queen, in order to ſecure her Dependance upon them, improved all Opportunies to frighten her with Rumours of Plots. On Sunday, the 23d of November, the Guard was doubled at Windſor, upon Information that ſome diſaffected Perſons lurk'd in the Night, near the little Houſe in which her Majeſty reſided; and, at the ſame Time, one of the Queen's Gardeners was taken up, for ſpeaking diſreſpectfully of her Majeſty, which gave a Colour to the Suſpicion of ſome ill Deſign againſt her Perſon. But it appeared afterwards, that the firſt Alarm was occaſion'd by Three young German Gentlemen, who being gone to Windſor the Saturday, to view the Caſtle, and ſee the Court the next Day, happen'd to walk about the Queen's Houſe in the Evening. As they came near a Centry, they were challeng'd as uſual; but not underſtanding Engliſh, and thinking they had come too near the Queen's Houſe, inſtead of anſwering, they betook themſelves to their Heels, and went to their Lodgings. Hereupon the Centry call'd to his Corporal, and the commanding Officer being acquainted with what had paſs'd, made his Report, upon which it was thought proper to double the Guard. Whilſt theſe falſe Rumours were induſtriouſly ſpread, the Duke of Marlborough wiſely conſider'd, that notwithſtanding the conſtant Precaution he us'd, ſince his Removal, not to intermeddle in publick Affairs, yet he could not be merry with Four or Five intimate Friends, or take a Turn into the Country, without giving Jealouſy to his Enemies, and being traduc'd by Mercenary Libellers: Whereupon his Grace reſolv'd to make other People eaſy, and his own Perſon more ſecure, by retiring out of the Kingdom. His Grace having open'd his Deſign to the Earl of Oxford, and demanded a Paſs about the latter End of October, the ſame was readily granted; but he was deny'd the Favour of paying his Perſonal Duty to the Queen, before he left England. It is obſervable, that both Tories and Whigs were variouſly affected with his Grace's voluntary Exile: Some judging it ominous, others favourable to their reſpective Parties and Deſigns; ſome the Effect of Fear, and others of Prudence. In all probability, theſe Two laſt Motives prevail'd with the Duke: For it was high Time for him to leave the Kingdom, when ſo many Arts were us'd to render him obnoxious to the Government. To this Purpoſe we may take Notice, that beſides what had been ſuggeſted, that his Grace ſet the Example of Party-Duels, and deputed the late Lord Mohun to be the General Bully of the Faction, it was maliciouſly inſinuated, not only in private Whiſpers, but even before the Coroner's Inquſt, that the Duke of Marlborough was privy to the Challenge that was ſent to the Duke of Hamilton. His Grace having ſettled his Domeſtick Affairs, ſet out for Dover on Monday, the 24th of November; embark'd the Sunday following, on board the North Britain Packet-Boat, and the next Day landed at Oſtend, under a tripple Diſcharge of all the Cannon on the Ramparts. At his Landing, his Grace was receiv'd by Lieutenant-General Cadogan, and Brigadier de Caris, Governor of the Place, and conducted by a vaſt Concourſe of People, to Captain Brown's, where he din'd. He ſupp'd with the Governor, lay that Night at the Burgo-Maſter's; and the next Day (December 13. N. S.) his Grace ſet out for Antwerp. He was receiv'd with extraordinary Marks of Reſpect, in all the Dutch Gariſons, particularly at Maeſtricht, from whence he repair'd * to Aix-la-Chapelle: But we may take Notice, that Lieutenant-General Cadogan paid dear for the Civilities he ſhew'd to the Duke, being, ſoon after, diveſted of all his Employments. All this while, ſtrict Search was made after Lieutenant-General Maccartney; and beſides the Five Hundred Pounds promiſed by the Queen's Proclamation, Three Hundred more were offer'd by the Dutcheſs of Hamilton, as a Reward to whomſoever ſhould diſcover him. But Mr. Maccartney having, after the fatal Duel, walk'd to Kenſington, and thence to Chelſea, went from thence to the Duke of Richmond's Houſe in the Privy-Garden, near Whitehall; lay there that Night; and early the next Morning, croſs'd the Thames; and then, in a Diſguiſe, went over to Flanders. It was, for ſome Days, uncertain, who ſhould ſucceed the late Duke Hamilton, as Ambaſſador Extraordinary to the Court of France: But on the 23d of November, the Queen was pleaſed to declare her Choice of the Duke of Shrewſbury for that Employment. As for the Poſt of Maſter-General of the Ordnance, likewiſe vacant by the Death of Duke Hamilton, her Majeſty thought fit not to diſpoſe of it ſo ſoon.

The Chief Members of the Privy-Council having, for ſome Days, been taken up in examining Witneſſes concerning the fatal Duel, it was the 20th of November before the Earl of Strafford ſet out from London, to imbark at Greenwich for Holland, with a new Plan, containing her Majeſty's laſt Intentions about Peace. His Excellency arrived at the Hague on the 6th of December, N. " might have prov'd, and ſtill might prove fatal to that State, if the laſt " Offers now to be made on the Part of her Majeſty, ſhould not be accepted. " That the reflecting on what had paſs'd, might ſerve to prevent Inconveniencies " for the future; ſince the Refuſal to agree to the Suſpenſion of Arms, propos'd by " Her Majeſty, might have brought Ruin on that State, and had coſt them ſo dear; " and that there was Reaſon to fear much greater Evils, in caſe their High Mighti- " neſſes ſhould now refuſe to conclude the Peace jointly with Her Majeſty. " That the laſt Propoſition, or Overture about Peace, made by their High Migh- " tineſſes, contain'd one Point, which was contrary to the Ingagements Her Ma- " jeſty had before entred into; namely, That Sicily ſhould be given to the Duke " of Savoy. That as to ſome other Points, inſurmountable Obſtacles had now ari- " ſen, which might have been got over, had not ſo ſtrong Oppoſition been made " to Her Majeſty's Meaſures, and had not Her Majeſty been conſtrain'd to agree " ſeparately to a Suſpenſion of Arms. That the Irreſolution of that State had been " attended by very unhappy Accidents; and therefore, Her Majeſty was very " deſirous they would, at length, come to fix upon ſome Propoſitions, reaſonable " in themſelves, and of ſuch a Nature, that, in the unlucky Conjuncture wherein " Affairs now ſtood, they might be obtain'd of France. That Her Majeſty had " given him Permiſſion to declare further, That he well knew, Her Majeſty was " determin'd to inſiſt upon, and even to procure from France, the Ceſſion of Tour- " nay, to ſtrengthen the Barrier of that State with a Place of ſo great Importance; " but that he knew likewiſe, that Her Majeſty's Conduct in this Matter, would " wholly depend upon that of the States: And that after the making ſo conſidera- " ble a Step in their Favour, it was expected, that, on their Part, they ſhould " forthwith concur with Her Majeſty in concluding the Peace, without ſtarting new " Objections, and without making other Demands: And that as ſoon as that State " ſhould declare themſelves in an authentick manner, ſo that Her Majeſty could " depend upon it; then Her Majeſty would cauſe a Declaration to be made in full " Congreſs, that the Article of the Ceſſion of Tournay, ſhould be one of the Con- " ditions of Peace, ſine quâ non. That he was likewiſe to inform their High Migh- " tineſſes, That the King of France had made very ſtrong Inſtances for his Ally, " the Elector of Bavaria; and that the leaſt which his Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty pre- " tended to aſk for him, was, That the ſaid Elector ſhould continue in the Poſ- " ſeſſion of Luxembourg, Namur, and Charleroy; ſubject, however, to the Terms of " the Barrier for the States-General, till the ſaid Elector were reſtor'd to his Electo- " rate of Bavaria, (excluſive of the Upper Palatinate) and plac'd in the Rank and " Dignity of Ninth Elector. That the King of France would alſo propoſe, That " the Kingdom of Sardinia be given to that Elector, for effacing, by the Title of " King, the Diſgrace and Mortification of being degraded from his Rank of Firſt " Elector: And, that Her Majeſty judg'd, that this Point might be granted. That " he was alſo to repreſent, That Her Majeſty was deſirous both to re-eſtabliſh, and " to maintain, an entire Union between Her and that State; and hop'd, and be- " liev'd, that their High Mightineſſes were of the ſame Sentiments with Her in " this Matter: That it was therefore neceſſary, to remove all that that State might " ſeem to have gain'd, either to the immediate Prejudice, or to the future Danger, " of Her Majeſty's and her Kingdoms Intereſts. That he had brought with him " a Plan of a New Treaty of Succeſſion and Barrier; and muſt inſiſt, that it might " be ſign'd before the Concluſion of the Peace. That upon a Diſcuſſion of the " now exiſting Barrier-Treaty, he would make it appear to the Miniſters of this " State, that many Things were therein inſerted, which in England were look'd up- " on as diſadvantageous to her Majeſty's Subjects, and which certainly could not " be reconcil'd either to the Letter or to the Deſign of the Grand Alliance; nor " were conformable to any Principles upon which the preſent Confederacy was " made, and the War begun. That he would further ſhew, that the Alterations " and Additions now propos'd, were only ſuch, as were neceſſary to rectify the Mi- " ſtakes, and to explain what was dubious, and to ſupply ſome Omiſſions in that " Treaty, and to take away ſome Obſtructions thence ariſing to the Commerce of " Great Britain. That the particular Guaranty of the Succeſſion, and Barrier, being " thus explain'd and rectify'd, it would not only be an additional Security for both " Nations, and be cordially executed, whenever the Occaſion ſhould happen, but " would unite the Two Nations in ſtricter Bonds of Friendſhip and Affection. " Whereas, on the other hand, that State could not but expect a ſlow Execution of " a Treaty, which, by the Britiſh Nation, had been declar'd diſhonourable, and " diſadvantageous to it: And, in ſhort, that to pretend to hold the ſaid Nation un- " der an Ingagement of ſuch a Nature as this, could have no other Effect, than to " foment Jealouſy and Miſunderſtanding, which, one Time or other, might break

That among the Terms of the New Plan, the Fourth " Article of the Treaty of Barrier imported, That Her Majesty consented to the " States putting such Garisons, as they should think fit, into the following Places; " namely, Furnes, Fort Knoque, Ypres, Menin; the Town and Castle of Tournay; " Mons, Charleroy; the Town and Castle of Namur; the Castle of Ghent; the Forts " Pearl, Philip, and Damme: That Fort St. Dhona being join'd to the Fortificati- " ons of Sluys, should be yielded in Propriety to the States; and that the Fort " of Rodenhuysen, on this side of Ghent, should be raz'd. That in the Ninth Ar- " ticle, it was stipulated, That all the Revenues of the Places to be yielded up " by France, which did not belong to the Crown of Spain at the Time of the " Death of King Charles the Second, should be given to the States, towards main- " taining the Barrier; except only so much as was necessary for the Civil Govern- " ment of the said Towns, Places, and Castellanies; as also, a Million of Guilders " yearly, out of the cleareſt Revenues of the rest of the Spanish Netherlands. That " what related to Bonne, Huy, and Liege, should be settled with the Ministers of " the Emperor and Empire: But that Her Majesty's Opinion was, that the first " of those Places should be garison'd by the Imperialists, and the other Two by the " States. That, in the last Place, notwithstanding all the Provocations, and all the " Delays on the Part of that State, the Queen had hitherto kept the Negotiation " open; that Her Majesty thought she had retarded it long enough, and, possibly, " too long in good Policy. That, therefore, the Offers which Her Majesty now " made by him, were her ultimate Resolutions: And that this was the last Time she " would address her self to their High Mightinesses, in case they should form new " Delays, and not answer Her Majesty's good Intentions for their own Interests. " That, in the mean while, Her Majesty had judg'd her self oblig'd, in Considera- " tion of the great Services done by the Duke of Savoy for the Common Cause, and " of the Danger to which he was expos'd by his firm Adherence thereto, to take " care not only for his Security; but likewise for his Grandeur, by procuring " for him Sicily, and the Tracts of the Country on this side the Alps; which " were necessary to secure Exilles and Feneſtrelles, and to cover Piedmont. That his " Succession, after that of King Philip, was acknowledg'd by the Renunciation. That " Her Majesty desir'd the Concurrence of this State, in all that had been promised " to his Royal Highness; and that Her Majesty desir'd likewise, that the States " should join with her, to oblige the Emperor to a Neutrality for Italy, and to " withdraw his Troops from Catalonia: And that Her Majesty was resolv'd to make " the Neutrality a Condition of transporting the said Troops, which Her Majesty " would do at her own Expence; For, without that Neutrality, the Emperor " might disturb all Italy, and particularly the Duke of Savoy, on Account of his " Treaty in the Year 1703: One of the Imperial Ministers having already threat- " en'd a Minister of the Duke of Savoy therewith; which would certainly ingage " the Queen, and the States, in the Troubles and Wars of Italy." The Earl of Strafford further represented, " That Her Majesty being inform'd of the present " Disorders in the Spanish Netherlands, had sent over the Earl of Orrery to the Hague, " to redress them, to concert thereupon with the Deputies of this State, and to re- " sume the Administration in common with their High Mightinesses Deputies, and " to keep the same, till the Emperor should accept the Netherlands on the Con- " ditions which the Queen and their High Mightinesses should agree upon:" Add- ding, " That the Earl of Orrery had Orders not to do any Thing in this Affair, but " according as he should find a Disposition in their High Mightinesses to act in " Concert with the Queen." After this, the Earl summ'd up the Substance of his Discourse; pressing for " a speedy Resolution, whether that State was willing or " not, to sign the Peace jointly with Her Majesty, immediately, and without any " Delay; for otherwise Her Majesty would be oblig'd to sign her Peace, without " waiting for them to come into it, any longer than a Fortnight, or Three Weeks at " farthest. That Her Majesty, assuring her self that the States would not delay to " conclude the Peace with Her, would procure Tournay for them; which, with ma- " ny other Places, were not to be expected from France, if the Queen should sign " her Peace separately. That Her Majesty had endeavour'd to prevail with France, " to yield up Condé; but that her Efforts had proved ineffectual. That as to the " Empire, there would be no Alteration in what was contain'd in the Queen's " Speech relating thereto; nor in any Thing with respect to the Emperor, only " that Sardinia should be given to the Elector of Bavaria, and that the Duke of " Savoy should have Sicily. That Her Majesty was very desirous to have the Con- " currence of the States, in all that related to that Duke, as well as to the Elector " of Bavaria; and to oblige the Emperor to consent to the Neutrality of Italy, " and to withdraw his Troops from Catalonia. That she farther desir'd, That the " Plenipotentiaries of the States at Utrecht, might be furniſh'd with full Powers, to " conclude forthwith the New Treaty of Barrier. And that, above all, Her Ma- " jeſty requir'd their High Mightineſſes ſpeedy and poſitive Reſolution and Anſwer, " for bringing this great Negotiation to an End, ſettling a good and firm Peace, " and renewing a perpetual Friendſhip and Union between Her Majeſty's King- " doms and that State." In Concluſion, the Earl of Strafford gave into the Hands of the Regiſter Fagel, " a Copy of the Project of the New Treaty of Succeſſion and " Barrier, mention'd in his Propoſitions; ſaying, That tho' he was commanded to " communicate it jointly with the Lord Biſhop of Briſtol, to their High Mighti- " neſſes Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, yet he was willing to deliver it there; that " thereby Time might be ſav'd, and that their High Mightineſſes might the ſooner " give Inſtructions to their Plenipotentiaries thereupon.

The United Provinces variouſly affected by the E. of Strafford's Propoſals.

A Report of this important Conference having been laid before the States-General, their High Mightineſſes reſolv'd forthwith to communicate the Plan of Peace to the States of the reſpective Provinces: Which being done accordingly, the Members of thoſe Aſſemblies were variouſly affected by the Earl of Strafford's New Overtures; but all were equally perplex'd, what to do in this critical Juncture. The States of Holland having met on the 14th of December N. S. there appear'd to be a general Diſpoſition to reject the New Plan: And tho' ſome Members urg'd the Neceſſity of putting an End to this bloody and expenſive War; yet Monſieur de Duyvenvoorde, of the Body of the Nobility, ſpoke with that Vehemence, againſt ſuch a Peace as was now propos'd, that he drew many to his Opinion of adhering to the Plan, which the States-General had, ſome Time before, tranſmitted to the Court of Great Britain: But the Majority thought fit to proceed with the utmoſt Caution in ſo arduous an Affair; and to defer their final Reſolution, till they had receiv'd new Inſtructions from the reſpective Towns. In the mean Time, Count Zinzendorf diſpatch'd an Expreſs to the Imperial Court, with an Account of what paſs'd at the Hague; and, on the other hand, the Earl of Strafford repair'd, the 15th of December N. S. to Utrecht, where, the next Day, together with the Lord Privy-Seal, he was in Conference at the Baron de Randwick's, with Meſſieurs Buys, Vanderduſſen, de Renſwoude, and Goſlinga; and it was obſerv'd, that there appear'd to be a greater Intimacy than before, between the Earl and Monſieur Buys, Penſionary of Amſterdam.

The E. of Strafford's Negotiation at Utrecht.

On the 18th, Meſſieurs Buys, Vanderduſſen, de Renſwoude, and Goſlinga, went to the Hague; and the Earl of Strafford ſet out the ſame Morning, incognito, for Amſterdam, where he had ſeveral ſucceſsful Conferences with the leading Magiſtrates of that great and wealthy City; whoſe Reſolutions are generally follow'd by the States of the Province of Holland, as the latter's are by the States-General. This Journey gave no ſmall Umbrage to the Imperial Miniſters; and, on the other hand, the Lord Privy-Seal acted his Part ſo well at Utrecht, that, on the 19th of December, the States of that Province came to an unanimous Reſolution, " That " their Deputies at the Hague ſhould be directed to conſent, on their Part, to the " Plan of Peace lately propos'd; and likewiſe to the New Project of a Treaty for " ſecuring the Proteſtant Succeſſion to the Crown of Great Britain, and preſerving " a good and ſufficient Barrier in the Spaniſh Netherlands: As alſo, that the ſaid " Deputies ſhould be inſtructed to declare, in the moſt ſolemn and reſpectful " manner, the deep Senſe that Province ſhould always have of the Queen of Great " Britain's great Goodneſs to them, and her generous Care of their Intereſts." It was the 29th of December N. S. before the States of Holland and Weſt Friezland came to a Reſolution about the New Plan of Peace; by which Time, the other Provinces had tranſmitted their ſeveral Opinions to the States-General, on the ſame Subject. All of them were unanimous in one Point; viz. to come into the Queen of Great Britain's Meaſures; but then, every Province (that of Utrecht only excepted) gave her Conſent with ſome Reſtrictions: Some of them inſiſting to have Condé either yielded to the States, or at leaſt demoliſh'd; others, upon ſome other Terms in relation to the Barrier, or Commerce; and all, in general, upon the Ceſſion of the Upper Gelderland to their Republick: Upon which, the States-General wrote, that * very Night, a very reſpectful and affectionate Letter to the Queen.

The States of Utrecht conſent to the new Plan.

Propoſition of the Miniſters of the Four aſſociated Circles to the Britiſh Miniſters.

On the other hand, the Plenipotentiaries of the Four aſſociated Circles of Germany, did, the ſame Day, lay a Propoſition before the Britiſh Miniſters at Utrecht, wherein they repreſented, " That they enter'd into the Grand Alliance, upon an " Invitation from the late King William, by a ſolemn Treaty concluded at Nordlin- " gen, and afterwards ratify'd by the preſent Queen of Great Britain. That the Cir- " cles had, on their Part, punctually perform'd all the Conditions of that Treaty; " and had born all the Calamities of ſo bloody and ruinous a War, at their own Ex-

" pence, without troubling her Majeſty for one Penny Subſidy; with an intire Con" fidence, that as ſhe always declared her Satisfaction with the Firmneſs and Con" duct of the Circles, her Majeſty would not fail remembring the good Services
" they did the Publick, and that they ſhould reap the Fruits of their Labours,
" Sufferings and Expences; but that, notwithſtanding her Majeſty's gracious Aſſu-
" rances, they heard with Grief, that ſhe perſiſted in the Opinion, that an univer-
" ſal Peace might be made, without the Circles enjoying the leaſt Comfort or Ef" fect of their Alliance; no Amends, no Barrier, no Security; which would bring
" the utmoſt Deſolation upon the Circles, and leave a fatal Remembrance to Poſte-
" rity. Wherefore they made their Addreſſes to the Juſtice and Goodneſs of her
" Majeſty, to the Wiſdom and Equity of her Miniſters, and to the Generoſity and " Honour of the whole Engliſh Nation, not to abandon ſo good and faithful Allies,
" nor leave them in the miſerable Condition in which they had been plunged by " former Treaties. To this Repreſentation the Britiſh Miniſters wiſely anſwer'd, That the aſſociated Circles did not obtain all they deſired, and her Majeſty could wiſh them, the Blame was, by no means, to be laid at Her Door; firſt, becauſe during the War, the Empire had very much neglected the Proſecution of it on that Side; and the Emperor, and other Princes and States, had been very deficient in furniſhing their reſpective Quotas of Troops, and other Neceſſaries; which, if they had done, the War had been long ſince at an End, and they in Poſſeſſion of that which was now impoſſible to obtain: But that they had left the whole Burden of the War to fall upon her Majeſty, and the States General in Flanders; the getting whoſe Money, by exorbitant Bargains for their Troops, they ſeem'd to have more at Heart, than the providing their Contingents for their own Army. That, be-ſides their Negligence and Remiſneſs in the Proſecution of the War, the Oppoſition they had made to her Majeſty's Meaſures for Peace, had put it out of her Power to ſerve them.
That when a Ceſſation of Arms was found neceſſary, they were told from her Majeſty, that if they would enter into it, the Allies being united in their Councils, might have obtain'd from the Enemy any Thing they could reaſonably have inſiſted on; but that they rejected that Propoſal, and deſerted her Majeſty, to follow Prince Eugene's Chimerical Projects, which had already been, and might prove more fatal to the Common Cauſe, if they did not prevent another Campaign, by reaſonable Propoſals of Peace. That her Majeſty's Caſe was, therefore, very hard, that while ſhe proſecuted the War with the utmoſt Vigor, ſome of the Allies acted with almoſt as much Coldneſs and Indifference, as if they had been in Peace, or had no Concern in the War: And when ſhe found a Peace neceſſary, they ſhould then only begin to think of War: And, after all, when by this unaccountable way of acting, they had brought themſelves into inextricable Difficulties, they ſhould cry out, that they were deſerted, and endeavour to throw the Odium and Blame of it upon Her. But that, nevertheleſs, ſhe would ſtill do for the Four Circles, as well as for the reſt of her Allies, all that ſhe was obliged to by Treaty, and whatever more they had, by their Conduct, left in her Power.
Both from this Anſwer, and the late Steps of the States General, it was generally believed, that the Negotiations at Utrecht would ſpeedily be brought to a Concluſion; but ſome unforeſeen Difficulties ſtarted by the Court of France, made it neceſſary to renew the Ceſſation of Arms for Four Months longer; which was, accordingly, done by an Agreement ſigned at London, the 26th of November, and at Verſailles, the 14th of December, N. S. The Marquis de Monteleone, appointed by King Philip, to be one of his Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, being, about this Time, come † to London, and the Queen return'd ‖ from Windſor to St. James's, he had ∴ a private Audience of her Majeſty, wherein he told her, That the Catholick King, his Maſter, had ſent him to return her Majeſty a Thouſand Thanks for the great Pains ſhe had been pleaſed to take to procure Peace to Europe. And that the whole Spaniſh Nation, in particular, owed their Lives to her Majeſty: For, had the War continued, there was not one true Spaniard, who would not have ſpent the laſt drop of his Blood in his Maſter's Quarrel. The Queen thank'd her Brother, the King of Spain, for this Compliment; and ſaid, " ſhe thought her ſelf very happy in being able to contribute to the Safety " of ſo brave a Nation, and ſo loyal a People.

But notwithſtanding the forward Steps the Queen and her Miniſters made, at this Juncture, in favour of the Catholick King, yet Hiſtory muſt in Juſtice record their great Care of the Proteſtant Intereſt. For Her Majeſty being inform'd, that the Electoral Prince of Saxony was expected at Rome, in order to make there publick Profeſſion of the Popiſh Religion, She renew'd her earneſt Sollicitations with King Auguſtus, to ingage him to recal his Son from Italy, and to diſmiſs the Romiſh Servants about him: And, to render her pious Interpoſition more effectual, her Majeſty invited the King of Pruſſia, the States General, and the Elector of Hanover, to join their Efforts with hers, to perſuade his Poliſh Majeſty not to induce his Son to change his Religion. But all the Endeavours uſed by her Majeſty, and the other Proteſtant Powers, were baffled, by the powerful Allurement with which the Roman Catho-

Negotiations at Utrecht.

The Expreſs Count Zinzendorf had diſpatch'd to Vienna, with the Queen of Great Britain's laſt Plan of Peace, being come back to Utrecht on the 3d of January, N. S. the Emperor's Plenipotentiaries had, on the 5th, in the Morning, at their own Deſire, a long Conference with thoſe of Great Britain, in which they declar'd, that their Maſter was very well diſpos'd to promote a General Peace; and in the Evening, the ſame Miniſters met thoſe of the States, and acquainted them likewiſe with his Imperial Majeſty's Intentions. The Ratifications of a Treaty for a Suſpenſion of Arms between France and Spain, on one Side, and Portugal on the other, were, the next Morning, exchang'd, having before been deliver'd into the Hands of the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries, who, long before this Time, had little elſe to do in the Congreſs, than to act as Mediators. In this Capacity, their Excellencies had, on the 8th, a long Conference with the Plenipotentiaries of France, at the Earl of Strafford's Houſe, in which their Lordſhips declar'd to them the Draught of a Project for bringing the Empreſs home from Barcelona, and withdrawing the Imperial Troops out of Catalonia. The 9th, the Miniſters of the Allies met in the Townhouſe, as uſual, after which, the Plenipotentiaries of the States General had a particular Conference with thoſe of Great Britain. The ſame Day began the Entertainments prepar'd by Count de Tarouca, and Don Louis Dachuna, Plenipotentiaries of Portugal, to celebrate the Birth of the Prince of Brazil, and continued the 10th and 11th, during which Time, all Buſineſs was laid aſide. Beſides the Feaſtings, there were Comedies and Balls, with ſuch a Magnificence and Elegance, as ſurpaſs'd all that ever was done by the Miniſters of the greateſt Potentates, on the like Occaſions. The Number of Miniſters preſent at theſe Rejoycings, was about Fifty, beſides a great many private Gentlemen, and Ladies of all Nations, among whom great Marks of Diſtinction were ſhew'd to the Britiſh.

The Britiſh Miniſters act as Mediators.

Magnificent Rejoycings made by the Portugueze Miniſters.

On the 15th of January, Count Zinzendorf had a long Conference with the Portugueze Miniſters, about the Terms of Peace offer'd by France to that Crown, which the Emperor did not intirely approve. The next Day, the Miniſters of the Allies met in the Town-Houſe, as uſual; and in the Evening, the Plenipotentiaries of France were in Conference with thoſe of Great Britain. Monſieur Mareſchal de Bieberſtein arriving at Utrecht the 17th, in the Morning, from the Court of Berlin, had a long Conference with the Earl of Strafford, by particular Orders from the King his Maſter. The ſame Morning, the Miniſters of France were in Conference with thoſe of Great Britain; and, the next * Day, Monſieur Buys, one of the Dutch Plenipotentiaries, was alſo with their Lordſhips, by whoſe Interpoſition, the Difference between Monſieur Meſnager and Count de Rechteren was brought to a fair way of being accommodated, in order to the reſuming of the General Conferences. The ſame Day there was a Conſultation at the Biſhop of Briſtol's Houſe, between the Proteſtant Miniſters, about the Abolition of the Clauſe relating to Religion in the Fourth Article of the Treaty of Ryſwick, and the Meaſures to be taken, that the Proteſtants in Sileſia and Hungary might, for the future, enjoy intire Liberty of Conſcience. The Miniſters of Great Britain preſs'd this Affair more earneſtly than all the reſt; and exclaim'd againſt the Imperial Court, for perſecuting the Proteſtants of the Empire, and of Hungary: But they ſpoke in a leſs vehement Stile, of the Perſecutions which the Proteſtants had ſuffer'd in France. The ſame Afternoon the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries conferr'd with thoſe of France; and ſoon after with the Imperial Miniſters, who ſeem'd, at laſt, inclin'd to come into the Queen's Meaſures for procuring a General Peace. In order to that, Count Zinzendorf had drawn up ſome Propoſals for ſetting on Foot a Negotiation between the Imperial and French Miniſters, which their Lordſhips deliver'd to the latter, on the 21ſt, in a Meeting at the Lord Privy-Seal's Houſe; and, the next Day, acquainted that Count, and Baron Kirchner, how far they had proceeded in that Affair. The 23d, the Miniſters of the Allies met in the Town-Houſe, as uſual; and in the Evening, the Plenipotentiaries of Pruſſia had a long Conference with the Britiſh Miniſters, in which they expreſs'd their Maſter's Inclination to conclude a Peace, whenever her Britannick Majeſty ſhould think fit. On the other hand, the Miniſters of Savoy return'd Thanks to the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries, on the behalf of his Royal Highneſs, for the great Care that had been taken of his Intereſts; and gave Aſſurances, that they were ready to concur in whatever Steps the Queen of Great Britain ſhould judge proper, for the bringing the Peace to a happy Concluſion.

* Jan. 18. N. S. Conference about the Proteſtant Intereſt.

The Emperor, King of Pruſſia, and Duke of Savoy, come at laſt into the Queen's Meaſures.

All this while, the Miniſters of the Proteſtant Potentates continued their private Conſultations, about the Abolition of the Clauſe relating to Religion, inſerted in the Fourth Article of the Treaty of Ryſwick; and were very preſſing with the Roman

Catholick Miniſters on that Affair: But the Imperial and French Plenipotentiaries, (agreed, perhaps, in this Point only) found Means to draw it into Length, referring it reciprocally, from the one to the other. The firſt pretended, 'twas the French foyſted that Clauſe into the Treaty of Ryſwick, and therefore ought to get it aboliſh'd; to which the French anſwer'd, "That it being an Affair that "concern'd the Empire, 'twas the Buſineſs of the Imperialiſts to look after it. The Roman Catholick Miniſters of the Empire having demanded that the Proteſtants ſhould, by a Deputation, communicate to them the Reſolution they had taken about that Affair, the Counts Wertheren and Meternich, were accordingly pitch'd upon, to repreſent to them the Juſtice of aboliſhing that Clauſe, and put them in mind of the Diſputes, Jealouſies, and other ill Conſequences it had been attended with in the Empire. Hereupon Count Zinzendorf ſignified, that he was ready to return them an Anſwer on the Part of the Emperor, and a Meeting being held for that Purpoſe, on the 25th of January, his Excellency aſſur'd them, "That his Maſter did not in- "tend to oppoſe the Abolition of the ſaid Clauſe, but that he would acquieſce in the "Relief that ſhould be given to the Proteſtants in a general Treaty of Peace. The ſame Day, the Queen of Great Britain's Anſwer to the Letter of the States General, arriv'd at the Hague; but being directed to her Majeſty's Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, it was not brought to the Aſſembly of their High-Mightineſſes, 'till the next Day, when it was read there, and alſo in the Aſſembly of the States of the Province of Holland, being to this Effect: A. D. 1713.

High and Mighty Lords, our Good Allies, Friends and Confederates.

The Queen's Anſwer to the Letter of the States General.

"BY the real and ſolid Proofs we have given, of our Friendſhip for your State, "by the continued Efforts we have made to defeat the Intrigues of thoſe, "who, either through private Paſſion, or Intereſt, have endeavour'd to divide you "from us: And laſtly, by the Grief we have been affected with, when any At- "tempt has been made to break the good Intelligence that was between us and "your Republick, it will be eaſy for you to judge of the Satisfaction which your "Letter of the 29th paſt, has given us.

"Our Conduct has ever run upon the conſtant Principle of a ſincere deſire of pre- "ſerving the Balance of Europe; and to procure, not only the Safety, but alſo the "Augmentation of your State; and has been the principal Motive that has induc'd "us to carry on ſo long and ſo burthenſome a War, as that which we hop'd to be "near extricating our ſelves from, when by the Events which the Wiſdom of a "Divine overruling Providence has brought about, we thought it moſt proper to "hearken to the Overtures made on the Part of France, for a General Peace. The "ſame Deſire inclin'd us, before all Things, to communicate our Deſign to you, "and to indeavour, in ſo critical a Conjuncture, to knit faſter, if poſſible, the Ties "of our Union.

"Therefore, the Aſſurances you have lately receiv'd from the Earl of Strafford, "and which have been ſo acceptable to you, are no more than a Repetition of "thoſe which the ſame Miniſter has given you, on ſo many other Occaſions, from "us. Theſe Aſſurances never have, nor will ever deceive you; ſince they pro- "ceed from the Heart of a true Friend, who places her own Intereſt, and "that of her Religion, in maintaining yours; and who is equally uncapable, "either of inviting you to Peace, or exciting you to War, upon any other "View.

"Your Reſolution to enter with us into new Ingagements about the Succeſſion "and Barrier, to make a new Treaty thereupon, and to conclude and ſign it before "the Peace, cannot but be attended with the beſt Conſequences: And when all Oc- "caſions of Diſpute, about the reciprocal Intereſts of the Two Nations, will be re- "mov'd, We ſhall then be in a Condition to concert with you the providing for "thoſe of our Allies, and to treat more effectually with the Potentates againſt "whom We have made War.

"The Seaſon of the Year, and the preſent Juncture of Affairs, (the Difficulties "of which are to be aſcrib'd to the Inaction, in which the Congreſs of Utrecht "has remain'd while the Armies acted in the Field) allows but very little Time "for the ſettling of ſuch Points, as are to be adjuſted before the Concluſion of the "Peace; wherefore our Miniſters have been inſtructed to propoſe to you the bare "Project of a new Treaty, which contains only Articles often diſcuſs'd, and about "which the Sentiments on both ſides are fully explain'd. As We thought the ſame "might have been accepted and approv'd without any Conteſts, 'tis for the "ſame Reaſon, that in the Anſwers which our Miniſters are order'd to give to the "Obſervations on that Plan of the Treaty of Succeſſion and Barrier, We have

The ſame Morning, the Miniſters of France were in Conference with thoſe of Great Britain; and, the next * Day, Monſieur Buys, one of the Dutch Plenipotentiaries, was alſo with their Lordſhips, by whoſe Interpoſition, the Difference between Monſieur Meſnager and Count de Rechteren was brought to a fair way of being accommodated, in order to the reſuming of the General Conferences. The ſame Day there was a Conſultation at the Biſhop of Briſtol's Houſe, between the Proteſtant Miniſters, about the Abolition of the Clauſe relating to Religion in the Fourth Article of the Treaty of Ryſwick, and the Meaſures to be taken, that the Proteſtants in Sileſia and Hungary might, for the future, enjoy intire Liberty of Conſcience. The Miniſters of Great Britain preſs'd this Affair more earneſtly than all the reſt; and exclaim'd againſt the Imperial Court, for perſecuting the Proteſtants of the Empire, and of Hungary: But they ſpoke in a leſs vehement Stile, of the Perſecutions which the Proteſtants had ſuffer'd in France. The ſame Afternoon the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries conferr'd with thoſe of France; and ſoon after with the Imperial Miniſters, who ſeem'd, at laſt, inclin'd to come into the Queen's Meaſures for procuring a General Peace. In order to that, Count Zinzendorf had drawn up ſome Propoſals for ſetting on Foot a Negotiation between the Imperial and French Miniſters, which their Lordſhips deliver'd to the latter, on the 21ſt, in a Meeting at the Lord Privy-Seal's Houſe; and, the next Day, acquainted that Count, and Baron Kirchner, how far they had proceeded in that Affair. The 23d, the Miniſters of the Allies met in the Town-Houſe, as uſual; and in the Evening, the Plenipotentiaries of Pruſſia had a long Conference with the Britiſh Miniſters, in which they expreſs'd their Maſter's Inclination to conclude a Peace, whenever her Britannick Majeſty ſhould think fit. On the other hand, the Miniſters of Savoy return'd Thanks to the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries, on the behalf of his Royal Highneſs, for the great Care that had been taken of his Intereſts; and gave Aſſurances, that they were ready to concur in whatever Steps the Queen of Great Britain ſhould judge proper, for the bringing the Peace to a happy Concluſion.

* Jan. 18. N. S. Conference about the Proteſtant Intereſt.

The Emperor, King of Pruſſia, and Duke of Savoy, come at laſt into the Queen's Meaſures.

All this while, the Miniſters of the Proteſtant Potentates continued their private Conſultations, about the Abolition of the Clauſe relating to Religion, inſerted in the Fourth Article of the Treaty of Ryſwick; and were very preſſing with the Roman

Catholick Miniſters on that Affair: But the Imperial and French Plenipotentiaries, (agreed, perhaps, in this Point only) found Means to draw it into Length, referring it reciprocally, from the one to the other. The firſt pretended, 'twas the French foyſted that Clauſe into the Treaty of Ryſwick, and therefore ought to get it aboliſh'd; to which the French anſwer'd, "That it being an Affair that "concern'd the Empire, 'twas the Buſineſs of the Imperialiſts to look after it. The Roman Catholick Miniſters of the Empire having demanded that the Proteſtants ſhould, by a Deputation, communicate to them the Reſolution they had taken about that Affair, the Counts Wertheren and Metternich, were accordingly pitch'd upon, to repreſent to them the Juſtice of aboliſhing that Clauſe, and put them in mind of the Diſputes, Jealouſies, and other ill Conſequences it had been attended with in the Empire. Hereupon Count Zinzendorf ſignified, that he was ready to return them an Anſwer on the Part of the Emperor, and a Meeting being held for that Purpoſe, on the 25th of January, his Excellency aſſur'd them, "That his Maſter did not in- "tend to oppoſe the Abolition of the ſaid Clauſe, but that he would acquieſce in the "Relief that ſhould be given to the Proteſtants in a general Treaty of Peace. The ſame Day, the Queen of Great Britain's Anſwer to the Letter of the States General, arriv'd at the Hague; but being directed to her Majeſty's Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, it was not brought to the Aſſembly of their High-Mightineſſes, 'till the next Day, when it was read there, and alſo in the Aſſembly of the States of the Province of Holland, being to this Effect: A. D. 1713.

High and Mighty Lords, our Good Allies, Friends and Confederates.

The Queen's Anſwer to the Letter of the States General.

"BY the real and ſolid Proofs we have given, of our Friendſhip for your State, "by the continued Efforts we have made to defeat the Intrigues of thoſe, "who, either through private Paſſion, or Intereſt, have endeavour'd to divide you "from us: And laſtly, by the Grief we have been affected with, when any At- "tempt has been made to break the good Intelligence that was between us and "your Republick, it will be eaſy for you to judge of the Satisfaction which your "Letter of the 29th paſt, has given us.

"Our Conduct has ever run upon the conſtant Principle of a ſincere deſire of pre- "ſerving the Balance of Europe; and to procure, not only the Safety, but alſo the "Augmentation of your State; and has been the principal Motive that has induc'd "us to carry on ſo long and ſo burthenſome a War, as that which we hop'd to be "near extricating our ſelves from, when by the Events which the Wiſdom of a "Divine overruling Providence has brought about, we thought it moſt proper to "hearken to the Overtures made on the Part of France, for a General Peace. The "ſame Deſire inclin'd us, before all Things, to communicate our Deſign to you, "and to indeavour, in ſo critical a Conjuncture, to knit faſter, if poſſible, the Ties "of our Union.

"Therefore, the Aſſurances you have lately receiv'd from the Earl of Strafford, "and which have been ſo acceptable to you, are no more than a Repetition of "thoſe which the ſame Miniſter has given you, on ſo many other Occaſions, from "us. Theſe Aſſurances never have, nor will ever deceive you; ſince they pro- "ceed from the Heart of a true Friend, who places her own Intereſt, and "that of her Religion, in maintaining yours; and who is equally incapable, "either of inviting you to Peace, or exciting you to War, upon any other "View.

"Your Reſolution to enter with us into new Ingagements about the Succeſſion "and Barrier, to make a new Treaty thereupon, and to conclude and ſign it before "the Peace, cannot but be attended with the beſt Conſequences: And when all Oc- "caſions of Diſpute, about the reciprocal Intereſts of the Two Nations, will be re- "mov'd, We ſhall then be in a Condition to concert with you the providing for "thoſe of our Allies, and to treat more effectually with the Potentates againſt "whom We have made War.

"The Seaſon of the Year, and the preſent Juncture of Affairs, (the Difficulties "of which are to be aſcrib'd to the Inaction, in which the Congreſs of Utrecht "has remain'd while the Armies acted in the Field) allows but very little Time "for the ſettling of ſuch Points, as are to be adjuſted before the Concluſion of the "Peace; wherefore our Miniſters have been inſtructed to propoſe to you the bare "Project of a new Treaty, which contains only Articles often diſcuſs'd, and about "which the Sentiments on both ſides are fully explain'd. As We thought the ſame "might have been accepted and approv'd without any Conteſts, 'tis for the "ſame Reaſon, that in the Anſwers which our Miniſters are order'd to give to the "Obſervations on that Plan of the Treaty of Succeſſion and Barrier, We have

" thought fit to refer to another Convention, all the Points which appear to us to " admit of too long a Diſcuſſion to be inſerted in this; with which we hope you " will be ſatisfy'd: For, as we do not doubt that you are ſincerely reſolv'd to enter- " tain, for the future, a perfect Intelligence, Friendſhip and Union with us, ſo you " need not queſtion but we ſhall uſe all our Endeavours to adjuſt what relates to " your Barrier, in the moſt reaſonable Manner, and moſt agreeable to your In- " tereſts.

" The Declaration you have lately made, that you are reſolv'd to join with us, to " enter into the Meaſures we have taken for a Peace, and to conclude and ſign it joint- " ly, and at the ſame Time with us, will, in ſome Meaſure, make Amends for the " Misfortunes that have been occaſion'd by the Diſunion of the Allies, and prevent " thoſe that were to be fear'd for the future.

" On our Part, We deſire you to be firmly perſuaded, that we have ever in our " Eye, the Example and wiſe Conduct of that GREAT QUEEN, our Predeceſſor, " who contributed ſo much to the Support of your Common-wealth, at the Time " when your brave Anceſtors laid the firſt Foundation of it: And that we look up- " on it as one of the greateſt Glories of our Reign, that we have not only imitated, " but even ſurpaſs'd whatever that Princeſs did for the Eſtabliſhment of your State, " and the Intereſt of your Power.

" This is what we ſhall continue to do; We ſhall take your Intereſts to " Heart, equally with our own; and we ſhall be ready to do all that lies in our " Power, to advance them; being ſorry that we are not in a Condition to ſupport both " yours, and thoſe of our common Allies, as effectually as we could have done the " laſt Spring. So we pray God to have you, High and Mighty Lords, our good Allies, " Friends and Confederates, in his Holy and Worthy Keeping. Done at our Court at " St. James's, the $\frac{18}{28}$th of January, $171\frac{2}{3}$.

ANNE REGINA.

This Letter very much quicken'd the Paces of the Negotiation; but, previous to the General Conferences, it was abſolutely neceſſary, that the Difference which had ſo long obſtructed them, ſhould be adjuſted; which, by the Mediation of the Britiſh Miniſters, was, at laſt, brought to paſs on the 29th of January, in this manner: Three of the Plenipotentiaries of the States, viz. Mr. Vanderduſſen, the Baron de Renſwoude, and Count de Knipbuyſen, went to the Mareſchal d' Huxelles's Houſe; where, in the Preſence of the Three Plenipotentiaries of France, they were to declare, that the Diſpute between Monſieur Meſnager and Count de Rechtereu, had happen'd without the Knowledge or Approbation of the States-General. But Monſieur Vanderduſſen, who was the Spokeſman, had ſcarce, with Gravity, pronounc'd theſe Words, Our Maſters, the States General, when the Mareſchal d' Huxelles interrupted him, and told him, " Sir, the King, my Maſter, is thoroughly perſuaded, " that Meſſieurs, the States General, had no Knowledge of Monſieur de Rechteren's " Behaviour; and that they have too much Reſpect for his Majeſty to approve it: After which he gave them a magnificent Entertainment. This Difficulty being thus happily remov'd, the Dutch Plenipotentiaries went the ſame Evening to the Lord Biſhop of Briſtol's Houſe, where they were in Conference with his Lordſhip, and the Lord Strafford, from Eleven of the Clock at Night, 'till between Four and Five in the Morning, when the new Treaty of Barrier and Succeſſion, was ſign'd by the Miniſters of Great Britain, and thoſe of the States General; and, about an Hour after, Mr. Harriſon was ſent over to England with it, for her Majeſty's Ratification, and Approbation of ſome Explanations that were inſerted by the Dutch Plenipotentiaries. The next * Day, the Emperor's Plenipotentiaries had, for the firſt Time, a private Conference with thoſe of France, at the Biſhop of Briſtol's Houſe, where an Agreement was propos'd concerning the tranſporting of the Empreſs, the Evacuation of Catalonia, and the Amneſty for the Catalans: So that all Things ſeem'd now to tend to a general Peace.

First Interview between the Imperial and French Miniſters. * Jan. 31. N. S.

On the 2d of February, N. S. the Plenipotentiaries of France and the States General, were together in Conference with thoſe of Great Britain. The next Morning the Imperial Miniſters were with their Lordſhips, in order to procure a ſecond Meeting with thoſe of France; and the ſame Afternoon, their Lordſhips had Three ſeveral Conferences with the Imperial, French and Dutch Miniſters. On the 4th, the Plenipotentiaries of France and Pruſſia met, for the firſt Time, at the Lord Privy-Seal's Houſe; and the following Days, the Miniſters of the Emperor, and the Queen of Great Britain, had ſeveral Conferences together, in which Count Zinzendorf communicated a Second Plan, which was ſaid to come very near the Contents of her Majeſty's Speech from the Throne. The 9th, in the Morning, the Plenipotentiaries of France were in Conference with thoſe of Portugal, and afterwards with the the Miniſters of Savoy, at the Houſe of the Lord Privy-Seal, who entertain'd them at Dinner: But the Negotiations were, for ſome Days, put to a Stand, by the ſudden Departure of the Abbot de Polignac, who, the Night between the 10th and 11th of February, ſet out for the Court of France, on pretence of his being lately nam'd Cardinal by the Pope, at the Recommendation, as was, at that Time, reported of the Chevalier de St. George. Before his Departure, he receiv'd from the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries, a Propoſal of the Emperor and Empire, importing, "That Catalonia "ſhould be evacuated, upon Condition that the Inhabitants had a full Pardon, and "a Confirmation of all their Privileges; that the Elector of Bavaria ſhould have "the Title of King, but not the Iſland of Sardinia, and that his Electorate (but "not the Upper Palatinate) ſhould be yielded to his Electoral Highneſs's Son; ſo "that he himſelf ſhould not ſet Foot in the Empite. That the Electorate of Ba"varia ſhould be the laſt of the Nine; that Landau ſhould remain to the Emperor; "and, in the laſt Place, that France ſhould demoliſh Saar-Louis, and ſeveral other Places: Which Monſieur de Polignac promis'd to lay before the King, his Maſter.

The Abbot de Polignac goes to France. He is nam'd Cardinal. Propoſals of the Emperor and Empire.

On the 14th of February, the Plenipotentiaries of Great Britain and France, had a long Conference at the Lord Privy-Seal's Houſe, where they din'd together, and afterwards thoſe of the States came in, upon which they continued the Conference 'till late in the Evening. The next Day, the French Miniſters were again with their Lordſhips, who, on the 17th of the ſame Month, celebrated the Queen's Birth-Day with great Magnificence. Moſt of the Miniſters, with their Ladies, the Engliſh Gentlemen, and other Perſons of Quality, din'd at the Lord Privy-Seal's Houſe: In the Evening, the Earl of Strafford gave a ſplendid Ball and Maſquerade, at which were preſent above Five Hundred Perſons of Diſtinction; who were afterwards entertain'd by his Excellency at Supper; and the Diverſions laſted 'till Five a-Clock in the Morning.

The Queen's Birth-Day celebrated at Utrecht.

The Plenipotentiaries of France had, almoſt from the beginning of the Negotiations, demanded Paſſports of the Dutch, for the Admiſſion of the Duke of Oſſuna, the Marquis de Monteleone, and the Count de Bergheyck to the Congreſs, as Plenipotentiaries of Philip the Fifth, King of Spain: Which the cautious Hollanders had ſtill declined to grant, for fear of diſobliging the Emperor, with whom it was their Intereſt to keep firmly united. But the Imperial Miniſters having, by this Time, conſented, in their Maſters Name, to the Evacuation of Catalonia, and Neutrality in Italy, which was a kind of a tacit Acknowledgment of King Philip's Title to the Crown of Spain and the Weſt-Indies, the States General, by the Mediation of the Britiſh Miniſters, were, at laſt, prevail'd with to grant the Paſſports. However, whether ſtill out of Regard to the Emperor, and in concert with his Miniſters, or for ſome other ſecret Reaſon, thoſe Paſſports were not, at firſt, drawn up in ſuch a Form, as the French Miniſters expected, and therefore they refus'd to receive them, unleſs they were alter'd: Which Buſineſs took up ſome Days. The Paſſports which the French Plenipotentiaries demanded alſo for the Electors of Cologn and Bavaria, were granted with leſs Difficulty, and deliver'd to them about the middle of March.

The Dutch grant Paſſports for the Plenipotentiaries of Spain, inſtead of the Plenipotentiaries of the King of Spain.

The Courier that was ſent to the French Court, being come back to Utrecht, the Negotiation for evacuating Catalonia, and for a Ceſſation of Arms in Italy, was, on the 19th of February, ſet again on Foot: And the Plenipotentiaries of Great Britain having that Day, conferr'd with thoſe of France, at the Mareſchal d' Huxelles's Houſe, Count Zinzendorf, and Baron Kirchner, the Imperial Miniſters, were, the next Day, in Conference with their Lordſhips, who went immediately after to the Miniſters of France. On the 21ſt, in the Afternoon, the Imperialiſts had a Conference with the French, in the Preſence of the Britiſh Miniſters; and, the ſame Morning, the Ratifications on both Sides, of the Treaty of Succeſſion and Barrier, were exchang'd, at the Lord Privy-Seal's Houſe. Two Days * after, the Imperial and French Plenipotentiaries conferr'd with thoſe of Great Britain; after which, the firſt diſpatch'd a Courier to their Court. On the 24th, the Imperial and French Miniſters, conferr'd, ſeparately, with the Britiſh; and afterwards the French and Pruſſians were with their Lordſhips, about the Intereſts of their reſpective Maſters. On the 27th, the Imperial and French Miniſters were again together in Conference, in the Preſence of the Britiſh, by whoſe good Offices and Mediation they, at laſt, agreed upon the Subject of evacuating Catalonia, and a Convention was order'd to be drawn up for that Purpoſe. On the 1ſt of March, the ſame Miniſters met again, and immediately after, the Imperialiſts diſpatch'd a Courier to Barcelona, as the French did likewiſe to their Court; and the Britiſh ſent another to the Duke of Shrewſbury at Paris. The next Morning, the Miniſters of the Duke of Savoy were in Conference with thoſe of the Queen; and in the Afternoon, the Plenipotentiaries of France and Savoy met, in the Preſence of their Lordſhips, and conferr'd about a Convention for the the Neutrality in Italy. The ſame Day, the Miniſters of Pruſſia receiv'd Advice, That their King, who, for ſome Time, had been indiſpos'd, but afterwards was thought to have been out of Danger, had a Relapſe on the 22d of February N. S. and on the 24th, at Night, his Diſtemper increas'd to ſuch a Degree, that, on the 25th, about Noon, he expir'd (with extraordinary Marks of Piety and Fortitude) as he was ſpeaking to the Prince Royal, and ſome of his Miniſters; having preſerv'd his Senſes to the very laſt. He was in the Fifty Sixth Year of his Age, the Twenty Fifth of his Government, as Elector of Brandenburgh, and the Thirteenth of his Reign, as King of Pruſſia; in which Dignities, he was ſucceeded by the Prince Royal, his only Son. Four Days before his Death, his Pruſſian Majeſty gave a ſignal Inſtance of his generous Compaſſion for the perſecuted Proteſtants of France, whom he recommended to the Queen of Great Britain's Protection, by a very moving, and affectionate * Letter.

* Dated Feb 21. N. S. and ſign'd by Order of the King, on his Death-Bed.

But, by this Time, the Britiſh Court had brought Things to ſuch a Paſs, that, inſtead of being in a Condition to obtain Favours from the French, the latter began to cavil and chicane, and endeavour'd to elude the Promiſes and Ingagements they were under, in the moſt eſſential Articles relating to Great Britain. The Two great Points in Diſpute, were concerning the Fiſhery at Newfoundland, and in what manner the Ceſſion of Cape Breton was to be made; the other, about the Treaty of Commerce. As to the firſt, the Duke of Shrewſbury was inſtructed to propoſe, as the Queen's laſt Reſolution, "That ſhe would conſent to yield up to the French King, "the entire Poſſeſſion and Propriety of the Iſland of Cape Breton; but with this expreſs Condition, That his Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty ſhould relinquiſh to Her Majeſty, "all manner of Right to Fiſhing, and drying of Fiſh, on the Coaſt of Newfound-"land, or any Part, reſerv'd to his Subjects by the Articles ſign'd at London, the "27th of September O. S. 1711." But the French inſiſting on a Right of Fiſhing on that Coaſt, from Point Roche to Cape Bonaviſta; that valuable Privilege was, at laſt, given up upon a very ſlender Conſideration. As to Commerce, it had been agreed between M. de Torcy and Lord Bolingbroke, That France and Great Britain ſhould grant to the Subjects of each Crown reciprocally, the ſame Privileges and Advantages, which either of them ſhould grant to the Subjects of any Nation whatſoever: And, purſuant to this Principle of treating, and being treated, as Gens amiciſſima, the Tariff of 1664, which was granted to Holland, (Four Species of Merchandize only excepted) was likewiſe granted to England, by the Eighth and Tenth Articles of the Treaty of Commerce. But France pretending now that this Tariff would be too beneficial, refus'd to grant it to the Engliſh, until another Tariff ſhould be made in Britain, exactly conformable to that of 1664; whereby the Engliſh Duties ſhould be reduc'd as low, as theirs were in France by that Tariff. This Proceeding the Lord Bolingbroke (as inclin'd as he was to favour France) could not forbear † calling an open Violation of Faith; by which the French were removing a Corner-Stone, laid early in the Foundation of a Building brought almoſt to Perfection; the Fall whereof muſt prove, at laſt, of as fatal Conſequence to them, as to us. Hereupon, his Lordſhip bethought himſelf of an Expedient, which, in his Opinion, was to ſolve all Difficulties; and ſo directed the Duke of Shrewſbury, to "propoſe to the "French Miniſters, to ſtrike out of the Project of the Treaty of Commerce the Ninth "and Tenth Articles, and, inſtead thereof, to inſert one to the Effect of that "which he had drawn:" Which the French having readily agreed to, made the Ninth Article of the Treaty, that was afterwards rejected by Parliament, and univerſally condemn'd; but which was the only Price, for which the Engliſh Miniſters ſold to France the Fiſhery of Newfoundland. The Truth is, this Treatment of France gave them the greateſt Uneaſineſs; but their (a) Apprehenſions, leſt the Circumſtances

The French endeavour to elude their Ingagements relating to Great Britain.

(a) In a Letter dated January the 19th, $17\frac{12}{13}$, the Lord Bolingbroke ſays to Mr. Prior, "I have "exhauſted all my Stock of Arguments, in the long Letter, which, by the Queen's Order, I "writ to the Duke of Shrewsbury: To you, I can only add, We ſtand, indeed, upon the Brink "of a Precipice; but the French ſtand there too. Pray, tell Mr. de Torcy from me, that he may "get Robin and Harry hang'd; but Affairs will ſoon run back into ſo much Confuſion, that he "will wiſh us alive again. To ſpeak ſeriouſly; unleſs the Queen can talk of her Intereſts as "determin'd with France; and unleſs your Court will keep our Allies in the wrong, as they are "ſufficiently at this Time, I foreſee inextricable Difficulties.

"My Scheme is this: Let France ſatisfy the Queen, and let the Queen immediately declare "to her Parliament, and in the Congreſs, that ſhe is ready to ſign. At the ſame Time, let the "French Plenipotentiaries ſhew a Diſpoſition to conclude with all the Allies." And then his Lordſhip enumerates the ſeveral Offers, which he would have France make to the ſeveral Allies; which, tho' very general and inſufficient, his Lordſhip ſays, "if ſuch Overtures as theſe (made "to the Allies) were not inſtantly accepted, our Separate Peace would, ſitting the Parliament, "be cumſtances they were in ſhould be known, far exceeded their Concern at the Diſappointment Great Britain was like to meet with. They had ſign'd a Separate Treaty with France, in September 1711, upon this ſingle Principle, that the Intereſts of Great Britain were in the firſt Place to be adjuſted; and, as long as they had this to ſay, they were unconcern'd at all other Events. But tho' they had gone on for Fifteen Months together, and acted in every Thing as the Inſtruments of France, yet they were, at laſt, in danger of being diſavow'd by France, in the moſt eſſential Part of all their Treaty. A. D. 17$\frac{12}{13}$.

One of the chief Inducements, and principal Conditions, upon which the fatal Ceſſation of Arms was granted, was, That no Privileges, or Advantages, relating to Commerce with France, ſhould be yielded to any Foreign Nation, which ſhould not, at the ſame Time, be granted to the Subjects of Her Britannick Majeſty: But France having now reap'd the full Benefit of the Suſpenſion, was at Liberty to diſpute the Principle before agreed on; ſo that, in order to extricate themſelves, the Britiſh Miniſters were obliged to give up all Points in Diſpute in North America. However, being ſtill in doubt, whether France would be brought to a Compliance, even upon theſe Conditions; the Duke of Shrewſbury was * inſtructed to repreſent to M. de Torcy, "how ſmoothly every Thing would glide along, if "the Queen was able to ſpeak of her own Intereſts as abſolutely determin'd with "France; and, on the other hand, what Travails they (the Engliſh Miniſters) "ſhould be expoſed to, and what Confuſion might ariſe, if their Negotiation ap"pear'd to be ſtill open, and if the Secret came to be divulg'd, that France re"fus'd to make good in the Treaty, the full Effect of former Promiſes to the "Queen. * Jan. 19. O. S.

The Difficulties relating to North America, and Commerce, being over, France was wholly intent upon Concluding, and Signing with Great Britain, without taking in the reſt of the Allies; in which they had the good Fortune to have the Concurrence of the Court at St. James's: For tho' the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries had complain'd to the Lord Bolingbroke, "That the French appear'd ſo very uncom"plying, in every Point debated, and ſo very poſitive in their Refuſal of many "Things, which the Dutch took to be granted and ſettled, (as well by Her Ma"jeſty's Speech, as the Declarations lately made by the Earl of Strafford) that the "Diſappointment they met with, put them in the greateſt Conſternation;" yet Orders were * ſent them, by Mr. St. John, Brother to the Lord Bolingbroke, to conclude and ſign with France, as ſoon as the Duke of Shrewſbury ſhould ſend them Advice, that the Propoſitions he was to make at the French Court were accepted: And, not many † Days after, his Lordſhip, with the utmoſt Joy, acquainted their Excellencies, "That he had received from the Duke of Shrewſbury the expected "Returns; and therefore, he renew'd the Inſtructions diſpatch'd by his Brother, "to ſign Her Majeſty's Peace, without further Delay." The Court of France, being acquainted with theſe good Diſpoſitions, thought it high Time to comply with the Duke of Shrewſbury's laſt Demand, That the Dukes of Berry and Orleans ſhould make a ſolemn Renunciation to the Crown of Spain, in the Parliament of Paris, in the like manner as Philip V. had renounc'd the Crown of France, in the Cortez of Spain. * Feb. 21. O. S. † Feb. 28. O. S.

The 15th of March N. S. being pitch'd upon for that Solemnity, the Duke of Berry went to the Palace, (or Parliament-Houſe) accompany'd by the Duke of Orleans; The D. of Berry and Orleans renounce the Crown of Spain, March 15. N. S.

"be addreſs'd for, made, and approv'd; and the Cauſe of France, for once, become popular in "Britain.

"If they were accepted, let Monſieur de Torcy ſit down and conſider, what a Bargain would be "made for France: Let him remember his Journey to the Hague, and compare the Plans of 1709, "and 1712.

"Monſieur de Torcy has a Confidence in you: Make uſe of it once for all, upon this Occa"ſion; and convince him thoroughly, that we muſt give a different Turn to our Parliament and "our People, according to their Reſolution at this Criſis.

The next Letter from his Lordſhip to Mr. Prior, dated Jan. 22. O. S. is upon the ſame Subject, and of the ſame Strain: "We are now, ſays his Lordſhip, at the true Criſis of our Diſ"eaſe; We dye at once, or recover at once. Let France depart from that ſhameful Expedient, "by which they thought to bubble us out of the Advantages which they had ſolemnly yielded, "and all is well; otherwiſe, by G---, both They and We are undone.

leans; and having heard Maſs in the Holy Chapel, Two Preſidents au Mortier, and Two Counſellors, appointed by the Parliament to receive them, conducted them to the Great Chamber; where the Duke of Berry took his Place; as did, afterwards, the Duke of Orleans, the Duke d' Anguien, the Prince of Conty, the Duke du Maine, and the Count de Toulouſe. The Eccleſiaſtical Peers preſent, were, the Archbiſhop, Duke of Rheims; the Biſhop, Duke of Laon; the Biſhop, Duke of Langres; the Biſhop, Count of Chalons; and the Biſhop, Count of Noyon. The other Peers were, the Dukes of la Tremouille, Sully, Richelieu, St. Simon, la Force, Rohan, Eſtrées, la Meilleraye, Villeroy, St. Aignan, Treſmes; the Biſhop of Metz, Dukes of Coaſlin, Villars, Berwick, Antin, and Chaulnes. The Matter to be tranſacted, was, the Regiſtring the Letters Patents, given by the King, on the Renunciation of the King of Spain to the Rights by his Birth, and thoſe of his Deſcendants, to the Crown of France; as alſo, the Renunciations of the Dukes of Berry and Orleans to their Rights, and thoſe of their Deſcendants, to the Crown of Spain; and likewiſe, the eraſing out of the Regiſters of the Parliament, the Letters, by which the Rights of the King of Spain to the Crown of France were preſerv'd, when he ſet out for Madrid. The Sieur de Meſmes, Firſt Preſident, having explain'd the King's Intentions; the Sieur Joly de Fleury, Advocate General, preſented the Letters Patents of his Majeſty; which were read, as were alſo the other Acts thereto annex'd. The Arret, or Decree for regiſtring, was afterwards pronounc'd by the Firſt Preſident, according to the Concluſion, or Motion of the Attorney-General: And ſo ended that Piece of Formality; at which the Duke of Shrewſbury and Mr. Prior aſſiſted as Witneſſes, in the Quality of the Queen of Great Britain's Plenipotentiaries; as did alſo the Duke d' Oſſuna, on the Part of King Philip, and a great many other Perſons of Diſtinction.

In the mean while, the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, being, by this Time, willing to retrieve the too forward Steps that had been made in the Negotiation, were indefatigably imploy'd in managing Conferences between the Miniſters of France and thoſe of the Allies, particularly the Imperial and the Dutch. But, before we proceed, we muſt obſerve, that the favourable Turn, which, towards the End of the Year 1712, attended the Swediſh Affairs, both in the North of Germany, and in Turkey, as it portended new Broils and Dangers to the Empire, and made the States-General and the Emperor very uneaſy, ſo was it, no doubt, a powerful Motive to incline their High Mightineſſes, and the Court of Vienna, to take the Steps before-mention'd, in Compliance with the Deſires of the Queen of Great Britain.

Affairs of the North of Germany.

The Muſcovites, Danes, and Saxons, who miſcarry'd in their Deſign to reduce Pomerania, in the Year 1711, ſeem'd confident to have taken ſuch right Meaſures in 1712, as to be able to drive the Swedes from their Territories on this ſide the Baltick; but their not going into the Field ſo ſoon as they intended, prov'd the moſt probable Cauſe of their Diſappointment. The Muſcovites and Saxons had taken upon them to conquer Pomerania; but, thro' the Miſunderſtanding of their Generals, (ſome being for the Siege of Stralſund, others of Stetin, and others, again, for the Attack of the Iſle of Rugen) the whole Campaign was ſpent in fruitleſs Debates and Conſultations; and all that the Czar and King Auguſtus could do at laſt, was, to quarter their Troops in that Country, as they had done the Year before, in order to keep the Swedes at Bay.

Fruitleſs Conſultations between the Muſcovites and Saxons.

The King of Denmark takes Staden.

The King of Denmark made better Uſe of the fair Seaſon: For, he beſieg'd and took Staden, and thereby reduc'd the Dutchy of Bremen: After which, upon ſlight Pretenſions, he oblig'd the City of Hamburgh to pay him Three Hundred Thouſand Crowns, which prov'd a ſeaſonable Supply to ſubſiſt his Troops. The Northern Allies ſeeming contented with theſe Succeſſes, had ſent their Troops into Quarters, when an unexpected Motion of the Swedes obliged them, once more, to take the Field. Count Steenbock, who, ſome Time before, was arriv'd in the Iſland of Rugen, being ſenſible of the Impoſſibility of ſubſiſting his Forces in the narrow Compaſs of Land he was poſſeſs'd of, reſolv'd to look for Quarters in the Country of Mecklenburgh; and, notwithſtanding the Precautions the Northern Allies uſed to baffle his Deſign, he ſucceeded in it, without the Loſs of one Man; forcing the Enemy to quit Roſtock, and ſeveral other Places in the Dutchy of Mecklenburgh, wherein he quarter'd his Forces. Hereupon, the Northern Confederates reſolv'd to draw their Forces from their Lines, in order to oblige the Swediſh General to return into Pomerania, where they knew he could not maintain his Army: But when 'twas generally expected that both Armies were ready to engage, a Ceſſation of Arms for Fifteen Days, was, on a ſudden, agreed on between the Poliſh and Swediſh Generals, which occaſion'd abundance of Speculations. This Suſpenſion expiring the 15th of December, N. S. the Troops were all again in Motion. The King of Denmark, who all this while appear'd againſt the Truce, march'd Five Days

Days * before from Holſtein, towards Mecklenburgh, in order to join his Allies, and endeavour to fight the Swedes; but Count Steenbock, with great Foreſight, reſolv'd to prevent, and engage the Danes, before they were reinforc'd; which he did on the 29th of December, N. S. near Gadeſbuſh, where the Daniſh Troops, and ſome Saxon Cavalry, receiv'd almoſt a total Defeat. The victorious Swediſh General was not wanting in improving this Succeſs: And entring Holſtein, not only rais'd great Contributions, but, in a barbarous Manner, and upon frivolous Pretences, burnt the Daniſh open Town of Altena, near Hamburgh. Things being in this Condition, it was the general Opinion, that the Czar would ſoon have been obliged to quit Holſtein, and return into his own Dominions, in order to make Preparations againſt an Enemy nearer Home; the Turks, who had, ſome Months before, confirm'd the Peace concluded with his Czariſh Majeſty in Moldavia, having in November, been prevail'd upon to declare War againſt him; upon Pretence that he had not perform'd one of the moſt eſſential Articles of the Treaty, viz. the withdrawing of his Forces from the Territories of Poland. This new Rupture was attended with the Diſgrace of the Grand Vizier, who was the Third Turkiſh Miniſter of that Rank, who fell a Sacrifice to the Intrigues of the King of Sweden, and of thoſe who ſupported his Intereſt at the Ottoman Port: But, by a Viciſſitude not uncommon in human Affairs, this unforeſeen and ſudden Proſperity of the King of Sweden, was ſoon after follow'd by as unexpected and ſudden a Cataſtrophe.

The Turks declare War againſt the Czar of Muſcovy.

To return to Utrecht, the moſt material Points that ſeem'd now to remain in Diſpute, between the moſt Chriſtian King, and the States General, were, Firſt, The regulating of the Tariff, in relation to which, the Dutch demanded to have that of the Year 1664, fully reſtor'd; and, Secondly, The quartering of Bavarian Troops in the Neighbourhood of Namur and Luxemburgh, which the French inſiſted on, 'till the Emperor and Empire had accepted the Terms of Peace offer'd them, and given to the Electors of Bavaria and Cologne, the Satisfaction demanded for them by France. On the 15th of March, N. S. the Deputies of the States of Flanders and Brabant were in Conference with the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries, about the Difference between the Lords of the Conference at Bruſſels, and the Council of State for the Government of the Spaniſh-Netherlands. The ſame Day, the Miniſters of France had a Conference with thoſe of the States General, in the Preſence of her Majeſty's Plenipotentiaries; and on the 17th, in the Morning, the French Miniſters had an Interview with the Lord Privy-Seal at his own Houſe. The Day before, the Earl of Strafford ſet out for the Hague, as did likewiſe the Plenipotentiaries of the States, and Count Zinzendorf, after he had diſpatch'd an Expreſs to Vienna. The Earl and the Count having had ſeveral Conferences with the Deputies of the States, return'd to Utrecht the 19th, as did the next Day the Dutch Miniſters. On the 23d, in the Evening, the Emperor's Plenipotentiaries had a Conference with the Miniſters of the Princes of the Empire, in which Count Zinzendorf acquainted them, that in the Two laſt Conferences, they had that Week with the Plenipotentiaries of France and Great Britain, they had not been able to bring Things yet to a final Concluſion: That, however, the French had declar'd, that Porto-Longone, in Italy, ſhould be yielded up to the Emperor: That France alſo deſiſted from her former Demands, That the Rhine ſhould ſerve as a Barrier between the Empire and France; but would not grant any other, than what was ſettled in the Treaty of Ryſwick: And as all the Miniſters were not yet furniſh'd with Powers ſufficient to ſign, he hop'd thoſe of Great Britain, who earneſtly preſs'd the Concluſion of the Treaty, would defer ſigning for ſome Days, to the end that the Peace might be general. But not many Days after, the Lord Bolingbroke repeated † his poſitive Orders, that the Peace ſhould be concluded without any further Delay: And it is obſervable, that among all the Demands that were made, upon Account of any Prince or State in the Grand Alliance, none, at this Time, met with the leaſt Regard from the Britiſh Court; when, at the ſame Time, the Intereſt of the Princeſs Urſini, who, at this Juncture, had a prevailing Influence at the Court of Madrid, was eſpouſed in the ſtrongeſt Terms. For, in the ſame Letter ‖, where the Lord Bolingbroke ſays, That her Majeſty did not much enter into the Notion of the Degradation of Hanover, as a Matter of any Importance; his Lordſhip declares, That the Principality, in ſome Part of the Spaniſh Netherlands, with a Revenue of Thirty Thouſand Crowns, demanded for the Princeſs Urſini, muſt be made to the Emperor, and all Parties concern'd, a Condition, ſine quâ non, of the General Peace. The inſiſting on this Demand will appear the more ſingular, if we may credit the Report of common Fame, that this Principality was deſign'd to gratify the Ambition, and reward the paſt Services of one of the Princeſs Urſini's Chamber Confidents. Be that as it will, we muſt here take Notice, that the late King of Pruſſia having, by the Mediation of Great Britain, privately treated with France, about the exchanging the Principality of Orange for the Upper Quarter of Gelderland, and that that the preſent King purſuing, in that Reſpect, his Father's Meaſures, the States General were not a little alarm'd at that Exchange, in which their Trade on the Maeſe, and their Communication with Maeſtricht, Liege, Huy, and Namur, were ſo nearly concern'd. Hereupon his Pruſſian Majeſty wrote a Letter to the States General, wherein he endeavour'd to juſtify that Tranſaction; and their High-Mightineſſes, judging it to be their Intereſt, at this critical Juncture, not to diſoblige the King of Pruſſia, they readily acquieſc'd in an Expedient that was propoſed to ſatisfy him. The Upper Quarter of Gelderland belonging to the Emperor, and not to the French King, who therefore had no Right to diſpoſe of it, the Pruſſian Miniſters treated with Count Zinzendorf about a Partition of it. By a Convention, ſigned on the 2d of April, N. S. the Emperor granted to the King of Pruſſia, beſides the Town of Guelder, and what he poſſeſs'd already, the County of Kenel, and the Bailywick of Kriechenbeck; and reſerv'd to himſelf the Quarter of Ruremonde, with the Town of that Name, Venlo, and Stevenſwaert; allowing the Dutch to keep Gariſons in thoſe Places, for the Security of their Commerce on the Maeſe; except Ruremonde, the Gariſon of which Place ſhould conſiſt of half Imperialiſts, and half Dutch. As for the Bailywick of Erſkelen, lying within the Dutchy of Juliers, the Emperor made it over to the Elector Palatine. The next * Day, the Miniſters of the Allies held a Conference at the Town-Houſe, as uſual; and afterwards thoſe of the Proteſtant Powers, had a Meeting at the Lord Privy-Seal's Houſe. In the mean Time, the Deputies of Liege continued their Complaints, about the States General's Pretenſions to Gariſon the Citadel of that City, and the Town of Huy; and offer'd either to put Troops of their own into thoſe Fortreſſes, or to demoliſh them. This Alternative being debated in a Conference held at Count Zinzendorf's, at which were preſent the Miniſters of Great Britain, the Empire, and States General: The latter referr'd themſelves to the Convention with the Emperor in 1709, which granted them the Right of putting Garriſons into thoſe Places; but they were anſwer'd, that it was without the Participation or Conſent of the Empire, of which Liege is a Branch. While this Buſineſs was under Debate, the Deputies of Liege were told, that it was well known what Attempts the Inhabitants of that City had often made, to withdraw themſelves from the Empire, and that a poſitive Declaration was expected, that for the future, they would hold themſelves united to it, as Members of the Circle of Weſtphalia. The Deputies, at firſt, would have declin'd ſuch a Declaration, but ſignified at laſt, that they would not refuſe it, provided the Contributions which the Empire laid upon them, might be moderated.

New Council for the Government of the Spaniſh Netherlands, choſen.

Whilſt theſe Things paſs'd at Utrecht, the Maritime Powers reſolv'd to ſettle the Government of the Spaniſh Netherlands, on the Foot lately concerted between them. In order to that, the Lords of the Conference at Bruſſels, ſignify'd † to the Council who diſputed their Authority, that they ſhould not aſſemble any more: But notwithſtanding this Prohibition, they met the next Day, and ſent an Anſwer to thoſe Miniſters, who return'd it, without looking upon it. At the ſame Time, the Earl of Orrery, who behav'd himſelf with the greateſt Vigor in this Matter, declar'd his Opinion, that ſince the Council continued obſtinate, it was proper to proceed to a Choice of their Succeſſors, which was done accordingly; and it was alſo agreed, that the Acts of the former Council, which were only proviſional, ſhould be revoked. On the 26th, of March, the new Council ſignify'd to the Magiſtrates of Bruſſels, that they intended to put Things upon the ſame Foot, as in the Time of Charles the Second, and afterwards apply'd themſelves to diſpatch the Affairs of the Spaniſh Netherlands with great Exactneſs and Diligence, to the Satisfaction of the People; the Generality being in their Intereſt, notwithſtanding the Oppoſition made by the old Council to their Adminiſtration; and a Cabal form'd in the States of Brabant, not to acknowledge them. On the other hand, the old Council aſſembled again ‖, and ſeem'd reſolv'd to hazard the laſt Extremity, rather than reſign the Government: But the States of Hainault, and Three Deputies of Flanders, having ſubmitted to the new Council, the Intereſt of the old dwindled away the faſter, becauſe the latter's Conduct was diſapproved by the Imperial Miniſters at Utrecht.

This ſeaſonable Condeſcenſion inclined the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries to ſpeak leſs faintly than before, in behalf of the Allies, and increaſed their Scruples about ſigning ſeparately: Whereupon they wrote ∴ to the Lord Bolingbroke, That they could ſay a great deal to juſtify their cautious Proceedings with the French; and were ſatisfy'd his Lordſhip would be of the ſame Opinion, if he were to ſee their way of Negotiating with all the Allies; and how hard it was for the Britiſh Miniſters to obtain, what, to his Lordſhip, ſeem'd impoſſible the French ſhould make any Difficulty. What made them ſtill more averſe, was the great Importunity with which the French preſs'd them to conclude with them alone, of which they apprehended the Conſequences at Home; and to juſtify themſelves, they had acquainted the Duke of Shrewſbury, that, beſides other Conſiderations, their chief Objection was, That though they had Orders to ſign a particular Peace, yet their FULL POWERS, under the Great Seal, only authorized them to negotiate, agree and conclude the Conditions of a good and general Peace, agreeable to the Intereſts of all, and each of the Allies. The Lord Bolingbroke pretended †, he had not Sagacity enough to find the Objections the Plenipotentiaries had made to their Full Powers: However, for their Satisfaction, he ſent them a new Commiſſion, by which they had a Power, as before, to treat, agree, and conclude the Conditions of a good and general Peace: Which, as his Lordſhip explain'd it to them, was no more than to offer, jointly with the Miniſters of France, the Plan of a general Peace. This new Commiſſion, with the Comment upon it, not having fully removed the Scruples of the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries, the Lord Treaſurer thought it high Time to interpoſe his prevailing Authority; and accordingly, on the 31ſt of March, O. S. he wrote a pathetick Letter to the Earl of Strafford, wherein having, in the firſt Place, felicitated his Excellency upon the Succeſs of all his Zeal, and the true Love he had ſhewn to his Queen, his Country, and Repoſe of all Europe; the remaining Danger, adds he, is, leſt we ſhould ſuffer Shipwreck in the Sight of the Port. The Nation here are, Five Hundred to one, for Peace. The Warriors are driven from their Outworks; the laſt Retrenchment they have, is Delay; and, I muſt ſay, this operates much here: The Ferment begins to work, and it will be impoſſible to anſwer for the Turn the Houſe of Commons will take, if theſe Delays provoke them further. They all feel how many Hundred Thouſand Pounds this needleſs Protraction coſts them. We now maintain Forty Nine Thouſand effective Men by Land, and Thirty Thouſand, within a Trifle, by Sea. In the mean Time, the Merchants lie off, and will not come into Port. The Amuſement of Stories invented by the Faction, and the Correſpondence and Encouragement that Party gives to their Friends to hold out, and to wait for ſome unhappy Accident, that may unravel all which is done: Add to this, the ill Humour which will grow in Members, by being kept ſo long in Town idle; and, in one word, all that has been unſettled for many Days, is not worth one Day's Charge England is at extraordinarily by this Delay. I find this ſeems to be the prevailing univerſal Opinion here; and that France has acquitted her ſelf: The only Stop is now at Utrecht. But this Stop did not now remain long; and all further Obſtructions were, after this, ſoon removed.

† March 20. O. S.

Whilſt the Peace was yet uncertain, the States-General wiſely reſolv'd to prepare againſt all Events; and, in order to prevent any Surprize from the Enemy, caus'd ſome of their Troops to canton at Anderlecht, about the latter End of March. But this Precaution proved unneceſſary; for, on Thurſday, the 6th of April N. S. the French Plenipotentiaries received freſh Inſtructions, by which they were impower'd to overcome the chief Difficulties that obſtructed the ſigning of the Peace on the Part of the States-General. The next Day, the French Miniſters had a long Conference with thoſe of Great Britain, after which, the latter were alſo in Conference with the Dutch and Imperial Plenipotentiaries, to whom they communicated the Contents of the Diſpatches the Miniſters of France had receiv'd from their Court; and declar'd, that they were ready, as well as the Plenipotentiaries of ſome other Princes, to ſign their reſpective Treaties on the Tueſday, the 11th of that Month. Hereupon, the Plenipotentiaries of the Emperor declared, That neither they, nor the Miniſters of the Empire, were ready to ſign the Treaty; nor would they hearken to Peace, without the Reſtitution of Straſburgh; adding, that they were order'd to make a Proteſtation againſt ſuch a Treaty of Peace. The Miniſters of the States General took the Declaration of the Britiſh Miniſters, ad Referendum, and immediately deputed Three Members of their Body, viz. Meſſieurs Randwyk, Vanderduſſen, and Renſwoude, to go to the Hague, to receive new Inſtructions on this important Affair. They arriv'd there on Sunday Morning, and after having conferr'd with the Penſionary, had a Conference with the Deputies of the States. The Penſionary communicated, the ſame Day, to the States of Holland and Weſt-Friezland, what had been tranſacted at Utrecht; whereupon the States declared for Peace. The Deputies of the States had a Second Conference with their Plenipotentiaries, and, the next Morning, their laſt Orders were drawn up, and communicated to the States of Holland, who having approv'd the ſame, the Plenipotentiaries ſet out in the Evening for Utrecht, with the Character of Ambaſſadors, accompany'd by Monſieur Van Spanbroeck, the new Plenipotentiary of the Province of Zealand, in the room of Monſieur Moermont. Count Zinzendorf, who came the 10th, in the Morning, from Utrecht to the Hague, had immediately a Conference with the Penſionary, in which he uſed all imaginable Endeavours to have the ſigning of the Peace put off, at leaſt 'till he had receiv'd new Inſtructions from Vienna: and declar'd, that if the States ſign'd before his Maſter, his Imperial Majeſty would immediately withdraw his Troops out of the Netherlands; but finding his Reaſons and Repreſentations ineffectual, he proteſted againſt this Peace, as he had done before at Utrecht, whither he return'd that Evening. The ſame Day, in the Morning, upon the Return of Meſſieurs Randwyck, Vanderduſſen and Renſwoude, the Dutch Miniſters had a Conference with the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries; and then another with thoſe of France, at the Lord Privy-Seal's Houſe, from Four in the Afternoon, 'till Two in the Night, wherein was ſettled whatever related to the Treaty of Peace and Commerce of the States General. The 11th, in the Morning, the Miniſters of the Proteſtant Allies had a Conference together in the Town-Houſe, to which the Marquis de Miremont, appointed by the Queen of Great Britain, to take Care of the Intereſts of the Proteſtants of France, was, for Form ſake, invited; but the upſhot of this Conſultation was only, that a Repreſentation ſhould be made in favour of thoſe Sufferers, to the Miniſters of France; which, accordingly, was immediately laid before them by the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries. This done, the latter went to Count Zinzendorf's, and communicated to him the Plan they had agreed on with the Miniſters of France, for the Emperor and Empire; having ſtipulated that his Imperial Majeſty ſhould have Time to conſider, whether he would accept of it or no, 'till the 1ſt of June, N. S. during which Interval, however, France would not grant a Ceſſation of Arms: And withal declared to him, That they were going to ſign the Queen's Peace. After this, the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries went to the other Miniſters of the Allies, to whom they made the ſame Declaration, and being return'd to the Lord Privy-Seal's Houſe, the French Ambaſſadors repair'd thither, and about Two in the Afternoon, ſigned with thoſe of Great Britain, the Treaties of Peace and Commerce. One Inſtrument of the Treaty was drawn up in Latin by the Britiſh Miniſters, and another, on the Part of the French, in their own Language; each Party ſigning firſt in their reſpective Inſtruments: And it was agreed, That the Ratifications ſhould be exchang'd at Utrecht within Four Weeks. The Miniſters of Savoy, who ſoon after came to the Lord Privy-Seal's Houſe, ſign'd alſo with thoſe of France, their Maſter's Treaty, which was drawn up in French; and by which it was particularly ſtipulated, That his Royal Highneſs ſhould not take upon him the Title of King of Sicily, 'till after the Peace was concluded and ſigned with Spain. This done, all the Ambaſſadors who had ſigned the Peace, as well as thoſe who deſign'd to ſign it, viz. thoſe of Portugal, Pruſſia, and the States General, went and din'd at the Earl of Strafford's. As ſoon as Dinner was over, moſt of thoſe Miniſters retir'd to their reſpective Houſes, to collate their Treaties; aad afterwards returning to the Earl of Strafford's Houſe, the Portugueze Ambaſſadors ſigned their Treaty, drawn up in their own Tongue, about Eight a Clock in the Evening, as the Pruſſians did theirs, in French, about Eleven: The French having inſiſted that they ſhould ſign before thoſe of the States, becauſe in the Treaty their Maſter was ſtil'd King, and acknowledg'd as ſuch by France. The Ambaſſadors of the States General did not ſign 'till near Three Hours after, having not only been taken up longer than the reſt, in collating their Treaties of Peace and Commerce, but endeavour'd to have ſome Expreſſions alter'd, particularly as to the Title of the Emperor, who in the Inſtruments drawn up in French, was not ſtil'd otherwiſe than Head of the Houſe of Auſtria; but they were obliged to recede from all their Pretenſions. This important and arduous Negotiation, being thus brought to a Concluſion, the Britiſh Miniſters immediately diſpatch'd an Expreſs to Mr. St. John, Secretary of the Britiſh Embaſſy, who, the Day before, about Eight a Clock in the Evening, ſet out for the Brill, in order to carry over to Great Britain, the Treaties of Peace and Commerce, for her Majeſty's Ratification. At the ſame Time, the French Miniſters diſpatch'd a Courier to Monſieur de Beringhen, who ſet out the 10th for Malines, in order to expect there the News of the ſigning of the Peace; Count de Dendof diſpatch'd likewiſe Monſieur de Fireck, Mareſchal of the Pruſſian Embaſſy, to carry the Treaty to Berlin; Count de Gros ſet out for Turin, on the Part of the Ambaſſadors of Savoy; and the other Miniſters diſpatch'd alſo Expreſſes to their reſpective Courts. Whether the States General were really ſo or no, their High-Mightineſſes thought it Prudence to appear ſatisfy'd with this Peace; and, accordingly, publick Thankſgivings were, by their Order, made at the Hague, on the 13th of April, N. S. Moreover, their High-Mightineſs came to a Reſolution, to thank their Ambaſſadors Extraordinary and Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, for their Care, Diligence, Zeal, and good Conduct, in the Negotiations of Peace; and on the 14th, ſent Copies of the Treaties to the reſpective Provinces, as they did, the next Day, to the Towns of the Province of Holland, in Particular. But when the Terms of the Peace were divulg'd, the Body of the People was highly diſſatisfy'd to find, that Woollen Manufactures, Sugars, and ſome other Merchandizes, were excepted from the Tariff of 1664, and continu'd charg'd with high Duties; being apprehenſive, that by theſe Exceptions, their Trade with Spain, which ſets all the other Branches of their Commerce in Motion, would, in a manner, be ruined.

The Britiſh and French Plenipotentiaries ſign the Peace firſt, April 11. N. S.

On the 13th of April, Count Zinzendorf had a long Conference with the Miniſters of Great Britain, and of the States General, about ſome Affairs relating to the Government of the Spaniſh Netherlands; and having declar'd to them, that he was to ſet out Two Days after for Germany, the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries did, on the 14th, deliver to him a Writing, intituled, Offers and Demands of the French King for making Peace with the Houſe of Auſtria and the Empire. The Imperial, and other German Miniſters, expreſs'd the Height of Indignation, at their being ſo meanly treated, as to have Terms impos'd upon them by France, in relation to the Electors of Cologn and Bavaria. They alſo highly reſented the Slight put upon the Emperor, by the French and Spaniards refuſing to give him that Title; and they were particularly diſſatisfy'd with the Dutch, for ſigning before the Return of the Expreſs ſent laſt to Vienna. But the Dutch excus'd themſelves, alledging the common Plea of the Neceſſity of Affairs. Upon the whole Matter, the Imperialiſts and Germans did, on this Occaſion, as they had formerly done on the like, experience the Truth of this Political Maxim, "That the Weight Potentates have in a Negotiation of Peace, "bears a Proportion to the Efforts they make in the Proſecution of the War; ſo "that whoever makes but an indifferent Figure in the Field, cannot expect to be "much regarded in a Congreſs." However, they now talk'd as big as ever, giving out, that the Emperor and Empire, would carry on the War, and hazard their All, rather than ſubmit to the Conditions above mention'd. And as France might turn all her Force againſt Germany, Count Zinzendorf intimated to the Miniſters of the Empire, that it would be neceſſary to cauſe, not only the Imperial Troops to march from Flanders to the Rhine, but alſo thoſe formerly in the Pay of Great Britain. To this Purpoſe we may obſerve, that the King of Pruſſia ſigned the Peace only in that Quality, and not as an Elector of the Empire, though 'twas given out, that he made a private Agreement with France, to furniſh no more Troops than his Quota, in Caſe the Emperor and Empire ſhould continue the War.

Offers and Demands of France, for making Peace with the Houſe of Auſtria and the Empire. See the Appendix, N°. XV.

The Germans threaten to carry on the War.

On the Third of April, being Good-Friday, Mr. St. John arriv'd at Whitehall, with the Treaties of Peace and Commerce, ſigned the Tueſday before, between the Britiſh and French Plenipotentiaries, and the News that the Miniſters of Portugal, Savoy, Pruſſia, and the States General, had likewiſe ſigned their reſpective Treaties: Which was immediately notify'd, by the diſcharging the great Guns of the Tower, and attended, in the Evening, by popular Rejoycings. The Tueſday following, * the Queen held a Council at St. James's, in which the Lord Harcourt, Lord Keeper of the Great-Seal, was declared Lord High-Chancellor of Great Britain: And, at the ſame Time, the Duke of Athol was ſworn of her Majeſty's Privy-Council. This done, the Queen propos'd to the Board, the ratifying the Treaties of Peace and Commerce: Whereupon it was ſuggeſted by the Earl of Cholmondley, "That "this Matter being of the higheſt Importance, for her Majeſty and her Kingdoms, "as well as all Europe, it required the matureſt Conſideration; and thoſe Treaties "containing ſeveral Terms of the Civil Law, in which the leaſt Equivocation "might be of great Conſequence, and being, beſides, couch'd in Latin and French, "it ſeem'd very neceſſary to have them tranſlated into the vulgar Tongue. His Lordſhip was back'd by another Member: But the Time agreed on for the exchaaging of the Ratifications, not admitting of Delays, their Opinion was overrul'd, and ſo her Majeſty ratified the Treaties. The next † Day, the White Staff was taken from the Earl of Cholmondley, Treaſurer of the Houſhold; and Sir Richard Temple was diſplac'd from the Command of the Regiment of Dragoons, formerly commanded by the Earl of Eſſex. The Peace being thus ſigned and ratified, the Queen reſolv'd not to defer any longer, the meeting of her Parliament. Accordingly the 9th of April, to which Day they were laſt prorogued, her Majeſty went to the Houſe of Peers, with the uſual State and Solemnity, and the Commons being ſent for up, and attending, her Majeſty made the following Speech to both Houſes:

The Parliament meets, April 9.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

"I Ended the laſt Seſſion with my hearty Thanks, for the ſolemn Aſſurances you "had given me, by which I have been enabled to overcome the Difficulties, "contriv'd to obſtruct the General Peace.

"I have deferr'd opening the Seſſion until now; being very deſirous to communicate to you, at your firſt Meeting, the Succeſs of this important Affair: It is "therefore, with great Pleaſure, I tell you, the Treaty is ſign'd, and, in few Days, "the Ratifications will be exchang'd.

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes.

A. D. 1713.

" The Negotiation has been drawn into ſo great a Length, that all our Allies " have had ſufficient Opportunity to adjuſt their ſeveral Intereſts: Tho' the pub- " lick Charge has been thereby much increas'd, yet I hope my People will be eaſy " under it, ſince we have happily obtain'd the End we propos'd.

" What I have done for Securing the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and the Perfect Friend- " ſhip there is between Me and the Houſe of HANOVER, may convince ſuch " who wiſh well to both, and deſire the Quiet and Safety of their Country, how " vain all Attempts are to divide Us; and thoſe who would make a Merit by ſe- " parating our Intereſts, will never attain their ill Ends.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

" As great a Progreſs has been made in reducing the Publick Expence, as the " Circumſtances of Affairs would admit.

" What Force may be neceſſary for ſecuring our Commerce by Sea, and for " Guards and Gariſons, I leave intirely to my Parliament.

" Make your ſelves ſafe, and I ſhall be ſatisfied.

" Next to the Protection of the Divine Providence, I depend upon the Loyalty " and Affection of my People.

" I want no other Guaranty.

" I recommend to your Care thoſe brave Men, who have ſerv'd well, by Sea or " Land, this War, and cannot be imploy'd in Time of Peace.

" I deſire you to provide the Supplies you ſhall judge requiſite; and to give " ſuch Diſpatch, as may be neceſſary for your own Eaſe, and the Publick " Service.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" The many Advantages I have obtain'd for my own Subjects, have occaſion'd " much Oppoſition, and long Delay to this Peace.

" It affords me great Satisfaction, that my People will have it in their Pow- " er, by degrees, to repair what they have ſuffer'd during ſo long and burdenſome " a War.

" The eaſing of our Foreign Trade, as far as is inconſiſtent with National Cre- " dit, will deſerve your Care.

" And to think of proper Methods for improving, and incouraging, our Home- " Trade and Manufactures, particularly the Fiſhery; which may be carry'd on, to " imploy all our Spare Hands, and be a mighty Benefit even to the remoteſt Parts " of this Kingdom.

" Several Matters were laid before you laſt Seſſion, which the Weight and Multi- " plicity of other Buſineſs would not permit you to perfect: I hope, you will take " a proper Opportunity to give them a due Conſideration.

" I cannot, however, but expreſly mention my Diſpleaſure at the unparallel'd Li- " centiouſneſs in publiſhing ſeditious and ſcandalous Libels.

" The Impunity ſuch Practices have met with, incourages the blaſpheming every " Thing ſacred, and the propagating Opinions tending to the Overthrow of all Re- " ligion and Government.

" Proſecutions have been order'd; but it will require ſome New Law, to put a " Stop to this growing Evil, and your beſt Endeavours, in your reſpective Stati- " ons, to diſcourage it.

" The impious Practice of Duelling, requires ſome ſpeedy and effectual Re- " medy.

" Now we are entring upon Peace Abroad, let me conjure you all, to uſe your " utmoſt Endeavours for calming Men's Minds at Home, that the Arts of Peace " may be cultivated.

" Let not groundleſs Jealouſies, contriv'd by a Faction, and fomented by a Par- " ty-Rage, effect that which our Foreign Enemies could not.

" I pray GOD to direct all your Conſultations, for his Glory, and the Welfare of " my People.

Debate in the Houſe of Lords, about the Peace being general, or no.

The Queen being retir'd from the Houſe of Peers, the Duke of Beaufort made a Motion for an Addreſs of Thanks; which occaſion'd a ſmall Debate, chiefly about the Expreſſion of General Peace: Some Peers urged, That it could not be ſaid to be General; ſince the Emperor, the Elector of Hanover, and other Princes and States of the Empire, were not yet come into it: But they were anſwer'd, That it might juſtly be call'd General, ſince the major Part of the Allies had ſign'd it. After this, another Motion was made, that, in the Addreſs of Thanks, a Clauſe might be inſerted, That Her Majeſty would be pleas'd to lay before the Houſe, the Trea- ties of Peace and Commerce; but the Queſtion being put thereupon, it was carry'd in the Negative, by a Majority of Seventy Four Voices, againſt Forty Three,

The ſame Day, the Commons unanimouſly voted an Addreſs of Thanks, and wav'd the Motion for having the Treaties laid before them: And, Two * Days after, both Houſes, each in a Body, preſented their reſpective (a) Addreſſes, which were receiv'd with particular Marks of Satisfaction; and moſt Corporations, and other Bodies of Men, ſoon follow'd the Example of both Houſes of Parliament, in returning the Queen Thanks for the Peace, before they knew what that Peace was. However, General Stanhope having † renew'd the Motion for addreſſing the Queen, to communicate to the Commons the Treaties of Peace and Commerce; it was carry'd in the Affirmative, with the Addition of the Words, in due Time, inſiſted on by the Courtiers; and ſo that Addreſs met with a gracious Reception. A. D. 1713.

* April 11. Thanks return'd to the Queen for concluding the Peace.

The PEACE being approv'd, and a * Supply voted; the obſequious Commons, in Complaiſance to the Court, proceeded to the ſtigmatizing thoſe that delighted in War. In order to that, Mr. William Shippen, from the Commiſſioners to examine and ſtate the Debts due to the Army, laid † before the Commons, their Report, with their Remarks on ſeveral Miſapplications, and unwarrantable Practices in Perſons concern'd in the Management and Diſpoſal of the publick Revenue: As alſo, their Report of their Proceedings in examining the Debts due to the Army. The firſt contain'd in Subſtance, "That the Oeconomy of the Army had greatly contributed to "that exorbitant Expence, with which the War had been carried on by this Nation. "That one of the great Miſmanagements was, that of paying Regiments without "Eſtabliſhments; which was plainly raiſing Men, and conſequently Money, without the Conſent either of the Crown, or Parliament. That as ſome Regiments "were paid, which were never plac'd on any Eſtabliſhments, ſo they found others "paid before they were eſtabliſh'd. That ſome Regiments had been plac'd on ſeveral Eſtabliſhments, at the ſame Time, and other Regiments paid different from "their reſpective Eſtabliſhments; ſo that ſome had received more, and others leſs "than their Eſtabliſhments. And, that a further Charge had been occaſion'd, by "paying Regiments on Two Eſtabliſhments at the ſame Time." After this, they took notice of "a very unuſual Proceeding, in relation to a Payment made to Major-General Maccartney; who, as Commander in Chief of an intended Expedition "to Canada, was to receive Ten Pounds a Day, from the 1ſt of March 1709; and "was allow'd a conſiderable Sum on that Account, tho' he never ſerv'd in that "Poſt. Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

"WE your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Commons of Great Britain in Parliament aſſembled, beg Leave with all Humility to approach your Royal Perſon, with "our unanimous Acknowledgments for all the Benefits we enjoy under your Majeſty's moſt auſpicious Reign.

"The many and great Succeſſes which have attended your Majeſty's Arms, had left nothing "to be wiſh'd, but ſuch a Peace as might be conducted by your Counſels; which now we have "the Happineſs to ſee accompliſh'd: And as we are truly ſenſible of your Majeſty's gracious and "generous Intentions in undertaking that Great Work, ſo we have all poſſible Reaſon to admire "your Steadineſs in carrying it on, and overcoming the many Difficulties contriv'd to obſtruct it. "And it is with the higheſt Satisfaction, we congratulate your Majeſty upon the happy Concluſion of this Treaty; for we are ſo much convinc'd of your Majeſty's tender Regard to the "Publick Welfare, and the many Inſtances of your Wiſdom have taught us to have ſo perfect a "Reliance upon it, that we cannot doubt, but your Majeſty hath procur'd all reaſonable Satisfaction for your Allies, and eſtabliſh'd the Intereſt of your own Kingdoms in ſuch a manner, as "to make us not only ſecure for the future, but a flouriſhing and a happy People.

"Your Majeſty can give no higher Proof of the Care you take of Poſterity, than by the Concern you are pleaſed to expreſs for the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of HANOVER, upon which the future Happineſs of this Kingdom ſo much depends. We hope, and truſt, that "nothing will ever be able to interrupt the Friendſhip between your Majeſty and that Illuſtrious "Family; ſince the wicked Deſigns of thoſe who would endeavour to ſeparate your Intereſts, "muſt be too plain ever to ſucceed.

"Your Faithful Commons can never enough expreſs the grateful Senſe they have of the many "gracious Aſſurances contain'd in your Majeſty's Speech; and, after what your Majeſty hath "done to eaſe your Subjects of the heavy Burden which before lay upon them, and after your "unparallel'd Goodneſs in demanding nothing from them for the Time to come, but what they "themſelves ſhall judge requiſite for their own Safety; the beſt Return they can make, will be "a ready and dutiful Compliance with every Thing You have been pleaſed to recommend to "them: And they cannot fail, moſt chearfully to ſet about providing the Supplies neceſſary for "this Year's Service. Your Majeſty's repeated Condeſcenſions muſt, in the ſtrongeſt manner, ingage the Hearts and Affections of all your Subjects to your Majeſty; and we are ſatisfy'd, we "cannot more truly repreſent them, than by contributing our utmoſt Endeavours to make your "Reign as proſperous, glorious, and eaſy to your ſelf, as it is beneficial and happy to your "People.

" which he receiv'd a Piſtole per Troop, and Ten Shillings per Company, as a Gra-

" having any Treaty or Eſtabliſhment for his Guide. And that the like had been " practis'd in Spain, and other Parts of the Service; which had occaſion'd great
" Loſſes to the Publick. That the Management of the Hoſpitals, was another
" Grievance of the Army: To which Purpoſe, the Commiſſioners produced ſuch
" Informations, as they had receiv'd, of the exceſſive Charge in furniſhing Provi-
" ſions, Medicines, and other Contingencies for the Sick and Wounded. That the " Miſmanagements in the Hoſpitals abroad, had not been more groſs, in their " Kind, than thoſe in Chelſea-College; where many Perſons had been receiv'd, who " never ſerv'd in the Army: And that another Abuſe in that Hoſpital, was, the " defrauding the In-Penſioners of a great Part of their Proviſions. That the Re-
" mittances for the Forces in Spain and Portugal had been made on Conditions, " much exceeding the common Rates of Exchange. That the Miſmanagements in
" the Cloathing were as great and oppreſſive, as any in the Army; many Inſtances of " which they had detected: And that Debentures, for what remain'd due to Officers and " private Men, had not been regularly iſſued out." In the next Place, the Com-miſſioners laid before the Commons, what had occurr'd to them in relation to the Expence of the Navy: " That, Firſt, they perceiv'd that conſiderable Ba" lances had continued in the Hands of the Treaſurers, or their Executors, after " the Time of their Diſmiſſion or Death, which had lain long unapplied to the " Services for which they were intended. That they alſo found large Impreſts,
" granted in the Time of each Treaſurer ſince the Revolution, whereof there re-
" main'd unclear'd, the 31ſt of October 1712, the Sum of 607,851 l. That in Exa" mining the Management of the Commiſſioners for Victualling Her Majeſty's
" Navy, they had met with ſome Inſtances of notorious Imbezzlements, and ſcan-
" dalous Abuſes, to the Detriment of the Government, and to the Injury and Diſ-
" couragement of the Seamen. That they had likewiſe diſcover'd ſome Irregula" rities in the Commiſſion for ſick and wounded Seamen, and great Negligence and " Miſmanagements in the Service of Tranſportation of Priſoners." The Commiſ-ſioners further repreſented, " That the expoſing to Sale Offices relating to the Ma" nagement of the Revenue of the Kingdom, was a Practice againſt Law, and done
" in Defiance of Her Majeſty's repeated Declarations; of which they gave Two
" Inſtances, that had been proved before them, by the Oath of the very Perſons
" concern'd: The firſt was, of Henry Meriton, Eſq; who, upon paying 4000 l. to
" Mr. Bridges, was made Caſhier of the Exciſe, with a Promiſe from the Lord Go-
" dolphin, that he ſhould not be diſplac'd: But who being afterwards diſmiſs'd,
" and inſiſting upon his Lordſhip's Promiſe, Means were found, on making Colonel
" Sidney Comptroller, and Mr. Pauncefort Caſhier of the Exciſe, to raiſe 4000 l. for
" Mr. Meriton, by a Croſs-Sale of thoſe Offices. The Second Inſtance related to
" Mr. George Hutchinſon, who bargain'd with the Lord Wharton for a Thouſand
" Pounds, if he could make him Regiſter of the Seizures; which Office his Lord-
" ſhip did, accordingly, obtain for him from the Lord Godolphin, then Lord High-
" Treaſurer. That his Lordſhip being dead, they would not appear too ſollici-
" tous in indeavouring to prove Mr. Meriton's Caſe, or any other Inſtance of his " Management, to be a Breach of the high Truſt repoſed in him. That as the " Diſpoſal of Publick Offices for Money, was not allowable, ſo neither could the " Exemption of any of them, from the Payment of Taxes, impoſed and ſpecify'd
" by Parliament, admit of the leaſt Juſtification; but that, however, a conſide-
" rable Inſtance thereof had occurr'd to them. That in examining the Accounts " of Her Majeſty's Great Wardrobe, they had obſerv'd ſeveral Abuſes: And, in " the laſt Place, That tho' the Land-Revenue of the Crown in England, had been ex-
" treamly reduced by the Sale of the Fee-Farm Rents, and by many exorbitant
" Grants ſince the Revolution; yet it was ſtill too conſiderable an Article to be " omitted; and therefore, they remark'd, that in their Examinations of the gene" ral Incomes and Iſſues of the Exchequer, they found, that the Shares brought to " Account of late Years, were much ſmaller than would have ariſen even from
" what remain'd of this Revenue, if due Care had been taken by thoſe intruſted
" with the Management of it." After the Reading of this Report, and other Papers, a Bill was order'd to be brought in, to revive and continue the Act, for ta-king, examining, and ſtating the Publick Accounts of the Kingdom; and alſo to continue the Act, for appointing Commiſſioners to take, examine, and determine the Debts due to the Army, Tranſport-Service, and the Sick and Wounded.

A Week

A Week ∴ after, the Commons took into Conſideration ſuch Parts of the firſt Report before-mention'd, as related to the Tranſport-Service, and the Sick and Wounded; and William Churchill, Eſq; a Member of the Houſe, late one of the Commiſſioners of that Office, being heard as to what concern'd him in the ſaid Report, and deſiring farther Time to make his Defence, that Affair was put off 'till that Day Fortnight. Accordingly, on the 7th of May, Mr. Shippen preſented to the Houſe the Depoſitions of Mr. Robert Mitchell, and of Mr. John Pearce, proving, That William Churchill, Eſq; when one of the Commiſſioners for Sick and Wounded Seamen, reſerved half the Profit ariſing on the Contracts made between the ſaid Commiſſioners, and the Deponents: As alſo a Letter from Mr. Pearce, to the Commiſſioners, relating to his Depoſition. Theſe Papers being read, Mr. Mitchell and Dr. Plumtree were call'd in, and examined, after which, Mr. Churchill was heard in his Place, and being withdrawn, it was Reſolv'd, Nemine Contradicente, "That for any Commiſſioner, or other Perſon, entruſted by her Ma-"jeſty in making Contracts for publick Services, to be a Partner in ſuch Contracts, "or to reſerve a Share for any other Perſon, is a high Breach of Truſt, and a noto-"rious Corruption." The Houſe being mov'd, that one of the Exceptions in the Act of the Seventh Year of her Majeſty's Reign, for the Queen's moſt Gracious, General, and Free Pardon, relating to publick Money, might be read, the ſame was read accordingly: Then a Motion was made, and the Queſtion put, That the Houſe ſhould adjourn; which paſs'd in the Negative: And then it was Reſolv'd, Nemine Contradicente, "That the Fact with which William Churchill, Eſq; ſtood charg'd in "the Report of the Commiſſioners for Taking, Examining, and Stating the Publick "Accompts, being committed before the late Act for the Queen's moſt Gracious, Ge-"neral, and Free Pardon, this Houſe would proceed no farther in that Matter." Nine Days * after, the Commons proceeded to the Conſideration of that part of the Report, relating to the Earl of Wharton, and reſolv'd, "That the giving or taking "Money for procuring Offices relating to the Management of the publick Revenue, "is a ſcandalous Corruption, and highly detrimental to the Publick. But that the "giving One Thouſand Pounds by Mr. George Hutchinſon, to Thomas Earl of Whar-"ton, and his receiving the ſame, for procuring the ſaid Mr. Hutchinſon, the Office "of Regiſter of Seizures in her Majeſty's Cuſtoms, having been before the Act for "a general Pardon, the Houſe would proceed no farther in that Matter." In this ſlight Cenſure, ended the Storm, which, for ſome Time, had threaten'd that great Patriot, who look'd down with Contempt on the impotent Malice of his Enemies.

On the 28th of April, the Ratifications of the Treaties of Peace and Commerce, were exchanged at Utrecht, between the Miniſters of Great Britain and France; and being brought † to London by Mr. Ayreſt, Chaplain and Secretary to the Earl of Strafford, the Queen, on the ſame ‖ Day of the Month, on which the War was proclaim'd juſt Eleven Years before, ſigned a Proclamation for publiſhing the Peace; which was accordingly perform'd, on the 5th of May, with the uſual Ceremonies. The Ratifications of the Treaties between France and the States General, were alſo to have been exchang'd on the 29th of April, but upon an unexpected Difficulty, about the Elector of Bavaria's Renunciation to the Spaniſh Netherlands, which had been yielded to his Electoral Highneſs by King Philip, which the Dutch Miniſters pretended not to be in due Form, that Exchange was put off 'till the 12th of May, N. Endeavours uſed by the Britiſh Miniſters, to bring the Emperor and Empire into the Peace, uneffectual.

Three Days † after, Mr. Benſon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, deliver'd to the Commons of Great Britain, a Meſſage from the Queen; importing, " That as it is " the undoubted Prerogative of the Crown, to make Peace and War, ſhe had rati- " fied the Treaties of Peace and Commerce with France, which had been ſigned by " her Order; and had concluded a Treaty with Spain, which would be ſigned at " Utrecht, as ſoon as the Spaniſh Miniſters were arrived there. That ſhe determined, " from the firſt, on this extraordinary Occaſion, to communicate theſe Treaties to " her Parliament, and had therefore now order'd them to be laid before this Houſe." After the reading of this Meſſage, the Chancellor of the Exchequer preſented to the Houſe, the Copies of ſeveral Treaties and Acts made at Utrecht, with Tranſlations of them; which laſt having alſo been read, it was reſolved, that on Tueſday, the 14th of May, the Commons, in a Grand Committee, ſhould take into Conſideration the Eighth and Ninth Articles of the Treaty of Navigation and Commerce between Great Britain and France. In the mean Time, the Commiſſioners of Trade and Plantations, were order'd to lay before the Houſe, the Repreſentations made to that Board, in relation to Trade, while the Gertruydenbergh Treaty was depending, and afterwards; as alſo the Petitions and Memorials that had lately been laid before the ſaid Commiſſioners, relating to the Trade of this Kingdom, and what Directions and Commands they had receiv'd from her Majeſty thereupon: Which Order was comply'd with; and, at the ſame Time, there was laid ‖ before the Houſe, the Commiſſioners Anſwer to the ſaid Order, referring to the ſeveral Repreſentations, Petitions, and Memorials, Directions and Commands therein mention'd. All theſe Papers being referr'd to the Grand Committee, the Commons went immediately into it: And a Motion being made to bring in a Bill, to make good the Eighth and Ninth Articles of the Treaty of Commerce with France; the ſame occaſion'd a Debate, that laſted 'till about Ten a-Clock in the Evening. Mr. Arthur Moore, one of the Commiſſioners of Trade, and whoſe Skill and Knowledge in Commercial Affairs, the Britiſh Miniſtry had chiefly rely'd on, in drawing up the Treaty in Queſtion, endeavour'd to ſhew the great Advantages that would accrue to the Nation, from a free Trade with France; and Sir James Bateman, Sir Thomas Hanmer, Sir William Wyndham, Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Ward, Mr. Shepheard, and ſome others, ſpoke on the ſame Side. Mr. Nicholas Lechmere endeavour'd, on the contrary, to prove, that the Trade with France would be very prejudicial to our Woollen, Silk, and Paper Manufactories, and to our Commerce with Portugal; and he was ſupported, not only by General Stanhope, Mr. John Smith, Mr. Nathaniel Gould, (an eminent Merchant, formerly Governor of the Bank of England,) Sir Peter King, Sir Joſeph Jekyll, Mr. Wortley Montague, the Lord Caſtlecomer, and ſome other ſtaunch Whigs; but alſo by Sir George Newland, and Mr. Robert Heyſham, who had before gone with the Court. Mr. Moore, in order to make good his Aſſertion, having enumerated the different Sorts of Commodities of the Growth and Manufacture of Great Britain, which the French drew from hence before the Two laſt Wars, inſinuating, that in all Probability they would do the ſame again for the future, if a free Trade with them were ſet upon an equal Foot: Mr. Gould anſwer'd him, that he begg'd the very Thing in Queſtion; and that, in his Opinion, the opening a free Trade with France, would rather be highly detrimental to the Nation. To make this out, Mr. Gould urged, " That ſince the Revolution, the State of Com- " merce was intirely changed; and as France had ſet up, and very much en- " couraged Woollen Manufactures, and made ſhift without ſeveral Goods which " they drew from hence, ſo England had learnt to be without the Product of France, " by ſetting up Silk Manufactures, and Paper-Mills, encouraging the making of all " manner of Toys, &c. which ſav'd and gain'd vaſt Sums of Money to the Nation, " and employ'd an infinite Number of Artificers, who would be reduced to Beggery, " if the Importation of French Goods, of the ſame Kind, were allow'd: Becauſe " the French had their Work done for leſs Money, and conſequently could ſell " their Commodities cheaper. He added, that the moſt valuable Branch of our " Trade, was that to Portugal; the Increaſe of which, of late Years, was mainly " owing

" owing to the great Quantities of Wines that were imported from thence, and con-
" ſumed in Great Britain, inſtead of French Wines, by Reaſon of the high Duties
" laid on the latter: But if theſe Duties were, purſuant to the Treaty of Commerce
" in Queſtion, reduced, and made equal with thoſe on Portugal Wines, the Importa" tion and Conſumption of the latter would infallibly decreaſe, and thereby our " profitable Commerce to Portugal, be in danger of being loſt. On the other hand, Sir William Windham took this Occaſion to reflect on the late Miniſtry, " Who, in " his Opinion, had let ſlip the Opportunity of making a good Peace, when they " had it in their Power: But that a Time might come, and, he hoped, was not far " off, when the Miſmanagement of the Enemies to their Country, ſhould be ani-
" madverted upon. As to our Portugal Trade, he ſaid, that that Kingdom would ever " have Occaſion for the Woollen Manufactures, and Corn of England, and conſe-
" quently be obliged to take off great Quantities from hence, as they did before
" the Year 1703, even at a Time, when the Court of Portugal had laid high Duties
" on Engliſh Goods and Merchandizes. General Stanhope made, hereupon, a long Speech, wherein, among other Things, he ſaid, " That the Affair now in Queſti-
" on, was not a Party Buſineſs; neither did it concern the late, or the preſent Mini-
" ſtry, but the whole Britiſh Nation, and, therefore, for his own Part, he would free" ly ſpeak his Thoughts about it, with the utmoſt Impartiality. That the Peace
" being made, it was now prepoſterous to ſay any Thing for or againſt it: But " that as no Treaty could bind the Commons of Great Britain to make any Act or " Deed againſt their own Intereſt, the only Point to be conſider'd, was, whether a " free Trade with France would be advantageous, or no? And that in order to clear " that important Matter, it was neceſſary to conſult the Merchants and Manufa" cturers, who had preſented ſeveral Petitions, and Repreſentations about it. This was alſo urged by Mr. John Smith, who made a Motion for adjourning the Debate, and taking the Papers before them into Conſideration. But the main Queſti-on being put, was carried in the Negative, by a Majority of Two Hundred Fifty Two Voices, againſt One Hundred and Thirty. Mr. Speaker having reſumed the Chair, Sir Gilbert Dolben made his Report from the Committee, and after further Debate, the Whigs finding they were overpower'd by the Courtiers, moſt of them went out of the Houſe, and ſo it was reſolv'd, by above a Hundred Voices, againſt
Twelve or Thirteen, That a Bill be brought in, to make effectual the Eighth and Ninth Articles of the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation between Great Britain and France.

Bill order'd, to make effectual the Eighth and Ninth Articles of the Treaty of Commerce.

The Peace had been proclaim'd in London, and, afterwards, throughout Great Britain, with the loudeſt Acclamations of the giddy People, who fondly expected great Benefits from it: But, 'twas not long before the Eyes of the Generality were open'd. For, about the beginning of May, Signior Bruciado, the Portugueze Miniſter in London, in a Memorial, repreſented to the Court, " That in Caſe any Breach " was made in the Treaty concluded in 1703, whereby the Duties on French Wines
" were ſtipulated to be, at leaſt, one Third higher than on thoſe of Portugal, the " King, his Maſter, would renew the Prohibition of the Woollen Manufactures,
" and Products of Great Britain: Which not only alarm'd the Portugal Merchants in London, but alſo all Perſons concern'd in the Woollen Manufacture. On the other hand, the Treaties of Peace and Commerce having been publiſh'd in Print, the latter raiſed ſuch a general Clamour, as rouzed the Genius of England, which, by ſome powerful Inchantment, ſeem'd to have been plung'd into a profound Lethargy. Hereupon many worthy Patriots * exerted themſelves, and publiſh'd ſeveral excellent Pieces, that ſhew'd the Advantages of the Trade with Italy, Spain, and Portugal, to which Nations, we conſtantly exported more than we imported from them, and brought the Balance in Money; whereas a Trade with France, would be deſtructive of our Home Manufactures, and of our Commerce with other Nations. Petitions to the ſame Effect, poured in from all Parts of Great Britain, upon the Houſe of Commons: To ſtem whoſe Torrent, thoſe at the Helm, thought fit to encourage the publiſhing of a Weekly † Paper, intituled, MERCATOR; or, Commerce Retrieved: Being Conſiderations on the State of the Britiſh Trade; particularly as it reſpects Holland, Flanders, and the Dutch Barrier; the Trade to and from France; the Trade to Portugal, Spain, and the Weſt-Indies, and the Fiſheries of Newfoundland and Nova Scotia: With other Matters and Advantages accruing to Great Britain, by the Treaties of Peace and Commerce, lately concluded at Utrecht. This Paper, upon its firſt Appearance Abroad, was generally father'd upon the chief Manager of the Treaty of Commerce, Arthur Moore, ſuppoſed to be aſſiſted by the ingenious Dr. D'Avenant; but the latter ſolemnly diſown'd his having any Share in it: And indeed, it was, ſoon after, diſcover'd to be the Production of an ambidextrous, mercenary Scribbler, ‖ employ'd by that very Stateſman, (the Earl of Oxford) who when when Secretary of State, had cauſed him to be ſtigmatized for a Libel; but who nevertheleſs, for this preſent Dirty Work, allow'd him a conſiderable weekly Salary. The abandon'd Hireling laid out all his Skill in puzzling the Argument by verboſe Sophiſtry; which being like to impoſe upon vulgar Underſtandings, Mr. Martin, an ingenious and judicious Gentleman, was encouraged by ſeveral eminent Merchants, to publiſh twice a Week, a Paper call'd, The BRITISH MERCHANT, or COMMERCE RETRIEVED; wherein, with plain Reaſoning, and unconteſted Matters of Fact, he unravell'd the Fallacies, and expos'd the Blunders and Inconſiſtencies of his Adverſary; ſo that, at length, the Thoughts of the Whigs about Commerce, which, at firſt, were repreſented as the Effect of Diſcontent, and Spirit of Party, appear'd to be the univerſal Senſe of all Traders.

Mr. Martin, in his Britiſh Merchant, confounds the Mercator.

On the 21ſt of May, the Two Houſes adjourn'd themſelves for a Week, by Reaſon of the Whitſon-Holidays: During which Time, there appear'd an Uneaſineſs in many Scotch Members, upon the late Diſappointment of their Endeavours to get their Country eas'd of part of the Malt-Tax. Hereupon they conferr'd with ſeveral of the Scotch Peers ſitting in Parliament; and, laying aſide all Party Diſtinctions, conſulted together how to redreſs their Grievances? They deputed Four * of their Aſſembly, who, by Word of Mouth, humbly remonſtrated to the Queen, "That "their Countrymen bore, with great Impatience, the Violation of ſome Articles of "the Act of Union, and that the laying ſuch an inſupportable Burden as the Malt-"Tax, upon them, was like to raiſe their Diſcontent to ſuch a Height, as to "prompt them to declare the Union diſſolv'd." To this unexpected Remonſtrance, "the Queen anſwer'd, This was a precipitate Reſolution, and ſhe wiſh'd they might not have Reaſon to repent it: But, however, ſhe would endeavour to make all Things eaſy.

The Scotch endeavour to get their Grievances redreſs'd.

* The Duke of Argyle, Earl Mar, Mr. Lockhart, and Mr. Cockburne.

The Scotch Members being met again, the next Day, and their Deputies having made their Report of her Majeſty's Anſwer, it was unanimouſly agreed, that before they proceeded farther, they ſhould lay their Grievances before the Houſe of Lords. Accordingly, on Thurſday, the 28th of May, after the Lords had adjourn'd the Debate about the Eighth and Ninth Articles of the Treaty of Commerce, the Earl of Finlater made a Motion, that ſome Day ſhould be appointed, to conſider the State of the Nation; whereupon the Lords appointed Monday, the 1ſt of June, when all the Lords in Town were ſummoned. Between One and Two, the Debate began, open'd by the Earl that made the Motion; who repreſented the Grievances of the Scotch Nation; which he reduced to Four Heads: "Firſt, Their being de-"priv'd of a Privy-Council. Secondly, The Laws of England, in Caſes of Trea-"ſon, extending to Scotland. Thirdly, The Scotch Peers being incapable of being "made Peers of Great Britain, as 'twas adjudg'd, and declar'd in the Caſe of the "late Duke Hamilton: And Fourthly, the Scotch being ſubjected to the Malt-Tax, "which would be the more inſupportable to them now, in that they never were "ſubjected to it, during the War, and had reaſon to expect to reap and enjoy the "Benefits of Peace: Concluding, that ſince the Union between the Two Nations, "had not thoſe good Effects as were expected from it, he therefore mov'd, that "Leave might be given to bring in a Bill, for Diſſolving the ſaid Union, and ſecuring "the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, ſecuring the Queen's Prerogative in "both Kingdoms, and preſerving an entire Amity, and good Correſpondence, between the "Two Kingdoms. This Motion was ſeconded by the Earl of Mar; but oppos'd by the Lord North and Grey, who, in a long Speech, endeavour'd to ſhew, that the Complaints of the Scotch were groundleſs, and the diſſolving of the Union impracticable; not without ſome Reflections on the Poverty of the Scotch Nation. He was anſwer'd by the Lord Eglington, who allow'd the Scotch Nation to be Poor, and therefore unable to pay the Malt-Tax. The Lord North and Grey reply'd, That it was nothing but what was agreed to by the Treaty of Union; the Fourteenth Article of which imported, That Scotland ſhould not be charged with any Impoſition on Malt during the War only, which now was at an End. The Earl of Ilay confeſs'd there was ſuch a Clauſe; but that the ſame Article imported, That ſeeing it could not be ſuppos'd, that the Parliament of Great Britain would ever lay any ſorts of Burdens upon the United Kingdom, but what they ſhould find of Neceſſity, at that Time, for the Preſervation and Good of the Whole, and with due Regard to the Circumſtances and Abilities of every Part of the United Kingdom, therefore it was agreed, that there ſhould be no further Exemption inſiſted on, for any Part of the United Kingdom, but that the Conſideration of any Exemption beyond what was already agreed on in this Treaty, ſhould be left to the Determination of the Parliament of Great Britain. He urg'd, "That when this Treaty was made, "the Scotch concluded the Parliament of Great Britain would never go about to lay "any Impoſition that they had Reaſon to believe grievous; and having ſet forth the Inability of the Scotch to pay the Malt-Tax, concluded for the Earl of Finlater's Motion. Hereupon the Earl of Peterborow made a long Speech, wherein, he endea-vour'd to ſhew the Impoſſibility of diſſolving the Union; ſaying, among other Things, " That he had often heard the Union compar'd to a Marriage; and ac- " cording to that Notion, ſince it was made, it could not be diſſolv'd by any Power " upon Earth. That though England, who in this National Marriage, muſt be ſup- " pos'd to be the Huſband, might, in ſome Inſtances, have been unkind to the La- " dy, yet ſhe ought not preſently to ſue for a Divorce; the rather, becauſe ſhe had " very much mended her Fortune by this Match." Adding, " That the Union was a " Contract, than which nothing could be more binding." To this, the Lord Ilay anſwer'd, That if the Union had the ſame Sanction as Marriage, which was an Ordinance of GOD, he ſhould be for obſerving it as religiouſly as that; but that he thought there was a great Difference. To which the Earl of Peterborow reply'd, " He " could not tell how it could be more ſolemn than it was; except they ex- " pected it ſhould have come from Heaven, like the Ten Commandments:" Animadverting, in the Concluſion, on the Scots, as " a People that would never be " ſatisfy'd: That they would have all the Advantages of being united to England, " but would pay nothing, by their good Will: And that they had more Money from " England, than all their Eſtates amounted to in their own Country." To him, the Duke of Argyle reply'd, in a very handſome, but very warm Speech; ſaying, among other Things, " That he was by ſome reflected on, as if he was diſguſted, " and had chang'd Sides; but that he deſpis'd their Perſons, as much as he under- " valued their Judgments. That, it was true, he had a great Hand in making the " Union: That the chief Reaſon that mov'd him to it, was the Securing the Prote- " ſtant Succeſſion; but that he was ſatisfy'd, that might be done as well now, if " the Union were diſſolv'd. That he ſpoke as a Peer of England, as well as of " Scotland: That he believ'd in his Conſcience, 'twas as much for the Intereſt " of England, as of Scotland, to have it diſſolv'd; and if it were not, he did not " expect long to have either Property left in Scotland, or Liberty in England. " He urg'd, That the Tax upon Malt in Scotland, was no leſs unequal, than the " taxing Land by the Acre throughout England would be; becauſe Land is worth " Five or Six Pounds per Acre about London, and not ſo many Shillings in remote " Parts of the Country. That this was the Caſe between the Scotch and Engliſh " Malt; the latter being worth Three or Four Shillings the Buſhel, the other not " above One: So that if this Tax were collected in Scotland, it muſt be done by a " Regiment of Dragoons." Some other Scotch Peers ſaid, " That the End of " the Union, was, the cultivating Amity and Friendſhip between the Two " Nations; but it was ſo far from having that Effect, that they were ſure, " the Animoſities between the Two Nations were now much greater than be- " fore the Union: And therefore, they were of Opinion, that if the Union were " diſſolv'd, the Two Nations would be better Friends." The Lord Chief-Juſtice Trevor urg'd, on the other hand, the Impoſſibility of ſuch a Diſſolution; and he was back'd by the Lord Treaſurer, who ſaid, " That the Earl of Seafield's Mo- " tion was no leſs ſtrange, than unexpected: That the Union being made by Two " diſtinct Parliaments of both Kingdoms, he did not ſee how it could be diſſolv'd, " now the Two Nations were in different Circumſtances; becauſe the Power that " made it was no more in being; and nothing could make it void, but the Power " that created it: Concluding, That if the Scots had any Grievances to complain " of, there might be ſome other Method thought of to redreſs them, without pro- " ceeding to that extraordinary way of diſſolving the Union, which had been " made in ſo ſolemn a manner, and brought about with ſo much Difficulty." This was anſwer'd by the Earl of Nottingham; who repreſented the Advantages of the Union, if the Views with which it was made, had been ſteadily purſued. He added, " That tho' the Two Nations were now in other Circumſtances, than when " the Union was made; yet the ſame Power, that was in the Two Parliaments " when they were ſeparated and diſtinct, was lodg'd in them now they were con- " ſolidated; and therefore, if they had Power to make it, they, certainly, had it " ſtill, to diſſolve it: And, that he knew not any Thing, but what the Parlia- " ment could do, except deſtroying the preſent Conſtitution; which, he own'd, " they had not Power to do. That the Inconveniencies that had attended the U- " nion, could not be foreſeen, till the Tryal was made: And ſince the Scots, who " were the beſt Judges of the Affairs of their Kingdom, found that it did not an- " ſwer the Ends propos'd, he was for diſſolving it." The Earl of Sunderland ſaid to the ſame Purpoſe; " That tho' he had a Hand in making the Union, yet, if it " had not that good Effect which was expected from it, he was likewiſe for diſſol- " ving it." The Lord Viſcount Townſhend ſaid, he was of the ſame Opinion; provided, nevertheleſs, Means could be found to ſecure the Proteſtant Succeſſion: And therefore, he deſir'd to know, what Security the Scots could give for that eſſential Point,

A. D. 1713.

Point, before they proceeded any further? To this, ſome of the Scotch Lords reply'd, That would appear, when the Bill was brought in: That then it was a proper Time to ſhew, what Security they could give; and therefore mov'd, That the Queſtion might be put immediately, Whether a Bill ſhould be brought in, or not? The Earl of Nottingham deſir'd, that another Day might be appointed, to conſider further of a Matter of ſuch Conſequence, that the Lords might be better appriz'd of it. The Lord Halifax declar'd alſo for diſſolving the Union; provided it could be made appear, that the Succeſſion could be ſecur'd; but yet deſir'd, that a further Day might be appointed, to conſider of ſo important a Matter: And the Earls of Mar and Loudoun, who were before for putting the Queſtion immediately, declar'd themſelves better ſatisfy'd by that Lord's Reaſons. There were ſeveral other Speeches made, both by the Engliſh and Scotch Lords; particularly, by the Earls of Poulet, Scarborough, and Scarſdale: And, it is obſervable, that when the Danger England would be in from the Pretender, if the Union were diſſolv'd, was urg'd, the Lord Townſhend anſwer'd, "That the Queen, Lords and Commons of England, if join'd in one Intereſt, need fear no Enemy in the World; and therefore, ought to deſpiſe the Pretender, and all his Abettors." The Duke of Argyle, having Occaſion to mention the Pretender, ſaid, He knew not what Appellation to give him; his Name being now as uncertain as his Parents: But the Earl of Scarſdale call'd him the Prince, or, added he, the Pretender, which you will. Upon the whole Matter, all the Engliſh Court-Lords were againſt diſſolving the Union; and, on the other hand, ſuch Whig Peers as appear'd to be for it, had principally in View the fomenting the Diſcontents of the Scots, in order to incline them to chuſe, at the next Election, ſuch Repreſentatives as ſhould oppoſe the preſent Miniſtry. The Queſtion being put, upon the Earl of Finlater's Motion, it was carry'd in the Negative, by Four Voices; there being Fifty Four Lords preſent on each ſide; and Seventeen Proxies for the Negative, and only Thirteen for the Affirmative. It is obſervable, That the Lord Treaſurer having, in the Courſe of this Debate, advanc'd, That tho' the Malt-Tax were laid, it might be afterwards remitted by the Crown, and not levy'd; The Earl of Sunderland ſaid, He wonder'd ſuch Expreſſions, as tended to eſtabliſh a DESPOTICK, DISPENSING POWER, and ARBITRARY GOVERNMENT, ſhould come from that Noble Lord. To this, the Treaſurer anſwer'd, That his Family had never been for promoting and adviſing Arbitrary Meaſures, as others had done: Which the Earl of Sunderland taking to be a Reflection on his Father, he not only vindicated him, but added, That the other Lord's Family was hardly known in thoſe Days. The * next Day, the Lords reſum'd the Conſideration of the Eighth and Ninth Articles of the Treaty of Commerce; and heard ſome eminent Traders, who had been ſummon'd to attend their Houſe, particularly Mr. Cooke and Mr. Torriano, who were heard again Two Days after. On the 9th of June, their Lordſhips took the ſame Affair into Conſideration, but came to no Reſolution; intending to ſee what Turn that Matter would take in the Houſe of Commons, where the Bill for making effectual the ſaid Eighth and Ninth Articles, had, by this Time, been committed.

* June 2.

Debates in the H. of Commons, about the Bill for making effectual the 8th and 9th Articles of the Treaty of Commerce.

On the 9th of June, the Commons, in a grand Committee, took that Bill into Conſideration, Sir Robert Davers being in the Chair; and heard Mr. Cooke, Merchant, who, in behalf of the Levant Company, made a long Speech; wherein, with great Solidity of Reaſon and Argument, he ſhew'd how detrimental the opening a Trade with France, would be to the Britiſh Woollen and Silk Manufactures, and to all the Branches of our Trade. The Merchants being withdrawn, the Commons took their Allegations into Conſideration; and, among the reſt, General Stanhope, to corroborate what Mr. Cooke had alledg'd, quoted the Preamble of an Act of Parliament, made in the Thirteenth Year of King Charles the Second's Reign, that runs thus: "Foraſmuch as it has been by long Experience found, that the "Importing of French Wines, Brandy, Linnen, Silk, Salt, and Paper, and other "Commodities, of the Growth, Product, or Manufactures, of the Territories and "Dominions of the French King, has much exhauſted the Treaſure of this Nation, "leſſen'd the Value of the Native Commodities and Manufactures thereof, and "caus'd great Detriment to this Kingdom in general: Be it therefore enacted, &c. Hereupon, the Speaker, ſuppoſing that Mr. Stanhope had made a Miſtake, ſaid, There was no ſuch Thing in that Act: But Mr. Stanhope inſiſted, that the Clerk ſhould read the ſaid Act; and his Quotation appearing to be right, he, and other Members, animadverted with ſome Vehemence on the Speaker's Blunder: At laſt, the Debate cool'd, and was put off to the next Day; and reſolv'd, that the Petitioners, who had not yet been, ſhould then be heard.

On the 10th of June, the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, and the Commons attending, Her Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to the Act for continuing the Duties on Malt, &c. the Act to revive and continue the Act for taking and ſtating the Publick Accounts, &c. and to ſome other publick and private Bills. The Commons being return'd to their Houſe, and having reſolv'd themſelves into a grand Committee, upon the Bill relating to the Treaty of Commerce; the Spaniſh, Italian, and Portugal Merchants, and the Weavers of London, were admitted to be heard upon their ſeveral Petitions. Mr. Torriano, who ſpoke in behalf of the Spaniſh Trade, having animadverted on the Eighth and Ninth Articles of the Treaty of Commerce, and mention'd the Tenth and Eleventh, as relating to the Two former; ſome Court-Members were offended at it, and, after he had done ſpeaking, mov'd the Committee, that a Mark of their Diſpleaſure might be ſet on him: But General Stanhope, Mr. Lechmere, Sir Peter King, and Mr. (John) Smith, ſaid, "That unleſs they "gave the Merchants full Liberty of Speech, the Houſe would never be able to "form a right Judgment on that important Affair; and they hop'd, that no Man "ſhould be reprimanded, for ſtanding up for the Trade of Great Britain." This, together with a noble Spirit that appear'd in the Houſe on behalf of the Merchants, by the great Number of Members, both Tory and Whig, who, all at once, ſtood up to defend Mr. Torriano, made the Courtiers drop that Matter; and ſo Mr. Wyat ſpoke for the Italian Merchants; Mr. Milner for the Portugal Trade, and Colonel Lekeux for the London Weavers. The Merchants being withdrawn, the Speaker reſum'd the Chair; and it was reſolv'd, That the grand Committee ſhould, the next Day, conſider further of the Bill; and that the other Petitioners be then heard. It was alſo order'd, That the Minutes of the Levant Company, and all Memorials, Petitions, Repreſentations, Schemes of Trade, and Papers relating thereto, that were either before the Commiſſioners of Trade and Plantations, or before the Commiſſioners of the Cuſtoms, relating to the Trade between England and France, be laid before the Houſe.

on

The next * Day, the grand Committee heard ſeveral Petitioners, and read many Petitions, and other Papers: And, Two † Days after, a Clauſe was order'd to be inſerted in the Bill, declaring, "That the Privileges, Liberties, and "Immunities, as to all Duties, Impoſitions, or Cuſtoms, relating to Commerce, or "to any other Right whatſoever, that had been, or might be granted by France, "with reſpect to the Subjects, Goods, or Merchandiſes of any Foreign Nation; "ſhould be underſtood to extend as well to the Four Species of Goods, excepted "in the Ninth Article from the Tariff of 1664, as to all other Merchandiſes what-"ſoever, imported into France by the Subjects of Great Britain." Then the Commons, in a grand Committee, made a further Progreſs in the Bill, and went thro' it on the 15th of June. Three Days after, Sir Robert Davers reported the Amendments made to the Bill; which, with ſome others, were agreed to by the Houſe. Then a Motion being made, that the Bill be ingroſs'd, the ſame occaſion'd a warm Debate, from Three a Clock in the Afternoon, till near Eleven at Night. General Stanhope, Sir Peter King, Mr. Gould, Mr. Hampden, and ſome others, ſhew'd the Diſadvantage of an open Trade with France, upon the Foot of the laſt Treaty of Commerce: And the Member that ſpoke moſt in Favour of the Bill, was the ſame who had been chiefly imploy'd in that Treaty, viz. Mr. Arthur Moore; but ſome of his Arguments being ſtrain'd, and precarious, the Majority even of his own Party adher'd to the Opinion of Sir Thomas Hanmer. This Gentleman made a long and elaborate Speech; wherein, among other Things, he ſaid, That before he had fully examin'd the Affair in Queſtion, he had given his Vote for the bringing in the Bill; but, that having afterwards maturely weigh'd and conſider'd the Allegations of the Traders and Manufacturers, in their ſeveral Petitions and Repreſentations, he was convinc'd, that the paſſing of it, would be of great Prejudice to the Woollen and Silk Manufactures of this Kingdom, conſequently increaſe the Number of the Poor, and, in the End, affect the Land. That while he had the Honour to ſit in that Houſe, he would never be blindly led by any Miniſtry; neither, on the other hand, was he bias'd by what might weigh with ſome Men, viz. the Fear of loſing their Elections: But that the Principles upon which he acted, were the Intereſt of his Country, and the Conviction of his Judgment; and upon theſe Two Conſiderations alone, he was againſt the Bill. This Speech made a great Impreſſion on many of the Members; and Mr. Aiſlabie, one of the Lords Commiſſioners of the Admiralty, and Mr. Francis Anneſley, one of the Commiſſioners of the Publick Accounts, having ſpoke alſo againſt the Bill; the Queſtion, whether it ſhould be ingroſs'd, was, at laſt, carry'd in the Negative, by a Majority of One Hundred and Ninety Four Voices, againſt One Hundred and Eighty Five.

The Bill rejected.

It was obſerv'd, that of the Four Members for the City of London, One only, Sir William Withers, voted for the Bill; and that Sir Richard Hoare, then Lord-Mayor, Sir George Newland, and Sir John Caſs, voted againſt it; as did alſo the

Two Members for Weſtminſter, Mr. Medlicot, and Mr. Thomas Croſs. (a) On the other hand, it was given out, that the Lord Treaſurer, foreſeeing the ill Effects of paſſing ſuch a Bill at this Juncture, wrote, the Night before, a Letter to the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, deſiring him to uſe his Intereſt to make it drop; which Step he might, probably, be induc'd to take, from the Oppoſition the Bill was like to meet with in the Houſe of Lords; where, that very * Afternoon, the Earls of Angleſey and Abingdon, and ſome other Peers, had declar'd againſt it: However, ſome ſuſpected either the Reality, or true Deſign of ſuch a Letter; becauſe moſt of the Court, and Scotch Members, voted for the Bill. Be that as it will, the London Drapers, Mercers, and Weavers, were overjoy'd at the rejecting of the Bill; and, on Friday Night, the 19th of June, expreſs'd their Satisfaction by Bonefires and Illuminations.

Rejoicings in London, upon the rejecting of that Bill.

The rejecting of this Bill, being an expreſs and loud Condemnation of the Treaty of Commerce, and laying the Managers of it open to future Inquiries; the Miniſtry left no Stone unturn'd to procure a palliative Addreſs from the Commons; which the Majority of that Houſe were the more ready to come into, becauſe the Whigs, very imprudently, began to exult, as if they had already triumph'd over their Adverſaries. Hereupon, the very † Member, by whoſe Influence, chiefly, the Bill had been loſt, was artfully ingaged to make a Motion for an Addreſs, "returning Her Majeſty the humble Thanks of this Houſe, for the great Care ſhe "had taken of the Security and Honour of her Kingdoms, in the Treaty of "Peace; and alſo for what ſhe has done in the Treaty of Commerce with France, by "laying ſo good a Foundation for the Intereſts of her People in Trade: And humbly to deſire Her Majeſty, that ſhe would be pleas'd to appoint Commiſſioners, to "treat with Commiſſioners on the Part of France, for adjuſting ſuch Matters as "ſhould be neceſſary to be ſettled in the Treaty of Commerce, between Her Majeſty "and France; that the Treaty might be explain'd, and perfected, for the Good "and Welfare of her People." Many of the Members who voted againſt the Bill, being abſent; the Queſtion was carry'd in the Affirmative, by a Majority of One Hundred and Fifty Six Voices, againſt Seventy Two: Whereupon, General Stanhope made a Motion, "To repreſent in the Addreſs the Senſe of this "Houſe, That Her Majeſty's Commiſſaries, who were to treat of the Commerce "between Great Britain and France, ſhould inſiſt, That Liberty be given to Her "Majeſty's Subjects, to trade to all the Ports in the French King's Dominions:" But the previous Queſtion being put, that that Queſtion be now put? It paſs'd in the Negative.

The next Day, Sir Thomas Hanmer reported the Addreſs of Thanks; which being agreed to, and ‖ preſented to Her Majeſty by the whole Houſe; She thank'd them moſt heartily for this Addreſs, which ſo fully expreſs'd their Approbation of the Treaties of Peace and Commerce with France: Adding, It was with no ſmall Difficulty, that ſo great Advantages in Trade were obtain'd for her Subjects; and that ſhe would readily comply with their Deſires, in continuing her utmoſt Care, to ſecure the Benefits ſhe had ſtipulated for her People. This artful Anſwer ſurpriz'd many of the Members; who had readily gone into the Addreſs, with no other Intention than to approve the Treaty of Peace, abſtracted from the Treaty of Commerce: But the Speaker having, early the next * Day, reported that Anſwer to a very thin Houſe, it was unanimouſly reſolv'd to return Her Majeſty Thanks for it. Addreſs about the Equivalent for Dunkirk.

On the 3d of June, the Commons reſolved upon Two Addreſſes; firſt, "That "an Account might be laid before them, what Equivalent was to be given the moſt "Chriſtian King, for the Demolition of Dunkirk, in Caſe the Equivalent ſhould "not be comply'd with. Secondly, An Account what her Majeſty had ſtipulated "for the Trade of Great Britain in Flanders, and how the ſame was ſecured." The Miniſtry were extreamly puzzled how to anſwer the firſt of theſe Addreſſes, but, at laſt, they ſet a good Face upon the Matter; and, on the 20th of that Month, Mr. Benſon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, acquainted the Houſe, That in Purſuance of the Treaties, as well between her Majeſty, and the moſt Chriſtian King, as between that King and the States General, the Equivalent which was to be given for the Demolition of Dunkirk, was already in the Hands of his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty. Many of the Members were highly diſſatisfy'd with this dubious Anſwer, but the Majority acquieſc'd in it. Two Days * after, Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer alſo acquainted the Houſe, "That purſuant to their Addreſs, her Majeſty had commanded the Report "of her Commiſſioners of Trade about that Matter, to be laid before the Houſe; "and he preſented the ſame accordingly; which being read, it was reſolv'd to addreſs her Majeſty, That ſhe would be pleaſed to take Care, that the Towns in "Flanders in her Majeſty's Poſſeſſion, be not evacuated, 'till thoſe who were to "have the Sovereignty of the Spaniſh Netherlands, agreed to ſuch Articles for regulating Trade, as might put the Subjects of Great Britain upon an equal Foot "with thoſe of any other Nation:" To which Addreſs, the Queen return'd a very gracious Anſwer.

The Queen's Meſſage about the Debts of the Civil Liſt.

On the 25th of June, Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer preſented to the Commons, a Meſſage from the Queen, importing, "That her Majeſty thought fit to acquaint "her loyal Houſe of Commons with the Difficulties, which, in a particular Manner, ſhe lay under, by the Debts contracted in her Civil Government, occaſion'd "by ſeveral extraordinary Expences formerly incurr'd: So that her Majeſty thought "her ſelf oblig'd, in Juſtice to many Creditors, to order an Eſtimate to be laid before this Houſe, of what was owing on the Civil Liſt, in the Year 1710. That "her Majeſty had uſed unexampled Parſimony to remove, if poſſible, this Burden "from her ſelf: But that the granting away, and leſſening ſome Part of her Revenue by Parliament, having made that impracticable; ſhe therefore hoped, "that this Houſe of Commons, which, on all Occaſions, had ſhew'd themſelves ſo "well affected to her, would not be unwilling to empower her to raiſe ſuch a Sum "of Money on the Civil Liſt Funds, as might enable her to diſcharge the Debts, "and ſettle the Expence, to be regularly paid for the future." After the Reading of this Meſſage, Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer preſented to the Houſe, an Eſtimate of the Debts owing to the ſeveral Heads of Expence for her Majeſty's Civil Government, about Midſummer, 1710; which being alſo read, it was reſolv'd to conſider of the ſaid Meſſage the next Day, in a Committee of the whole Houſe. Mr. John Smith, one of the Tellers of the Exchequer, having then rais'd ſome Objections againſt that Eſtimate, ſaying, in Vindication of the late Miniſtry, That to his certain Knowledge, the Debts of the Civil Liſt in the Month of Auguſt, 1710, did not amount to above One Hundred and Fifty Thouſand Pounds; for the Payment of Part of which Sum, there were ſome Moneys ſtanding out, beſides great Quantities of Tin; whereas by the Eſtimate now laid before them, the ſaid Debts to Midſummer, 1710, that is, about Two Months before, were made to amount to Four Hundred Thouſand Pounds: A Motion was thereupon made, and the Queſtion put. That an Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, that ſhe would be pleaſed to direct an Account to be laid before this Houſe, of the Arrears of the Civil Liſt Funds ſtanding out at Midſummer, 1710: And alſo, An Account of the Debts of the Civil Liſt, as they were at this Time, and of the Arrears of the Civil Liſt Funds to pay the ſame: But this was carried in the Negative, to the great Surprize of many. On the laſt Day of June, a Bill for enabling her Majeſty to raiſe a Sum, not exceeding Five Hundred Thouſand Pounds, on the Revenues appointed for Uſes of her Civil Government, to be applied towards Payment of ſuch Debts and Arrears owing to her Servants, Tradeſmen, and others, was read a Second Time, and committed: After this, the Motion made ſome Days before, being again propos'd with better Succeſs, it was reſolv'd to addreſs her Majeſty, Firſt, For an Account of the Debts on the Civil Liſt, to Midſummer, 1713. And, Secondly, For a Yearly Account of the neat Produce of the Civil Liſt Funds, ſince her Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne. This laſt Addreſs was made upon a Suggeſtion, that the Civil Liſt Funds, which, at firſt, were given only for about Seven Hundred Thouſand Pounds per Annum, yielded now above Eight Hundred and Fifty Thouſand: But whether there were any Ground for that Report, or no, 'tis certain, that no Anſwer was return'd to that Addreſs. We muſt here obſerve, that the Day * before, the Duke of Buckingham took Notice in the Houſe of Peers, both of the Queen's Meſſage to the Commons, and of the latter's Reſolution, about the Debts of the Civil Liſt, inſinuating, That they were ſomewhat extraordinary, the uſual way being, for the Crown to aſk Subſidies of both Houſes; otherwiſe the Houſe of Lords would be altogether Uſeleſs: But though the Conſideration of that Matter was put off to the next Day, yet the ſame was waved, upon account of a more important Affair.

Debate upon a Motion in the Houſe of Lords, for removing the Pretender from Lorrain.

On the laſt Day of June, the Earl of Wharton moved in the Houſe of Peers, That An Addreſs be preſented to the Queen, that ſhe would be pleaſed to uſe her moſt preſſing Inſtances with the Duke of Lorrain, and with all the Princes and States in Amity and Correſpondence with her Majeſty, that they would not receive, or ſuffer to continue within any of their Dominions, the Pretender to the Imperial Crowns of theſe Realms. Several Members being ſurpriz'd at this unexpected Motion, which was deſign'd to try the Inclinations and Affections of ſome Perſons, there was a Pauſe for a while. At laſt, the Lord North and Gray broke Silence, and endeavour'd to have that Motion laid aſide; repreſenting, "That ſuch an Addreſs would ſhew a Diſtruſt either of the "Queen, or of the Miniſters. And that her Majeſty would be puzzled what to do, "in Caſe the Princes and States in Amity with her, ſhould be unwilling to com-"ply with her Inſtances, ſince it would not be in her Power to compel them;" concluding with this Queſtion, Where they would have the Pretender reſide, ſince moſt, if not all the Powers in Europe, were in Amity with her Majeſty? To this the Earl of Peterborow anſwer'd, That ſince he began his Studies in Paris, the fitteſt Place for him to improve himſelf, was Rome. After ſome warm Expreſſions, between the Earl of Wharton and the Lord Treaſurer, the Motion made by the former was carried; and, accordingly, on the 2d of July, the Houſe of Lords attended her Majeſty with an Addreſs, wherein they beſought her Majeſty, That for the Safety of her Perſon and Government, the Security of the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, and for the Peace and Quiet of theſe Kingdoms, her Majeſty would be pleas'd to uſe her moſt preſſing Inſtances with the Duke of Lorrain, and with all Princes and States in Amity and Correſpondence with her Majeſty, that they would not receive, or ſuffer to continue within any of their Dominions, the Pretender to the Imperial Crown of theſe Realms. To this the Queen return'd an Anſwer, importing, "That ſhe took extream kindly their "Addreſs; and the Thanks they gave her for what ſhe had done, for eſtabliſhing "the Proteſtant Succeſſion. That ſhe ſhould repeat her Inſtances to have that "Perſon removed, according to their Deſire: And that ſhe promiſed her ſelf, they "would concur with her, That if they could cure their Animoſities and Diviſions at "Home, it would be the moſt effectual Method to ſecure the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

† July 3.

The Lord Chancellor having, the next † Day, reported her Majeſty's Anſwer to the Houſe of Peers, the Duke of Buckingham, Lord Preſident, very frankly ſaid, "He "never heard of any Inſtances that had yet been made to the Duke of Lorrain, for "the removing the Pretender out of his Dominions. Had either of the Two ‖ prin-cipal Miniſters of State been in the Houſe, they might have explain'd her Maje-ſty's Anſwer; but being both at Dinner with the Duke d' Aumont, the French Am-baſſador, the Earl of Sunderland took that Opportunity to make a Motion for a Se-cond Addreſs; which was back'd by the Earl of Nottingham; and after ſome Oppo-ſition, it was order'd, "That an humble Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, to "return her Thanks for her Anſwer to their Addreſs; and for the Aſſurances ſhe "had been pleas'd to give them, of repeating her Inſtances for removing the Pre-tender; and to expreſs their Surprize, that ſuch Inſtances had not had their full "Effect, notwithſtanding the French King, and the King of Spain, had ſhew'd their "Compliance to her Majeſty's Deſires on that Occaſion: And to aſſure her Majeſty, "that this Houſe would ſtand by her, and ſupport her, in whatever her Majeſty "ſhould judge proper for obtaining a Demand, which was ſo warranted by the "Laws of Nations, and ſo neceſſary for the Honour and Safety of her Majeſty, "and for the preſent and future Peace and Quiet of the People." The Queen re-turn'd no particular Anſwer to this Second Addreſs: But though Applications of this Nature were known to be ungrateful, both to her Majeſty, and her Miniſters, yet on the 1ſt of July, General Stanhope made a Motion in the Houſe of Commons, to the ſame Purpoſe with that of the Earl of Wharton in the Houſe of Peers, and was ſeconded by Mr. Lechmere. The only Objection rais'd againſt it, was ſtarted by Sir William Whitlocke, who ſaid, he remember'd, That the like Addreſs was formerly made to the Protector, for having Charles Stuart remov'd out of France; notwithſtanding which, that Prince was, ſome Time after, reſtor'd to his Father's Throne: But, never-theleſs, theleſs, the Members who were ſhrewdly ſuſpected of wiſhing well to the Royal Exile, being ſhy to ſhew their real Inclinations, in ſo critical a Juncture, when the Parliament was ſo near expiring, and a new Election coming on, it was, according to Mr. Stanhope's Motion, Reſolv'd, Nemine Contradicente, "That an humble Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, acknowledging the great Care her Majeſty had always taken, particularly in the late Treaties of Peace and Guaranty, to prevent the Pretender to her Throne, being in a Condition to diſturb theſe Realms; and to beſeech her Majeſty, that ſhe would uſe the moſt ſpeedy and preſſing Inſtances with the Duke of Lorrain, and with all other Princes and States in Amity or Correſpondence with her Majeſty, that they would not, under any Pretext whatſoever, receive, or ſuffer to continue within any of their Dominions, the Perſon, who in Defiance of her Majeſty's moſt undoubted Title to the Crown, and the Settlement thereof in the illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover, had aſſumed the Title of King of theſe Realms; and to aſſure her Majeſty, that the Commons of Great Britain would, on all Occaſions, ſupport her Majeſty in ſuch Steps, as ſhould be neceſſary towards rendring thoſe Inſtances effectual." After this, a Committee was appointed to draw up the ſaid Addreſs; which Mr. Stanhope, their Chairman, reported to the Houſe on the 3d of July; and the ſame being unanimouſly approved, was, Five Days after, preſented by the whole Houſe, to the Queen, who coldly told them, She thank'd them for it, and would give Directions according as they deſired; which, however, was not comply'd with, 'till Two or Three Months after, at the Sollicitation of the Treaſurer. They who inquired into the Reaſons of theſe Addreſſes againſt the Pretender, rightly aſcribed them, not only to the magnificent Reception he met with in Lorrain, but alſo to the Affection which many openly ſhew'd for him in Great Britain: To this Purpoſe, we may take Notice of Two Addreſſes, which, about this Time, were preſented to the Queen by Sir Hugh Paterſon, Baronet, introduced by the Earl of Mar, and afterwards inſerted in the London Gazette. The firſt, of the Magiſtrates, and Town Council of the Burgh of Inverneſs, in North-Britain, contain'd this remarkable Paragraph, viz. We, without Reſerve, depend on your Majeſty's Wiſdom, in ſecuring our Religion, and the Succeſſion to the Hereditary Crown of Great Britain, in the Family of your Royal Progenitors, the moſt ancient Line of Succeſſion in the World; being as much convinced, that our Guarantee is entirely in your Hands, as your ſerene Majeſty does place yours in your People. The other Addreſs, from the Town Council and Inhabitants of the Loyal Burgh of Nairn, had this Paſſage in it, viz. We know not with what Modeſty we can preſume to addreſs your Majeſty, in the Matter of Succeſſion, leſt we ſhould ſeem to call in Queſtion your Majeſty's unqueſtionable Prudence, or the Faithfulneſs of your Majeſty's Council: And therefore we ſincerely declare, That our utmoſt Wiſhes reach no further, than that our Poſterity may reap the Effects of your Majeſty's wiſe Choice, while we think our ſelves happy under your Majeſty's Adminiſtration, all our Days. Theſe Addreſſes ſpeak ſo plain, that they need no Comment: But on the other hand, we may alſo take Notice, that ſome Time before, an Addreſs from the City of Glaſgow, in a quite different Strain, at leaſt, as to the Succeſſion, was preſented to the Queen, by the Members for that City, introduced by the Duke of Argyle.

Unanimous Reſolution for it.

Two remarkable Addreſſes from Scotland, in favour of the Lineal Succeſſion.

The Queen having appointed the Seventh Day of July for a publick Thankſgiving for the ſafe and honourable Peace lately concluded, and invited her Parliament to attend her to St. Paul's Cathedral, both Houſes repaired thither with the uſual State; but her Majeſty not having entirely recover'd her Strength, ſince her laſt Fit of the Gout, ſhe could not be preſent at that Solemnity. The Abſence of moſt of the Whig Members, was owing to another Cauſe: And, indeed, it would have been a downright Mockery of Religion, for them to return GOD Almighty Thanks for a Peace, which they had ſtrenuouſly oppoſed, and ſtill loudly condemn'd. In the Evening, there were great Bonfires and Illuminations, throughout the Cities of London and Weſtminſter; and magnificent Fireworks were play'd off on the Thames, over againſt Whitehall. Not many Days after, the Queen went to * the Houſe of Peers, and having given the Royal Aſſent to ſeveral publick and private Acts, ſhe made the following Speech to both Houſes:

Thankſgiving for the Peace July 7.

* July 16. Acts paſs'd.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

I Come now to put an End to this Seſſion with great Satisfaction, and return you all my hearty Thanks for the good Service you have done to the Publick.

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

I muſt particularly thank you for the Supplies you have now given; I will take Care to apply them, as far as they will reach, to ſatisfy the Services you have voted.

I hope, at the next Meeting, the Affair of Commerce will be ſo well underſtood, that the advantageous Conditions I have obtained from France, will be made effectual for the Benefit of our Trade.

A. D. 1713.

I cannot part with ſo Good and ſo Loyal a Houſe of Commons, without expreſſing how ſenſible I am of the Affection, Zeal and Duty, with which you have behaved your ſelves; and I think my ſelf therefore obliged to take Notice of thoſe remarkable Services you have performed.

At your firſt Meeting you found a Method, without farther Charge to my People, to eaſe them of the heavy Load of more than Nine Millions; and the way of doing it, may bring great Advantage to the Nation.

In this Seſſion you have enabled me to be juſt in paying the Debts to my Servants.

And as you furniſhed Supplies for carrying on the War, ſo you have ſtrengthened my Hands in obtaining a Peace.

Thus you have ſhewed your ſelves the true Repreſentatives of my Loyal Commons, by the juſt Regard you have paid to the Good of your Country, and my Honour: Theſe Proceedings will, I doubt not, preſerve the Memory of this Parliament to Poſterity.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

At my coming to the Crown, I found a War prepared for me. God has bleſſed my Arms with many Victories, and, at laſt, has enabled me to make them uſeful, by a ſafe and honourable Peace

I heartily thank you for the Aſſiſtance you have given me therein, and I promiſe my ſelf, that with your Concurrence, it will be laſting.

To this End I recommend it to you all, to make my Subjects truly ſenſible what they gain by the Peace, and that you will endeavour to diſſipate thoſe groundleſs Jealouſies which have been ſo induſtriouſly fomented amongſt us, that our unhappy Diviſions may not weaken, and, in ſome ſort, endanger, the Advantages I have obtained for my Kingdoms.

There are ſome (very few, I hope) who will never be ſatisfied with any Government; it is neceſſary, therefore, that you ſhew your Love to your Country, by exerting your ſelves, to obviate the Malice of the Ill-minded, and to undeceive the Deluded.

Nothing can eſtabliſh Peace at Home, nothing can recover the Diſorders that have happened during ſo long a War, but a ſteady adhering to the Conſtitution in Church and State.

Such as are true to theſe Principles, are only to be rely'd on; and as they have the beſt Title to my Favour, ſo you may depend upon my having no Intereſt nor Aim, but your Advantage, and the ſecuring of our Religion and Liberty.

I hope, for the Quiet of theſe Nations, and the univerſal Good, that I ſhall, next Winter, meet my Parliament, reſolved to act upon the ſame Principles, with the ſame Prudence, and with ſuch Vigor, as may enable me to ſupport the Liberties of Europe Abroad, and reduce the Spirit of Faction at Home.

This Parliament prorogued and diſſolv'd.

After this Speech, both Houſes were prorogued to the 28th, but never to meet again, being diſſolv'd before that Day came: And thus ended the Third, and laſt Seſſion, of the Third Britiſh Parliament; which ſome have diſtinguiſh'd, by the Epithet of (a) PACIFICK, and whoſe Obſequiouſneſs to the Miniſters, has left upon it a ſtrong Imputation of CORRUPTION. It may, however, be obſerv'd, that though this Houſe of Commons was moſtly made up of Country Gentlemen, who, having born the greateſt Burden of the War, were eaſily prepoſſeſs'd againſt thoſe who were ſuſpected to have prolong'd it for their private Advantage; yet, when ſo capital a Point, as the Trade of Great Britain, came under their Conſideration, many worthy Patriots threw off all mean Dependance, and firmly adhered to the true Intereſt of their Country.

Rejoycings upon the Expiration of Dr. Sacheverel's Sentence.

The Sentence of the Houſe of Lords, by which Dr. Sacheverel was forbid to preach, during the Space of Three Years, expiring on Monday, the 23d of March, that Day was celebrated in London, and in ſeveral Parts of the Kingdom, with extraordinary Rejoycings; as it were for the Reſtoration of a Sovereign, or the Deliverance from a publick Calamity. his returning to the Exercise of his Function. His Subject was, the Duty of praying for our Enemies; from this Text, Luke xxiii. 34. Father forgive them, for they know not what they do: And it must be confess'd, that, bating the obvious (though tacit) arrogant and impious Parallel between his Sufferings, and of those our Blessed Saviour, he made a very good and useful Sermon. Not long after, the House of Commons, to shew their Dislike of his former Prosecution and Censure, desired him to preach before them at St. Margarets, Westminster, on the 29th of May, being the Restoration-Day; which he did accordingly, and had the Thanks of the House return'd him for his Sermon. Nor was the Court backward in rewarding the Doctor's late Service; for the Rectorship of St. Andrews-Holborn, being, about this Time, become vacant, he was immediately promoted to that rich Living. About this Time, also, Dr. Jonathan Swift, who had served the present Managers, by writing several Libels against the Whigs, and last Ministry, was, by the Duke of Ormond, promoted to the Deanry of St. Patrick, Dublin: Dr. Francis Atterbury, another warm Stickler for the Tory-Party, was made Bishop of Rochester; and Dr. Smalridge, a Divine of the same Principles, and Dean of Carlisle, was made Dean of Christ-Church, Oxon. At the same Time, Care was taken to put the most important Towns in the Kingdom, in the Hands of such Persons, as were prepared blindly to follow the Queen's Measures. With this View, the Earl of Dorset being removed from being Governor of Dover, and Warden of the Cinque-Ports, was succeeded by the Duke of Ormond, whose Son-in-Law, the Lord Ashburnham, was made Deputy-Governor, and Deputy-Warden: And Sir Henry Bellasyse, was appointed Governor of the Town of Berwick upon Tweed. Not long after, a Pension of Five Thousand Pounds per Annum, was granted to the Duke of Ormond, for the Term of Fifteen Years, out of the Revenues of Ireland, in Consideration of his eminent Services; and the Lord Ashburnham was appointed Colonel and Captain of the first Troop of Horse-Guards, in the room of the Earl of Portland, who was order'd to dispose of that Post for the Sum of Ten Thousand Pounds. Sir John Powel, one of the Judges of the Queen's-Bench, happening to die * at this Juncture, on his return from Bath, was succeeded by Sir Thomas Powis; and Sir William Banister, a Serjeant at Law, was made one of the Barons of the Exchequer, in the room of Sir Salathiel Lovel, lately deceased. Some Months before †, James Cardonnel, Esq; one of the late General's Creatures, was removed from being one of the Commissioners of the Salt-Office, and was succeeded by Martin Killegrew, Esq;. And the Duke of Montague obtain'd the Queen's Leave to travel beyond Sea, having generously resolv'd to go and follow the Fortune of the Duke of Marlborough, his Father-in-Law. About the same Time, the Duke of Montrose, a Person well-affected to the Protestant Succession, being removed from the important Place of Lord Privy-Seal of Scotland, was succeeded in it by the Duke of Athol: Which Change rather increased, than abated the present Ferment in that Part of Great Britain. For on the one hand, the Presbyterian Ministers refused to observe the publick Thanksgiving Day for the Peace, appointed by her Majesty; and, on the other hand, the Friends to the Chevalier de St. George, presuming either on the Lenity of the Government, or on their own Strength, made great Preparations to celebrate that Prince's Birth-Day.

The Danger with which the Hanover Succession was threaten'd, appear'd to be the more real and imminent, by reason of the great Countenance the Roman-Catholicks and Jacobites receiv'd, from the distinguishing Marks of Favour, which, at this critical Juncture, were shewn to the Duke D' Aumont, Ambassador Extraordinary from France. He arriv'd at Dover, on the 30th of December 1712, under the Discharge of the Cannon of the Castle; and came to London on the 2d of January; having been receiv'd, in the Places thro' which he pass'd, with great Acclamations of the People, and all other Marks of Respect. The same Evening, his Grace was complimented, and entertain'd at Supper, by the Earl of Dartmouth, Principal Secretary of State; and lay at the Duke of Powis's House, in Ormond-street, which, with another House adjoining to it, had, by his Servants, been fitted up for his Accommodation. The next * Day, the Duke D' Aumont went to give a Visit to the Lord Treasurer; who not being in a Condition to receive it, by reason of his Indisposition, his Excellency went from thence to the Duke of Ormond's, whom he could not see neither; his Grace being, at that Time, under great Affliction, upon the News of the sudden Death of his Daughter, the Lady Ashburnham. The Duke D' Aumont went afterwards to visit the Duke of Buckingham, Lord President of the Council, and the Lord Viscount Bolingbroke, Principal Secretary of State; and then went to dine with the Marquis de Monteleone; having given Marks of his Liberality to the Populace, that constantly attended his Coach, with repeated Huzzas; throwing amongst them, several Times, Handfuls of Money, and even some ſome Pieces of Gold. The next Day, being Sunday, his Excellency was entertain'd at Dinner by the Lord Bolingbroke; who, in the Evening, conducted him to a private Audience of the Queen, who return'd his Compliment in very gracious Terms. The French Ambaſſador was accompany'd by about Forty Gentlemen, all in deep Mourning: But, it was obſerv'd, that, excepting the Marquis de Carvoiſin, a Relation to his Excellency, Monſieur Nicholaï, Son to the Firſt Preſident of la Chambre des Comptes, Monſieur le Vidame de Cambray, and Monſieur de St. Aubin, Counſellor in the Parliament of Paris; the reſt of his Excellency's Retinue rather diſgrac'd, than credited his Embaſſy; being made up of obſcure Perſons, among whom were ſome Tradeſmen, who, to get their Expences, brought over ſeveral Sorts of Merchandize, with the Ambaſſador's Equipage.

On the 5th of January, the Earl of Dartmouth, the Lord Bolingbroke, and ſeveral other Perſons of Diſtinction, return'd and paid Viſits to the French Ambaſſador; as did, in particular, the next Day, the Lord Treaſurer himſelf. But, that very Day, his Excellency found, by Experience, what little Streſs is to be laid on the Applauſe of the giddy Multitude: For, having ceas'd to throw Money amongſt them, the Rabble gave free Vent to their natural Averſeneſs to France, and Popery; and, inſtead of following his Coach with Acclamations of Joy, ſet up a Cry of No Papiſt, No Pretender. Some of the more bold committed greater Inſolencies before the Ambaſſador's Houſe; and others offering to oppoſe them, there happen'd a Scuffle between them: Whereupon it was thought fit, to order the Conſtables of that Pariſh to look to the Security of his Excellency's Houſe. Nor was this Precaution unneceſſary; for, by this Time, there was a general Clamour among the People, againſt the French Ambaſſador, upon Account of vaſt Quantities of Wines, Silks, and other Goods, which his Domeſticks were ſaid to have imported Cuſtom-free, to the Prejudice of the Tradeſmen of London and Weſtminſter. The Truth is, that ſome French Merchants took that Opportunity to bring over a good deal of Burgundy and Champagne; which, before his Excellency's Arrival, were ſold by Retail, at his Houſe, and other Places, at lower Rates than at the Taverns; and, at the ſame Time, other Frenchmen, who pretended to be of his Excellency's Retinue, brought alſo ſome Silks, Buttons, Perukes, Toys, and other ſmall Wares, which they expos'd to Sale, unknown to the Ambaſſador. But, tho' 'twas certain, that all the Wines imported on this Occaſion (except the Two Tons allow'd to an Ambaſſador Extraordinary) paid the full Duties at the Cuſtom-Houſe, which amounted to about 2500 l.; tho', on the other hand, the Duke D' Aumont, upon his Arrival in London, forbad the ſelling of Wines, or any other Commodities in his Houſe; yet ſome People were ſo inſolent, as to put up the Sign of a Bunch of Grapes before it, in the Night-Time; and ſeveral Ballads and Lampoons were written thereupon, both in French and Engliſh. One of them, intitled, The Merchant A-la-mode, containing many bitter and ſcandalous Reflections, not only againſt the Ambaſſador of France, but alſo againſt the Queen's Prime Miniſters; ſtrict Search was made after the Publiſhers of it, one of whom was committed to Newgate.

Inſolencies committed by the Mob againſt the French Ambaſſador.

Ballads againſt him.

Beſides theſe publick Inſults offer'd to the French Ambaſſador, private Malice was ſtill buſy, to make his Excellency uneaſy: For, ſeveral Letters were ſent him by the Penny-Poſt, to give him notice, that his Houſe would be ſet on fire; which, whether by Deſign, or Accident, happen'd accordingly, on Monday the 26th of January. That Day, the Duke D' Aumont entertain'd at Dinner the Ambaſſador of Venice, the Envoys of Sweden and Florence, the Lord Waldegrave, and ſome other Perſons of Diſtinction; whom, by way of Jeſt, his Excellency acquainted with the threatning Letters that had been ſent him. But the Company were ſoon alarm'd in good Earneſt by a Cry of FIRE; which having broke out, about Three in the Afternoon, in an upper Room, ſpread it ſelf with ſuch Violence, that, in leſs than an Hour and an Half, the whole Houſe was burnt to the Ground; and all that the Ambaſſador's Domeſticks could do, was to ſave his Plate, and Part of his richeſt Furniture. The Duke of Ormond (whom his Excellency had, that Morning, preſented with a fine Barbary Horſe) having ſpeedy Notice of this Accident, caus'd immediately Detachments of the Horſe and Foot-Guards to march to Ormond-ſtreet, to ſecure the Ambaſſador's Goods; went himſelf to the Fire, to direct and incourage the Inginiers and Fire-men; but notwithſtanding all the Care and Diligence that could be uſed, the Fire could not be maſter'd till late in the Evening; by which Time, not only the Ambaſſador's Houſe, with a large Chapel, lately built, adjoining to it, but alſo a Houſe on each ſide, were almoſt intirely conſum'd. The Loſs the Ambaſſador, and his Domeſticks, ſuſtain'd by this Fire, was variouſly reported; ſome of his Retinue magnifying it to a prodigious Degree, and indifferent Per-

Perſons relating it as inconſiderable. How the Fire began, was then, and ſtill remains a more difficult Queſtion to be reſolv'd: It was at firſt given out, that it happen'd by the Careleſneſs of his Excellency's Confectioner, who was preparing Criſp-Almonds for the Deſert; and going down Stairs, without leaving any body to look after his Stove, the Fire broke out, either in his, or the adjoining Room, before he came up again. Others reported, that the Houſe was ſet on fire by an Iron Pot, full of Charcoal, that had been put in the Middle of a Room newly painted, and in order to dry it. But the Letters that had been ſent to the Ambaſſador, affording Matter of Suſpicion; and it being affirm'd, on the other hand, that the Fire began in the upper Room where the Duke of Powis's Goods were lock'd in, ſo that no body could get into it; it was, by many, believ'd, that Two Bricklayers, who, Two or Three Days before, had been imploy'd to mend the Tiles of the Houſe, had ſet the ſame on fire, at the Inſtigation of the Whigs; who were now to bear the Odium of any ill Accident, of which the Cauſe was not well known. Upon this Suſpicion, the Two Bricklayers were taken into the Cuſtody of one of the Queen's Meſſengers; and an Advertiſement was afterwards publiſh'd in the * London Gazette, importing, That Her Majeſty thought fit to promiſe, that if any of the Perſons, who wrote the Letters to the Duke D'Aumont, or any other Perſon whatſoever, ſhould diſcover the Contrivers or Actors of ſo ſcandalous and wicked a Deſign, ſo that they, or any of them, might be brought to Juſtice; ſuch Perſon, or Perſons, ſhould receive the Reward of Five Hundred Pounds, and Her Majeſty's Pardon for the Offence. The ſtricteſt Inquiry that could be made, not having afforded Ground to fix this Fire upon any particular Perſon, the Generality continued in their firſt Opinion, that it happen'd thro' mere Accident. But many who conſider'd, that as ſoon as the Queen was inform'd of the Misfortune that had befallen the French Ambaſſador, ſhe gave immediate Orders, that the fineſt Apartment in Somerſet-Houſe ſhould be prepar'd for his Accommodation; began to entertain a Suſpicion, that Powis-Houſe was deſignedly ſet on fire, for a Pretence to remove the French Ambaſſador to a Royal Palace on the River Thames, where any Perſons might have private Acceſs to him. Others carried their Surmiſes ſo far, as to imagine, that the Pretender himſelf was come over with his Grace, and had private Interviews with the Queen, and ſome of her Miniſters. Theſe Jealouſies were increas'd, by the frequent Entertainments and Balls, which the Duke D' Aumont gave in his Apartment; where a great Concourſe of Perſons reſorting in Maſks, he had an Opportunity to ſound the Sentiments of many about the Chevalier de St George. On the other hand, the French Ambaſſador was highly careſs'd, and magnificently regal'd by the Queen's Miniſters, and ſome of the Nobility: But, amidſt theſe Jollities, an Accident happen'd, which gave him ſome Uneaſineſs. On Saturday, the 16th of May, between Three and Four a-Clock in the Morning, One of his Four Swiſſers, or Porters, coming out of a Publick Houſe near Catherine-Street, with Two or Three of his Comrades, met with Mr. Purdon, a reform'd Officer, who being ſomewhat in Liquor, look'd the Swiſſer full in the Face, and could not forbear laughing at his great Whiſkers, and ſtrange Dreſs. The blunt Swiſſer taking this for an Affront, immediately drew his Sabre, and gave Mr. Purdon a Cut; upon which, the latter drew his Sword, made a home Thruſt at him, and kill'd him on the Spot. Mr. Purdon was, ſome Days after, try'd at the Old-Baily; but it appearing that the Swiſſer had been the Aggreſſor, he was acquitted: Which made the French Ambaſſador's Domeſticks extream cautious of quarrelling with Engliſhmen.

Some Time before, Mr. Prior having, in the Queen's Name, ſollicited the Releaſe of the French Proteſtants, who were on board the Galleys, on account of their Religion; the Marquis de Torcy took that Opportunity to complain to him, that the French Refugees in England made it their Buſineſs, bitterly to inveigh againſt the King, his Maſter; and naming, in particular, Mr. Armand Dubourdieu, a French Miniſter of the Royal Chapel in the Savoy, Weſtminſter, (who, indeed, had diſtinguiſh'd himſelf that way) deſired that he might be puniſh'd, and be made an Example to the reſt. At the ſame Time, Monſieur de Torcy directed the Duke d' Aumont, to demand the ſame at the Court of Great Britain, whereupon his Excellency preſented the following notable Memorial.

Complaint againſt Mr. Armand Dubourdieu.

What Reaſon ſoever the King may hitherto have had, not to abate of his juſt Severity againſt ſuch of his Subjects as have been ſentenc'd to the Galleys, for Contravening his Ordinances in Matters of Religion, his Majeſty, nevertheleſs, in Conſideration of the Queen of Great Britain, has given his Orders to releaſe the leaſt Guilty, and to let them enjoy the Favour from which they were more and more excluded, by the Conduct of the Refugees, and particularly of their Miniſters, towards his Majeſty.

tions, was pleaſed to intercede in their Behalf with the King, they will certainly render themſelves unworthy of that Favour, which ſhe has procured for them, if they ſhould continue to talk with ſo little regard of a Prince, to whom they owe ſo profound Reſpects.

But what Appearance is there of keeping them in Duty, if thoſe very Perſons, whoſe Character obliges them to give others an Example of Moderation, launch out, even in Publick, into paſſionate and injurious Diſcourſes; and, if one may ſay ſo, into Blaſphemies? It is therefore a Matter of Importance, to inflict an EXEMPLARY PUNISHMENT on thoſe who have ſet no Bounds to their Malice, and have abuſed the Miniſtry of the Pulpit, to diſperſe their Bitterneſs and Animoſity againſt the King. As no body has expreſt himſelf with more Rage and Scandal than Mr. Armand Dubourdieu, Miniſter of the Church of the Savoy, whoſe whole Religion is reduced into Declamations againſt France, and the Perſon of the King, (he thinking, by that Means, to gain the Eſteem of Parties, to conceal his ſcandalous Life, and to ſcreen his Diſorders from common Inconveniencies) and beſides, ſince ſuch a turbulent Temper as his, being a Man moved by the Spirit of Party, and Faction, cannot but be a diſagreeable Subject to the Queen, to the Nation, and to the Conſiſtory, who have already ſet a Mark upon him; therefore the Puniſhment of Armand Dubourdieu, is the only Thing that Monſieur the Duke d' Aumont takes the Liberty to demand of her Britannick Majeſty; it being juſt, that at the ſame Time the King, out of meer Complaiſance for her, is induced to give his Subjects the Marks of ſuch extraordinary Clemency, ſhe ſhould ſuppreſs Calumny and Irreligion, cover'd with the Maſk of Apoſtolick Zeal, and by the Puniſhment of one Man only, impoſe Silence on others, as to the Sacred Perſon of a Prince, ſo ſtrictly united to her Britannick Majeſty by the Ties of Blood.

Mr. Prior having, beforehand, acquainted the Lord Bolingbroke with the Purport of this Memorial, which claſh'd with the Conſtitution of our Free Government, the Queen was prepared with an Anſwer, That this was none of her Buſineſs, but of the Biſhop of London, to whom the ſaid Memorial was referr'd, with Orders to examine Mr. Dubourdieu. The latter having * appear'd before the Biſhop, with Four Elders of his Church, the Biſhop communicated to them the French Ambaſſador's Memorial, which being read, his Lordſhip ask'd the French Miniſter, What he had to ſay to it? Mr. Dubourdieu thereupon anſwer'd, That the Memorial containing only General Complaints, he had nothing elſe to ſay, but that during the War, he had, after the Example of ſeveral Prelates, and other Clergymen of the Church of England, freely preached againſt the Common Enemy and Perſecutor of the Church; and, that the greateſt Part of his Sermons being printed, with his Name affixed, he was far from diſowning them; but that ſince the Proclamation of the Peace, he had not ſaid any Thing in the leaſt, that did regard the Perſon of the French King. The Biſhop made him repeat the Words, Since the Proclamation of the Peace; and aſking of the Elders, Whether this was true? They anſwer'd, That it was; upon which the Biſhop ſaid, That he would make his Report to the Queen. He did ſo; and in ſuch a Manner, that the French Ambaſſador found no Encouragement to inſiſt on his Demand.

The Duke d' Aumont makes his publick Entry, July 1.

Notwithſtanding this Diſappointment, about a Month after, the Duke d' Aumont made his publick Entry, with great Magnificence, attended by Two Gentlemen of the Horſe, Twelve Pages, Thirty Footmen, and Nine of his own Coaches, Five of which drawn by Eight Horſes, the other by Six: His Liveries being of Scarlet Cloth, cover'd with a Gold and Green Lace. His Excellency having, according to Cuſtom, been ſplendidly entertain'd for Three Days, at the Queen's Expence, in Somerſet-Houſe, he was from thence conducted † to his firſt publick Audience of her Majeſty, to whom he addreſs'd himſelf in this Manner:

The French Ambaſſador preſents the Queen with Nine Coach-Horſes.

This Compliment was extreamly well receiv'd; and the French Ambaſſador, who ſtill attentively ſought all Occaſions to ingratiate himſelf with the Queen, made her, Four Days after, a Preſent of a fine ſet of Coach-Horſes, dappled Grey, that had drawn his Coach of State, on the Day he made his publick Entry. Not long after *, the Queen being come to Hyde-Park, to ſee her Houſhold Troops review'd by the Duke of Ormond, the French Ambaſſador took this Opportunity to wait on her Majeſty; and, alighting from his Horſe, notwithſtanding the Rain, which pour'd all the while, entertain'd her, bare-headed, by her Coach-Side; and compli-mented both her Majeſty, and her General, on the fine Appearance of the Troops: Which, in a remarkable ſtrain of Wit, he own'd, He was glad to ſee them where they were.

Fruitleſs Application made by the French, for the Preſervation of the Harbour of Dunkirk.

About this Time, undoubtedly upon Preſumption of the Duke d' Aumont's Countenance and Favour in England, the French reſolv'd to try, how far his Intereſt with the Britiſh Miniſters would go? And thereupon Monſieur Tugghe, Deputy from the Magiſtrates of Dunkirk, preſented to the Queen an Addreſs, or Petition, where-
" in he begg'd her Majeſty's Clemency, for ſparing the Harbour and Port of that " Town:" But he was told by the Lord Bolingbroke, " That the Queen beheld with " Sorrow, the Damages which the Inhabitants of that Town would ſuſtain, by the " Demolition of its Ramparts and Harbour: But that ſhe did not think it
" convenient to make any Alteration in an Affair agreed on, and deter-
" min'd by a Treaty." Monſieur Tugghe was not diſcouraged by this Repulſe; but preſented a Second Addreſs, or Memorial, to her Majeſty; wherein he ſuggeſted, " That the Preſervation of the Harbour of Dunkirk, without Works
" and Fortifications, might, in Time, be equally uſeful, and become even abſolute-
" ly neceſſary, both for her Majeſty's Political Views, and the Good of her Sub" jects:" This he endeavour'd to evince, by a long Deduction of ſeveral Particulars; and then he concluded, with preſuming to hope, " That her Majeſty would graci-
" ouſly be pleas'd to recall part of her Sentence, by cauſing her Thunder-bolts to " fall only on the martial Works which might have incurr'd her Majeſty's Diſplea-
" ſure; and by ſparing only the Mole and Dykes, which, in their naked Condition,
" could, for the future, be no more than an Object of Pity. Nay, added Monſieur
" Tugghe, they ſhall even be an eternal Monument of your Majeſty's Glory, ſince, by inceſ-
" ſantly reminding the Beholders of the dreadful Ornaments, of which they ſhall remain
" deſpoil'd by your Majeſty's Will alone, they will, at the ſame Time, eternally preſerve the

What Anſwer was return'd to this Memorial, never came to publick Knowledge: But Monſieur Tugghe, whether of his own Head, or by the Suggeſtion and Encouragement of other Perſons, having cauſed it to be printed and diſperſed in Engliſh, undoubtedly to try how it would be reliſh'd by the People: Mr. Richard Steele, who, with ſeveral other eminent Writers, (a) exerted his Parts in Defence of Engliſh Liberty, and of the Whig Intereſt, and who, at this very Juncture, wrote a Weekly

Mr. Steele ſeverely animadverts on Mr. Tugghe's Memorial, Aug. 7. 1713.

" That the very common People knew, that within Two Months after the ſigning " of the Peace, the Works towards the Sea were to be demoliſh'd, and within Three " Months after it, the Works towards the Land.

" That the ſaid Peace was ſigned the laſt of March, O. S.

" That the Parliament had been told from the Queen, that the Equivalent for it " is in the Hands of the French King.

" That the Sieur Tugghe has the Impudence to aſk the Queen to remit the moſt " material Part of the Articles of Peace between her Majeſty and his Maſter.

" That the Britiſh Nation received more Damage in their Trade, from the Port " of Dunkirk, than from almoſt all the Ports of France, either in the Ocean, or in " the Mediterranean.

" That Fleets of above Thirty Sail, had come together out of Dunkirk, during " the late War, and taken Ships of War, as well as Merchant-Men.

" That the Pretender ſailed from thence to Scotland; and that it was the only " Port the French had, 'till you come to Breſt, for the whole Length of St. George's " Channel, where any conſiderable Naval Armament could be made.

" That deſtroying the Fortifications of Dunkirk, was an inconſiderable Advantage " to England, in Compariſon to the Advantage of deſtroying the Mole, Dykes and " Harbour, it being the Naval Force from thence, which only could hurt the Bri- " tiſh Nation.

" That the Dutch, who ſuffer'd equally with us from thoſe of Dunkirk, were, " probably, induced to ſign the Treaty with France, from this Conſideration, That " the Town and Harbour of Dunkirk ſhould be deſtroyed.

" That the Situation of Dunkirk is ſuch, as that it may always keep Runners to " obſerve all Ships ſailing on the Thames and Medway.

" That all the Suggeſtions which the Sieur Tugghe brought, concerning the Dutch, " were falſe and ſcandalous.

" That whether it might be advantageous to the Trade of Holland, or not, that " Dunkirk ſhould be demoliſh'd, it was neceſſary for the Safety, Honour and Liber- " ty of England, that it ſhould be ſo.

" That when Dunkirk was demoliſhed, the Power of France, on that Side, ſhould " it ever be turned againſt us, would be removed ſeveral Hundred Miles further " off of Great Britain, than it was at preſent.

" That after the Demolition, there could be no conſiderable Preparations made " at Sea by the French, in all the Channel, but at Breſt; and that Great Britain be- " ing an Iſland, which cannot be attacked but by a Naval Power, we might eſteem " France effectually removed, by the Demolition, from Great Britain, as far as the " Diſtance from Dunkirk to Breſt.

Theſe Reflections were not only a great Mortification to Monſieur Tugghe, and the other French Agents, but gave alſo no ſmall Offence to ſome of the Britiſh Miniſters, as appear'd by the ſevere Animadverſions that were publiſh'd thereupon, by the Authors of the Examiner: But, on the other hand, the Neceſſity of the immediate Demolition of Dunkirk, was urged by ſeveral other Whig Writers, particularly by Mr. John Toland, in a Pamphlet, entitled, DUNKIRK or DOVER; which was receiv'd with great Applauſe.

How little ſoever thoſe at the Helm were inclin'd to regard the Clamours raiſed by their Enemies, among the People; yet, about the beginning of September, Colonel Armſtrong, and Colonel Clayton were, by a Patent under the Great Seal, appointed Commiſſioners to ſee the Fortifications of Dunkirk demoliſh'd and raſed; and, at the ſame Time, Two Captains of Men of War were, by the Admiralty, named to ſee the Harbour ruin'd, and fill'd up. Accordingly, on the 7th of September, the Two Colonels ſet out for Dunkirk, where Three French Battalions, and as many Swiſs, being come on the 24th, and encamping, the one without Port-Newport, the other without Port-Royal, they began, on the 26th, the Demolition, the French between the Two Gates before-mention'd, and the Swiſs between the Baſon and Citadel. That Day they pluck'd up a good Number of Palliſades, and threw down ſome of the Traverſes; and continued working the 27th and 28th, 'till Three in the Afternoon, when a Diſpute aroſe between Sir James Abercromby, the Britiſh Commandant, and Monſieur le Blanc, the French Intendant of the Province, about the manner of carrying on the Demolition. The French, it ſeems, intended to have made a Breach in the Ramparts, or main Fortifications of the Town, but the Two Engliſh Commiſſioners having made the Commandant ſenſible, "That, if the ſame "was permitted, the Engliſh Gariſon were not ſafe, and the French might eaſily "make themſelves Maſters of the Place;" Sir James Abercromby inſiſted, and it was, at laſt, agreed to by Monſieur le Blanc, that all the Outworks, both towards the Sea, and the Land, ſhould be firſt demoliſh'd, next, the Harbour ruin'd and fill'd, afterwards the main Fortifications of the Place raſed and deſtroyed; and laſt of all, the Citadel. This Point being cleared, the French and Swiſs Soldiers fell to work again on the 29th, about Noon; and the next Day began to remove the great Guns from Fort-Gaillard, Fort de Revers, the Riſbank, and the Two Forts at the Heads, or Entrance of the Port; and the Miners began to make Mines, in order to blow up thoſe Forts, and the other Outworks; which was done accordingly, towards the end of November. But notwithſtanding all this, the French found afterwards an Expedient to evade the Letter of the Treaty (a), by making a new Canal at Mardyke, that had a Communication from the Sea, to the Baſon of Dunkirk. By this Time, the Duke d'Aumont was grown weary of his expenſive Embaſſy, in which he had not all the Succeſs he, at firſt, expected; and having taken his Audience of Leave of the Queen at Windſor, about the latter end * of Auguſt, he ſet out from London, on his return Home, on the 7th of November.

Before the Queen left Kenſington, ſhe reſolv'd to beſtow ſome Marks of her Favour on the Earl of Peterborow, whoſe eminent Services in Spain, were ſtill unrewarded; and who, though not in any great Confidence with the Prime Managers, had yet been inſtrumental in bringing part of their pacifick Meaſures to bear. Hereupon, at a Chapter of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter, held on the 3d Day of Auguſt, his Lordſhip was elected Knight Companion, in the room of the late Duke of Hamilton; and, the next † Day, inſtall'd at Windſor; together with the Dukes of Beaufort and Kent, the Earl of Poulet, the Earl of Oxford and Mortimer, and the Earl of Strafford; Sir Jacob Banks ſtanding Proxy for this laſt. About the ſame Time, the Biſhop of Briſtol, Lord Privy-Seal, was, in Conſideration of his late pacifick Labours, tranſlated to the See of London, vacant by the Death of Dr. Henry Compton, a Prelate of Noble Birth, but more illuſtrious ‖ by his Chriſtian, Moral, and Political Virtues, which happen'd juſt a Month before.

On the 5th of Auguſt, the Queen went from Kenſington to Hampton-Court, where a general Council being held, Three Days after ∵, a Proclamation was order'd, for diſſolving the preſent Parliament, and declaring her Majeſty's Intentions of ſpeedily calling a new one. (a) To this Purpoſe, I ſhall here inſert the Concluſion of a Memorial, which, ſome Time after King GEORGE's Acceſſion, was laid before his Majeſty, and was as follows, viz.

"From this ſhort Account it appears: 1. That the Demolition of Dunkirk was not begun, 'till "after the Time, within which it was to have been finiſh'd, was elapſed. 2. That through the "Advice, and with the Conſent of the Engliſh Miniſtry, the Fortifications of the Town and Har-"bour of Dunkirk were entirely demoliſh'd, before any Step had been made, towards the de-"ſtroying of the Harbour, whereby they gave up the only Means which Great Britain had in her "Hands, to get the Harbour fill'd up, and to hinder France from making the new Canal. 3. That "the Engliſh Miniſtry conſented, that, in order to open a new Canal, the French ſhould make "uſe of the Pretence of preſerving the Country from being drown'd. 4. That they not only "acquieſc'd in, but even approved and authorized the making of the new Canal, although they "had been forewarn'd by the Commiſſioners, and in particular by Mr. Armſtrong, That the "French intended thereby to get a new Harbour. 5. That by Means of this new Canal, the "Harbour of Dunkirk becomes more uſeful and advantageous to France, than it was before. "6. That in this whole Negotiation, the Britiſh Miniſtry ſuffer'd themſelves to be ſhamefully "impoſed upon; or rather, that there is Reaſon to ſuſpect, That this whole Affair was con-"certed between the Two Courts: And that the Engliſh Miniſters made only faint Repreſenta-"tions, of which they expected to reap no other Fruit, than to ſerve for their own Juſtification, "in Caſe this Matter ſhould ever be examin'd into.

ſerted in the Gazette †, whereby the " Queen promiſed her Pardon, and a Reward " of one One Hundred Pounds, to any Perſon who ſhould diſcover the Author of " the ſaid Letter:" Which occaſion'd various Reflections and Conjectures. 'Twas plain enough, that the Bolt was mainly levell'd at the Lord Treaſurer; but from what Corner, and by what Hand it was ſhot, was a difficult Queſtion? Some aſcrib'd it to the diſcarded and diſcontented Whigs; others to the Pretender's Friends, both who hated the Treaſurer: The one, for having done too much, the other, too little, for the Chevalier's Intereſt; and who were equally jealous of his Correſpondence with the Court of Hanover; though, in Reality, he was no more truſted there, than he was in England, by the Well-affected to that Succeſſion. In this Situation, the Treaſurer had a very hard Game to play, either to approve his Affection to the Proteſtant Succeſſor, or to maintain his Ground at Court; where he had much ado to check the * Sallies of an ambitious Rival in Power; the more dangerous, in that he blindly follow'd the Bent of the Queen's natural Inclination. With this View, before the laſt Seſſion of Parliament, the Lord Bolingbroke had form'd a Scheme to put himſelf, and the Lord Chancellor, at the Head of the High-Church Party; and as the Duke of Shrewſbury's Revolution Principles, and ſtaunch Integrity, did not ſuit with their Deſigns, they very much oppoſed his being ſent over to France. But, with the Lady Maſham's Aſſiſtance, the Lord Treaſurer brought his own Model to bear, which was, " That the Duke of Ormond ſhould " ſtay in England, to attend the Army Affairs, which was neceſſary at the Time of " Diſbanding: That the Duke of Shrewſbury ſhould go to Ireland, as Lord Lieute- " nant, upon his Return from France; the Earl of Findlater to be Chancellor of " Scotland; the Earl of Mar, Third Secretary of State; the Lord Dartmouth, " Privy-Seal; Mr. William Bromley, Secretary of State; and Sir William Wyndham, " Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the room of Robert Benſon, Eſq; lately created " Lord Bingley, and named Ambaſſador Extraordinary to the Court of Madrid. Moſt of theſe Changes were declared from the middle of Auguſt, to the middle of September; and, about that Time, Thomas Foley, Eſq; was appointed Auditor of the Impreſt Accompts, in the room of Mr. Manwaring, deceaſed; the Lord Lanſdown, Treaſurer of the Houſhold, in the room of the Earl Cholmondley, formerly removed; Sir John Stonehouſe, Comptroller of the Houſhold, in the room of the Lord Lanſdown; Lord De la Ware, Treaſurer of the Chamber, in the room of the Lord Fitzharding, deceaſed; Francis Gwin, Eſq; Secretary at War, in the room of Sir William Wyndham; and Thomas Moore, Eſq; Brother to Mr. Arthur Moore, Paymaſter of the Land-Forces Abroad, in the Room of the Honourable Mr. Bridges. About this Time, alſo, the Duke of Northumberland, and Sir John Stonehouſe, were ſworn of the Privy-Council; and the Earl of Denbigh made one of the Tellers of the Exchequer. All this while the Party-Writers, and Managers on both Sides, were extream buſy in preparing the Minds of the People to favour their reſpective Intereſts in the new Elections for Parliament-Men: But notwithſtanding the Weight and Influence of the Court, and the viſible Partiality of ſome returning Officers, a far greater Number of Whigs were choſen, than was, by many expected.

New Elections.

A Paſſage, that happen'd about this Time, did not a little contribute to ſecure the Lord Treaſurer's Intereſt at Court. An Advertiſement had been inſerted in the London-Gazette, whereby it was propoſed to raiſe Three Hundred Thouſand Pounds for paying off part of the Debts of the Navy, by way of Loan, on the Security of the South-Sea Stock, depoſited for that Purpoſe, into the Hands of the Chamberlain of London, and the Deputy-Tellers of the Exchequer. Whether Money'd-Men did not like the Security, or the Truſtees; or whatever was the Reaſon, not above Seventy Thouſand Pounds were ſubſcribed into this Loan, in Six or Seven Weeks, which made many believe, it would never be fill'd up. But upon an Order iſſued out on the 9th of September, by the Lord Treaſurer, importing, that whoever ſhould ſubſcribe One Hundred Pounds to the ſaid Loan, ſhould be entitled to buy Ten Tickets of Ten Pounds each, in the Houſhold Lottery of Five Hundred Thouſand Pounds, there was, the next Day, ſuch a Crowd of Subſcribers, both at the Exchequer, and Guild-Hall, that more than the ſaid Three Hundred Thouſand Pounds were ſubſcrib'd. Hereupon the Lord Treaſurer improving the Opportunity and Eagerneſs of the Money-Adventurers, enlarg'd the Loan to Five Hundred Thouſand Pounds, which, in a few Days, was fill'd up, as was, at the ſame Time, the Lottery of the like Sum: So that, by this Means, the Lord Treaſurer raiſed a Million Sterling, in Two or Three Days, which did much advance his Credit and Reputation.

on her Majeſty at Windſor, on the 11th of September, and was very graciouſly received. After he had given Her Majeſty an Account of what he had done, in Purſuance of Her Majeſty's Orders; and return'd Her Majeſty Thanks, for procuring the Inlargement from the Gallies of France, of One Hundred and Thirty Six Confeſſors of the Proteſtant Faith; he deſir'd Her Majeſty ſtill to interpoſe her good and pious Offices, for the Deliverance of One Hundred and Eighty Five more of thoſe poor Sufferers, who were ſtill detain'd in the Gallies upon the ſame Account. About the ſame Time, the Marquis de Rochegude, being at Windſor, had an Opportunity to ſpeak to Her Majeſty in behalf of the ſaid Confeſſors; and deliver'd to Her Majeſty Letters from the States-General, and the Princeſs Sophia, to the ſame Purpoſe. The Generous and Pious Queen, who had been given to underſtand that all the French Proteſtant Sufferers had been inlarg'd, was extreamly ſurpriz'd, and griev'd, to find there were ſo many yet under Affliction; and deſir'd the Marquis de Rochegude to give her a Liſt of them, which the Marquis did accordingly. On the other hand, the Lord Archbiſhop of York, Lord Almoner to Her Majeſty, having been thoroughly inform'd about this Matter; his Grace, with a Zeal truly Apoſtolical, ſeconded both the French Marquiſſes Sollicitations; which had the deſir'd Effect. Some Days before, a very remarkable Thing happen'd in Scotland: George Lockhart, of Carnwath, Eſq; an avow'd Stickler for the Pretender's Intereſt, having been unanimouſly choſen Member of Parliament for Edinburgh; a great Number of the Inhabitants of that City drew up, and ſign'd a Petition, to be preſented to the Houſe of Commons, for the bringing in a Bill to diſſolve the Union. This done, the Populace went to the Parliament-Cloſe in Edinburgh, and there, by the Statue of King Charles the Second, drank Healths to the Queen, the Diſſolution of the Union, and all true Scotchmen; and afterwards went to the Market-Croſs, and did the like, with repeated Acclamations. On the other hand, it was reported, that ſome Scotch Merchants caus'd a Petition to be preſented to the Moſt Chriſtian King, by Mr. Arthburnot, their Agent at Roan, repreſenting their Grievances in Point of Trade, and other Matters, and deſiring his Majeſty's Protection for their Redreſs; in Conſideration of the ancient Alliances between France and Scotland: But this Application bordering upon Treaſon, no further Steps were made in it.

About this Time, the Election of a Lord-Mayor for the City of Dublin, occaſion'd there dangerous Diſputes, which were induſtriouſly fomented by the Jacobites. The Aldermen having made choice of Mr. Pleaſants, the ſame was ſtrenuouſly oppoſed by the then Lord-Mayor; and the Deciſion of this Difference being left to the Privy-Council, their Lordſhips heard Arguments on both ſides; and, on the 4th of September, came to theſe Reſolutions: 1ſt, "That the Lord-Mayor of "the City of Dublin, for the Time being, has the Right of nominating Three Al- "dermen, to be put in Election for Lord-Mayor of Dublin; and that the Lord- "Mayor and Aldermen are obliged to elect One of the Three to be the ſucceed- "ing Lord-Mayor, unleſs juſt Objections be made againſt them. 2dly, That the "Proceeding of Seventeen Aldermen, in the Election of Alderman Pleaſants for "Lord-Mayor, and James King for Sheriff, in the Abſence of Sir Samuel Cooke, "Lord-Mayor, was a Breach of the new Rules; and that ſuch Elections were null "and void." Six * Days after, the Lord-Mayor ſummon'd the Aldermen to meet, in order to proceed to a new Choice; and, in Purſuance of the Reſolution of the Council, he nam'd Sir William Fownes, and Aldermen Conſtantine and Maſon, the ſame who were in Nomination before: But Twenty Aldermen inſiſted on a previous Queſtion, touching the firſt in Nomination, and offer'd ſome Objections to him; upon which, the Lord-Mayor having diſſolv'd the Court, nothing was determin'd.

In this Ferment the Duke of Shrewſbury found the City of Dublin, when he arriv'd † there, to take upon him the Government of Ireland: And perceiving that the Pretender's Friends had receiv'd no ſmall Incouragement from Sir Conſtantine Phipps, Lord Chancellor of that Kingdom, his Grace took all proper Occaſions, to make good the Hopes and Expectations of the well-affected to the Revolution, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion: But, in a particular manner, on King William's Birth-Day; when his Grace declar'd, He was ſtill the ſame he was in the Year 1688; and publickly drank to the Pious and Glorious Memory of King WILLIAM. The ſame Evening, his Dutcheſs gave a magnificent Ball, on Occaſion of the Solemnity of the Day, which was celebrated with extraordinary Rejoicings. The greateſt Struggle was in the City of Dublin; where Sir William Fownes and Mr. Tucker were ſet up by the Tories, and Mr. Recorder Forſter and Mr. Burton ſtood Candidates for the Whigs. Both Parties immediately made their Complaints to the Lord Lieutenant, who, the next Day, appointed a Committee, to make a ſtrict Inquiry into this Diſorder; directed the Sheriffs to take the Poll at Two different Places, to prevent the meeting and claſhing of the Two contending Parties: And, upon Information, that the Papiſts and Jacobites were the chief Promoters of the Riot, his Grace caus'd ſeveral Popiſh Chapels in Dublin to be ſhut up; which wonderfully indear'd him to all Proteſtants. Proceedings of the Parliament of Ireland.

The Parliament of Ireland being met, on the 25th of November, the Lord Lieutenant made a Speech to both Houſes; importing, "That Her Majeſty having "procur'd a ſafe and honourable Peace, had nothing now to wiſh, but that her "Subjects might enjoy the Benefits and Advantages of it. That, for this Purpoſe, "ſhe had call'd them together; that they might provide ſuch Laws, as they "ſhould judge neceſſary for the further Security of the Church of Ireland, and the "Advancement of the Trade and Welfare of that Kingdom. That Her Majeſty "had nothing more at Heart, than the Preſervation of the Rights and Liberties of "her People, and the ſettling them upon a laſting Foundation, by ſecuring the Pro-"teſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of HANOVER." Then his Grace recommended to the Commons, "the neceſſary Supplies to ſupport the Civil Eſtabliſhment, and "maintain a ſufficient Number of Forces for their Security, againſt any Danger that "might be apprehended from the great Number of Papiſts in that Country." Told both Houſes, "He was very ſenſible of the great Honour Her Majeſty had done him, "in placing him in ſo eminent a Station:" Aſſur'd them, "That no one ever en-"deavour'd to diſcharge it with more Zeal for her Service, and their Intereſt, "(which he took to be inſeparable) than he was reſolv'd to do: And therefore, "he earneſtly recommended to them, That as the Proteſtants in that Kingdom "were united in one common Intereſt, they might all agree in the ſame Means of "promoting it, by laying aſide all Warmth or Reſentment; which would appear, "by the Unanimity of their Proceedings." Notwithſtanding this Caution, there was, the next * Day, a great Struggle in the Houſe of Commons, about the Choice of a Speaker; Sir Richard Levinz being put up by the Tory Party, and Alan Broderick Eſq; by the Whigs: But, upon a Diviſion, Mr. Broderick was choſen, by a Majority of Four Voices.

That the faint and remiſs Proſecution of Edward Lloyd, News-Writer, for " publiſhing Propoſals to print the ſaid Libel, gave great Incouragement to the Po- " piſh, and other Friends of the Pretender in that Kingdom. 3. That the Deſign of " the ſaid traiterous Libel, was, to impeach Her Majeſty's Title to the Crown, " and the Succeſſion to the ſame in the Illuſtrious Houſe of HANOVER. " 4. That Sir Conſtantine Phipps, Knight, Lord High-Chancellor of Ireland, having " repreſented Edward Lloyd as an Object of Her Majeſty's Mercy, as not having an " evil Deſign in publiſhing the ſaid Libel, in order to obtain a Noli proſequi on the " Indictment againſt him ; acted therein contrary to his Duty, and contrary to the " Proteſtant Intereſt of that Kingdom. 6. That the ſaid Sir Conſtantine Phipps, in " a Speech made by him, on the 16th of January 1712, to the Mayor and Alder- " men of the City of Dublin, being then one of the Lords Juſtices of Ireland, did " take upon himſelf, by declaring his Opinion, to prejudge the Merits of the Cauſe " then depending between Her Majeſty and Dudley Moore, Eſq; and thereby to " influence the Aldermen ; ſome of whom are conſtantly return'd on Juries, in " the Cauſes of Importance of that City. 6. Votes of the H. of Lords, in Vindication of the Lord Chancellor.

On the other hand, the Houſe of Lords paſs'd, the ſame Day, the following Reſolutions; viz. 1. "That the Words ſpoken by R. Nuttall, Attorney, in Auguſt "laſt, That the Lord Chancellor of this Kingdom, then one of the Lords Juſti- "ces of the ſame, was a Canary-Bird, and a Villain, and had ſet this Kingdom toge- "ther by the Ears, and ought to be hang'd; were ſcandalous, and malicious, tending "to ſtir up Sedition, and highly reflecting upon the Government of that King- "dom. 2. That Sir Conſtantine Phipps, Knight, Lord High-Chancellor of Ireland, "had, in the ſeveral Stations wherein he had ſerv'd Her Majeſty, acquitted himſelf "with Honour and Integrity." And it was order'd, "That a Committee be ap- "pointed to withdraw immediately, to draw up an Addreſs to Her Majeſty, pur- "ſuant to the foregoing Reſolutions.

* Dec. 21. Votes of the Commons, about the Election of Mayor and Magiſtrates of Dublin.

Three * Days after, the Commons took into Conſideration the State of the Nation, and came to the following Reſolves: 1. "That, for ſome Years laſt paſt, "there had been a Deſign form'd, and carry'd on, to ſubvert the Conſtitution, "and alter the Government of the City of Dublin. 2. That, to carry on that "Deſign, a corrupt and illegal Attempt was made, in 1711, to corrupt Alderman "Ralph Gore, then Lord-Mayor, by offering him a Bribe of Five Hundred Pounds, "to name Thirty Two Perſons, mark'd in a Liſt then deliver'd to him by Martin "Tucker, Eſq; Sub-Collector of the Port of Dublin, to be Common-Council-Men "for the ſaid City. 3. That it appears, on the Examination of Martin Tucker, "Eſq; that he was ſent to offer the ſaid Sum of Five Hundred Pounds to Alderman "Ralph Gore, while Sir Conſtantine Phipps, Knight, Lord High-Chancellor of Ire- "land, and Lieutenant-General Ingoldſby, were Lords-Juſtices. 4. That the City "of Dublin had, of late, been, and ſtill continued, in great Diſorder and Confu- "ſion, by reaſon of the frequent Diſapprobations of Perſons elected Lord-Mayors "and Sheriffs of the ſaid City, all of them of known Affection to Her Majeſty's "Perſon and Government, and to the Conſtitution in Church and State. 5. That "Sir Conſtantine Phipps had been the chief Cauſe and Promoter of ſuch frequent "Diſapprobations, and thereby the Occaſion of the ſaid Diſorder and Confuſion. "6. That ſince the making the new Rules in 1672, until Sir Conſtantine Phipps ar- "rived in that Kingdom, no Perſon, elected Lord-Mayor of the City of Dublin, "had been diſapprov'd, except in the Government of the Earl of Tyrconnel. "7. That the Council-Board had not at this Time, nor had not ſince the Time "(given them by the Act of Explanation) expir'd, any Power to make Rules or "Orders for regulating the Election of Magiſtrates in any Corporation in that "Kingdom. 8. That the Right of Election of Lord-Mayor of Dublin, is in the "Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of the ſaid City; and that the Aldermen are in no "ſort reſtrain'd, in the Choice of the ſucceeding Lord-Mayor, to One of any "Three Perſons nominated, or propoſed, to be put in Election by the Lord- "Mayor.

The Right Hon. Robert Moleſworth, Eſq; (a) one of the Privy-Council, a Member of the Houſe of Commons, and ever a ſtrenuous Aſſertor of Liberty, and of the Revolution Principles, having been very active in the Proceedings againſt the Lord Chancellor, and the High-Church Party; no ſmall Induſtry was us'd, to render him obnoxious: Other Means failing, ſome Clergymen laid hold of a jocular Reflection, which Mr. Moleſworth made on their Character, on a publick Occaſion: For, being at the Caſtle of Dublin, with ſome other Members of the Houſe of Commons, on the * Day they waited on the Lord Lieutenant with their Addreſs againſt the Lord Chancellor; when the Two Houſes of Convocation came there, to preſent a contrary Addreſs to his Grace; Mr. Moleſworth ſaid, in the hearing of ſome Gentlemen about him, THEY THAT HAVE TURN'D THE WORLD UPSIDE DOWN, ARE COME HITHER ALSO! Hereupon, the Lower Houſe of Convocation put up a Complaint to the Upper, repreſenting, "That "they look'd upon the Words utter'd by Mr. Moleſworth, to be an intolerable "Profanation of the Holy Scriptures, and that his ſpeaking them at that Time, "and in that Place, was with Deſign to caſt an Odium, and Aſperſion on their "Graces and their Lordſhips, and the whole Clergy, and to repreſent them a turbulent "and ſeditious Body: That they thought themſelves in Duty obliged, to lay the "Matter before the Upper-Houſe; not only for the Reaſons above-mention'd, but "becauſe they conceiv'd it to be a high Affront to her Majeſty, and great Diſre- "ſpect to her Repreſentative, the Lord Lieutenant: And they humbly pray'd their Complaint of the Lower H. of Convocation againſt Mr. Moleſworth.

(a) He was famous for writing a Book, intituled, The State of Denmark, (to which he prefix'd a moſt excellent Preface) printed in King William's Reign; and was made a Peer by King GEORGE.

" Lordſhips to vindicate the whole Clergy from this wicked Calumny." The Upper Houſe of Convocation, immediately laid this Complaint before the Houſe of Lords; who, thereupon, deſired a Conference with the Commons, and left with them a Copy of the Paper deliver'd to their Lordſhips by the Biſhops. The Commons laid no great Streſs on that Complaint; but the Matter having been repreſented in England, in the moſt odious Colours, Mr. Moleſworth was removed from the Privy-Council. On the 22d of December, the Lord Lieutenant paſs'd the Money-Bill; and after the Lords had preſented a long Repreſentation to the Queen, in Vindication of the Lord Chancellor, they adjourn'd themſelves to the 7th of January next. On the other hand, the Houſes of Commons order'd * their Thanks to be given by their Speaker, to John Forſter, Eſq; Recorder of the City of Dublin, " for his unſhaken and ſteddy Behaviour in the Defence of the Liberties of the City " of Dublin, and of the Proteſtant Intereſt in that Kingdom. And reſolved, 1. That " Alderman Ralph Gore, late Lord-Mayor of the City of Dublin, had, with great " Fidelity and Courage, diſcharged the Duty of his Place, whilſt Lord-Mayor, and " particularly by rejecting a baſe and corrupt Offer made him by Martin Tucker, " Eſq; of Five Hundred Pounds, to impoſe a Common Council on the ſaid City; " and thereby was very inſtrumental in preſerving the Rights and Liberties of the " ſaid City of Dublin. 2. That Sir John Rogerſon, Knight, Thomas Quin, Samuel " Walton, John Page, Benjamin Burton, John Pearſon, John Eccles, James Earlow, " Ralph Gore, John Stoyte, Thomas Pleaſants, Thomas Bolton, Anthony Earky, Matthew " Pearſon, William Quail, Thomas Wilkinſon, George Forbus, Thomas Curtis, Robert " Chetham, and William Dixon, Aldermen of the City of Dublin, had ſhewn great " Virtue and Reſolution in defending the Rights and Liberty of the ſaid City." The next Day the Commons adjourn'd to the 14th of January; but before the Parliament met, they were prorogued to the 18th of that Month. It is obſervable, that the Lord Chancellor Phipps had vaſt Numbers of Champions in Great Britain: Every Tory thinking himſelf obliged to vindicate him, upon account of his zealous adhering to the Church's Cauſe, in Doctor Sacheveral's Tryal, and giving out, that the Reſolutions of the Commons againſt him, were not of Iriſh Growth, but the Reſult of the joint Counſels of the Whigs of both Kingdoms. On the other hand, the Whig-Party loudly juſtify'd the Proceedings of the Iriſh Houſe of Commons againſt that Miniſter; who, to ſay no worſe, had been the Occaſion of unhappy Diſtinctions among the Proteſtants of that Kingdom. Theſe Diviſions gave ſo great Encouragement to the Pretender's Friends, that Men were publickly inliſted for his Service, of which the Commons took Notice in their Votes of the 22d of December: And the Grand Jury of the County of Dublin, having made a Preſentment of that trayterous Practice, and laid it before the Lord Lieutenant, with the Depoſition of Michael Letry, his Grace cauſed † thereupon a Proclamation to be iſſued out, " for " apprehenping Toby Butler, a Lieutenant in the Regiment of the Lord Galmoy, who " had actually inliſted William and Michael Letry, to ſerve the Pretender, and told " them, that he had inliſted Fourteen Men more for the ſame Purpoſe." The Day before ‖, the Lord Lieutenant ſigned another Proclamation, ſignifying the Queen's Pleaſure, " That the Parliament of Ireland, which had been prorogued to the 3d of " February, be further prorogued to the 10th of Auguſt next." On the other hand, the Duke of Shrewſbury, who, by frequent Letters from Dr. John Shadwell, (a) one of the Queen's Phyſicians, was acquainted with her Majeſty's ill State of Health, having deſired, and obtain'd Leave, to return to Great Britain, the Archbiſhops of Armagh and Tuam, and the Lord Chancellor Phips, were appointed Lords Juſtices of Ireland: But the City of Dublin ſtill continued without a chief Magiſtrate; the Recorder, and the Aldermen in Commiſſion, having declin'd to acknowledge Sir Samuel Cooke, (whom the Court would have impoſed upon them,) as Lord-Mayor.

The Duke of Sherewſbury had Reaſons, both of private and publick Concern, to wiſh himſelf in England. He had not been long in Dublin before he found, that he was little more than the Pageant of the Government of Ireland, of which the main Springs were in the Lord Chancellor's Hands: For upon the Deceaſe of Dr. Narciſſus Marſh, (b) Archbiſhop of Armagh, the Duke deſign'd to have advanc'd to that Primacy, his Kinſman, Dr. Talbot, Biſhop of Oxford: But, upon the Recommendation of Sir Conſtantine Phipps, Dr. Lindſey, Biſhop of Raphoe, was immediately preferr'd, as a Perſon ready to go all Lengths, to favour the Scheme in Hand. From this, and other Inſtances, the Duke began to ſurmize, either that the Lord Treaſurer's profeſs'd Friendſhip ſlacken'd, or that his Intereſt was upon the Decline: At the ſame Time, the Duke was extream uneaſy, and alarm'd at the open Attack that had lately been made in England, upon the preſent Settlement, in a Book, entituled, The HEREDITARY RIGHT of the Crown of England aſſerted: The Hiſtory of the Succeſſion ſince the Conqueſt, clear'd, and the true Engliſh Conſtitution vindicated, from the Miſrepreſentations of Dr. Higden's View and Defence, &c. In the Introduction, the Author pretends, "That the firſt Time that the Duty of paying Allegi-" ance to Powers in Poſſeſſion, began to be taught in this Kingdom, was, during " the Uſurpations, which ſucceeded the Death of King Charles the Firſt. That in " all former Revolutions, the Princes who got Poſſeſſion of the Crown, claim'd it " by ſome Right, and never inſiſted on Poſſeſſion, as Right: But the Rump Parlia- " ment, and Cromwell, and the following Uſurpers, having no tolerable Pretence to " any Claim of Right, their Friends were reduced to a Neceſſity of pleading Poſ- " ſeſſion, as a Right to Obedience; and ſeveral Books were then publiſh'd by " Papiſts, Fanaticks, and Deiſts to enforce and prove it. But that this Principle " was then generally rejected, by all the Members of the Church of England, and " by many Preſbyterians, who maintain'd, that Allegiance was due to the Rightful " King, who was not in Poſſeſſion: That after the Reſtoration, the Acts and judi- " dial Proceedings of the Governments preceding, were all null and void, except " ſuch as were authorized by a new Law: And it was declared by an Act of Par- " liament, that all the ſaid Powers before in Poſſeſſion, were rebellious, wicked, trai- " terous, abominable Uſurpations, deteſted by this preſent Parliament. That here the " Conſtitution was again reſettled on its ancient Foundation, not on Poſſeſſion, " which all the Uſurpers had; but upon the undoubted Right of the lawful Heir, " who had been out of Poſſeſſion, and of his Heirs and lawful Succeſſors; and that " agreeably to this Conſtitution in that Reign, it was the conſtant Doctrine of Law- " yers and Divines, that Allegiance was not due to all Powers in Poſſeſſion. That " the Revolution that happen'd after, was begun, carried on, ended, and juſtify'd on " theſe Grounds, that Allegiance was not due to all Kings in Poſſeſſion: That King " James was lawfully depriv'd; that King William and Queen Mary were lawfully " put into Poſſeſſion. But theſe Poſitions did not ſuit with the Principles of many " Lawyers and Divines, who had conſtantly maintain'd, that the Depoſition of a " lawful King, was abſolutely unlawful, by the Law of God, and the Laws of this " Kingdom: Therefore, to juſtify the Tranſlation of their Allegiance, the former " Opinion. that ſeem'd bury'd at the Reſtoration, was reviv'd, viz. That Allegiance " was due to all Powers in Poſſeſſion; and many eminent Members of the Church of " England receiv'd it, as conſiſtent with the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance: That divers " Treatiſes were then publiſhed by Divines and Lawyers, to defend it; particularly " The Unreaſonableneſs of a new Separation, and the Caſe of Allegiance due to Sovereign " Powers. That the Inſtances of Hiſtory, and Parliament Records, uſed in the firſt, " were enquir'd into by an exact and faithful Hiſtorian, and unanſwerably refuted: " And the Arguments of the laſt from Scripture and Reaſon, the Doctrine of the " Church, and the Laws of the Kingdom, were refuted likewiſe by ſeveral Writers: " That no Reply of Moment being made, that Controverſy ſeem'd to be bury'd " again; 'till Dr. Higden thought fit to examine the Diſpute again; and was con- " vinc'd, that Allegiance was due to Kings in Fact, by Laws Divine and " Human. But that as the Doctor's Opinion makes the moſt unjuſt Poſſeſſion (as " was Oliver's) rightful, and deſtroys the Hereditary Right, ſo long eſtabliſh'd by " the Conſtitution, the Author has follow'd him through all his Labyrinths; refuted " his Arguments, and rectify'd his Errors." After the Introduction, the Author endeavours to prove, That the People's Submiſſion to ſuch Kings as were not Heirs to the Crown by immediate Deſcent, is no Argument that Poſſeſſion gives Right to Allegiance: And to elude the Force of Dr. Higden's Arguments againſt Hereditary Right, grounded on the ſeveral Deviations from the Lineal Deſcent, in the Succeſſion to the Crown, ſince the Conqueſt, he maintains, that the Kings of England had anciently a Power of diſpoſing of the Crown by Teſtament; that the Conſent, Reſignation and Ceſſion of the Rightful Heir, were certainly ſufficient to make Kings de Facto Rightful: And that therefore Submiſſion might be paid them on one of theſe Accounts. This being a Point very material to the Author's Deſign, he endeavours to evince it by the Example of William the Conqueror, whom he aſſerts to have been a Lawful King, in both theſe Regards, and juſtifies Edward the Confeſſor's Nomination of him for his Succeſſor. What the Author inſinuates on this Occaſion, deſerves particular Attention.

Dr. Lindſey made Archbiſhop of Armagh, and Primate of Ireland.

Account of the Book call'd, The Hereditary Right, &c.

A. D. 1713.

" If it be ſaid, (ſays he) that Edward the Confeſſor was an unjuſt Poſſeſſor, his " Nephew, by his Elder Brother, being then living, to whom he ought to have re- " ſign'd the Crown: I anſwer, that when Hiſtories are ſilent, it does not become " private Men to be forward in paſſing Judgment on the Actions of Princes. The " Authors who have tranſmitted to us an Account of Edward's Reign, ſay nothing " upon this Subject; either that the Deſcendants of Edward Ironſide, laid Claim to " the Crown; or that King Edward diſcover'd any Inclination to do them Juſtice, " at leaſt 'till the Eleventh Year of his Reign: But it may, poſſibly, be unreaſona- " ble from hence to infer, that all that Time he was a wrongful Poſſeſſor, becauſe " Caſes may be ſuppoſed of Princes, who, for want of Power and Opportunity of " doing Right to the lawful Heir, are forced to endure the Burden of a Crown, " which they would readily and gladly eaſe themſelves of, upon a proper Occaſion: " As when the Rightful Heir is Abroad, in a diſtant Kingdom, and perhaps at the " diſpoſal of a Foreign Prince, on whoſe Will and Pleaſure, his Return to his Coun- " try chiefly depends. When the Poſſeſſor of a Throne has this to plead for him- " ſelf, (which may be true of King Edward, for any Thing that can be alledged to " the contrary) I may appeal to the ſevereſt Interpreters of the Actions of Princes, " whether the Exerciſe of Royal Power, in ſuch Circumſtances, can be charged " with Uſurpation; or, as ſome chuſe rather to expreſs themſelves, whether ſuch a " Perſon is only a King de facto: For it is not the bare ſeizing, and filling a " Throne, but the Will of the Poſſeſſor, that muſt denominate him an Uſurper. " He that invades another's Right, with an Intention to detain it from him, and " a Reſolution never to reſtore it to the true Proprietor, is certainly guilty of the " higheſt Injuſtice; but if he accepts of a Crown, only that he may ſecure it to " the Right Owner, and the better diſappoint the Deſigns of his Enemies; moſt cer- " tainly he obliges him by a very extraordinary Act of Friendſhip.

After this artful Inſinuation, and Compliment to the QUEEN, the Author " ſhews " the Right King Edward the Confeſſor had to name William the Conqueror for his " Succeſſor; and then labours to prove, that William Rufus, and Henry the Firſt, " were alſo Lawful Kings. This done, he comes to King Stephen, whom he calls the " Firſt Uſurper; and pretends, that in his Reign, the moſt turbulent of any, there were " no Footſteps of Dr. Higden's Principle, viz. Allegiance being due to Kings de Facto. " On this Occaſion, the Author mentions particularly the Earl of Glouceſter, who " own'd himſelf bound in Conſcience to the Right of the Empreſs Maud; the King " of Scotland, who ſuffer'd much in Defence of her Right; and the Behaviour of the " Clergy, who made a Diſtinction between King Stephen, and a King de Jure, ſhews " what Influence the Pope's pretended Power of ſetting up Kings, had in thoſe " Days; and aſſerts, that our Hiſtorians date Stephen's Right from his Agreement " with Henry, which concurs to the Author's main Deſign, which is, to eſtabliſh a " Teſtamentary and Ceſſionary Right, in order to account for the Allegiance which, " at divers Times, the Clergy, Nobility, and People, have paid to Unlawful Poſ- " ſeſſors of the Throne. In the ſame View he paſſes on to Henry the Second, whom " he maintains to have been a rightful King, becauſe it is moſt probable his Mother, " the Empreſs Maud, had reſign'd her Right to him. Here he anſwer's Dr. Hig- " den's Argument, from a Paſſage in our Homilies; diſcovers a Miſtake committed " by the Compilers of them, defends Biſhop Merks againſt Dr. Higden's Reflections, " upon his pretended Submiſſion to Henry the Fourth, argues againſt the Doctor, " who ſays there were no Nonjurors under Kings de Facto, and pretends that ought " to be preſumed, 'till the contrary is proved, and brings in the Inſtances of ſeve- " ral, that ought to be reputed ſuch. He alſo takes Notice, that in thoſe Days the " inferior Clergy were not obliged to take Oaths of Allegiance, and ſuggeſts, that " had the Clergy of England enjoy'd this Privilege at the Time of the late Revo- " lution, near Four Hundred of them had quietly continued in the Poſſeſſion of " their Livings, of which they were for no other Reaſon deprived, but becauſe they " were Nonjurors, &c.

This Book was not only advertis'd in the * London Gazette, with particular Al- lowance (as was then reported) of Mr. Secretary Bromley, but diſpers'd, and cry'd up, with great Induſtry; and many Copies of it were given, gratis, by ſome Men in Power, to ſeveral Officers of the Army. It being obvious to every Reader, that the Deſign of this Performance was to level the Way for the Reſtoration of the Pretender, the well-affected to the Houſe of Hanover, could not but be alarm'd at it; the rather, becauſe this Book came abroad with Marks of Diſtinction, and publick Countenance; not to mention the Quotations in it, out of ſome Manuſcripts, in the Library of the Lord Treaſurer, on which ſome Men were apt to put a ſiniſter Interpretation. Hereupon the Miniſtry thought it incumbent upon them, to animadvert upon it; and Mr. Richard Smith, the Bookſeller, having, by a Warrant from the Lord Bolingbroke, been brought to his Lordſhip's Office, and there examin'd, he declared, That Mr. Bedford, a Nonjuring Clergyman, had deliver'd the Copy to the Printer. This being frankly own'd by Mr. Bedford, they were both bound over to appear before the Court of Queen's-Bench. But though a Proſecution was, afterwards, for Form-Sake, begun and carried on againſt Mr. Bedford, yet it was the general Opinion, that he had but a ſmall ſhare in that Performance, which was (a) judg'd to be the Reſult of the joint Labours of ſeveral Nonjurors, particularly Mr. Leſley, and Mr. Nelſon: About this Time, it was publickly declared, that the Queen had been pleaſed to grant her Royal Pardon, under the Great-Seal, to Daniel Foe, or de Foe, againſt whom an Information of High-Treaſon had been lodg'd, for writing ſeveral Pamphlets, which ſeem'd to favour the Pretender's Intereſt.

Mr. Bedford proſecuted for the ſaid Book.

Daniel de Foe pardon'd.

By this Time the Elections for Parliament-Men were over; and in North-Britain, the Nobility had choſen ſuch Repreſentatives (b) as were moſt of them ready to concur in all the Queen's Meaſures; and, in order to attach yet more the Earl of Dunmore to the Court, he was, not long after, declared Colonel of the Scotch Regiment of Foot-Guards, in the room of the Marquis of Lothian. About the ſame Time, the Regiment of Dragoons, lately commanded by Sir Richard Temple, was beſtow'd on Major-General Evans; and the Regiment of Horſe of the Marquis of Harwich, (Son to the Duke of Schonberg) lately deceaſed, was given to Major-General Sybourg; and the latter to Colonel Corbet. Some Time before, Mr. Steele, the reputed Author of the celebrated Papers, call'd the Tatler, Spectator, Guardian, and Engliſhman, having a Call to ſerve his Country in Parliament, for the Borough of Stockbridge, thought fit to reſign his Place of one of the Commiſſioners of the Stamps: But it was generally look'd upon as a Piece of Prudence in Mr. Steele, by a voluntary Reſignation, to foreſtal a Removal: His late Political Writings having given no ſmall Offence to the Men in Power. About the ſame Time, the Lord Willoughby, Doctor of Divinity, was made Dean of St. George's Chapel, in the Caſtle of Windſor; but Dr. Smalridge being named to ſucceed the Lord Privy-Seal, as Biſhop of Briſtol, declined that Offer.

On the 18th of October, the Parliament of Great Britain was, by Proclamation, further prorogued from the 12th of November, to the 10th of December; which was occaſion'd by the Queen's Illneſs, and the Jars among the Miniſters, who, in that critical Juncture of Affairs, had different Views and Schemes. It was then ſtrongly reported, that the Lord Bolingbroke, Mr. Secretary Bromley, and Sir William Wyndham, (who was lately * made a Privy-Counſellor) having gain'd the Aſcendant, the Lord Treaſurer entertain'd Thoughts of Retirement: And, whoever was his Prompter, the Author of the Paper call'd the Examiner, thought fit, about the Middle of November, to prepare the Minds of the People for an approaching

(a) The Introduction to a Book, publiſh'd, ſome Time after, in Anſwer to The Hereditary Right, under the Title of TREASON UNMASK'D, contains the following Lines: "Before we enter up-"on a particular Examination of the Book, it will not be amiſs to beſtow a few general Obſerva-"tions on the Authors, and Deſign of this elaborate Performance. If we can rely on the Credit of "the Title Page, we muſt believe it to be written by a Gentleman; and, indeed, the Style, and "genteel Air, that ſhines through the whole Piece, ſhews it to be the Work of a Man of Parts, "and liberal Education. But then if we conſider the Perſon who ſeems to father it, by his "owning the handing it to the Preſs, together with the Multitude of Quotations, that argue a "deeper Knowledge in Hiſtory, the Law, and Divinity, than any ſingle Man can probably be Ma-"ſter of, we ſhall not ſcruple to believe common Fame, and private Informations, both which "agree, that 'tis the Product of the Joint Labours of the moſt eminent Nonjurors and Jacobite "Writers, who have all contributed to the rearing up this Mighty, (and, as their Party give out "Impregnable) Fortreſs, in order to oppoſe, and batter down the Preſent Settlement of theſe Nati-"ons. That ſeveral Hands have furniſhed different Materials, will yet appear to be ſomething more "than a bare Conjecture, if we nicely view the Contexture: For though the Stone be well cut, "the Wood well planed, the Ornaments well carv'd; yet there is a Defect in the Cement, which "renders ſeveral Cracks and Crevices obvious to the Eye: And, indeed, the whole Fabrick con-"ſiſts of ſo many Heterogeneous and Jarring Parts, that 'twas difficult, if not impoſſible, for the "beſt Artiſt to tack them well together. To leave the Metaphor, this Book contains a great Va-"riety of Hiſtorical Facts, Poſitions and Arguments, couch'd in an elegant, flowing Style; but "then there are in it ſo many glaring Contradictions, and Inconſiſtencies, that 'tis hardly credible, "the whole Piece ſhould be the Work of any one Man. For here any tolerably attentive Rea-"der may find Hiſtory claſhing with Hiſtory; Law deſtroying Law; and Divinity refuting Divinity, "in Caſes exactly Parallel: A Fault I will not charge upon any ſingle Perſon, 'till I am con-"vinced that a too favourable Opinion of Gentlemen, and Men of Letters, led me into a "Miſtake.

Change

Change (a) in the Miniſtry. But what appear'd more ſtrange and ſurprizing, and at which all ſober Men were not a little offended, was, the ludicrous Stile, in which the ſame Author, who was the Mouth of thoſe in Power, ſpoke of the Queen's Indiſpoſition, and of the Succeſſion in Caſe of a (b) Demiſe. Whilſt Things were in ſuch a dubious and dangerous Situation, the Whigs thought fit to publiſh a Diſcourſe, that was father'd by Mr. Steele, with the Title of The CRISIS; repreſenting, from the moſt Authentick Records, the juſt Cauſes of the late HAPPY REVOLUTION; and the ſeveral Settlements of the Crowns of England and Scotland on Her MAJESTY; and, on the Demiſe of Her Majeſty without Iſſue, upon the moſt Illuſtrious Princeſs SOPHIA, Electreſs and Dutcheſs Dowager of Hanover, and the Heirs of her Body being Proteſtants; by previous Acts of both Parliaments of the late Kingdoms of England and Scotland, and confirm'd by the Parliament of Great Britain: With ſome ſeaſonable Remarks on the Danger of a Popiſh Succeſſor: And this Treatiſe was receiv'd with general Applauſe, (the Jacobites only excepted) and confirm'd not a few in their Affection to the Proteſtant Succeſſion. Some Time before, the Earl of Peterborow ſet out on his Embaſſy to the King of Sicily: And, as he took Paris in his way, it was given out, that his Lordſhip was charg'd to intercede with the French King in Favour of the Catalans; who, formerly, upon his Lordſhip's Promiſes of the Queen's firm Protection, had declar'd for King Charles the Third; and who, tho' abandon'd, ſeem'd now reſolv'd to defend their Liberties to the laſt Extremity. But as, in all human Probability, they were like to be ſacrific'd to the Reſentment of their Enemies; the Writers of the CRISIS, in a very ſevere and pathetick (c) manner, animadverted on the Authors of their Miſeries; which gave no ſmall Offence to thoſe in Power.

A Diſcourſe call'd The CRISIS, publiſh'd by Mr. Steele.

All this while, the Queen continued in a very dangerous State of Health at Windſor; of which various Accounts were ſpread abroad; the * Truth was this: On Wedneſday, the 23d of December, Her Majeſty was very uneaſy all Night with the Gout in her Foot. The next Morning, it went intirely off, and ſhe ſaid ſhe was well:

(a) In the Examiner of November the 16th, the Author ſuggeſts, "That in a Conſtitution which "hangs together by ſo many minute Parts, and which depends upon ſuch Variety of Wheels and "Motions, where Power and Freedom are in a perpetual Flux and Reflux, we muſt of Neceſſity "be liable to Turns and Contingencies. - - - - - That this Uncertainty is redoubled, where-"ever Strife and Contention are let looſe in a Nation, where Factions rage and worry one ano-"ther, and even the Government it ſelf is treated as a Party. - - - - Thus, under theſe Circum-"ſtances, a Miniſtry is oblig'd to act in another Capacity, than that which properly belongs to "them. They muſt ſometimes act like Military, as well as Civil Officers; draw forth their For-"ces, and appear at the Head of Squadrons and Battalions, whenever Faction takes the Field, "and declares open War againſt them. There wants but very little of bringing Things, as "they now ſtand, to this deplorable Criſis. - - - - That the Poſſeſſion of Power, under theſe Dif-"ficulties, is almoſt as great an Uncertainty as the Fortune of War, and ſtands expoſed to as many "Turns and croſs Accidents. - - - And that theſe Conſiderations amount to a full Proof, that the "beſt of Patriots are more expoſed to Mortality, as Miniſters of State, than as Men; &c.

(b) The Examiner of January the 8th 17[13/14], contains what follows:

"According to the beſt Advices ſent us by the Whigs, and their Oracles, the Demiſe of the Crown "happen'd upon Thurſday the 24th of December, being Chriſtmas Eve, at Four of the Clock in the "Morning, in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Thirteen. All Ages, Ranks, Sexes, and "Orders of Men, at firſt hearing of the ill News, were affected with the deepeſt Sorrow; and "a general Panick ran thro' the whole Kingdom. For a long Time, we were diſtracted and in-"conſolable; in the utmoſt Horror and Confuſion, upon the Loſs of our moſt Excellent Queen, "who then became Immortal: But theſe black Clouds were ſoon diſpers'd, our Fears and Jea-"louſies vaniſh'd, and we reviv'd from a deplorable State of Grief and Miſery, at the firſt joy-"ful Tidings of the Happy Acceſſion of Her moſt Sacred Majeſty Queen ANNE the Second, "(whom GOD long preſerve) to the Throne of Her Anceſtors: The Nature of our Monar-"chy being ſuch, that, immediately after the Death of the Perſon in Poſſeſſion, the Crown, by "Right of Inheritance, deſcends to the next Heir, without any previous Formalities and Conditi-"ons, or admitting ſo much as the leaſt Vacancy, or Inter-regnum, &c.

(c) The Paſſage in the CRISIS is as follows; Viz. "I mention the Catalonians; but who "can name the Catalonians without a Tear! Brave unhappy People! Drawn into the War by "the Incouragement of the Maritime Powers, from which only a Nation, incompaſs'd by Land "by France and Spain, could hope for Relief and Protection, now abandon'd and expos'd to the "Reſentment of an enraged Prince, whoſe Perſon and Intereſt they have always oppoſed; and "yet ſtill ſo fond of their Ancient Liberties, that, tho' hemm'd up in a Nook of Land by the "Forces of the Two Crowns, and cloſely beſieg'd in Barcelona; they chuſe rather, like their "Countrymen, the famous Saguntines of old, to periſh with their Wives and Children, than live "in Slavery. Did the French King, with a Conquering Sword in his Hand, ever abandon the "leaſt and moſt inconſiderable of all his Allies? No. When theſe very Catalonians had aſſiſted "him againſt the King of Spain, he did not give up his Power of Treating, till he had made "the moſt Honourable Conditions for them: Not a ſingle Man amongſt them was then hurt, ei-"ther in Perſon or Privileges: But now - - - - Poor unhappy Catalonians, worthy of a better "Fate! Good and gracious GOD! to whom ſhall be attributed the Loſs of this brave Peo-"ple! Dreadful the Doom of thoſe, who ſhall, in thy Sight, be eſteemed their De-"ſtroyers!

But

A. D. 1713

But about One a Clock that Day, Her Majeſty complain'd of a Pain in her Thigh; and was ſeiz'd with a violent Shivering, which laſted above Two Hours. Extream Heat follow'd, with intenſe Thirſt, great Anxiety, Reſtleſneſs and Inquietude. The Pulſe was full, hard and quick; which Dr. Shadwell finding, the next Day, be very much preſs'd Bleeding, urging, it would, probably, carry off a good Part of the Fever, and bring a Fit of the Gout; but it was not agreed to; and theſe Symptoms continued till Saturday Morning, when Her Majeſty fell aſleep, wak'd refreſh'd; and on Sunday Morning, there was a perfect Intermiſſion of the Symptoms; but the Pulſe, in Dr. Shadwell's Opinion, was not quiet. The next Night, about Twelve, ſhe was attack'd with an Exacerbation of the Fever, which laſted all the Monday, till Midnight. Moſt of the Queen's Phyſicians judging her Diſtemper to be an Ague, propos'd, and preſs'd the giving her the Jeſuits Bark; but tho' this was warmly oppoſed by Dr. Shadwell, yet the Phyſician that watch'd that Night, gave it, ſaying, He found the Pulſe calm. No Exacerbation appear'd after this: But, nevertheleſs, Dr. Shadwell ſtill declar'd, he did not like the Pulſe: That there was no perfect Intermiſſion of the Fever; but that the Pulſe was at work, to ſeparate the morbifick Matter into the Gout, or ſome worſe Shape. The Pains of the Thigh increaſing, till Three or Four Doſes of the Bark were given; Dr. Shadwell laid a Streſs upon having that Part examin'd; but the other Phyſicians call'd it a Fit of the Gout. Dr. Shadwell anſwer'd, it could not properly be call'd ſo in the Muſcles: And being of Opinion, that this was an inflammatory Fever, from the Tranſlation of the Gout, and not a common Ague, or intermitting Fever; and finding, that after Thirty Nine Hours Continuance, there was a perfect Remiſſion, but no Intermiſſion; he made a Prognoſtick, that unleſs the Feveriſh Matter were ſeparated, and thrown off into a ſmart Fit of the Gout, a worſe Symptom might happen; as, its falling into the Thigh, and fixing into an Eryſipelas Tumour. This Opinion was juſtify'd, by a ſevere Fit of the Gout that came upon Her Majeſty, a few Days after, and gave ſome Hopes of her intire Recovery.

While the Queen was in this uncertain State of Health, the Minds of the ſeveral Parties in Great Britain were ſtrangely agitated by various Expectations, or Apprehenſions. The Partiſans of the Chevalier de St. George fondly believ'd, that all Things were preparing for his Reſtoration; and, on the other hand, the Alarm of the well-affected to the Hanover Succeſſion was not a little increaſed, upon the News that a * Squadron of Fourteen Men of War was fitting out in the Ports of France; and that they were to take on Board Twelve or Fourteen Thouſand Land-Men. Hereupon, the publick Funds fell gradually, from the Beginning till the End of January; when ſuch a Panick ſeiz'd, on a ſudden, on the Minds of moſt Money'd Men, that, on Friday the 29th, there was a great Run upon the Bank of England, which continued for ſome Days. Hereupon, the Directors ſent a Deputation of Four of their Members, to the Lord High Treaſurer, to repreſent to his Lordſhip, the Dangers that threaten'd the publick Credit; and to deſire the Aſſiſtance of his wiſe Counſels, and Protection, to put a Stop to this growing Evil. The Lord Treaſurer receiv'd this Application very favourably; endeavour'd to diſpel their groundleſs Fears; and promis'd to uſe his utmoſt Endeavours to ſupport the Bank in this arduous Exigency. The Doubts that were ſtill entertain'd about the Queen's moſt precious Health, being one of the chief Occaſions of the publick Alarm, Her Majeſty, by the Advice of her Miniſters, wrote the following Letter to the Lord Mayor of London.

The Queen's Letter to the Lord-Mayor of London.

" RIght Truſty and Well-beloved, We greet you well. Altho' an aguiſh Indiſ-
" poſition, ſucceeded by a Fit of the Gout, has detain'd Us at this Place lon" ger than We deſign'd; yet ſince it has pleaſed Almighty GOD to reſtore Us to " ſuch a Degree of Health, that We hope to be able ſoon to return to our uſual Re-
" ſidence; We continue determin'd to open our Parliament, on Tueſday the 16th
" of this Inſtant February, according to the Notice given by Proclamation. Thus " much We have judg'd proper to communicate to you, and by you to the Court
" of Aldermen, and to our other loving Subjects of our good City of London; to
" the Intent that you may all, in your ſeveral Stations, contribute to diſcounte-
" nance, and put a ſtop to thoſe malicious Rumours, ſpread by evil-diſpos'd Per-
" ſons, to the Prejudice of Credit, and to the eminent Hazard of the Publick Peace
" and Tranquillity. And ſo We bid you farewel.

Given at our Caſtle at Windſor, the Firſt Day of February 1713; in the Twelfth Year of our Reign.

By Her Majeſty's Command,

Superſcrib'd To our Right Truſty and Well-beloved, Sir Samuel Stanier, Kt. Lord-Mayor of our City of London.

A. D. 17$\frac{1}{4}$.

Two * Days after, the Two Sheriffs waited on the Queen, to return Her the humble Thanks of the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen, for her moſt gracious Letter; which, indeed, brought unſpeakable Joy and Comfort to the Cities of London and Weſtminſter; and the News which, at the ſame Time, came from Holland, "That the Troops that had been reported to be aſſembled in the Bologneſe, were "mere Chimeras; and that the Pretender continued in Lorrain;" diſpell'd the Fears of the Generality, and put ſome Stop to the Run upon the Bank. However, to anſwer the Demands of the moſt cautious, who thought fit to ſecure as much of their ready Money as poſſibly they could, againſt all Events; the Directors of the Bank were obliged to call in, Twice, Twenty per Cent. upon the Subſcription for Circulating Exchequer Bills. While the Nation was in this Fermentation, and under various Apprehenſions, there was publiſh'd a remarkable Pamphlet, intituled, THE ART OF RESTORING; or The Piety and Probity of General MONK, in bringing about the laſt RESTORATION, evinc'd from his own Authentick Letters; with a juſt Account of Sir ROGER, who runs the Parallel as far as he can; in a Letter to a Miniſter of State at the Court of Vienna. This Piece was principally levell'd againſt the Lord Treaſurer; and contributed the more to the rendring him obnoxious to the Friends of the Proteſtant Succeſſion, when it was known to be the Performance of Mr. Toland, a Perſon formerly intruſted, and employ'd abroad by that Miniſter. In order, in ſome Meaſure, to diſpel theſe ungrateful Suſpicions, the Treaſurer thought fit to have the reputed Author of the late Treatiſe aſſerting the Hereditary Right brought to his Tryal; and, accordingly, on the 15th of February, Helkiah Bedford, a Nonjuring Clergyman, being arraign'd at the Bar of the Queen's-Bench Court at Weſtminſter, before the Lord Chief-Juſtice Parker, and found guilty of Writing, Printing, and Publiſhing that Book, he was committed to the Marſhalſea. On the laſt Day of April, he was brought to the ſame Bar, to receive his Sentence; but the ſame was put off till the 4th of May, when Judgment was pronounc'd againſt him; which was, "To pay a Fine of a Thouſand Marks; to be "committed to the Queen's-Bench Priſon, till he paid the ſame; to remain in "Cuſtody there for the Term of Three Years; to find Four ſufficient Sureties, "who, with him, were to be bound in a Recognizance of Five Thouſand Pounds, "for his good Behaviour during Life; and that the Friday following, he ſhould be "brought into all the Courts of Weſtminſter-Hall, when ſitting, with a Paper affix'd "to his Head, denoting his Offence." But, after the Sentence was paſs'd, an Order was produc'd from the Government, counterſign'd by a Secretary of State, directing the Judges of the Queen's-Bench to ſuperſede the ignominious Part of the Puniſhment, by reaſon of the ſacred Function of the Criminal: "Which Proceed-"ing (to uſe the Words of a famous * Lawyer) could bear no other Conſtruction, "than as a Licenſe and Protection, to Men in Holy Orders, to propagate that de-"ſtructive Poſition with Impunity; and the Character of the Perſon, which ought, "in Juſtice, to have aggravated his Guilt, and heighten'd his Puniſhment, became "his Indemnity againſt the Reproach of it, even by the Authority of the Govern-"ment it ſelf, againſt which that Treatiſe was levell'd. This Indulgence appear'd "the more glaring, conſidering what Severities were, at the ſame Time, exerciſed "againſt thoſe Perſons, who had Courage enough to aſſert the Intereſt of their Coun-"try, and of the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

All this while, the Britiſh Miniſters were ſo buſy and perplex'd at home, that they gave but little Attention to Affairs abroad; repoſing themſelves, almoſt entirely, about the latter, on the Earl of Strafford; who ſtill continued at the Hague. The Treaty of Peace and Friendſhip, between Great Britain and Spain, had been ſign'd on the 13th of July N. S. 1713; but the Treaty of Commerce was not concluded till the 28th Day of November O. S. In the mean Time, the Emperor rather choſe to make a bold Stand againſt the whole Power of France, than to accept the Conditions impoſed upon him by that Crown: But the Loſs of the Fortreſſes of Landau and Friburgh, after Two memorable Sieges, inclin'd his Imperial Majeſty to hearken to Overtures of Peace, that were made to him by the Electors of Mentz and Palatine, on the Part of France. The Conferences held at Radſtad, towards a Treaty, between Prince Eugene of Savoy, and the Mareſchal de Villars, were managed with ſuch Secrecy, as gave no ſmall Uneaſineſs to the Two Maritime Powers; and was, generally, look'd upon as a Slight upon Great Britain. Hereupon, the Earl of Strafford, in a Conference with the Deputies of the States-General, acquainted them, "That Her Britannick Majeſty had given him a full "Power to cultivate a mutual good Friendſhip, Harmony and Union, between Her "Majeſty and that State; to remove all Umbrage that might in any manner be "entertain'd, and re-eſtabliſh a perfect Confidence. That herein Her Majeſty had "an immediate View, next to the Welfare of the Kingdoms and States on both "ſides,

" ſides, to the common Good of Europe : That his Lordſhip doubted not of their " High Mightineſſes concurring with Her Majeſty, for ſo good an End ; which, " he was perſwaded, would be of great Weight in all Affairs." Then the Earl taking Notice of the Peace between the Emperor and France, which had been under Negotiation at Radſtad, he ſaid, " That nothing would more promote the Work " of that Peace, than if it was apparent, that Her Majeſty and their High Mighti- " neſſes had the ſame Sentiments about it. That Her Majeſty had very much " at Heart the Preſervation of the Proteſtant Religion, and Intereſt, in the Empire ; " and was apprehenſive, leſt, on the Part of the Emperor, ſomething might be " tranſacted prejudicial to it ; particularly, by getting the Fourth Article of the " Treaty of Ryſwick confirm'd. That in the Negotiation at Utrecht, the Queen " had endeavour'd, by all means, to remove the Prejudice occaſion'd by that Ar- " ticle : But that this ſeem'd to depend moſt upon his Imperial Majeſty, ſeeing " France had declar'd, that the Treaty of Weſtphalia ſhould ſerve for the Founda- " tion in this Point ; looking on it as an Affair of the Empire, in which that " Crown would not concern it ſelf. That Her Majeſty was of Opinion, that the " Miniſters of the Proteſtant Princes and States ought to be conferr'd with about " it ; and preſs'd to inſiſt, that in the Treaty of Peace between the Empire and " France, an Article might be inſerted, for aboliſhing the ſaid Fourth Article. " That the Proteſtant Princes and States of the Empire were beſt qualified to judge, " by what Means this might be effected ; and that Her Majeſty did not at all " doubt their High Mightineſſes would join with Her Majeſty, in uſing the moſt " powerful Offices for this Purpoſe. And that Her Majeſty's further Sentiments " were, that it would be proper, the Place to be choſen for the Congreſs, in order " to treat in Form of Peace, between the Emperor and Empire and France, might " be a Place whither Her Majeſty and the States might conveniently ſend their " Miniſters. That as to the Affairs of Italy, it was highly neceſſary they ſhould " be ſettled on a good Foot : That Her Majeſty apprehended very much, that if " the Intereſt of the Princes in Italy with the Emperor, and particularly of the " Duke of Savoy, now King of Sicily, ſhould not be regulated, new Diſturbances " and Wars would break out in Italy ; which might be very pernicious to the Com- " mon Good of Europe, and eſpecially to the Commerce of the Subjects of Her " Majeſty, and of the States : That, on ſuch an Occaſion, the King of Sicily " would, undoubtedly, have recourſe to the Guaranty promis'd him by the Trea- " ties, and that Her Majeſty would certainly act according to her Engagements : " That their High Mightineſſes would, in like manner, doubtleſs, diſcharge their " Obligations, either in Favour of the Duke of Savoy, or in Favour of the Empe- " ror : That, in the firſt Caſe, the States concurring with Her Majeſty, a good Iſſue " could not be doubted ; as, in the ſecond Caſe, the contrary could not but hap- " pen, whenever the States ſhould ſeparate from Her Majeſty. That, ſhould the " Peace be concluded with the Empire, yet whenever the War ſhould break out " again in Italy, it could not but draw fatal Conſequences after it : That Her Ma- " jeſty having conſider'd this, had ſent Order to her Miniſters, to preſs the Kings " of France and Spain to a Guaranty, in Favour of the King of Sicily ; but that no- " thing would conduce ſo much to the preſerving of the Tranquillity of Italy, as " their High Mightineſſes joining herein with Her Majeſty. That, againſt this, it " might be objected, that the States had more Reaſon than Her Majeſty, to keep " fair with the Emperor, on Account of their Barrier in the Spaniſh Netherlands, up- " on which they were not yet come to an Agreement with the Emperor : But that " the States had already acquir'd a Right to the Barrier, and the Emperor had no " Right to the Spaniſh Netherlands, otherwiſe than on Conditions, upon which their " High Mightineſſes had ſtipulated by Treaty, the Ceſſion of the Spaniſh Nether- " lands in Favour of his Imperial Majeſty ; and conſequently, was obliged to " perform thoſe Conditions, without which he could not take Poſſeſſion of the " Spaniſh Netherlands. That Her Majeſty, purſuant to the Barrier-Treaty, would " be aſſiſting therein to the States ; as alſo, whenever their High Mighti- " neſſes ſhould be deſirous to come to an Agreement thereupon with the Em- " peror, before the Concluſion of the Peace. But that Her Majeſty likewiſe ex- " pected, that their High Mightineſſes would declare for performing their Guaranty in " Favour of the King of Sicily. That as to the preſent Regency of the Spaniſh Ne- " therlands, her Majeſty had no other View, than that Affairs there might be or- " derly adminiſtred for the Preſervation of Tranquility, and the Welfare of the In- " habitants, according to their Rights and Privileges. That her Majeſty's Secretary " at Bruſſels, had Orders to follow ſuch Directions as he ſhould receive from his " Lordſhip, after Concert had, at the Hague, with their High-Mightineſſes, who, " he doubted not, would willingly concur therein ; and propoſed, whether it might not

" vent all Conteſts and Jealouſy; that the Grievances which had long been ſuffer'd
" on the Part of England, by the unequal Impoſitions on their Subjects, being now
" removed, the Affairs of Commerce might be ſettled there. That he hoped, that " People in Holland were now cured of the Suſpicions they had entertained, about
" the Demolition of Dunkirk, ſeeing it was in part done, and in a little Time " would be wholly performed; that he himſelf had been there, and ſaw that the " Forts and Fortifications, (the Citadel excepted, as being reſerved for the laſt,)
" were moſt of them blown up, or razed; that the filling up of the Harbour, and
" the demoliſhing of the Peers, were delayed only upon Account of about Twenty " Merchant Ships belonging to private Perſons, which were got ready to Sail, the " King's Ships being all actually gone. That thus all Umbrage ceaſing, her Maje-
" ſty was very deſirous their High-Mightineſſes would withdraw their Gariſon out
" of Oſtend, and let that Place be poſſeſſed by Troops of the Spaniſh Netherlands on" ly; and that, in the Agreement to be made by them with his Imperial Majeſty,
" they would inſert an Article, by which a certain Fund ſhould be ſtipulated, for
" the Preſervation and Maintenance of the Harbour, as alſo that Oſtend ſhould re-

" their High-Mightineſſes ſhould join with her Majeſty, particularly in the Gua" rantee of the Intereſts of the King of Sicily, and for the Preſervation of the Quiet
" of Italy, withdraw their Gariſon out of Oſtend, make a Convention for the Non" alienation of that Place from the Spaniſh Netherlands, and for a Fund for keeping " up the Harbour, the Point of Commerce being already ſettled, her Majeſty
" would then be ready to deliver up the Caſtle of Ghent to the Troops of the State,
" and to withdraw her Troops out of Ghent, Bruges, and Newport, and to take all " needful Meaſures with their High-Mightineſſes, for the Security of their Barrier:
" That her Majeſty likewiſe judged it reaſonable, that the State, even before Poſſeſſion
" of the Spaniſh Netherlands be given the Emperor, ſhould pay it ſelf the ſtipulated
" Million of Guilders; and that he had Order to be aſſiſting therein to their High-
" Mightineſſes. In the laſt Place, the Earl told them, that ſince he left England,
" he had receiv'd Orders to acquaint their High-Mightineſſes, that his Czariſh Maje-
" ſty having commanded his Subjects to carry their Goods and Merchandize from
" Archangel to Peterſburg, the Engliſh Merchants trading to Muſcovy, had applied
" themſelves thereupon to her Majeſty, and beſought her Protection, particularly " on Account of the Proceedings and Threats of the Swedes to take and confiſcate all
" the Ships trafficking to the Ports of his Czarian Majeſty in the Eaſt-Sea; and his " Lordſhip deſired to be informed of their High-Mightineſſes Sentiments, about
" the Meaſures to be taken for protecting the Subjects of both Nations; referring to " their Conſideration, whether it might not be expedient for that Purpoſe, to ſend a " Squadron jointly to the Eaſt-Sea.

The States Deputies having made their Report of this Conference, their High-Mightineſſes, a few Days after, return'd an Anſwer to the Earl of Strafford, wherein, in the firſt Place, they thank'd his Excellency for the Aſſurances of Friendſhip he gave them on the Part of her Majeſty, the Queen of Great Britain. Then, proceeding to Particulars, their High-Mightineſſes offer'd to concert with her Majeſty, the Meaſures proper to be taken, for the Security of the Proteſtant Religion, eſpecially in the Empire, and for procuring the Abolition of the Clauſe of the Fourth Article of the Peace of Ryſwick. As to the Apprehenſion of a new War in Italy, their High-Mightineſſes hoped, that by the Peace of Raſtad, the Emperor, and the King of France, had provided for the Tranquility of that Country, and that they had likewiſe regulated the Affairs relating to the Duke of Savoy, and to Sicily; for this Reaſon, and becauſe the Conditions of that Peace were not yet known to their High-Mightineſſes, they could not, at preſent, enter into Deliberation with the Earl of Strafford upon thoſe Matters. That as to the Treaty with Spain, their High-Mightineſſes had the Regards they ought to her Majeſty's Recommendations for the Intereſts of the Princeſs Urſini; but that they had given ſuch good Reaſons why they could not agree in a Guarantee, that the King of France, and even the King of Spain, had acquieſced in them, and deſiſted from their Demands thereupon; that for this Reaſon, the States General promiſed themſelves, from the Queen's Goodneſs and Equity, that her Majeſty would not inſiſt upon a Thing, which even the King of Spain himſelf had let drop. That as to the Affairs of the Spaniſh Netherlands, their High-Mightineſſes would always be ready to confer with the Earl of Strafford, on the Points relating to the Intereſts of thoſe Countries. And as to the Town of Oſtend in particular, their High-Mightineſſes declared, that they would withdraw their Troops from thence, and deliver it into the Hands of Walloon Troops, as ſoon as Dunkirk ſhould be demoliſhed; provided that at the ſame Time, they be put into Poſſeſſion of the Caſtle of Ghent, as by the Treaty of Barrier they ought; but that their High-Mightineſſes were abſolutely of Opinion, that it would be proper to communicate these Things to his Imperial Majesty, and to act in Concert with him, it not being to be doubted that the Spanish Netherlands were yielded to him by the Peace of Rastadt. That their High-Mightinesses were extream glad of the Declaration her Majesty had caused to be made to them, of her Willingness to withdraw her Troops from the Castle of Ghent, as also from Bruges and Newport, and to assist the State in recovering from Brabant the Million, which by the Treaty of Barrier, they ought to have from that Province; but as to the Conditions which were added to that Declaration, the States General expected from her Majesty's Equity and Affection, that it would not be her Intention that the Effect of these Things should be made dependent on some Conditions which were not expressed in the Treaty of Barrier, and that, on the contrary, her Majesty would be pleased to look upon that Treaty as a Measure and a Rule, as the States General did on their Part; and that her Majesty would not join the Execution of it to Conditions which were new, and foreign to that Treaty. That their High-Mightinesses had a common Interest with the Queen, in securing the Freedom of Commerce in the Baltick: That they were not yet in a Condition to take a positive Resolution thereupon, but when they were, they would confer about it with the Earl of Strafford.

Not long after, the Queen appointed Charles Whitworth, Esq; her Plenipotentiary at the Congress to be held at Baden in Switzerland, for concluding a Peace between the Emperor and Empire, and the most Christian King. And, about the same Time, the Earl of Strafford declared * to the Ministers of the Protestant Electors, and Princes of the Empire, "That the Queen, his Mistress, had receiv'd the Letter "which the Protestant Body had written to her from Ausburg, touching the Clause "of the Fourth Article of the Treaty of Ryswick: That her Majesty would speedi-"ly return a favourable Answer to it; and that her Majesty resolv'd to send a Mi-"nister to the Congress at Baden, whither her Majesty desir'd the States General, and "the Protestant States of the Empire to send theirs. The Protestant Ministers thanked his Excellency for her Majesty's Offers, promising to acquaint their Principals therewith: But the States General having been given to understand, that the Emperor would not admit the Ministers of the Maritime Powers to the Congress, it was answer'd, on the Part of their High-Mightinesses, "That the States of the Empire "having referred it to his Imperial Majesty to conclude the Peace in the Name of "the Empire, 'twas believ'd the Electors and Princes would not send any Ministers "thither; and for that Reason, their High-Mightinesses did not think it proper to "send any on their Part. However, in Compliance with the pressing Instances of the Protestant Princes of the Empire, their High-Mightinesses wrote a very pathetick Letter to the Emperor, earnestly "to desire him to satisfy the just Demands "of those Princes, in the general Peace to be concluded at Baden; the rather, be-"cause they had, with entire Confidence, entrusted their Interest with his Imperial "Majesty.

* May 7. N. S.

The Emperor resolves to conclude his Peace with France, without the Admission of the British and Dutch Ministers.

And to have the Barrier Treaty concluded at Vienna.

On the other hand, the Emperor, to shew his Resentment of the Negotiation at Utrecht, not only resolv'd to conclude his Treaty with France, without the Intervention of the Maritime Potentates, but as a further Mortification to Great Britain, Baron Heems declared to the States Deputies, "That his Imperial Majesty was dis-"posed to treat with their High-Mightinesses concerning a Barrier in the Nether-"lands; that the Treaty might be prepared and brought to some Maturity at the "Hague; but that the Emperor would be glad to have it perfected and concluded "at Vienna, whither their High-Mightinesses were desired to send a Minister: And "that Ostend might not be alienated from the Netherlands." The States Deputies having acquainted * the Earl of Strafford with this Declaration, his Lordship express'd his great Surprize at it, and told them, He was obliged to inform them, that their High-Mightinesses were Guarantees of the SUCCESSION in the Protestant Line, as well as the Queen was Guarantee of the BARRIER in the Spanish Netherlands for the State; and that the said Succession would stand good, and have Effect, as it should come in Order, but that her Majesty would never suffer any Laws to be prescrib'd, or impos'd upon her on that Account. That her Majesty, as well as the State, was interested in the Affair of the BARRIER, and therefore no Step ought to be taken in it, without acting therein in Concert with her Majesty: That he had Order to declare, in the Name of the Queen, his Mistress, that the treating and concluding on the BARRIER at Vienna, seem'd to be propos'd, with Intention only to exclude her Majesty from the Negotiations about it: That in such a Case, her Majesty would forthwith renounce all Engagements with this State, for that her Majesty absolutely insisted upon sending a Minister likewise thither, for the Reasons beforemention'd. That her Majesty had sent to the King of France, for an Explanation touching the exchanging of some Places in the Spanish Netherlands, according to the Treaty of Rastadt, and had receiv'd for Answer, that the King of France would not concern himself therein. That as to what Baron Heems had mention'd in relation to Ostend, he, the Earl of Strafford, declar'd he was content therewith. But earnestly desired, that their High-

High-Mightineſſes would not ſend to Vienna, nor do any thing in this Negotiation, but in Concert with her Majeſty: Adding once more, that, purſuant to his Orders, he muſt declare, that her Majeſty would look upon ſuch a Proceeding as a form'd Deſign of their High-Mightineſſes to diſſolve all Engagements now ſubſiſting between her Majeſty and the State. On the other hand, the Earl of Strafford endeavour'd to draw to the Hague, the Negotiation of Peace in the North; and engag'd the Court of France, by Monſieur de Chateauneuf, their Ambaſſador at the Hague, to offer their Mediation for that Purpoſe to the Northern Allies. But the King of Pruſſia having cauſed the King of Poland to be ſounded, whether he was inclin'd to enter into the Engagement which Baron Sparre, and the Count de Rottenbourg, had propos'd at the Hague, on the Part of France, his Poliſh Majeſty ſignify'd, that he could never have any ſuch Thoughts, for it could never be his Intereſt to ſeparate himſelf from his Allies.

The Northern Allies ſhew no Inclination to accept the Mediation of France.

By this Time the Earl of Strafford, and, indeed, all the Miniſters at the Hague, were more attentive to the Tranſactions in Great Britain, than to any Thing that paſs'd on the Continent. The Queen, upon her Recovery, was no ſooner inform'd of the Death * of the Archbiſhop of York, than, without waiting for any Sollicitation or Recommendation, her Majeſty, of her own Accord, named Sir William Dawes, Baronet, Lord Biſhop of Cheſter, as the moſt worthy Prelate to ſucceed the deceaſed in that Metropolitan See. At the ſame Time, the Reverend Dr. Smalridge, was made Biſhop of Briſtol, and Lord Almoner to the Queen: And Dr. Francis Gaſtrell, Preacher at Lincoln's-Inn, Biſhop of Cheſter: And the Queen was pleaſed to beſtow the Command of the Second Troop of Horſe Grenadier Guards, vacant by the Death of the Earl of Crawfurd, on the young Earl Mariſchal, a Scotch Peer, of ſtanch Loyalty to the Royal Cauſe. About the ſame Time, John Hartſtronge, Lord Biſhop of Oſſory, in Ireland, was tranſlated to the Biſhoprick of Londonderry; and was ſucceeded in the See of Oſſory, by Sir Thomas Veſey, Baronet, Biſhop of Killaloo, and Son to the Archbiſhop of Tuam.

Sir William Dawes made Archbiſhop of York; And Dr. Smalridge Biſhop of Briſtol; And Dr. Gaſtrell, Biſhop of Cheſter.

On Saturday, the 6th of February, being the Anniverſary of her Majeſty's Birth, there was at the Court at Windſor, a great Appearance of Foreign Miniſters, Nobility and Gentry, in magnificent and ſumptuous Habits, who, about Two a Clock in the Afternoon, paid their Compliments to her Majeſty: And, at Night, there was a Ball, and a ſplendid Entertainment in the Caſtle. Her Majeſty's Birth-Day was alſo celebrated in London and Weſtminſter with extraordinary Rejoycings, Bonfires, and Illuminations: And the Whigs, particularly the HANOVER CLUB, took this Occaſion to ſignalize their Zeal and Affection to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, by cauſing the Effigies of the Devil, the Pope, and the Pretender, to be carried in ſolemn Proceſſion from Charing-Croſs, to the Royal-Exchange, and ſo back to Charing-Croſs, and afterwards burnt at this laſt Place. It is to be obſerv'd, that Three Drummers, belonging to her Majeſty's Foot-Guards, having, unadviſedly, but without any ill Intention, attended that Mobbiſh Proceſſion, and contrary to the Rules of the City, beat the Drums there, they were apprehended, and carried to the Compter, and the next Day committed to Newgate, by Warrant of the Lord-Mayor. Some officious Sycophants went near to ſtrain this Popular Frolick, to a form'd Plot againſt the Government: But thoſe at the Helm were ſo wiſe, as to take no notice of it; and ſo the Drummers were diſcharged. Moreover, ſome of the Miniſters, who were conſcious to themſelves of having taken ſome dubious Steps, thought it Prudence, while the Queen ſtill continued in a dangerous State of Health, to make freſh Profeſſions of their Affections to the Proteſtant Succeſſor. With this View, the Treaſurer endeavoured to perſuade the Queen to ſend the Duke of Kent to Hanover, with a publick Character: But his Grace having declined that Employment, unleſs he was impower'd to offer more real Securities, than fair Words and Promiſes; about the middle of February, Thomas Harley, Eſq; ſet out for Holland, in his way to the Court of Hanover, accompanied by the Son of Mr. Secretary Bromley, Mr. Creſſet, and Mr. Wimington.

The Queen, on the 16th of February, removed from Windſor to Hampton-Court, in a tolerable State of Health; and, the next Day, came to St. James's Palace, to the univerſal Joy of all her Subjects. The Day before, the Parliament of Great Britain being met at Weſtminſter, the Commons, at the deſire of the Lords Commiſſioners appointed by her Majeſty, attended their Lordſhips in the Houſe of Peers, where the Lord Chancellor ſignify'd to them her Majeſty's Pleaſure, that they ſhould forthwith proceed to the Choice of a fit Perſon to be their Speaker, and preſent him the Thurſday following. The Commons being return'd to their Houſe, the Lord Scudamore, (purſuant to the Reſult of a Conſultation held the Night before at Mr. Secretary Bromley's) propoſed Sir THOMAS HANMER, Baronet, and being ſeconded and back'd by Three or Four other Members, he was choſen with-† Feb. 26. General Court of the South-Sea Company.

On the 27th of February, the South-Sea Company held a General Court, in which the Court of Directors communicated to them ſeveral Papers they had prepared, in concert with the Lord Treaſurer, in relation to the Aſſiento Contract, to be conſider'd by the Aſſembly. Several Members were ſtrangely ſurpriz'd at theſe Propoſals: For whereas they expected, that the Queen had procur'd the whole Aſſiento Contract for the Company, they now found that one half of the clear Profits were reſerv'd for her Majeſty, and the King of Spain, beſides Seven and a half per Cent. granted to an unknown Perſon. Beſides theſe Exceptions, Mr. Milner, an Eminent Merchant, declar'd his Opinion, "That the Company might very well ſpare the "trying the Experiment of a Trade, by which other Nations were known to have "been Loſers; eſpecially upon ſuch hard Terms as were offered to the Company; "the rather, becauſe the ſaid Trade would be precarious, and at the Mercy of the late reconcil'd Enemies?" He was back'd by ſome other Members, ſo that Mr. Arthur Moore, who ſpoke in Behalf of this Trade, had not the good Fortune to make many Proſelytes to his Opinion. The Reſult of this Aſſembly, was an Order for the Printing of the Papers laid before them, in order to their being further conſider'd in another General Court, to be holden on the 24th of February. This Second Aſſembly was very numerous; and after the reading of the Papers, ſeveral Speeches were made for and againſt the accepting the Two Licenſes, and the Aſſiento Contract, of which Mr Arthur Moore, and Mr. John Ward, endeavour'd to ſhew the great Advantages. But Mr. Craggs, Mr. Newman, Mr. Fiſher, and ſome other Gentlemen of great Skill and Experience in Commercial Affairs, maintain'd the contrary Opinion, with ſuch Force of Argument, and ſuch irrefragable Inſtances, that, in the general Opinion, had the Queſtion then been put for Agreeing or Diſagreeing with the Reſolution above-mention'd, it had been carried for the latter by a great Majority. But it being mov'd and agreed, that the ſaid Queſtion ſhould be decided by Ballot on the 26th of February, and that the Members ſhould have one Vote for every Five Hundred Pounds they had in the Capital-Stock; what by the Influence of the Directors, who were to be the Managers of the Trade; and who, (as in all other Societies of this Nature) were almoſt ſure to be Gainers, whatever became of the reſt: What by the Contrivance of Stock-Jobbers, whoſe Buſineſs was to keep the Publick Funds in perpetual Fluctuation, and in order to that, to engage Companies in dubious Adventures: What by the juſt Apprehenſions the Generality of the Members were under, that the rejecting of this Trade, would be interpreted as an Affront to the Lord Treaſurer, who might reſent it to ſuch a Degree, as to grow leſs ſollicitous for the Concerns of the Company, who wanted his Protection, for the Annual Proviſion of the Intereſt of the Capital-Stock, 'till the Year 1716: Upon all theſe, and ſome other Conſiderations, it was carried by a vaſt Majority, That the General Court agreed with the Reſolution propoſed by the Court of Directors, relating to the Two Licenſes, and the Aſſiento Contract.

On the 27th of February, one of the Queen's Meſſengers brought over from Holland the Ratifications exchanged of the Treaty of Commerce between Great Britain and Spain; whereupon the Queen ſigned ‖ a Proclamation for the Publication of the Peace between the Two Crowns; which was done accordingly, with the uſual Solemnities, on the 1ſt of March. By the Firſt Article of the Treaty of Peace, "a perpetual and true Friendſhip was ſtipulated between Queen Anne, and King "Philip the Fifth, and their reſpective Subjects: By the Second, it was provided, "that the Kingdoms of France and Spain ſhould never be united under the ſame "Dominion, and that one and the ſame Perſon ſhould never become King of both "Kingdoms: To which purpoſe, the ſeveral Renunciations lately made in France "and Spain, were here recited. The Third contain'd a perpetual Amneſty and Obli- "vion, on both Sides, of all Things done in an hoſtile Manner, during the late "War. By the Fourth, all Priſoners on both Sides, were to be reſtored to their "former Liberty, paying only ſuch Debts as they might have contracted during "their being Priſoners. By the Fifth, the Catholick King ſincerely and ſolemnly "acknowledged the Limitation of the Succeſſion to the Kingdom of Great Britain, "in the Proteſtant Line of Hanover; and declared and engaged, on the Faith and "Word of a King, and on the Pledge of his and his Succeſſors Honour, that the "ſame ſhould for ever be approved, and accepted by them, his Heirs and Succeſſors.

" This was corroborated by the Sixth Article, wherein the Catholick King further " promiſed, as well in his own, as in the Name of his Heirs and Succeſſors, never " to diſturb or moleſt the Queen of Great Britain, her Heirs and Succeſſors of the " Proteſtant Line; or, on any Pretences, endeavour to oppoſe the ſaid Succeſſion. " By the Seventh it was agreed, that the ordinary Diſtribution of Juſtice be re- " ſtored, through the Dominions of each of their Royal Majeſties; ſo that it might " be free for all the Subjects, on both Sides, to proſecute and obtain their Rights, " Pretenſions, and Actions. By the Eighth, was ſtipulated a free Uſe of Naviga- " tion and Commerce, between the Subjects of each Kingdom, as it was in Time " of Peace, in the Reign of Charles the Second. And whereas among other Condi- " tions of the General Peace, it was eſtabliſhed as a Chief and Fundamental Rule, " that the Exerciſe of Navigation and Commerce to the Spaniſh Weſt-Indies, ſhould " remain in the ſame State it was, in the Time of the aforeſaid King Charles the " Second: That therefore this Rule might hereafter be obſerved with inviolable " Faith, and thereby all Cauſes of Diſtruſt and Suſpicion concerning that Matter " might be prevented, it was eſpecially agreed, that no Licenſe, nor any Permiſſion " at all, ſhould at any Time be given, either to the French, or to any Nation, " whatever, under any Pretence, directly or indirectly, to ſail, to traffick in, or " introduce Negroes, Goods, Merchandizes, or any Things whatſoever, into the " Dominions ſubject to the Crown of Spain in America, except what might be " agreed by the Treaty of Commerce, and the Rights and Privileges granted in a " certain Convention, commonly called el Aſſiento de Negroes; except alſo what- " ſoever the Catholick King, or his Heirs or Succeſſors, ſhould promiſe by any Con- " tract or Contracts, for the Introduction of Negroes into the Spaniſh Weſt-Indies, to " be made after that the Convention or the Aſſiento de Negroes, above-mentioned, " ſhould be determined. And it was alſo agreed and concluded, That neither the " Catholick King, nor any of his Heirs and Succeſſors ſhould ſell, yield, pawn, " transfer, or by any Means, or under any Name, alienate from them, and the " Crown of Spain to the French, or to any other Nations whatever, any Lands, Do- " minions, or Territories, or any Part thereof, belonging to Spain in America: On " the contrary, that the Spaniſh Dominions in the Weſt-Indies might be preſerv'd " whole and entire, the Queen of Great Britain engag'd, that ſhe would endeavour, " and give aſſiſtance to the Spaniards, that the ancient Limits of their Dominions " in the Weſt-Indies, be reſtored, and ſettled as they ſtood, in the Time of King " Charles the Second, if it ſhould appear that they had in any Manner, or under " any Pretence, been broken into, and leſſened in any Part, ſince the Death of the " ſaid Catholick King Charles the Second. By the Ninth Article it was agreed, " That all the Subjects of each Kingdom ſhould, in all Countries and Places on " both Sides, enjoy the ſame Privileges and Immunities, as to all Duties, Impoſi- " tions, or Cuſtoms, as the Subjects of France, or any Foreign Nation, the moſt fa- " vour'd, might poſſeſs or enjoy. By the Tenth Article, the Catholick King yield- " ed for ever to the Crown of Great Britain, the Town and Caſtle of Gibraltar; as " he did, in like manner, by the Eleventh, the whole Iſland of Minorca, and the " Town, Harbour, and Fortifications of Port-Mahon: But it was provided, That no " Refuge or Shelter ſhould be open to any Ships of War of the Moors in Gibraltar " and Port-Mahon, or in any other Port of the Iſland of Minorca, whereby the Spa- " niſh Coaſts might be infeſted by their Excurſions: And the Moors, and their Ships, " ſhould only be allowed to enter the Port of Gibraltar, and Iſland aforeſaid, on ac- " connt of Traffick, according to the Agreement of Treaties. The Queen of Great " Britain promiſed alſo, on her Part, That if at any Time it ſhould happen, that " the Town of Gibraltar, and the Iſland of Minorca, and the Ports, Towns, and " Places therein ſituated, be, by any Means, hereafter alienated from the Crown of " her Kingdoms, the Preference ſhould be given to the Crown of Spain, before any " other Nation whatever, of redeeming the Poſſeſſion and Propriety of the ſaid Town " and Iſland. Her Royal Majeſty of Great Britain moreover engaged, That ſhe " would take Care, that all the Inhabitants of the ſaid Town and Iſland, both Ec- " cleſiaſtical and Secular, ſhould ſafely and peaceably enjoy all their Eſtates and " Honours, and that the free uſe of the Roman Catholick Religion ſhould be permitted: " And Meaſures ſhould be taken for preſerving the ſaid Religion in that Iſland, " provided the ſame be conſiſtent with the Civil Government, and Laws of Great Britain. " Thoſe likewiſe, who were now in the Service of his Catholick Majeſty, ſhould " enjoy their Honours and Eſtates, though they continued in the ſaid Service; and " it ſhould be lawful for any Perſon who was deſirous to leave the ſaid Iſland, to ſell " his Eſtate, and paſs freely with the Value thereof into Spain. By the Twelfth, " the Catholick King granted to her Britannick Majeſty, and to the Company of " her Subjects, excluſive of all others, the Contract for introducing Negroes into ſe-

With ſeveral other extraordinary Advantages, more amply " explain'd in the Contract of the Aſſiento, concluded at Madrid, the 26th of March, " 1713. The Thirteenth Article imported, That whereas the Queen of Great " Britain had continually preſſed and inſiſted with the greateſt Earneſtneſs, that all " the Inhabitants of the Principality of Catalonia, ſhould not only obtain a full " and perpetual Oblivion of all that was done in the late War, and enjoy the en- " tire Poſſeſſion of all their Eſtates and Honours, but ſhould alſo have their ancient " Privileges preſerved ſafe and untouched; the Catholick King, in Compliance with " the ſaid Queen, granted and confirmed to all the Inhabitants of Catalonia, what- " ſoever, not only the Amneſty deſired, together with the full Poſſeſſion of all their " Eſtates and Honours, but alſo gave and granted to them all the Privileges which " the Inhabitants of both Caſtiles, who, of all the Spaniards, are the moſt dear to " the Catholick King, have and enjoy. By the Fourteenth, the Catholick King, " at the Requeſt of the Queen of Great Britain, yielded the Kingdom of Sicily to " his Royal Highneſs Victor Amadeus, Duke of Savoy: But the Queen promiſed and " engaged, That ſhe would take great Care, that in default of the Heirs Male of " the Houſe of Savoy, the Poſſeſſion of the Kingdom of Sicity ſhould revert again " to the Crown of Spain; and her Britannick Majeſty did further conſent, that the " Kingdom of Sicily might not, under any Pretence, or in any Manner whatever, be " alienated, or given to any Prince or State, unleſs to the Catholick King of Spain, " and to his Heirs and Succeſſors. By the Fifteenth Article, their Royal Majeſties, " on both Parts, renew'd and confirm'd all the Treaties of Peace, Friendſhip, Confe- " deration and Commerce, made heretofore, and concluded, between the Crowns of " Great Britain and Spain, in as full and ample a manner, as if they were now par- " ticularly here inſerted." And by ſeveral other ſubſequent Articles, ſeveral other Kings, Princes and States, were included in this Treaty, particularly the King of Portugal, the Duke of Savoy, the King of Sweden, the Great Duke of Tuſcany, the Duke of Parma, the Republicks of Venice and Genoa, and the City of Dantzick. This Treaty contain'd alſo Two ſeparate Articles, by the firſt of which the Queen promiſed, " to perſiſt in thoſe Meaſures and Counſels, by which ſhe had provided " and taken Care, that none of the Parties in War ſhould require or obtain of his " Catholick Majeſty, that any farther Part of the Spaniſh Monarchy be torn from " it. And by the Second, her Britannick Majeſty oblig'd her ſelf, and promiſed, " That ſhe would procure and effect, that, without any Delay, the Princeſs of " Urſini be put into actual Poſſeſſion of the Dutchy of Limburgh, or of other Coun- " tries in the Netherlands, which ſhould be ſubſtituted in lieu thereof, to the full Sa- " tisfaction of the Lady Princeſs of Urſini, with all manner of abſolute and inde- " pendent Superiority, clear from any Fee, or other Tye whatſoever, which ſhould " produce an annual Revenue of Thirty Thouſand Scudos, according to the Form " and Tenor of the Diploma granted by his Catholick Majeſty to the ſaid Princeſs, " the 28th Day of September, 1711. But, as was hinted before, this Article met with unſuperable Difficulties. As for the TREATY of NAVIGATION and COMMERCE, between the Crowns of Great Britain and Spain, it was, in the main, but a Renewal and Explanation of the Treaty of Peace, Commerce and Alliance, concluded at Madrid, between the Two Crowns, the 13,-23, of May, 1667, which was hereby ratified and confirm'd, and inſerted, Word for Word, in the firſt Article. By a ſeparate Article the Catholick King conſented, " That it ſhould at all Times hereafter, be " lawful for the Britiſh Subjects, who ſhould live in the Canary-Iſlands, for the ſake " of their Trade, to nominate ſome one Perſon, being a Subject of Spain, who " ſhould execute the Office of Judge Conſervator there, and ſhould, at the firſt In- " ſtance, take Cognizance of all Cauſes relating to the Commerce of the Britiſh " Subjects; and his Royal Majeſty promiſed, That he would grant Commiſſions " to ſuch Judge Conſervator, with the ſame Authority, and all the Privileges which " the Judges Conſervators had formerly enjoy'd in Andaluſia.

The next * Day, after the Publication of this Peace, the Queen went, in a Sedan, to the Houſe of Lords, with the uſual State, and the Commons being ſent for up, and attending, her Majeſty addreſs'd her ſelf to both Houſes of Parliament, in the following Speech: A. D. 1713.

* March 2.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes of Parliament.

" I Have much Satisfaction in being able, at the opening of this Parliament, to " tell you, that the Ratifications of the Treaties of Peace and of Commerce " with Spain, are exchanged, by which my Subjects will have greater Opportuni- " ties than ever, to improve and extend their Trade. Many Advantages formerly " enjoyed by Connivance, and procured by ſuch Methods as made a Diſtinction be- " tween one Britiſh Merchant and another, are now ſettled by Treaty, and an equal " Rule is eſtabliſhed.

" It has pleaſed God to bleſs my Endeavours to obtain an honourable and advan- " tageous Peace for my own People, and for the greateſt Part of my Allies. No- " thing which I can do, ſhall be wanting to render it univerſal, and I perſuade my " ſelf that, with your hearty Concurrence, my Interpoſition may, at laſt, prove ef- " fectual to compleat the Settlement of Europe.

" In the mean while, I congratulate with my own Subjects, that they are deli- " vered from a conſuming Land-War, and enter'd on a Peace; the good Effects " whereof, nothing but inteſtine Diviſions can obſtruct.

" It was the Glory of the wiſeſt and greateſt of my Predeceſſors, to hold the " Balance of Europe, and to keep it equal by caſting in their Weight, as Neceſſity " required. By this Conduct they enriched the Kingdom, and rendred themſelves " dreadful to their Enemies, and uſeful to their Friends. I have proceeded on " the ſame Principle, and I doubt not but my Succeſſors will follow theſe Ex- " amples.

" Our Situation points out to us our true Intereſt; for this Country can flouriſh " only by Trade, and will be moſt formidable by the right Application of our Na- " val Force.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

" I have ordered ſuch Accounts to be prepared and laid before you, as will ſhew " you, at the Concluſion of the War, the true State of your Condition, whereby " you will be better able to judge what Aids are neceſſary; and I only aſk of you " Supplies for the current Service of the Year, and for the diſcharge of ſuch Debts " as you ſhall find, on Examination, to be juſt and reaſonable.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" The Joy which has been generally expreſſed on my Recovery from my late In- " diſpoſition, and on my coming to this City, I eſteem as a Return to that tender " Affection which I have always had for my People.

" I wiſh that effectual Care had been taken, as I have often deſired, to ſuppreſs " thoſe ſeditious Papers, and Factious Rumours, by which deſigning Men have been " able to ſink Credit, and the Innocent have ſuffered.

" There are ſome who are arrived to that Height of Malice, as to inſinuate, that " the PROTESTANT SUCCESSION IN THE HOUSE OF HANOVER, " is in DANGER UNDER MY GOVERNMENT.

" Thoſe who go about thus to diſtract the Minds of Men with imaginary Dan- " gers, can only mean to diſturb the preſent Tranquility, and bring real Miſchiefs " upon us.

" After all I have done to ſecure our Religion, and your Liberties, and to tranſ- " mit both ſafe to Poſterity, I cannot mention theſe Proceeedings, without ſome " Degree of Warmth, and I muſt hope you will all agree with me, that attempts " to weaken my Authority, or to render the Poſſeſſion of the Crown uneaſy to me, " can never be proper Means to ſtrengthen the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

" I have done, and ſhall continue to do my beſt for the good of all my Subjects. " Let it be your Endeavour, as it ſhall be mine, to unite our Differences, not by " relaxing from the ſtricteſt Adherence to our Conſtitution in Church and State, but " by obſerving the Laws your ſelves, and enforcing a due Obedience to them in " others.

" A long War has not only impoveriſhed the Publick (however ſome particular " Men have been Gainers by it) but has alſo greatly affected Government it " ſelf.

" Let it be your Care ſo to improve the preſent Opportunity, as to lay the Foun- " dation of recovering from thoſe Diſorders.

" I had the Concurrence of the laſt Parliament in making the Peace; let it be " the Honour of this, to aſſiſt me in obtaining ſuch Fruits from it, as may

The Lords immediately reſolv'd to preſent an Addreſs of Thanks to her Majeſty, which being agreed to on the 3d of March, was, the next Day, preſented to her Majeſty, as follows:

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

The Lords Addreſs of Thanks to the Queen.

WE your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, beg leave to approach your Royal Perſon with the greateſt Reſpect, to return the humble Thanks of this Houſe to your Majeſty, for your moſt Gracious Speech from the Throne. We chearfully embrace this Opportunity of aſſuring your Majeſty, that the Joy our Hearts are filled with, upon your Recovery from your late Indiſpoſition, cannot ſufficiently be expreſſed; and that our fervent Prayers to Almighty God ſhall never be wanting, That your Majeſty's Reign may exceed in Number of Years, and in all manner of Happineſs, that of the longeſt and moſt proſperous of any of your Royal Predeceſſors, as that which will beſt conduce to the Happineſs and Satisfaction of the moſt dutiful Subjects, to the beſt of Queens.

It is with the greateſt Pleaſure, and the utmoſt Gratitude, that this Houſe receives the Communication your Majeſty is pleas'd to give them, that the Ratifications of your Treaties of Peace and Commerce with Spain are exchanged, and that we are, by your Majeſty's great Wiſdom and Goodneſs, at laſt delivered from that conſuming Land-War, the Burthens and ill Conſequences whereof, we are ſenſible nothing can remove or prevent, but a right Improvement of the preſent Opportunity; and it ſhall be our Endeavour, as we are ſatisfy'd it will be your Majeſty's, to unite our Differences, not by relaxing from the ſtricteſt Adherence to our Conſtitution in Church and State, but by obſerving the Laws our ſelves, and to the utmoſt of our Power, enforcing a due Obedience to them in others.

And we do aſſure your Majeſty, That this Houſe will moſt heartily concur with your Majeſty in all proper Methods, to compleat the Settlement of Europe; and we will uſe our utmoſt Endeavours to diſcourage and diſcountenance all Attempts to weaken your Majeſty's Authority, or to render the Poſſeſſion of the Crown uneaſy to you.

We acknowledge with Hearts full of Duty and Thankfulneſs, that great Care which your Majeſty has taken, during the whole Courſe of your Reign, to ſecure our Religion and Liberties, and to tranſmit both ſafe to Poſterity.

It is with the utmoſt Deteſtation, that we reflect on the Proceedings of thoſe Men, who, by ſpreading ſeditious Papers, and factious Rumours, have been able to ſink Credit, and thereby to involve the Innocent in the ill Conſequences of their Iniquity; and more particularly of thoſe who have attained to that height of Malice, as to inſinuate, That the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, is in Danger under your Government.

To which her Majeſty return'd the following Anſwer:

My LORDS,

The Queen's Anſwer.

I Return you my moſt hearty Thanks for your very Affectionate Addreſs.

You who are neareſt to the Throne, will firſt of all my Subjects, feel the evil Conſequences of any Diminution of the Regal Dignity.

It is a great Comfort to me, That I have your Aſſurance of Support.

Depend upon it, I will never give way to the leaſt Attempt, either on the juſt Authority of the Crown, or on your Rights and Privileges.

The Commons being, on the 2d of March, return'd to their Houſe, Mr. Gore moved for an Addreſs of Thanks for the Queen's Speech, according to the ſeveral Heads of it, which was reſolv'd accordingly, without any Oppoſition. Sir Peter King, Recorder of London, only ſuggeſted, That they ought not to Act by a Spirit of Divination, and return Thanks for the Treaty of Commerce with Spain, before they knew, whether the ſame was advantageous or no? Which occaſioned ſome Modification in the Addreſs, as to that Head. On the 5th of March, the Commons waited on the Queen with the ſaid Addreſs, (a) to which they receiv'd a very gracious Anſwer.

And

(a) The ſaid Addreſs was as follows:

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

" WE your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Commons of Great Britain, in Par" liament Aſſembled, do, with all Humility, return our ſincere and hearty Thanks, " for Your Majeſty's moſt Gracious Speech from the Throne.

" We beg Leave to aſſure your Majeſty, That as nothing could be more afflicting to your Peo" ple, than the Indiſpoſition of the beſt of Sovereigns; ſo nothing has ever been an Occaſion of " greater Joy and Satisfaction to them, than your Majeſty's late happy Recovery.

" We

A. D. 1713/14.

And the next * Day, the Two Houſes of Convocation complimented her Majeſty in a joint Addreſs, on her Majeſty's Recovery, and happy Return to her Royal City in Health and Safety. Concluding with their Wiſhes, that after a long and happy Reign, ſhe might be able to tranſmit the Protection of this Church and State to a Proteſtant Succeſſor, in the Illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover, which her Majeſty, to the great Satisfaction and Comfort of all her Faithful and Good Subjects, had ſo often declar'd to be at her Royal Heart. But nevertheleſs, it is obſervable, that ſome angry Expreſſions in the Queen's Speech, rather increaſed than removed the Fears and Jealouſies of the Well-affected to the Hanover Succeſſion; who, from the daily Diſcouragements, and even Inſults they met with, could not but conclude that Succeſſion to be in L. ger.

* March 6. The Convocation's Addreſs to the Queen.

On the Second of March, the Earl of Wharton made a Complaint in the Houſe of Lords, againſt a ſcandalous Libel, intituled, The PUBLICK SPIRIT OF THE WHIGS, ſet forth in their generous Encouragement of the Author of the CRISIS, with ſome Obſervations on the Seaſonableneſs, Candor, Erudition and Style of that Treatiſe. Printed for John Morphew, near Stationers-Hall, 1714. The Writer of this Libel, having made ſome ſcurrilous Reflections on the Author of the Criſis, (occaſionally on the Earl of Nottingham) and on the Implicit Munificence of a huge Train of Dukes, Earls, Viſcounts, Barons, Knights, Eſquires, Gentlemen, and others, who ſubſcrib'd to the Criſis; he afterwards pretends to examine the Production it ſelf; which he performs in the Ludicrous and Sarcaſtick Strain of the Tale of a Tub. To omit a great deal of Ribaldry, which Hiſtory diſdains to record, I ſhall only mention the Paſſage that gave moſt Offence to the Lords, and was as follows:

Complaint in the Houſe of Lords againſt a Libel, call'd, The Publick ſpirit of the Whigs: Father'd upon Dr. Swift, and Lord Bolingbroke. Abſtract of it.

" This Work (meaning the UNION of the Two Kingdoms) he tells us, was unſucceſsfully attempted by ſeveral of her Majeſty's Predeceſſors; though I do not remember it was ever thought on by any, except King James the Firſt, and the late King William. I have read, indeed, that ſome ſmall Overtures were made by the former of theſe Princes, towards an Union between the Two Kingdoms, but rejected with Indignation and Contempt, by the Engliſh. And the Hiſtorian tells us, That how degenerate and corrupt ſoever the Court and Parliament then were, they would not give Ear to ſo infamous a Propoſal. I do not find, that any of the ſucceeding Princes before the Revolution, ever reſum'd the Deſign; becauſe it was a Project, for which there could not poſſibly be aſſign'd the leaſt Reaſon or Neceſſity: For I defy any Mortal to name one ſingle Advantage, that England could

" We Congratulate your Majeſty on the Concluſion of the Treaties of Peace and Commerce with Spain, whereby your Majeſty is pleas'd to declare, That you have procured new Benefits to your Subjects: But your Royal Care hath not been confin'd to your own People; it hath been extended to all your Allies. And your Majeſty's Goodneſs muſt be for ever admir'd, that notwithſtanding any Diſcouragements you have met with, you are pleas'd ſtill to continue your Endeavours to make the Peace Univerſal, and thereby to compleat the Settlement of Europe; and your Faithful Commons will never be wanting in an hearty Concurrence to aſſiſt your Majeſty in all ſuch Meaſures as your Majeſty ſhall judge proper to finiſh a Deſign, ſo Great and ſo Glorious.

" Your Commons will, with all Chearfulneſs, grant ſuch Supplies as are neceſſary for the current Service, and for the Diſcharge of ſuch Debts as are Juſt and Reaſonable: They can never ſufficiently expreſs the Senſe they have of their Happineſs, of being deliver'd from the Calamities of a conſuming War: They will therefore (in Duty to your Majeſty, and in Juſtice to thoſe they repreſent) do all that is in their Power, that the good Effects of Peace may not be obſtructed by any inteſtine Diviſions: They will, as far as in them lies, diſappoint the Deſigns of malicious and unreaſonable Men: They will, on all Occaſions, ſhew their juſt Abhorrence of the Licentious Practices, in publiſhing ſcandalous Papers, and ſpreading ſeditious Rumours. And as your Commons will always ſupport and maintain the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, they can't but be aſtoniſh'd at the malicious Inſinuations of any who would ſuggeſt, that Succeſſion to be in Danger under your Majeſty's moſt auſpicious Government. For when we conſider that 'tis ſecur'd by the greateſt Obligations Civil and Sacred, by Acts of Parliament, Oaths and Treaties, we cannot but declare our intire Acquieſcence in theſe Securities, and muſt look upon ſuch Inſinuations to be groundleſs in themſelves, and affronting to your Majeſty, and your Government.

" And your Majeſty may depend, That your Loyal Commons will never be prevail'd on by any Pretences whatſoever, to countenance Attempts that may tend to weaken your Majeſty's Authority, and to render the Poſſeſſion of the Crown uneaſy to you, which can only proceed from the Rage of a diſappointed Faction, and the Spirit of Rebellion.

To this Addreſs the Queen return'd the following Anſwer:

This Addreſs is ſo dutiful, and expreſſes ſo fully the Senſe of my Loyal Subjects, that I eſteem it as a Proof of the good Choice they have made of you to repreſent them.

I give you my hearty Thanks for it.

The Confidence you have in my Affection, the Abhorrence you declare of the malicious Inſinuations of the Proteſtant Succeſſion being in Danger under my Government; and your Acquieſcence in the preſent Securities for it, are very ſuitable Returns for the tender Regard I have always had for what concerns my People, and will moſt effectually, by the bleſſing of God, unite the Minds of my Subjects, and diſappoint the Deſigns of thoſe who would diſturb the preſent Tranquility.

" ever expect from ſuch a Union. But, towards the End of the late King's Reign, " upon Apprehenſion of the want of Iſſue from him, or the Princeſs Anne, a Pro- " poſition for Uniting both Kingdoms was begun; becauſe Scotland had not ſettled " their Crown upon the Houſe of HANOVER, but left themſelves at large, " in Hopes to make their Advantage: And it was thought highly dangerous to " leave that Part of the Iſland, inhabited by a poor, fierce, Northern People, at " Liberty to put themſelves under a different King. However, the Oppoſition " of this Work was ſo great, that it could not be overcome, till ſome Time after " Her preſent Majeſty came to the Crown; when, by the WEAKNESS or " CORRUPTION of a certain Miniſter, ſince dead, an Act of Parliament was " obtain'd for the Scots, which gave them Leave to arm themſelves; and ſo the " Union became neceſſary, not for any Good it could actually do us, but to avoid " a probable Evil; and, at the ſame Time, ſave an obnoxious Miniſter's Head, who " was ſo wiſe as to take the firſt Opportunity of procuring a General Pardon, by Act " of Parliament, becauſe he could not, with ſo much Decency or Safety, deſire a parti- " cular one for himſelf. Theſe Facts are well enough known to the whole King- " dom: And, I remember, diſcourſing above Six Years ago with the moſt conſide- " rable Perſon of the adverſe Party, and a great Promoter of the Union, he frankly " own'd to me, That this Neceſſity brought upon us by the wrong Management of the " Earl of Godolphin, was the only Cauſe of the Union.

" Therefore, I am ready to grant Two Points to the Author of the CRISIS: " Firſt, That the Union became neceſſary, for the Cauſe above related; becauſe it " prevented the Iſland from being govern'd by Two Kings, which England would " never have ſuffer'd; and it might, probably, have coſt us a War of a Year or " two, to reduce the Scots. Secondly, That it would be dangerous to break this " Union, at leaſt in this Juncture, while there is a Pretender abroad, who might, " probably, lay hold of ſuch an Opportunity. And this made me wonder a little " at the Spirit of Faction, laſt Summer, among ſome People; who having been " the great Promoters of the Union, and ſeveral of them the PRINCIPAL GAIN- " ERS by it, could yet proceed ſo far, as to propoſe in the Houſe of Lords, That " it ſhould be diſſolved; while, at the ſame Time, thoſe Peers who had ever op- " pos'd it in the Beginning, were then for preſerving it, upon the Reaſon I have " juſt aſſign'd, and which the Author of the CRISIS had likewiſe taken no- " tice of.

" But when he tells us, The Engliſhman ought, in Generoſity, to be more particu- " larly careful in preſerving this Union; he argues like himſelf. The late Kingdom of " Scotland (ſaid he) had as numerous a Nobility as England, &c. They had, in- " deed; and to that we owe one of the Great and Neceſſary Evils of the UNION, " upon the Foot it now ſtands. Their Nobility is, indeed, ſo numerous, that the " whole Revenues of their Country would be hardly able to maintain them, according to " the Dignity of their Titles; and, what is infinitely worſe, they are never likely to be " extinct, till the laſt Period of all Things; becauſe the greateſt Part of them deſcend " to Heirs General. I imagine, a Perſon of Quality prevail'd on to marry a Wo- " man much his Inferior, and without a Groat to her Fortune; and her Friends ar- " guing, ſhe was as good as her Huſband, becauſe ſhe brought him as numerous a " Family of Relations and Servants, as ſhe found in his Houſe. Scotland, in the " Taxes, is obliged to contribute One Peny for every Forty Pence laid upon Eng- " land; and the Repreſentatives they ſend to Parliament, are about a Thirteenth. " Every other Scotch Peer has all the Privileges of an Engliſh one, except that of " Sitting in Parliament; and even Precedence before all of the ſame Title, that " ſhall be created for the Time to come. The Penſions and Imployments, poſſeſs'd " by the Natives of that Country now among us, do amount to more than the " whole Body of their Nobility ever ſpent at Home; and all the Money they raiſe " upon the Publick, is hardly ſufficient to defray their Civil and Military Liſts. " I could point out ſome with great Titles, who affected to appear very vigorous " for diſſolving the Union; tho' their whole Revenues, before that Period, would " have ill maintain'd a Welch Juſtice of the Peace; and have ſince gather'd more " Money, than ever any Scotchman, who had not travell'd, could form an " Idea of.

Tho' this Satyr was mainly levell'd againſt the Duke of Argyle, who, of late, had broken all Meaſures with the Miniſtry, yet it was generally look'd upon as very impolitick and ill-tim'd; ſince the Sixteen Scotch Peers, who ſat in the Houſe of Lords, and who, at leaſt there, were the principal Support of thoſe at the Helm, were involv'd in the general Reflections againſt the Scotch Nation. But, it ſeems, Dr. Swift, who was ſhrewdly ſuſpected of being the chief Author of this Lampoon, and took a Pride in having libell'd the Junto round, (a very fit Employment for a Divine!) would not not loſe a Jeſt, which he thought might gratify the Spleen of thoſe in Power. However, either the Author, or his Patrons, having, a few Days after the Publication of that Libel, foreſeen the Offence it would give to the Scotch Peers, it was thought fit to cancel the Leaves, in which the ſcandalous Reflections, above-mention'd, were contain'd, and to let the reſt go abroad, with a new Title, under the Sham of a Second Edition.

John Morphew and J. Barber committed to the Black Rod.

But the firſt Publication having done the Miſchief, and the Complaint made by the Earl of Wharton being warmly eſpous'd by the Majority of the Houſe of Peers; the Lord Treaſurer proteſted he knew nothing of that Pamphlet; exclaim'd againſt the malicious Inſinuations contain'd in it; and readily join'd with the Houſe, in an Order for committing John Morphew, the Publiſher, to the Cuſtody of the Black Rod. Mr. Morphew, upon his Examination, having declar'd, That an unknown Porter had brought to his Houſe the Copies of the Pamphlet in Queſtion, from the Houſe of John Barber, Printer of the Gazette, and of the Votes of the Houſe of Commons; John Barber was alſo order'd into the Cuſtody of the Black Rod: And both he and Morphew were, on Friday the 5th of March, ſeverally examin'd at the Bar of the Lords Houſe. Mr. Morphew ſtood to his former Declaration, and own'd the Publiſhing and Selling of that Libel; but Mr. Barber ſaid, he knew nothing of it; and inſiſted, not to anſwer any Queſtions, the Anſwer to which might tend to accuſe himſelf, or to corroborate the Accuſation againſt him. Being both withdrawn, the Earl of Wharton ſaid, "They had nothing to do either with "the Publiſher or Printer; but that it highly concern'd the Honour of that Au- "guſt Aſſembly, to find out the Villain, who was the Author of that falſe and "ſcandalous Libel, in order to do the Scotch Nation Juſtice: And thereupon mov'd, "That, in order to that Diſcovery, Barber might be again examin'd the next Day, "together with his Journey-Men and Servants." The ſame was readily agreed to; but, on the 6th of March, the Earl of Mar, one of the Secretaries of State, acquainted the Houſe, That, purſuant to the Queen's Commands, he had directed John Barber to be proſecuted. Hereupon, the Earl of Wharton deſir'd to know, upon what Evidence they deſign'd to proceed againſt him? But the Earl of Mar reply'd, He wonder'd that ſuch a Queſtion ſhould be put to a Secretary of State, who was known to be under an Oath of Secrecy: And this put a ſudden Stop to all farther Inquiries about that Matter, in a Parliamentary Way. Three * Days after, Barber and Morphew were, upon their humble Petition, enlarg'd from the Cuſtody of the Black Rod; and, the ſame Day, the Lords reſolv'd upon an Addreſs, about that Matter; which, on the 15th, was preſented to the Queen. This Addreſs recited the Steps their Lordſhips had made in this Affair; notwithſtanding which, They had not yet been able to diſcover the Author of the ſaid Libel: And therefore, that nothing might be wanting on their Parts, towards the Diſcovering and Puniſhing ſo great a Criminal, they humbly beſought Her Majeſty to iſſue her Royal Proclamation, with a Reward to any Perſon who ſhould diſcover the ſaid Author. Accordingly, the ſame Day, a Proclamation was publiſh'd for that Purpoſe, with a Reward of Three Hundred Pounds: But nevertheleſs, Dr. Swift, the reputed Author of the Libel in Queſtion, remain'd undiſcover'd to the Publick; tho', at the ſame Time, he was, daily, highly careſs'd by the Lord Treaſurer; as Barber, the Printer, was by the Lord Bolingbroke.

* March 9. Barber and Morphew enlarg'd.

Addreſs of the Lords to the Queen thereupon.

The Commons having readily voted a Supply, proceeded on controverted Elections, came to ſeveral (a) Reſolutions about the Qualifying the Members to ſerve

Proceedings of the Commons.

(a) The ſaid Reſolutions, on the 9th of March, were agreed to, as follow:

"I. That notwithſtanding the Oath taken by any Candidate, on or after any Election, his "Qualification may be afterwards examin'd into.

"II. That the Perſon, whoſe Qualification is expreſly objected to, in any Petition relating to "his Election, ſhall, within Fifteen Days after the Petition read, give to the Clerk of the "Houſe of Commons, a Paper ſign'd by himſelf, containing a Rental or Particular of the Lands, "Tenements, or Hereditaments, whereby he makes out his Qualification: Of which any Perſon "concern'd may have a Copy.

"III. That of ſuch Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, whereof the Party hath been in "Poſſeſſion for Three Years before the Election, he ſhall alſo inſert in the ſame Paper, from "what Perſon, and by what Conveyance, or Act in Law, he claims and derives the ſame; and "alſo the Conſideration, if any paid, and the Names and Places of Abode of the Witneſſes to "ſuch Conveyance and Payment.

"IV. That if a Sitting Member ſhall think fit to queſtion the Qualification of a Petitioner, "he ſhall, within Fifteen Days after the Petition read, leave Notice thereof in Writing with "the Clerk of the Houſe of Commons; and the Petitioner ſhall, in ſuch Caſe, within Fifteen "Days after ſuch Notice, leave with the ſaid Clerk of the Houſe, the like Account in Writing "of his Qualification, as is requir'd from a Sitting Member.

in Parliament; and then, by reaſon of the Anniverſary of the Queen's Acceſſion, which was celebrated the 8th, adjourn'd themſelves to the 9th of March, when they order'd the ſeveral Accounts and Eſtimates to be laid before them. The next Day, in a Grand Committee, they conſider'd further of the Act for ſecuring the Freedom of Parliaments, by the further Qualifying the Members to ſit in the Houſe of Commons; and, on the 11th of March, order'd a Bill to be brought in, for ſecuring the Freedom of Parliaments, by limiting the Number of Officers in the Houſe of Commons: Which was perfected towards the End of that Month.

Bill order'd to limit the Number of Officers in the Houſe of Commons.

Notwithſtanding all the Care and Induſtry uſed by the Court-Managers in the late Elections, many avow'd Enemies of the preſent Miniſters were return'd Members of the Houſe of Commons: But, of theſe, none was ſo obnoxious to the Men in Power, as Richard Steele, Eſq; ; who, in ſeveral publick Writings, had arraign'd the late Meaſures with unparallel'd Boldneſs, as one who was encouraged, and ſure to be ſupported, by the whole Whig Party. It was therefore agreed, by the Miniſters, (how much ſoever they differ'd in other Matters) to exert their Joint-Endeavours to remove their common Enemy, Mr. Steele, from his Seat in Parliament. A Petition, that was lodg'd againſt his Election, happening to be the Seventeenth of that nature, and therefore not like to come on, and do the Work, this Seſſion; a ſhorter Way was reſolv'd upon, and that was openly to attack him, about ſome of his late unguarded Political Writings. Hereupon, Mr. Hungerford, a noted Lawyer, moved * in the Houſe of Commons, to take into Conſideration that Part of the Queen's Speech from the Throne, which related to the ſuppreſſing ſeditious Libels; and for that Purpoſe, complain'd, in particular, of ſeveral ſcandalous Papers lately publiſh'd, under the Name of Richard Steele, Eſq; a Member of that Houſe. He was ſeconded by Mr. Auditor Foley, a near Relation of the Lord Treaſurer; who ſuggeſted, "That unleſs Means were found to reſtrain the Licentiouſneſs "of the Preſs, and to ſhelter thoſe who had the Honour to be in the Adminiſtra-"tion, from malicious and ſcandalous Libels; they, who, by their Abilities, are "beſt qualified to ſerve their Queen and Country, would decline publick Offices "and Employments." This was back'd by Sir William Wyndham, who added, "That ſome of Mr. Steele's Writings contain'd inſolent, injurious Reflections on the "Queen her ſelf, and were dictated by the Spirit of Rebellion." Hereupon, Mr. Moore ſaid, That Mr. Steele having the Honour to be a Member of that Houſe, they ought not to fall upon him while he was abſent, but hear what he had to ſay for himſelf, before they proceeded againſt him: Whereupon, it was reſolv'd to put off the Conſideration of that Matter till the Saturday following, the 13th of that Month. In the mean Time, Mr. Auditor Harley * made a formal Complaint to the Commons of the Three printed Pamphlets, that had given moſt Offence to the Court; viz. The ENGLISHMAN, of Tueſday, Jan. 19. 17$\frac{11}{13}$.; The CRISIS; and The ENGLISHMAN, being the Cloſe of the Paper ſo call'd; all ſaid to be written by Richard Steele, Eſq; : Which Pamphlets being brought up to the Table, it was order'd, That Mr. Steele ſhould attend in his Place, the next Morning.

* March 11.

Mr. Steele extreamly obnoxious to the Miniſtry.

* March 12. Complaint againſt Mr. Steele.

This raiſed a general Expectation of the Event, and † brought a great Concourſe of Members, and Spectators, to the Houſe; and Mr. Steele attending, accordingly, ſeveral Paragraphs, contain'd in the Pamphlets complain'd of, the Day before, were read: After which, Mr. Auditor Foley, Mr. Auditor Harley, (the Treaſurer's Brother) and ſome other Members, ſeverely animadverted on the Venom, Rancour, and ſeditious Spirit, glaringly conſpicuous in thoſe Writings. Mr. James Craggs, Junior, having thereupon ſtood up, to ſpeak in Mr. Steele's Behalf, he was prevented by a confuſed Noiſe of ſeveral Voices, calling to Order; intimating, That, according to the Order of the Day, Mr. Steele was to be heard himſelf, in his Place. Hereupon, Mr. Steele ſaid, That being attack'd on ſeveral Heads, without any previous Notice, he hoped the Houſe would allow him, at leaſt, a Week's Time, to prepare for his Defence. Mr. Auditor Harley having excepted againſt ſo long a Delay, and moved for adjourning this Affair to the Monday following; Mr. Steele, to ridicule his Two principal ‖ Proſecutors, who were known to be rigid Preſbyterians, (tho' they now ſided with High-Church-Men) aſſum'd their ſanctified Countenance; own'd, "in the Meekneſs and Contrition of his Heart, that he was "a very great Sinner; and he hop'd, the Member that ſpoke laſt, who was ſo "juſtly renown'd for his exemplary Piety and Devotion, would not be acceſſary "to the accumulating the Number of his Tranſgreſſions, by obliging him to break "the SABBATH of the LORD, by peruſing ſuch prophane Writings, as might "ſerve for his Juſtification." This canting Speech, ſo ſeaſonably applied, having ſet the Generality of the Aſſembly in good Humour, Mr. Steele carried his Point; and the further Conſideration of the Charge brought againſt him, was put off off 'till the Thurſday following; by which Time, it was expected, That Sir Richard Onſlow, Mr. Hampden, Mr. Lechmere, and ſome other leading Members of the Whig-Party, who were abſent, would come up to Town. This Succeſs encouraged Mr. Steele, not only to ſtand upon the Defenſive, but even to attack his Accuſers: To which purpoſe, on Monday, the 15th of March, he made a Motion, "That an humble Addreſs be preſented to her "Majeſty, that ſhe would be pleaſed to give Directions, that the ſeveral Repre- "ſentations of her Majeſty's Ingineers and Officers, who had the Care and Inſpe- "ction of the Demolition of Dunkirk, and all Orders and Inſtructions given there- "upon, might be laid before the Houſe." But the previous Queſtion being put, whether that Queſtion be now put, it was carried in the Negative, by Two Hundred and Fourteen Voices, againſt One Hundred and Nine. But the Court-Party had not the Confidence to oppoſe another Motion, which, with the ſame Intent, was, the ſame Day, made by the Lord Lumley, eldeſt Son to the Earl of Scarborough, who being ſeconded by the Earl of Hertford, it was thereupon unanimouſly reſolved, "That an humble Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, That ſhe would be pleas'd "to order an Account to be laid before the Houſe, what Steps had been made for "the removing the Pretender, from the Dominions of the Duke of Lorrain, pur- "ſuant to the Addreſs of both Houſes of the laſt Parliament; and what Anſwers "had been given to her Majeſty, or any of her Miniſters, by the Duke of Lor- "rain, or any of his Miniſters.

Mr. Steele's Motion about the Papers relating to Dunkirk, carried in the Negative.

Papers relating to the Pretender's Removal from Lorrain, call'd for.

On Thurſday, the 18th of March, the Day appointed for Mr. Steele's Tryal, the Courtiers thought fit to get the Houſe clear'd from all Strangers; which done, and Mr. Steele appearing in his Place, Mr. Auditor Foley moved, that before they proceeded any farther, Mr. Steele ſhould declare, whether he acknowledged the Writings that bore his Name. Hereupon Mr. Steele owned, he wrote and publiſh'd the ſaid Pamphlets, and the ſeveral Paragraphs there, which had been complained of, and read to the Houſe, WITH THE SAME CHEARFULNESS AND SATISFACTION, WITH WHICH HE HAD ABJURED THE PRETENDER. Then a Debate ariſing upon the Method of Proceeding, Mr. Auditor Foley propos'd, that Mr. Steele ſhould withdraw; but, after ſeveral Speeches, it was carried, without dividing, that he ſhould ſtay, in order to make his Defence. He deſired that he might be allow'd to anſwer to what might be urged againſt him, Paragragh by Paragraph: But though he was powerfully ſupported by Mr. Robert Walpole, General Stanhope, the Lord Finch, (eldeſt Son to the Earl of Nottingham) and the Lord Hinchingbroke, Son to the Earl of Sandwich, yet Mr. Steele's Accuſers inſiſted, and it was carried, That he ſhould proceed to make his Defence, generally, upon the Charge given againſt him. Mr. Steele proceeded accordingly, to make his Defence, being aſſiſted by Mr. Joſeph Addiſon, who ſat near him, to prompt him, upon Occaſion: And, for near Three Hours, ſpake to the ſeveral Heads, extracted out of the Three Pamphlets above-mentioned, (which had been given in Print to all the Members) with ſuch a Temper, Modeſty, Unconcern, eaſy and manly Eloquence, as gave entire Satisfaction to all, who were not inveterately prepoſſeſs'd againſt him.

Mr. Steele's Tryal in the Houſe of Commons.

Mr. Steele being withdrawn, moſt Members expected, that Mr. Auditor Foley would have ſumm'd up, and anſwer'd his Defence, Paragraph by Paragraph; but he contented himſelf with ſaying, in general, "That, without amuſing the Houſe "with long Speeches, it was plain, that the Writings that had been complain'd of, "were ſeditious and ſcandalous, injurious to her Majeſty's Government, the Church, "and the Univerſities, and moved that the Queſtion ſhould be put thereupon." This occaſion'd a very warm Debate, that laſted 'till Eleven a-Clock at Night: Robert Walpole, Eſq; who ſpoke firſt in favour of Mr. Steele, made a very long, and moſt eloquent Speech, wherein he went to the bottom of the Affair; "ſhew'd that "this extraordinary and violent Proſecution, ſtruck at the Liberties of the Subject "in general, and of the Members of that Houſe in particular; juſtify'd Mr. Steele "on all the Heads of the Accuſation raiſed againſt him; and ſaid, he hoped the "Houſe would not ſacrifice one of their Members, to the Reſentment and Rage "of the Miniſtry, for no other Crime, than his expoſing their notorious Miſma- "nagements; and, like a good Patriot, warning his Countrymen againſt the immi- "nent Dangers, with which the Nation in general, and, in particular, her Majeſty's "ſacred Perſon were threatned, by the viſible Encouragement that was given to "the Pretender's Friends. If a Papiſt, ſaid Mr. Walpole, to that Purpoſe, nay, an "Iriſh Papiſt, who, for many Years, has been a Servant to the late King James, "and the Pretender, (meaning Sir Patrick Lawleſs,) one who has born Arms againſt "her Majeſty in France, and Spain; one who is ſtrongly ſuſpected, of having em- "brued his Hands in the Blood of the late Duke of Medina-Celi, and Marquis of "Leganez: If, ſaid he, ſuch a Man be not only permitted to come into England, "but

" but to appear at Court, in the Preſence Chamber: If he be careſs'd by the Mini-
" ſters: Nay, I ſpeak it with Horror, if ſuch a Man be admitted to her Majeſty's
" private Audience in her Cloſet, will not every good Subject think her Majeſty's
" Perſon in Danger? And is it then a Crime in Mr. Steele, to ſhew his juſt Concern, " for ſo precious a Life?

As to that Paſſage in Mr. STEELE's CRISIS, wherein he ſays, That a late Treaſonable Book, on the SUCCESSION of HEREDITARY RIGHT, has publiſh'd the Will of King Henry the Eighth, which ſeems to be intended as a Pattern for the like Occaſion. And a little lower, Let thoſe who act under the preſent Settlement, and yet pretend to diſpute for an abſolute Hereditary Right, quiet themſelves with the Arguments they have borrowed from Popery: Mr. Walpole ſaid, it could not be denied, " That the " Lord Treaſurer was the Patron of Learned Men, for whoſe Uſe and Improve" ment, he had ſet up a fine LIBRARY; and that it appear'd by the Book
" call'd, the Hereditary Right of the Crown of England aſſerted, &c. that the Author
" had free Acceſs to that Library, and had drawn very material Paſſages out of " ſome Manuſcripts in it. But that the Lord Treaſurer's Care, to ſupply him with " Materials towards that Work, went yet further, ſince his Lordſhip had employ'd
" a Man to look among old muſty Papers, the Will and Teſtament of King Henry the " Eighth, which the ſaid Author had inſerted at Length in the Appendix to his " Book. That he appeal'd to Mr. Lowndes, a Member of the Houſe, and Secretary
" to the Treaſury, whether he had not paid, by the Lord Treaſurer's Order, Twelve
" or Fourteen Pounds, to the Perſon that had made that great Diſcovery; but that " in Caſe he ſhould deny it, he, Mr. Walpole, had Evidence to prove it. Mr.
" Lowndes ſeem'd not to deny the Fact. He only ſaid, that Will was not ſo
" rare a Piece, ſince it was to be ſeen in a Place he named, in Weſtminſter-
" Abbey.

On this Occaſion, Mr. Walpole mentioned Three Points, in which he endeavour'd to prove that the Peace had already been broke: " The firſt, he ſaid, was the Demoli" tion of Dunkirk; which ought to have been finiſh'd Five Months after the ſign-
" ing of the Treaty: But that inſtead of that, the French had, yet, only pull'd
" down Part of the outward Fortifications, without touching the Foundations;
" which, on the one hand, rendred the Engliſh Gariſon uſeleſs, and expoſed to any
" Inſults; and, on the other hand, would afterwards make it eaſy for the French
" to reſtore and rebuild thoſe Fortifications; which was the more probable to be " in their Thoughts, ſince, inſtead of ruining the Harbour, they were actually re" pairing the Sluices, and working on a new Canal. That the Second Point, was
" the Renunciations of the Princes of the Houſe of Bourbon, which were laid down
" as the Foundation and Baſis of the Peace, and as a Pretence, that thereby the " Crowns of France and Spain, would be more divided than ever: But that ſuppo-
" ſing, (what he could not by any Means grant) that thoſe Renunciations were to " be depended upon, they were yet Conditional, and ſuppoſed the Emperor's Renun-
" ciation to the Crown of Spain: And therefore, as no Care had been taken to en" gage his Imperial Majeſty to agree to that neceſſary Condition, ſo the Renuncia-
" tions of the Princes of the Houſe of Bourbon, became thereby not binding and void.
The Third Inſtance which Mr. Walpole gave, of the Violation of the Peace, was the French King's Ordinance, dated September the 18th, N. S. 1713, forbidding the Children of French Refugees, though born out of his Dominions, to come into them, without his Permiſſion, upon Pain of being ſent to the Galleys. To which Purpoſe, Mr.
" Walpole repreſented, that the ſaid Ordinance was againſt Natural Right, and the " Law of Nations, and, in particular, derogatory to the Rights and Liberties of " the Britiſh Nation, which the Children of the Refugees, born in England, were " entituled to enjoy, as well as the other Natives. That he would adventure to
" ſay, in their Behalf, that it were to be wiſh'd, that all who have the Happineſs
" to be born in England, were as good Engliſhmen as the Sons of the Refugees, and " that the Britiſh Nation was the more concern'd, in having that Oridinance re-
" peal'd, in that the Refugees, and their Children, were the fitteſt to carry on a " Trade with France.

" Mr. Horatio Walpole back'd, what his Brother Robert ſaid, in favour of the " French Refugees; and deplored the lamentable Condition of their Miniſters, and " the Poor amongſt them, to whom the Lord Treaſurer had not paid one Penny of " the Fifteen Thouſand Pounds per Annum, voted by Parliament, and allow'd in the " Civil-Liſt, towards their Subſiſtence and Relief, ſince he came into his Office.
" To that Purpoſe, he added, That ſome amongſt the Refugees, ſuffer'd now more " in England, than they did, during the Perſecution in France; ſince there were " always ſome charitable People, who reliev'd them, while they were in Priſons
" and Dungeons, whereas here they were let ſtarve.

A. D. 1713.

My Lord Finch back'd alſo Mr. Robert Walpole, and gave early pregnant Proofs of the Eloquence Hereditary in this Noble Family. His Lordſhip, among other things, endeavour'd to juſtify Mr. Steele, with relation to the niceſt and tendereſt Part of the Charge againſt him, viz. his Third Wiſh, in the Cloſe of his laſt Engliſhman, That his Electoral Highneſs of Hanover would be ſo grateful, as to ſignify to all the World, the perfect good Underſtanding he had with the Court of England, in as plain Terms, as her Majeſty was pleaſed to declare ſhe had with that Houſe, on her Part. He ſaid thereupon, " That ſuppoſing there were in this Wiſh, ſome injurious Inſinua-
" tion, yet the ſame could not, without Injuſtice, be apply'd to the Queen, but " only to her Miniſters: That no body doubted the good Underſtanding between " her Majeſty, and the Houſe of Hanover; but that it was notorious, that the Mi-
" niſters ſhew'd no great Regard to that illuſtrious Houſe. Witneſs, (to paſs over " other Inſtances) the ſlight they put upon the Baron Bothmer's Memorial; which
" the Queen had, perhaps, never ſeen, had not the Dutcheſs of Somerſet ſhew'd it
" her Majeſty in Print, in the Daily-Courant. My Lord Finch likewiſe juſtify'd Mr. Steele, in relation to his Reflections on the Peace: We may, ſaid his Lordſhip, give it all the fine Epithets we pleaſe: But Epithets do not change the Nature of Things. We may, if we pleaſe, call it here, Honourable; but, I am ſure, it is accounted ſcandalous in Holland, Germany, Portugal, and over all Europe, except France and Spain. We may call it Advantageous, but all the Trading Part of the Nation find it to be otherwiſe; if therefore it be really Advantageous, it muſt be ſo to the Miniſtry that made it. Sir William Wyndham, ſaying thereupon, " That the Miniſtry would not ſay that
" the Peace was advantageous to them: The Lord Finch very ſmartly reply'd, Then 'twas plain it was advantageous to no body, but our late Enemies.

My Lord Lumley, the Lord Hinchingbroke, and ſome other Members, ſpoke with a great deal of Vivacity, in favour of Mr. Steele, and againſt the Conduct of the Miniſtry: But Mr. Auditor Foley, Sir William Wyndham, the Attorney-General, and ſome other Courtiers, being ſupported by a great Majority, which, in popular Aſſemblies, generally ſupplies the want of Arguments, ſtill inſiſted on the Queſtion, ſo that at laſt it was carried by Two Hundred Forty Five Voices, againſt One Hundred Fifty Two, Firſt, " That a Printed Pamphlet, intituled, The Engliſhman, being the Cloſe
" of the Paper ſo called; and one other Pamphlet, intituled, Criſis, written by " Richard Steele, Eſq; a Member of this Houſe, are ſcandalous and ſeditious Libels, " containing many Expreſſions, highly reflecting upon her Majeſty, and upon the " Nobility, Clergy, Gentry, and Univerſities of this Kingdom, maliciouſly inſi-
" nuating, that the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, is in Danger, un" der her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, and tending to alienate the Affections of her
" Majeſty's good Subjects, and to create Jealouſies and Diviſions among them.
" Secondly, That Richard Steele, Eſq; for his Offence, in Writing and Publiſhing
" the ſaid ſcandalous and ſeditious Libels, be expell'd this Houſe.

Mr. Steele expell'd the Houſe.

It is obſervable, that Two Scotch Members only ſpoke in this long Debate, to wit, Mr. Baily, and Sir James Stuart, Judge Advocate in North-Britain. " The " firſt ſaid, he was little acquainted with the Affairs of England, but had made it
" his Buſineſs to know thoſe of his own Country; and that, by all the Obſervati-
" ons he could make for ſome Years paſt, they who appear'd the moſt zealous for
" the Pretender's Intereſt, were the moſt favour'd and countenanc'd, by thoſe in " Power." This was confirm'd by Sir James Stuart, who added, " That to his " certain Knowledge, Three or Four Thouſand Pounds had been yearly remitted to
" the Highland-Clans, whoſe Chiefs, and the Men under their Command, were " known to be entirely devoted to the Chevalier." By this it appears, that this Affair gave the Enemies of the preſent Miniſtry, a Handle to rip up ſeveral Things, which, had it not been for this Proſecution, had, perhaps, never been mentioned in the Houſe of Commons: And which, being ſpoken in the Hearing of ſeveral Lords, occaſion'd the like Reflections, and ſtricter Inquiries, in the Houſe of Peers. A few Days after, the Commons adjourn'd 'till after the Eaſter Holy-Days; and, in the mean Time, Sir James Stuart was remov'd from his Place, for telling Tales.

On the 17th of March, the Lords took into Conſideration the State of the Nation; and the Earls of Wharton, Nottingham, and Sunderland, the Lords Cowper, Halifax, and ſome others, having repreſented the Danger that threatned the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Electoral Houſe of Hanover, by Reaſon of the Pretender not being yet removed from Lorrain, and the ill Condition the Affairs of Europe were left in, by the late Treaties of Peace, mov'd, that Addreſſes be preſented to her Majeſty,
" Firſt, For an Account of what Steps had been taken for removing the Pretender
" from the Dominions of the Duke of Lorrain, purſuant to the Addreſs of both
" Houſes, the laſt Seſſion of Parliament; and what Anſwers had been given to her
" Majeſty, by the Duke of Lorrain. Secondly, An Account of the Negotiations of " Peace: What Meaſures had been taken, to render the Peace Univerſal; and what " Obſtructions her Majeſty had met therein. Thirdly, An Account what Inſtances " had been made for reſtoring to the Catalans their ancient Privileges, and all Let- " ters relating thereto. Fourthly, An Account of the Moneys granted by Parlia- " ment, ſince the Year 1710, to carry on the War in Spain and Portugal." Theſe Addreſſes were order'd to be preſented to her Majeſty, without any Oppoſition: But in the mean Time, undoubtedly in order to give the Houſe ſome Amuſement, the Lord Treaſurer mov'd for Leave to bring in a Bill, for the further Security of the Proteſtant Succeſſion, by making it High Treaſon to bring any Foreign Troops into the Kingdom: At which many Peers were ſtrangely ſtartled and ſurprized. Among the reſt, the Earl of Nottingham, who immediately perceiv'd the dangerous Drift of that Motion, repreſented, that ſuch a Bill might be turn'd againſt the very Guarantees of the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and ſo weaken that happy Settlement, for the Security of which, the ſaid Bill was pretended to be intended. Hereupon the Lord Bolingbroke, who found that the Bait was ſmelt out, endeavour'd to palliate the Matter, with ſaying, That he doubted not, but the Noble Peer who made the Motion, meant only ſuch Foreign Troops as might be brought into the Kingdom by the Pretender, or his Adherents. The Lord Treaſurer having declar'd, This to be his Meaning; he was anſwer'd, That, in that Caſe, ſuch a Bill was altogether unneceſſary, ſince ſuch Troops were, ipſo facto, either open Enemies, if Foreigners, or Traitors and Rebels, if Natives. The Earl of Angleſey put an end to the Debate, with ſaying, " That the Lord who made the Motion, was not " well acquainted with the Methods of Proceeding in that Houſe; for every Peer " has the Privilege of bringing in what Bill he thinks fit; that the Lord Trea- " ſurer's aſking Leave for it, was but a Compliment to the Houſe: And therefore, " when he had brought in the ſaid Bill, it would then be a proper Time to conſider " of it." Hereupon the ſaid Motion was dropt, though it occaſion'd various Specu- lations, both within and without the Houſe. The ſame Day a Noble Lord reflected on the Biſhop of Sarum's Preface to his Paſtoral Care: But that Prelate offering to vindicate himſelf, no further Notice was taken of it.

The Lord Treaſurer moves for a prepoſterous Bill, for the further Security of the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

* March 19. Further Debates in the Houſe of Lords, about the State of the Nation.

Two Days * after, the Lords reſumed the Conſideration of the State of the Na- tion, upon which there was a Debate, from One 'till Five a-Clock in the Afternoon. Several Whig Lords ſpoke again in Favour of the Catalans, and inſiſted, " That the " Houſe ought ſtrictly to examine, how that poor People came to be abandon'd, af- " ter they had been ſollicited, and drawn in to declare for the Emperor. The Earl of Angleſey, ſeeing the Miniſtry thus vigorouſly attack'd, endeavour'd to ward off the Blows, by ſaying, " That, for his own Part, he was one of the firſt, who had " appear'd againſt the late Miniſters, becauſe he was fully convinc'd of their Male- " Adminiſtration, Corruption, Avarice, and unbounded Ambition. That he would, in " like Manner, be one of the firſt that ſhould attack the preſent Miniſters, if he " thought them guilty of the ſame Faults: But as he had obſerv'd that 'twas mere- " ly out of Spleen and Envy, that ſome Perſons were for inquiring into the Con- " duct of Patriots, who had given ſignal Proofs of their Zeal for the publick Good, " he was of Opinion, that they ought to examine into the Conduct, both of the " late and preſent Miniſters, that ſo by comparing one with the other, they might " ſee which of the Two had committed leſs Errors? However, the Whig Lords pur- ſued their Point, and, in particular, took Notice of the Danger, both the Queen's Perſon, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion were in, from the great Number of Out-law'd Jacobites, who were permitted to come over from beyond Sea: And complain'd of the Favour ſhewn to the Pretender's Friends, in granting Noli Proſequi's to ſome Per- ſons, who † were under Proſecution, for writing againſt the Proteſtant Succeſſion. They alſo animadverted upon the vaſt Increaſe of the Navy Debts, though nothing had been done at Sea, for Two or Three Years paſt: And the Court-Party having little or nothing to ſay to theſe Particulars, it was mov'd, and reſolv'd, to addreſs her Majeſty, That ſhe would be pleas'd to order the proper Officers to lay before the Houſe, An Account of the Debts and State of the Navy. Secondly, An Account of Noli Proſequi's granted ſince her Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne. And Thirdly, a Liſt of Perſons Out-law'd, Attainted, or that had born Arms in the Service of her Majeſty, or the late King's Enemies, who had had Licences to return into Great Britain, or other her Majeſty's Dominions, ſince the Year 1688. After this, upon a Motion for Ad- journing, the Whig Lords, who deſign'd to follow the Chace, while the Scent lay hot, propos'd to adjourn only to the ‖ Monday following: But the Miniſtry being highly concern'd in putting a ſtop to thoſe troubleſome and ungrateful Inquiries, the Lord Treaſurer, with a ſhew of Devotion, repreſented, That the Solemnity of Eaſter's " Feſtival approaching, the next Week, ought, according to the Primitive Inſti- " tution, and the conſtant Practice of the Church of England, to be ſet apart for " Works and Exerciſes of Piety, and therefore mov'd to adjourn to Wedneſday, the " 31ſt

"31ſt of March." Being ſeconded by the Lord Trevor, the Earl of Wharton ſaid thereupon, God forbid he ſhould oppoſe that Noble Lord, who had made ſo pious and ſo religious a Motion: But that he appeal'd to that venerable Bench, (pointing to the Biſhops) whether Humanity, and Chriſtian Charity, did not require it at their Hands, not to loſe one Moment of Time, in addreſſing her Majeſty in behalf of the diſtreſſed Catalans, who were reduc'd to ſuch an extremity, that the leaſt Delay in procuring them Relief, might prove their utmoſt and irretrievable Ruin. Hereupon it was reſolved, without Oppoſition, to preſent the ſaid Addreſs; and then the Earl of Oxford's Motion, for adjourning to the 31ſt of March, was carried in the Affirmative, by Sixty Six Voices, againſt Forty Three. It is obſervable, that the Commons having, the Day before, made an Order for clearing their Houſe of all Strangers, not excepting the Peers, it was moved in the Lords Houſe, to be even with them, by making the like Order, without excepting the Commons: But this was oppos'd by the Duke of Argyle, who ſaid, It was for the Honour of that Auguſt Aſſembly, to ſhew, that they were better bred, and had more Complaiſance than the Commons. It is obſervable, that in order, in ſome Meaſure, to allay the Fears which many entertain'd, of a Deſign concerted between Great Britain and France, to bring over the Chevalier de St. George, the Britiſh Miniſters cauſed a remarkable (a) Declaration, made, ſome Time before, by the French Ambaſſador at the Hague, to the States-General, to be publiſh'd in a News-Paper: Which, however, with the leaſt diſcerning, paſs'd only for a political Amuſement.

And, indeed, it was but a fond Imagination in the Britiſh Miniſters to believe, that any verbal Aſſurances and Proteſtations of theirs, were able to diſpel the Jealouſies and Apprehenſions, occaſion'd by their daily removing the ſtaunchest Friends to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, from publick Employments, and advancing, in their Stead, thoſe they found inclined blindly to follow the QUEEN's MEASURES: Which was now become the Watch-Word, and, as it were, the Standard of Civil and Military Merit. Upon this Rule, at a Cabinet-Council, held about the middle of * March, it was reſolv'd to remove the Duke of Argyle from all his Places; to order the Earl of Stair to diſpoſe of his Regiment of Scotch Royal Dragoons, the moſt renowned Corps of that Kind, in the whole Britiſh Army; and to turn out ſeveral other inferior Officers. Accordingly, a few Days after, it was declared, That the Command of the Fourth, or Scotch Troop of Life-Guards, of which the Duke of Argyle was Colonel and Captain, was given to the young Earl of Dundonald, a Scotch Peer, (for which, however, the Queen was ſaid to have paid the uſual Price, Ten Thouſand Pounds to his Grace) That the Earl of Peterborow was made Governor of the Iſland of Minorca, and the Earl of Orkney Governor of Edinburgh Caſtle, both in the Room of the Duke of Argyle; that the Earl of Portmore had bought the Earl of Stair's Regiment, for Six Thouſand Pounds; that Major-General Davenport, was order'd to ſell his Poſt of Lieutenant of the Firſt Troop of Life-Guards, to Brigadier Panton; that Major-General Holmes, Major of her Majeſty's Cold-Stream Regiment of Foot-Guards, had leave to diſpoſe of his Company to Lieutenant-Colonel Gibbons, late of Colonel Kane's Regiment, of Foot; that Lieutenant-Colonel Egerton, Brother to the Earl of Bridgwater, and Lieutenant-Colonel Sidney, Brother to the Earl of Leiceſter, were order'd to ſell their Companies in the Foot-Guards, for the Sum of a Thouſand Pounds each, to Lieutenant-Colonel Markham, and Lieutenant-Colonel Owen; and that Lieutenant-Colonel Oughton, and Lieutenant-Colonel Paget, were alſo order'd to diſpoſe of their Companies. It was, about the ſame Time, ſtrongly reported, that ſeveral other Officers, who, being cloſetted, had demurr'd upon the Queſtion that was put to them, Whether they would ſerve the Queen, without aſking Queſtions? Were to be likewiſe turn'd out of their Poſts; ſome of which were to be fill'd up by the proſtituted Tools of the Lord Bolingbroke, the principal Adviſer and Promoter of NEW-MODELLING the Army. One Branch of this Scheme, was to break Nine of the Battalions in Ireland; to lay aſide Seventy Two Officers, that were thought improper Inſtruments for the Deſigns in Hand; and to raiſe Fifteen other Battalions,

(a) The ſaid Declaration, publiſh'd in the Poſt-Boy of Thurſday, March 18. was as follows:

"THIS not only in Holland, that falſe Reports are ſpread of the King my Maſter's equipping "a Fleet, with Deſign to ſupport the Intereſts of the Chevalier de St. George, but theſe "falſe Reports have alſo reach'd England.

that ſhould be ſure to obey all Commands; and one of which, was ſaid to be deſtin'd for the Lord Poor, an Iriſh Roman-Catholick Peer, who had a long Time ſerv'd in France. It was alſo generally reported, that either the Earl of Argleſey, or Colonel Owen, who, ſoon after, went over to Dublin, carried theſe Orders to Sir Conſtantine Phipps: But whatever Ground there was for ſuch a Report, Heaven did not permit that Part of the New Model to take Place.

The Lord Bolingbroke, and his ſanguine Friends, who, by this Time, had got the Aſcendant over the Lord Treaſurer in the Cabinet-Council, were the more precipitate in their Meaſures; both becauſe they began to deſpair of the Queen's outliving the next Summer, and becauſe they were not ignorant, that the Whigs, in Concert with the Court of Hanover, took all imaginable Precautions to ſecure the Proteſtant Succeſſion. On Friday, the 11th of March, after the Queen had ſunn'd herſelf a ſhort while at her Window, ſhe was * ſeized with a Chillneſs, Vomiting, a Pain in the Leg, the Pulſe very diſorder'd, and in every manner as Two Months before, except that the Queen did not ſhiver; but the Cold and Chillneſs continued Twelve Hours, and was then ſucceeded by very great Heat, Thirſt, and all the Symptoms of a high Fever, which laſted till the next Morning. Some of her Phyſicians were for adminiſtring the Snake Root; but Dr. Shadwell oppoſed it, by reaſon of the inflammatory Fever, and Eryſipelas; preſs'd for temperate Cordial Medicines, to diſcharge the Blood; and Cupping, as well as other Evacuations, to prevent too great a Load of Humours falling upon the Leg. This he inſiſted on the next Day, tho' the Fever was off; apprehending the Conſequence of that Limb being too much loaded: And tho' on Sunday, the 14th, the Queen eat a Chicken with very good Appetite; tho' all the other Phyſicians thought Matters ſo well, as not to need any Preſcription; Yet that very good Appearance did not eaſe Dr. Shadwell of his Fears for what might happen to the Leg, if the Eryſipelas ſhould turn to an Impoſthumation: Which it did, according to his Prognoſtick, not long after; and proved, at laſt, the immediate Cauſe of the Queen's Death. In the mean while, they who were moſt concern'd in the Queen's Life, in order to bring their undigeſted Schemes to Conſiſtency, drove on apace, as knowing how precarious that Life was; and, at the ſame Time, the better to carry on their Deſigns, ſet a good Face upon the Matter, and gave out, That the Queen was in no manner of Danger, being only troubled with a ſmall Fit of the Gout. But tho', the better to conceal the true State of the Queen's Health, a truſty † Phyſician only was, for a long Time, admitted to ſee her Leg; yet thoſe who watch'd for the Security of the Proteſtant Succeſſion, did not want Intelligence of the dangerous Condition the Queen was in; and, accordingly, took all poſſible Meaſures, to defeat any Attempt that ſhould be made to bring in the Pretender, on or before a Demiſe. That Caſe having never happen'd, thoſe Meaſures are, for the moſt part, a Secret; and therefore Hiſtory cannot record them with full Certainty. However, we may take notice, that, about this Time, the Chevalier's Friends were not a little alarm'd at a ſecret Treaty, which was ſaid to have been concluded between the Elector of Brunſwick and the States-General; whereby their High Mightineſſes, in Conſideration of a certain Sum, engaged to furniſh his Electoral Highneſs with a certain Number of Ships and Land-Forces, (beſides their Engagements as Guarantees of the Succeſſion) to ſupport his Claim to the Crown of Great Britain. Whether this Treaty was a Reality, or a meer Chimæra, 'tis certain, however, that the Court of Hanover did not rely on the fair Promiſes that were given them by the Britiſh Miniſters, and which were manifeſtly contradicted by Matters of Fact: And we may alſo here take notice, That as ſome of the Britiſh Miniſters and Generals were, at this Juncture, very intent upon new-modelling the Army; ſo, on the other hand, the Duke of Argyle, General Stanhope, Lieutenant-General Cadogan, and ſeveral other brave and experienc'd Commanders, were no leſs active, tho' with more Caution, in keeping ſteady, and preparing againſt all Events, ſuch Military Men as they knew to be well-affected to the Proteſtant Succeſſion. General Stanhope, in particular, had, for that Purpoſe, ſeveral private Conferences with the principal Officers among the French Refugees; who being a conſiderable Body, and all hearty and zealous for the Cauſe, no ſmall Streſs was laid on their Aſſiſtance, as well as that of their Countrymen: So that if Things had been brought to Extremities, bating the Interpoſition of foreign Forces, the well-affected to the Houſe of Hanover would have been an equal, if not an Over-match to the Chevalier's Friends. This will appear more than probable, if we conſider, That in either Houſe of Parliament, ſcarce One in Twenty was, at bottom, for altering the preſent Settlement: That moſt of the Merchants and Money'd Men in the City of London, (which, in all Revolutions, has the greateſt Sway over the reſt of the Kingdom) were intirely devoted to the Proteſtant Succeſſor; and that Meaſures were early concerted by the Kit-Cat-

Let us reſume the Proceedings in Parliament; which, according to their Adjournment, met on the 31ſt of March. Three * Days after, Mr. Secretary Bromley laid before the Houſe of Commons, "An Account of what Steps had been taken, for removing the Pretender from the Dominions of the Duke of Lorrain; and what Anſwers had been given to Her Majeſty, or any of her Miniſters, by the Duke of Lorrain, or any of his Miniſters: And alſo a Copy of Two Letters, in French; the one, an Anſwer of the Baron Le Begue to a Letter from the Biſhop of London, dated November the 9th, 1713; and the other, a Letter of the Duke of Lorrain, to the Baron Le Begue, dated Nov. 27. 1713." Thoſe Letters were referr'd to a Committee, to tranſlate, and report the ſame to the Houſe; And it was reſolved to "addreſs Her Majeſty, for an Account, what Inſtances had been uſed with the Emperor, for the revoking the Paſſport granted by him for the Pretender's reſiding in the Dominions of the Duke of Lorrain, or againſt renewing the ſame."

The Parliament meets again, March 31.

* April 2.

Several Papers relating to the Pretender laid before the Commons, and others call'd for.

On the 7th of April, the Commons unanimouſly reſolv'd, to conſider of the State of the Nation, with regard to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, that Day Se'nnight: In order to which, they alſo reſolv'd to "addreſs the Queen, for the Letter from the Biſhop of London to the Baron Le Begue, Miniſter of the Duke of Lorrain to the States-General, concerning the Removal of the Pretender from his Maſter's Dominions." To this Purpoſe, we may previouſly take notice, that, ſome Time before the Parliament ſat, a Letter, ſaid to be written by the Duke of Lorrain to Her Majeſty, was handed about, firſt in Manuſcript, and afterwards in Print, as follows:

MADAM,

WE could not be more ſurprized at the Addreſſes of the Britiſh Parliament laſt Summer, than with the late Remonſtrances of your Majeſty's Miniſter at Utrecht, in relation to the Removal of the Chevalier de St. George from the Dominions of Lorrain. Before we would abſolutely comply with the Requeſt of the Moſt Chriſtian King in that Affair, the profound Reſpect we have for your Quiet, made us apprehenſive of giving the leaſt Uneaſineſs to your Majeſty. But when we were aſſur'd, on the contrary, that this Expedient would be highly agreeable to all Sides, as the only Means to remove one of the chief Obſtacles to the General Peace of Europe, ſo much wanted and deſir'd: Proud of ſo great an Honour, We could no longer refrain from opening our Arms, to receive a Prince, the moſt accompliſh'd, the moſt virtuous, and moſt amiable of Human Race, who only wants to be ſeen to be admir'd, and known to be almoſt ador'd: Whoſe Magnanimity, in his Sufferings, renders him worthy his High Birth; beſides his other great and commendable Qualities, which confeſs the Royal Blood that flows in his Veins.

The D. of Lorrain's ſuppoſed Letter to the Queen, about the Chevalier de St. George.

We therefore hope your Majeſty, and the Britiſh Nation, will not take in ill Part, that we cannot comply with a Demand ſo inconſiſtent with our own Honour, and the Laws of Hoſpitality; that after our Protection once given, we ſhould voluntarily abandon to the Rage of his Enemies, an innocent, diſtreſs'd Prince, who knows no Crime, but being born the laſt HEIR MALE to that Illuſtrious Family, which, for ſeveral Ages, has given ſo many Great Monarchs to the World, (amongſt the reſt, Your MAJESTY) of whoſe Heroick Virtues He is a Happy Imitator; and whoſe conſpicuous and great Actions, have reflected as much Luſtre, as You have received from your Noble and truly Royal Progenitors. That God Almighty would take your Majeſty into his holy Protection, is the ardent Wiſh of,

MADAM,

Your Majeſty's, &c.

This Letter, which, with different Views, was diſpers'd with equal Induſtry by both Parties, with other concurring Circumſtances, wonderfully increas'd the Fears and Jealouſies of the well-affected to the Houſe of Hanover; and occaſion'd various Reflections on the preſent Adminiſtration, in both Houſes of Parliament, particularly in the Houſe of Peers. As ſoon as their Lordſhips were * met again, the Lords with the White Staves acquainted the Houſe, That the Queen had been pleas'd to order the Papers, for which they had addreſs'd Her Majeſty, to be laid before them, but that it requir'd ſome Time to tranſcribe the ſame: Upon which, the Houſe adjourn'd to Friday, the 2d of April. That Day, ſeveral Papers, relating to the Catalans, were read; after which, the Earls of Wharton and Sunderland, the Lords Halifax, Cowper, and ſome others, repreſented, That the Crown of Great Britain, having drawn in the Catalans to declare for the Houſe of Auſtria, and engaged to ſuccour and ſupport them; thoſe Engagements ought to have been made good. To this the Lord Bolingbroke anſwer'd, "That Her Majeſty had us'd all her Endea"vours, to procure to the Catalans the Enjoyment of their ancient Liberties and "Privileges; but that, after all, the Engagements Her Majeſty was enter'd into,

"ſubſiſted no longer than while King Charles was in Spain; but that Prince being "advanc'd to the Imperial Dignity, and having himſelf abandon'd the Catalans, Her
"Majeſty could do no more than interpoſe her good Offices in their Behalf; which
"ſhe had not been wanting to do." To this it was reply'd, That God Almighty had put more effectual Means into Her Majeſty's Hands: And, after ſome other Speeches, the Lord Cowper moved for an Addreſs to Her Majeſty, importing, "That Her Ma-
"jeſty's Endeavours for preſerving to the Catalans the full Enjoyment of their anci"ent Liberties, having proved ineffectual; their Lordſhips made it their humble Re-
"queſt to Her Majeſty, That ſhe would be pleas'd to continue her Interpoſition, in
"the moſt preſſing manner, in their Behalf." None of the Peers oppoſed this Motion; only the Lord Chancellor, in order to juſtify all that had been done by the Miniſtry, ſaid, This Addreſs would be more grateful to Her Majeſty, if the Word ineffectual was left out, and if they ſhould only thankfully acknowledge Her Majeſty's Endeavours, in Favour of the Catalans: Which was readily agreed to. But notwithſtanding this Compliment, this Addreſs being, the next * Day, preſented to the Queen; She thank'd, indeed, the Lords for the Satisfaction they expreſs'd, in the Endeavours ſhe had uſed for ſecuring to the Catalans their juſt Liberties: But, then ſhe added, that at the Time ſhe concluded her Peace with Spain, ſhe reſolv'd to continue her Interpoſition, upon every proper Occaſion, for obtaining thoſe Liberties, and to prevent, if poſſible, the Misfortunes, to which that People were expoſed by the Conduct of thoſe more nearly concern'd to help them. This Anſwer occaſion'd ſiniſter Reflections: And, indeed, it appear'd not long after, that Sir James Wiſhart, who, about this Time, was ſent with a ſtrong Squadron of Men of War, was rather inſtructed to aſſiſt King Philip in the Reduction of Barcelona, than in relieving the diſtreſs'd Catalans.

Debate about the Catalans.

* April 3. The Queen's Anſwer about the Catalans.

The ſame * Day on which the Lords preſented their Addreſs, their Lordſhips read ſeveral Papers that had been laid before them, relating to the Treaties of Peace; and reſolv'd to go upon the State of the Nation the Monday following. Upon that † Day, the new Biſhops of Cheſter and Briſtol were introduc'd into the Houſe of Peers; where the Biſhop of London, lately ‖ return'd from Utrecht, had taken his Seat ſome Time before: And theſe Three Prelates prov'd a ſeaſonable Reinforcement to the Court-Party. The Houſe being ſat, ſeveral Speeches were made, in relation to the Dangers to which all Europe, in general, was left expoſed by the late Treaties, and which, in particular, threaten'd the Proteſtant Succeſſion. To this Purpoſe, the Whig Lords mention'd the Countenance and Favour, that were publickly ſhewn by thoſe in Power, to the Friends of the Pretender; and the Chevalier's continuing in Lorrain. The Earl of Sunderland added, "That not-"withſtanding the earneſt Application made laſt Seſſion, by both Houſes, to Her
"Majeſty, to uſe her utmoſt Endeavours to get him removed from thence; yet
"he was aſſur'd by Baron Forſtner, the Duke of Lorrain's Miniſter, ſome Weeks
"before his Departure, That, to his certain Knowledge, no Inſtances had yet been made "to his Maſter, for that Purpoſe." The Lord Bolingbroke ſaid thereupon, "He "wonder'd Baron Forſtner ſhould make ſuch a Declaration, ſince he himſelf (Lord
"Bolingbroke) had made thoſe Inſtances to the ſaid Baron, in the Queen's Name."
But the Lord Halifax confirm'd what the Earl of Sunderland had advanc'd; ſaying, That Baron Forſtner had told him as much, but Four Days before; ſo that the Lord Bolingbroke muſt be miſtaken, at leaſt in Point of Chronology. The Earl of Wharton having, with his uſual Spirit and manly Eloquence, urg'd the Dangers that threaten'd the Nation, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, from the Male-Adminiſtration of Affairs; concluded, "That, for his own Part, he was an Old Man, and could not expect to "live long: But that he had a SON, who, he hop'd, would ſee his Country re-
"veng'd upon thoſe wicked Miniſters." After ſome other Speeches, a Queſtion was propoſed, Whether the Proteſtant Succeſſion was in Danger under the preſent Adminiſtration? But the Court-Lords, who had a Mind to ſcreen the Miniſtry, under the ſacred Talladium of the Queen's Name, inſiſted, That the laſt Words of the Queſtion ſhould be, under Her MAJESTY's Adminiſtration? The Whig Lords alledged, "That the QUEEN ought not to be mention'd in a Queſtion, that Memorable Debate in the Houſe of Peers, about the State of the Nation, April 5.

A. D. 1714.

" did not at all concern her Majeſty: For, by our Conſtitution, the Sovereign can do " no Wrong, and if any Thing be done amiſs, the Miniſters alone are accountable " for it." But it was urged, on the Court Side, That the Queen having, in her " Speech from the Throne, taken Notice of the Inſinuations, that the Proteſtant " Succeſſion was in Danger under her Government; The Queſtion ought to take in her " Majeſty's Expreſſions, about the ſame Subject. This being agreed to, the Queſtion was warmly debated, from Two in the Afternoon, 'till near Nine a-Clock in the Evening, when it was carried in the Negative, by a Majority of Twelve Voices only, viz. Seventy Six againſt Sixty Four. Beſides ſeveral ſmart Speeches, on both Sides, the moſt remarkable Circumſtance of this Debate, was, that the ARCHBISHOP of YORK, and the Earl of ANGLESEY, ſpoke and voted with the Whig LORDS, which added great Weight and Strength to that Side; the firſt drawing after him the whole Bench of Biſhops, Three Courtiers only excepted: And the other being follow'd by the Earl of Abingdon, the Earl of Jerſey, the Lords Aſhburnham, Herbert, and Carteret, and ſome other Temporal Peers, who, like his Lordſhip, had, upon moſt Occaſions, voted with the Court of Lords; ſo that the Victory the latter gain'd, was owing either to the Scotch Peers, or to the late Creation: And it was the general Opinion, that this ſeeming Advantage was, in Reality, a kind of real Defeat; and that One or Two ſuch Victories, would ruin the Conquering Party. The Earl of Angleſey's Speech upon this Occaſion, was much taken Notice of: He ſaid, among other Things, " That when he came into the Houſe, he thought, in- " deed, the Proteſtant Succeſſion to be ſtill in Danger, on the Part of France, whoſe " Intereſt it was to reſtore the Pretender: But that after he had heard what ſo many " Noble Members of that auguſt Aſſembly, Perſons of undoubted Honour and Pro- " bity, had alledged againſt the Miniſters, and no Anſwer offer'd to confute it, " either by the Miniſters themſelves, or their Friends, he could not but believe the " ſaid Succeſſion to be in Danger, under ſuch an Adminiſtration." His Lordſhip afterwards, endeavour'd to clear himſelf, as to the Share he had in ſome late Tranactions: " I own, ſaid he, I gave my Aſſent to the Ceſſation of Arms, for which " I take Shame to my ſelf, and aſk GOD, my COUNTRY, and my CONSCIENCE, " PARDON. But, however, this Fault I did not commit, 'till that Noble Lord, (turning towards the Treaſurer) had aſſured the Council, That the Peace would be " glorious and advantageous, both to her Majeſty, and her Allies. Adding, That as the " Honour of his Sovereign, and the Good of his Country, were the Rule of his " Actions, ſo he had no Reſpect of Perſons; and if he found himſelf impoſed upon, " he durſt purſue an Evil Miniſter from the Queen's CLOSET, to the Tower, and " from the TOWER to the Scaffold. The Lord Treaſurer, to whom this Bolt was levell'd, ſaid thereupon, That the Peace was as glorious and advantageous, as could be expected, conſidering the Neceſſity of Affairs, and the Contradiction the Queen's Miniſters had met with, both at Home and Abroad. Hereupon ſeveral Lords replied, That no Miniſters ever had it in their Power to make ſo honourable and advantageous a Peace, as the Queen's Miniſters had: And the Duke of Argyle, in particular, added, " That he had lately croſs'd the Kingdom of France, both in going to, and return- " ing from Minorca: That it was, indeed, one of the fineſt Countries in the Uni- " verſe, but that there were Marks of a general Deſolation, in all the Places " through which he paſs'd; that he had rid Forty Miles together, without meeting " a Man fit to carry Arms; that the reſt of the People were in the utmoſt Miſery " and Want; and therefore he did not apprehend what Neceſſity there was to con- " clude a Peace ſo precipitately, with a Prince, whoſe Dominions were ſo exhauſted " of Men, Money, and Proviſions. As to the Queſtion now under Debate, the " Duke of Argyle ſaid, That he firmly believed the Succeſſion in the Electoral " Houſe of Hanover, to be in Danger from the preſent Miniſters, whom he durſt " charge with Male-Adminiſtration, both within thoſe Walls, and without; That he " knew, and offer'd to prove, that the Treaſurer had Yearly remitted Four Thou- " ſand Pounds to the Highland Clans of Scotland, who were known to be intirely " devoted to the Pretender, in order to keep them under Diſcipline, (a) and ready " for any Attempt: That, on the other hand, the New-Modelling of the Army, " by diſbanding ſome Regiments out of their Turn, and by removing from their " Employments, a vaſt Number of Officers, merely upon Account of their known " Affection to the Houſe of Hanover, were clear Indications of the Deſigns in

The Proteſtant Succeſſion voted out of Danger.

A remarkable Speech of the the Earl of Angleſey.

The Duke of Argyle's Speech.

(a) To this purpoſe we may take Notice, That the Lord Broadalbine, Sir John Macclean, and ſome other Chiefs of the High-Land Clans, (who were afterwards in open Rebellion againſt King GEORGE) did, about the middle of May, ſet out from London, for Scotland, undoubtedly in Concert with thoſe who were againſt the Proteſtant Succeſſor.

" hand: Adding, that it was a Diſgrace to the Nation, to ſee Men, who had never " look'd an Enemy in the Face, advanc'd to the Poſts of ſeveral brave Officers, who " after they had often expoſed their Lives for their Country, were now ſtarving in " Priſon for Debt, for want of their Pay." The Lord Treaſurer, laying his Hand upon his Breaſt, ſaid, " He had, on ſo many Occaſions, given ſuch ſignal Proofs " of his Affection to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, that he was ſure no Member of " that Auguſt Aſſembly, did call it into Queſtion. That he own'd he had re- " mitted, for Two or Three Years paſt, Three Thouſand Eight Hundred Pounds, " to the High-Land Clans, but that he hoped the Houſe would give him an Oppor- " tunity to clear his Conduct, as to that Point: And as for the reform'd Officers, that " he had given Orders that they ſhould forthwith be paid." The Lord Aſhburnham, who had lately been advanc'd to the Command of a Troop of Life-Guards, think- ing himſelf reflected on by ſome Expreſſions that had dropp'd from a Noble Duke, took that Occaſion to ſay, " That the Queen had no better, nor a more loyal Sub- " ject than himſelf; but, that at the ſame Time, he was ready to ſpill every drop " of his Blood, and ſpend all his Fortune, for the Security of the Proteſtant " Succeſſion.

Though after ſome other Speeches, the Queſtion, before-mention'd, was put, and carried in the Negative, as the Court-Lords would have it; yet the Lord Halifax, in order to put their Profeſſions of Affection to the Proteſtant Succeſſor, to the Teſt, moved, That an Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, that ſhe would renew her Inſtances, for the ſpeedy removing the Pretender out of Lorrain; and that her Majeſty would be pleaſed, in Conjunction with the States General, to enter into the Guaranty of the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover; and alſo ſuch other Princes, as her Majeſty ſhould think proper. His Lordſhip was ſeconded by the Earl of Wharton, who moved, beſides, that in the ſaid Addreſs, Her Majeſty might be deſired to iſſue out a Proclamation, promiſing a Reward to any Perſon, who ſhould apprehend the Pretender, Dead or Alive: Which Motion was back'd by the Duke of Bolton, who moved likewiſe, That the ſaid Reward might be ſuitable to the Importance of that Service. No Peer ſaid any Thing in Oppoſition to theſe Motions; but it being late, ſome Members cry'd, adjourn, adjourn: But the other Side, calling for the Queſtion, it was unanimouſly reſolv'd, that the ſaid Addreſs ſhould be preſented, and a Committee was thereupon appointed to draw it up. Before this memorable Debate came on, the Lord North and Grey moved, that all the Strangers that were in the Houſe ſhould withdraw; upon which the Earl of Wharton deſired, that they might be permitted to ſtay; and his Lordſhip was back'd by the Duke of Argyle: But the Noble Peer who made the firſt Motion, inſiſting upon it, all the Strangers were obliged to withdraw, except the Baron Schutz, Envoy Extraordinary from Hanover, whoſe ſtanding beyond the Throne, among the Peers Sons, was wink'd at. It is highly probable, that he did not fail giving a full Account of this Day's Tranſactions to his Court; and that thereupon the Earl of Argleſey was noted down in the Liſt of the Perſons, whom, by the Act of Settlement, the Proteſtant Succeſſor was impower'd to appoint, to have a Share in the Regency, in Caſe of a Demiſe. But the nice Obſervers of what paſs'd at this critical Juncture, took Notice, that the ſame Evening *, that Noble Peer ſupp'd with the Lord Bolingbroke; and, Two Days † after, appear'd at the Treaſurer's Levee: From whence it was conjectured, that they had found Means to regain him, by the Promiſe of the Government of Ireland:

† April, 7.

Be that as it will, on Thurſday, the 8th of April, upon the Report of the Addreſs againſt the Pretender, ſome Court-Lords moved to mitigate the ſame, and, among the reſt, the Lord North and Grey made a long Speech, " Wherein he endea- " vour'd to ſhew the Barbarity of ſetting a Reward upon any body's Head; which, " he ſaid, was an encouraging of Murder and Aſſaſſination; and how repugnant " ſuch a Practice was to Chriſtianity, the Law of Nature, and the Laws of all Civi- " liz'd Nations:" To which Purpoſe his Lordſhip quoted ſome Paſſages out of " Grotius, Puffendorf, and other learned Civilians. He repreſented, in particular, " How inconſiſtent ſuch a Proceeding was, with the Honour and Dignity of ſo Au- " guſt an Aſſembly, in a Nation and Government, famed for Lenity and Clemency; " and in the Concluſion, ſaid, no Man either had more Reſpect and Affection for " the illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover, or would do more to ſerve them, than himſelf: " But that they muſt excuſe him, if he would not venture Damnation for them." He was back'd by the Lord Trevor, who ſaid, " That what that Noble Peer had " ſpoke, was ſufficient to ſhew, how inconſiſtent ſuch a Proceeding was with Chri- " ſtianity, and the Civil Law, and therefore he would confine himſelf to our own " Laws; and if he knew, or underſtood any Thing of theſe, he was confident, " they were no leſs oppoſite to ſuch Proceedings, than the Civil Law. That he " knew, he did not ſpeak there as a Lawyer, or Judge, but as a Peer: But he was

The Lord North and Grey's Speech, againſt the ſetting a Price on the Pretender's Head.

" ſo fully ſatisfy'd of our Law diſcountenancing all ſuch Proceedings, that if ever " any ſuch Caſe ſhould come before him, as a Judge, he would think himſelf bound " in Juſtice, Honour, and Conſcience, to condemn ſuch an Action as Murther, and " therefore he hoped, that the ſupream Court of Judicature, in England, and the " moſt Auguſt Tribunal in the Univerſe, would not make a Precedent for encou- " raging Aſſaſſination:" Concluding, that it was ſufficient, and therefore he moved, Firſt, That the Reward ſhould be, for apprehending and bringing the Pretender to Juſtice, in Caſe he ſhould Land, or attempt to Land, either in Great Britain, or Ireland: Secondly, That her Majeſty ſhould iſſue her Royal Proclamation for that Purpoſe, whenever her Majeſty, in her great Wiſdom, ſhould judge it neceſſary. The Lords Comper and Halifax ſaid thereupon, " That ſuch a Proceeding, as repugnant as it might be to " the Precepts of Chriſtianity, was yet warranted by the Practice of the old Romans, " of the moſt civiliz'd Nations in Europe, and of our own Nation: For without re- " curring to remoter Inſtances, we had the Example of King James the Second, who " ſet a Price on the Head of his own Nephew, the Duke of Monmouth." But theſe Two Lords were but weakly ſupported by their own Party, and Four * of the Lords who, Three Days before, had left the Court Party, having approved the Lord Trevor's Motion, and moſt of the Biſhops, who were againſt ſuch an Addreſs, being abſent from the Houſe, the ſaid Mitigations were, upon a Diviſion, carried by a Majority of Ten Voices.

* Viz. The Earl of Angleſey, and the Lords Aſhburnham, Carteret, and Boyle, (or Orrery.)

The ſame Day, upon a Motion made by the Lord Halifax, the Lords reſolv'd to preſent another Addreſs to the Queen, to deſire her Majeſty, " That ſhe would be " pleaſed to iſſue out her Royal Proclamation, for the putting in Execution the " Laws in Force, againſt all Jeſuits, Popiſh Prieſts, and Biſhops, except thoſe belong- " ing to Foreign Miniſters, as alſo againſt all ſuch as bore Arms againſt the late " King William and Queen Mary, or her preſent Majeſty, &c." Upon this Occaſion, ſome ſevere Reflections were made againſt thoſe Perſons, who being Outlaw'd for adhering to the late King James, and the Pretender, had the Aſſurance, and were encouraged not only to come over, but even to appear here with a publick Character. The Earl of Angleſey ſaid thereupon, " That for his own Part, he was " againſt widening our domeſtick Diviſions, by keeping up odious Diſtinctions, and " therefore, if they who were born her Majeſty's Subjects, and had been in Arms " againſt their Country, were ſenſible of their Fault, and inclined to return to their " bounden Allegiance, they ought, in his Opinion, to open the Door for them to " come in." It being then late, this Affair was put off 'till the next † Day, when it was reſolv'd, 1. " That no Perſon, not included in the Articles of Limerick, and " who had born Arms in France or Spain, ſhould be capable of any Employment " Civil or Military. 2. That no Perſon who is a natural born Subject of her Ma- " jeſty, ſhould be capable of ſuſtaining the Character of publick Miniſter from any " Foreign Potentate." Theſe Reſolutions were, undoubtedly, made with an Eye upon Sir Patrick Lawleſs, who having been the Pretender's Envoy at the Court of Madrid, had come over with a Credence from King Philip: But upon the Noiſe his being here made in both Houſes of Parliament, he thought fit to go to Holland.

† April 9. Votes againſt Perſons Outlaw'd, and in particular againſt Sir Patrick Lawleſs.

The ſame ‖ Day, upon an occaſional Reflection made ſome Days before, againſt the Miniſters, for remitting annually about Four Thouſand Pounds to the Clans of Scotland, as if that Sum were deſign'd to keep in Heart and Diſcipline the Pretender's Friends, the Lord Townſhend made a Motion, for taking that Affair into Conſideration. Hereupon the Duke of Argyle made a Speech, importing in Subſtance, " That the Scotch Highlanders, being, for the moſt Part, either rank Papiſts, or de- " clared Jacobites, the giving them Penſions, was, in Effect, keeping up Popiſh Se- " minaries, and fomenting Rebellion." In Anſwer to this, the Lord Treaſurer, and the Lord Viſcount Bolingbroke, made it appear, " That in this Particular, they had " but follow'd the Example of the late King William, who after he had reduced the " Highlanders of Scotland, thought fit to allow Yearly Penſions to the Chiefs, or " Heads of the Clans, in order to keep them quiet: And that if the preſent Mini- " ſtry could be charg'd with any Miſmanagement, on that Article, 'twas only for " retrenching and ſaving Part of that Huſh-Money." Nothing being alledged againſt this Apology, the Lord North and Grey made a Motion, for returning the Lord Treaſurer the Thanks of the Houſe, for his good Services: But the Lord Bolingbroke ſaid, " He was perſuaded the Lord Treaſurer was contented with the Teſtimony of his " own Conſcience, and deſired no further Satisfaction, than to have his Conduct " approved by that Auguſt Aſſembly." Hereupon it was unanimouſly reſolv'd, That the Houſe approved his Lorſhip's Conduct, in that Particular. And as all weak and unſucceſsful Attacks of a Miniſter, do generally raiſe his Reputation, and fix his Power; ſo ſome Perſons had Reaſon to repent the purſuing a wrong Scent; and,

The Lord Treaſurer's Conduct approved.

A. D. 1714. on the other Hand, the Lord North and Grey took that Opportunity to ſay, with a triumphant and exulting Air, that having, by this Time, remov'd "all Fears and "Jealouſies about Popery and the Pretender, he hop'd the Enemies of the Miniſtry "would now ſpeedily produce all the Objections they had againſt their Conduct; and thereupon his Lordſhip mov'd, that a Day might be appointed, for taking into Conſideration the State of the Nation, in relation to the Treaties of Peace and Commerce: He was ſeconded by the Earl of Clarendon, and ſo the Houſe adjourn'd to Tueſday, the 13th of April; but the Day before, the Lord Chancellor, attended only by Whig Lords, preſented to the Queen their Addreſs (a) againſt the Pretender, to which her Majeſty return'd the Anſwer following:

The Queen's Anſwer to the Addreſs againſt the Pretender.

My LORDS,

IT would be a real Strengthning to the Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, as well as a Support to my Government, that an End were put to thoſe GROUNDLESS FEARS and JEALOUSIES, which have been ſo Induſtriouſly promoted.

I do not, at this Time, ſee any Occaſion for ſuch a Proclamation. Whenever I judge it to be neceſſary, I ſhall give my Orders for having one iſſued.

As to the other Particulars of this Addreſs, I will give proper Directions therein.

This dry Anſwer, did not a little revive the Hopes and Expectations of the Friends to the Chevalier de St. George, who, before the warm Speeches againſt him in both Houſes, were ſo elated, and ſecure of Protection, that towards the End of March, an Agent of the Queen Dowager of England, offer'd to file a Bill in the Court of Chancery, wherein he demanded, in her Name, the Sum of Six Hundred Fifty Thouſand Pounds, due to her by the Crown of England, for her Dowry of Fifty Thouſand Pounds per Annum, ſince the Death of her Royal Conſort, King James the Second. But the Agent having in the Bill given her the Title of Queen Mother, the Officer refuſed to file it; whereupon he changed the Title of it, and preſented it in the Name of the moſt illuſtrious Princeſs Maria, Relict of James the Second, King of England, &c. Though no Notice was taken of this formal Demand, yet, purſuant to a private Agreement made in France by the Lord Bolingbroke, about Fifty Thouſand Pounds were remitted thither, for the Uſe of the Queen Dowager.

Demand of King James's Queen, deliver'd in Chancery.

But the Joy of the Jacobites, upon the Queen's Anſwer, before-mention'd, was not long-liv'd: For that very Day, on which the Addreſs againſt the Pretender was preſented, an Accident happen'd, which, as ſoon as known, caſt them into the deepeſt Conſternation. On Saturday, the 10th of April, moſt of the Whig Lords held a Conſultation at the Lord Halifax's, to which Baron Schutz, Envoy Extraordinary from the Elector of Hanover, was admitted; and wherein it was reſolv'd, either purſuant to the Orders the latter had receiv'd from his Court, or to the diſcretionary Power that was lodg'd with ſome of their Lordſhips, that the Envoy ſhould take the firſt Opportunity to demand a Writ for the Electoral Prince to ſit in the Houſe of Peers, as Duke of Cambridge. Accordingly, on Monday, the 12th of April, in the Afternoon, Baron Schutz made a Viſit to the Lord Chancellor, and among other Civilities, acknowledg'd the Affection his Lordſhip had ſhewn, on ſeveral Occaſions, to the moſt Serene Electoral Houſe of Hanover. The Lord Chancellor told him, "He "was extreamly ſenſible of the Honour he did him, by his Viſit and Compliment:

Conſultation of the Whig Lords, April 10.

(a) The Addreſs was to this Effect, viz.

"WE your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in "Parliament Aſſembled, having a juſt and tender Concern for your Majeſty, and our "Country, and being encourag'd by that Zeal your Majeſty has ſo often expreſſed from the "Throne, for the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover, do now preſume to "renew our moſt humble Application to your Majeſty, upon a Subject ſo agreeable to you, as "this which is NEAREST YOUR OWN ROYAL HEART; and do humbly beſeech your Majeſty, "That whenever your Majeſty, in your great Wiſdom, ſhall judge it neceſſary, you will be gra-"ciouſly pleaſed to iſſue your Royal Proclamation, promiſing a Reward to any Perſon, who "ſhall apprehend and bring the PRETENDER to Juſtice, in Caſe he ſhall Land, or attempt to "Land, either in Great Britain, or Ireland, ſuitable to the Importance of that Service, for the "Safety of your Majeſty's Perſon, and the Security of the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of "Hanover.

"We alſo deſire Leave to expreſs our very great Concern, That your Majeſty's Inſtances for "removing the PRETENDER out of Lorrain, have not yet had their Effect; and do humbly intreat "your Majeſty, that you will be graciouſly pleas'd to inſiſt upon, and renew your Inſtances for "the ſpeedy removing the PRETENDER out of Lorrain; and likewiſe that your Majeſty will be "graciouſly pleas'd, in Conjunction with the States General, to deſire the Emperor to enter into "the Guaranty of the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, and alſo all ſuch other Prin-"ces, as your Majeſty ſhall think proper.

A. D. 1714.

" And desir'd him to assure the Elector, his Master, of his entire Devotion to his " Service; hoping his Electoral Highness gave no Credit to the false Reports that " were industriously spread Abroad, in order to give him Jealousies of her Majesty's " Ministers." The Baron answer'd, " He would not fail discharging so agreeable " a Commission: But, added, he had a Favour to ask of the Chancellor, in the Name " of the Electoral Prince; viz. That his Lordship would be pleas'd to make out a " Writ, for his Highness's Sitting in the House of Peers, as Duke of Cambridge." The Lord Chancellor, being somewhat surprized at this unexpected Demand, told the Baron, " That it was not usual to make out Writs for Peers that were out of the " Kingdom: However, he would forthwith apply to Her Majesty, for Directions in " this Case." The Baron reply'd, " He did not doubt, his Lordship knew, and " would perform the Duty of his Office: But as to the Difficulty of the Duke of Cam- " bridge's being out of the Kingdom, he might assure him, his Electoral Highness had " resolv'd to come over very speedily; and, perhaps, might be landed before the " Writ was made out?" Upon this, the Baron taking his Leave, the Lord Chancellor desired him to remember, He did not refuse his Demand, but only thought it proper to acquaint Her Majesty with it; which he would do immediately: To which the Baron said, He likewise desir'd his Lordship to remember, That he apply'd himself to his Lordship, for the Duke of Cambridge's Writ: And so they parted. The Lord Chancellor having, the same Evening, acquainted Her Majesty, and her chief Ministers, with these Passages, a Council was immediately call'd; and having sat from Nine a Clock till after Eleven, it was resolv'd, That the Lord Chancellor should make out a Writ for the Duke of Cambridge. This Transaction, which, the * next Morning, about Noon, was first whisper'd about in the Court of Requests, in the Palace of Westminster, cast a sudden Damp on the Spirits of the avow'd and secret Partizans of the Chevalier de St. George: It was then a Problem, whether Baron Schutz had made that Demand by express Directions from his Master, or only by the Advice of some Whig Lords? But, 'tis certain, that the Queen took so ill the Baron's applying himself to the Lord Chancellor, before he acquainted Her Majesty with his Orders in that Matter, that thereupon Her Majesty sent the Master of the Ceremonies, to forbid him the Court. However, Mr. Bromley, Secretary of State, sent another Message to Monsieur Kreyenberg, the Elector of Hanover's Resident, to acquaint him, that he might come to Court, as usual: And, Two Days after, one of Her Majesty's Messengers was dispatch'd to Mr. Thomas Harley, at the Court of Hanover, undoubtedly, with Instructions suitable to the New Scene, which Baron Schutz had open'd in England. On the other hand, the Baron thought fit forthwith to return to Hanover; and so, on Thursday the 20th of April, in the Night, he set out Post for Harwich, with one single Servant; having left with Monsieur Kreyenberg, a Letter to Mr. Secretary Bromley, importing in Substance, " That having had " the Misfortune to incur Her Majesty's Displeasure, and being thereby render'd " incapable of serving his Master any longer in this Court; he thought it his Du- " ty to return Home, and so took his Leave of him." The next Day, Monsieur Kreyenberg deliver'd this Letter to Mr. Secretary Bromley; who told him, " That " either he, (Monsieur Kreyenberg) or any other Minister whom the Elector of Ha- " nover would please to send over, would be well receiv'd by Her Majesty." This whole Affair occasion'd various Reasonings and Conjectures: And as Baron Schutz's Declaration of the Duke of Cambridge's Intention suddenly to come over, stunn'd and alarm'd the Chevalier's Friends, so did it wonderfully raise the Spirits of the well-affected to the House of Hanover. What the Sense of the Courtiers was about the Duke of Cambridge's coming over, and the present Juncture of Affairs, may, in some measure, be gather'd from some remarkable Strokes, in a Pamphlet publish'd about this Time, with the Title of, HANNIBAL not AT OUR GATES; or, An Enquiry into the Grounds of our present Fears of POPERY and the PRETENDER; in a Dialogue between the Lord Pannick, and George Steady, Esquire; of which, one of the principal Writers of the EXAMINER was suspected to be the Author. (a) In this Pamphlet, it was, among other Things, ironically insinuated, Baron Schutz, Envoy Extr. from Hanover, demands a Writ for the Duke of Cambridge.

Which the Queen, in Council, resolves to grant.

* April 13.

Consternation of the Pretender's Friends thereupon.

Baron Schutz forbid the Court.

(a) The Passage I mean, is (in Page 30, & seq.) as follows:

Lord Pannick. A certain Gentleman is gone to Hanover, to bamboozel; but we have a Trick for that.

G. Steady. I find you are very knowing in these Matters: But who is to be bamboozel'd?

L. Pan. The House of Hanover, whilst the Cousin plays the Popish Game at Home: But we know our Man, and design to address the Queen, to send over for the young Prince.

Conjectures about Mr. Harley's Embaſſy to Hanover.

ated, That a certain Gentleman was gone to Hanover, to bamboozel : And, indeed, as Truth is often ſpoken (b) in Jeſt, ſo it was the general Opinion, that Mr. Harley, who arrived at Hanover on the very Day Baron Schutz demanded the Writ, was ſent thither only to amuſe that Court, with large Profeſſions of the Treaſurer's, and all his Friends Devotion to the Electoral Family ; and, as ſome pretended, as a Proof of that Devotion, with the very Original of a Letter, which the Queen had written, with her own Hand, to the Chevalier. But as the Subject-Matter of Mr. Harley's laſt Embaſſy is ſtill a Secret, no Streſs can be laid on the various Conjectures it occaſion'd. We may only obſerve, that having met with a cold Reception at Hanover, he made no long Stay there, and came back to London on the 25th of May : And that his Kinſman, the Lord Treaſurer, while he endeavour'd to keep fair with both Courts, was, at laſt, truſted by neither ; and, by his ambiguous, puzzling Management, fell univerſally unpitied. We may alſo take notice, that upon the firſt Surprize of Baron Schutz demanding the Writ for the Duke of Cambridge, the Lord Paget and Burton was nam'd Envoy Extraordinary to the Court of Hanover ; but his Lordſhip having declin'd that Employment, in ſo tickliſh a Jun-

L. Pan. I gad but I am ; and have a principal Hand in it, and ſo has a conſiderable Tory—— You know who I mean. I aſſure you, it will be of great Service to have——

G. Steady. To have what ?——a Comptroller ſet over our Queen ; a Court of Appeal againſt her Proceedings ! What would Queen Elizabeth have ſaid to an Addreſs of this MONSTROUS NATURE? She, who thought the Nomination of a Succeſſor, was a kind of ſetting her Winding-ſheet before her Eyes ! Would ſhe not have anſwer'd the Addreſſers after this manner ?

Gentlemen, You may fancy what you pleaſe ; but I want no Coadjutor, no Director, nor will I admit of any ſuch : Your CHOSEN, Your DARLING, you may make much of when I am gone : But while I have Life, by —— I'll make you know I can hold my own Scepter, and rule you without the Help of a Second. You muſt know likewiſe, that I will not ſuffer any YOUNG SAPLING to be held up at me in Terrorem. Gentlemen, I command You to return to the Place whence you came, to provide wholeſome Laws for the Welfare of England, as well as of the Proteſtant Religion ; and take it along with you, that whoever offers to bring in my SUCCESSOR before I am dead, ſhall be deem'd MY ENEMY as long as I live.

It is probable, a Princeſs of her Reſolution would have anſwer'd the Addreſſers in theſe, or harſher Terms : But alas, the gentle Diſpoſition of Queen ANNE (who has ſhew'd her ſelf rather a tender Parent of her People, than their Miſtreſs) will incline her, upon this Occaſion, to lament them more than her ſelf. What a STAB muſt it be to her ! And what a melancholick Renewal of her Grief for the Loſs of her Dear Conſort, and Hopeful Son ! In ſhort, my Lord, it is an odious Scheme ; and I can never imagine the worthy Perſon you hint at, is capable of giving into it. Fame ſpeaks him a Gentleman of Honour, Good Nature, Civility, a fine Underſtanding, and true Church-Principles ; and can he be ſeduced into ſuch barbarous Treatment of his Queen ? If he ſhould be thus deluded, I propheſy loudly, he would appear to all Mankind the Reverſe of what he is now reputed to be. But I ſtill look upon this to be only a groundleſs Piece of Scandal, caſt on him by the Whigs ; who know they can never more effectually blacken a Man of Honour, than by giving out, that he is likely to fall in with their Meaſures : And I think we cannot have a better Evidence of his unfeigned Loyalty and Zeal for Her Majeſty's Intereſt, than the Marks of Favour lately ſhew'd him by a Houſe of Commons, from whom he may expect all that is juſt and agreeable to Honour and Loyalty, and to a Love for their Country.

L. Pan. Pray, 'Squire, why all this Whine ? What are the ill Conſequences you apprehend ?

G. Steady. My Lord, Let not our Pique againſt one Man, prompt us to revenge it on our ſelves and others : Let not our Zeal for the Hanover Succeſſion, extinguiſh the Love and Duty we owe Her Majeſty. If the young Prince comes over, the Conſequences of it are, all Expectants, that is, the greater Part of the World will flock to make their Court to him : To compliment him on his Arrival, they will preſs to have him declar'd Gen---mo, and L. H. A. ; and will never reſt ſatisfy'd, till all Power be thrown into his Hands : And how can human Wiſdom prevent it, or anſwer for the Event ? Tho' we might depend upon his ſedate Temper, and fear nothing from the Fire of Youth, the Thirſt after Rule, and the Ignorance of our Conſtitution ; yet what may not the Councils of Sycophants, and the Deſigns of wicked Men compaſs ? How will they endeavour to inſpire him with Reſentment, and to tempt him with the View of a Crown within Reach ? The Inſolencies of ſome People, when he is not here, particularly their late tumultuous Aſſembly at Jenny Man's, may give us a Proſpect of what they will attempt, when they think they have one at hand to ſupport them. Can any Man of Reaſon imagine, they will be kept within Bounds ? And if in the Height of their Hopes and Extravagance, they ſhould hire a greater Number of Drummers to beat up for Hanover Voluntiers, than they did on Her Majeſty's laſt Birth-Night, if they ſhould make larger Collections, and give a Home-puſh for that which they then only nibbled at ; where is our Remedy ? How can we ſtem the Torrent ? If this Deſign ſucceeds, farewel the Mild and Merciful Reign of Queen ANNE ; and I pray God, ſhe may not have Reaſon to ſay with Anthony, in Shakeſpear,

Oh Sun, thy Upriſe ſhall I ſee no more :
Fortune and Anthony part here, even here :
Do we ſhake Hands !——All come to this ! — The Hearts,
The Hearts, that pannell'd me at Heels, to whom I gave Their Wiſhes, do deſcandy, melt their Sweats
On bloſſoming Cæſar. —— —— ſture, the Earl of Clarendon was, afterwards, appointed to go upon that ungracious Errard.

To reſume the Proceedings in Parliament: The Lord Chancellor having, on the 13th of April, reported to the Houſe of Peers the Queen's Anſwer againſt the Pretender; ſome Expreſſions in it did not appear entirely ſatisfactory to the Whig Lords, who thereupon moved for another Addreſs, to return Her Majeſty Thanks for her gracious Anſwer; and containing the Grounds and Reaſons of their former Addreſs. The Court-Lords, and their Friends, rightly foreſeeing, That if ſuch an Addreſs was carry'd, the prevailing Party might advance to more vigorous Reſolutions, ſtrenuouſly inſiſted, not to enter into ungrateful Particulars; but to confine themſelves to the Expreſſions in the Queen's Anſwer. An Order for ſuch an Addreſs being thereupon offer'd, the Duke of Leeds, to curry Favour with the Court, moved, That at the Cloſe of it, where mention (a) is made of the Fears and Jealouſies univerſally ſpread, the Words [and induſtriouſly] might be added; which, after a Debate, that laſted Four Hours, and in which the Biſhop of Sarum made a long Speech, was carry'd only by the Majority of Two Proxies, the Votes being equal; viz. Sixty one on each Side, in the Houſe. This hard-got Victory of the Courtiers, was, by their Antagoniſts, treated as little better than a Defeat: And, 'tis certain, that the Whig Lords had that Day carried their Point, were it not for the accidental Loſs of Four Votes: The Duke of Rutland, being then at Newmarket, with a Proxy in his Pocket; the Duke of Grafton, being ſent for Home, to his Dutcheſs then in Travail with her firſt Child; and the Earl of Gainſborough, being taken ſo ill, that very Morning, that he could not ſign his Proxy. What was yet no leſs remarkable, was, That of Sixteen Biſhops then in the Houſe, Two only (Rocheſter and Durham) voted with the Court: That the new Biſhops of London and Briſtol, who were thought blindly devoted to the Miniſtry, ſided with the Whigs; as did alſo the Earl of Angleſey: Which was undoubtedly owing to Baron Schutz's demanding a Writ for the Duke of Cambridge, which viſibly gave Life and Conſideration to the Whig Party. However, the Reſolution before-mention'd being laid before the Queen, by the Lords with White Staves; Her Majeſty only anſwer'd, She thank'd them for their Addreſs; and that She took very kindly the Aſſurances they gave therein.

Reſolution for a Second Addreſs about the Pretender.

Hard-got Victory of the Court-Party.

The Queen's Anſwer to the Lords Second Addreſs.

On the 14th of April, the Lords read, a Second Time, the Bill from the Commons, for ſecuring the Freedom of Parliaments, by limiting the Number of Officers in the Houſe of Commons; and a Motion being made, That the ſaid Bill be committed, the Court-Lords inſiſted on the Negative; but the Affirmative prevail'd, by a Majority of Seven or Eight Voices. Then a Motion was made, for taking into Conſideration the State of the Nation, in relation to the Treaties of Peace and Commerce; and ſome Speeches were made, on both ſides, thereupon; after which, the Debate was adjourn'd to Friday, the 16th of April. That Day, the Whig Lords being apprehenſive, that if any Debate aroſe about the Spaniſh Treaty, the other Party would propoſe an Addreſs to the Queen, approving of the ſaid Treaty, which they thought abſurd and impertinent; they therefore agreed to ſay nothing againſt the Treaty, that might draw them into a Debate. The Lord North and Grey ſtood up firſt, and ſaid, That if any Lord had any Objection againſt the Spaniſh Treaty, he was ready to anſwer them: And ſo, in a challenging manner, ſkirmiſh'd for ſome Time. After he ſat down, there was a Silence for a Quarter of an Hour; and then the Earl of Clarendon ſtood up, and ſaid, "My Lords, Since "no Objection can be rais'd againſt the Spaniſh Treaty, we ſhould addreſs Her "Majeſty, to return her our moſt humble Thanks, for having, by a Safe, Ho- "nourable, and Advantageous Peace with Spain, deliver'd theſe Nations from a "long, conſuming Land-War; and to deſire Her Majeſty, notwithſtanding any Ob-

Debate in the H. of Lords, about the Treaties of Peace and Commerce, April 16.

Die Martis 13 Aprilis, 1714.

"ORdered by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, That an humble "Addreſs be preſented to Her Majeſty, to return Her Majeſty the Thanks of this Houſe for "her moſt Gracious Anſwer to their Addreſs; And to aſſure Her Majeſty, That this Houſe will "continue to conſider of, and humbly to offer to Her Majeſty, as well as to concur with Her Ma- "jeſty in all proper Meaſures for ſupporting Her Majeſty's Government, and for ſtrengthening "the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of HANOVER; as the only Effectual Means to put an "End to thoſe Fears and Jealouſies, which have been ſo Univerſally and Induſtriouſly ſpread through- "out this Kingdom.

A. D. 1714.

" ſtructions that may be thrown in her way, to proceed to the Settlement of Eu- " rope, according to the Principles laid down in Her Majeſty's moſt gracious Speech.
To this the Lord Cowper anſwered: My Lords, this is the moſt barefac'd Attempt, that ever was made by this, or any other Miniſtry, to ſecure themſelves, by endeavouring to get the Sanction of this Houſe for themſelves. My Lords, I have no Objections againſt theſe Treaties: Are the Miniſtry themſelves jealous that their Actions ſtand in need of the Sanction of this Houſe? Elſe why this Endeavour at an Addreſs to make their Act, the Act of the Houſe? The Lord that ſpoke firſt, acting like a Soldier, would, by Skirmiſhing, have drawn on a general Engagement, but the Troops are too well diſciplin'd, to fall into an Ambuſcade of his laying: But I cannot remove my Finger from the Original of our Misfortunes, the CESSATION OF ARMS. We were then told, that if a Blow had been ſtruck, it would have ruin'd the Peace. Would to GOD it had ruined this Peace. To ſupport this, the Lord Halifax ſaid, What was laſt mention'd, my Lords, makes me riſe into the higheſt Reſentment of the vile Uſage given my Lord Duke of Ormond: A Lord, for whom I have the moſt profound Reſpect. My Lord Ormond went over into Flanders with a true Engliſh Heart, which, my Lords, is the beſt in the World: With a Deſire to do his Country all the Service his great Ability capacitated him to do. Therefore it muſt be inconceivable the horrible Anguiſh it muſt give his Noble and Generous Heart, to receive ſuch ſhocking Orders, reſtraining the noble Ardour of the Soldiers, fluſh'd with former Victories, and hopes of ſtill greater. My Lords, added the Earl of Nottingham, I never knew the like Addreſs to this ever offer'd at, but once, in the Caſe of the Duke of Suffolk, who, in Henry the Seventh's Days, had made a Treaty, for which he thought it convenient to get the Sanction of this Houſe by an Addreſs, and got Seven Lords made at one Time, to carry the Vote. Yet he was call'd to an Account afterwards for the Treaty, notwithſtanding the Addreſs. I ſay no more of the Man, becauſe he came to an untimely End. Hereupon the Biſhop of Salisbury ſaid, My Lords, I don't underſtand what Law or Reaſon can be given, to impower one Ally to diſingage from his other Allies, unleſs in a proper Manner and Time, he acquaints them, he has done his * ultimus Conatus; and that to proceed further, would be † certa Pernicies. That we had not come to our ultimus Conatus, is plain, ſince in the Year of the Ceſſation of Arms, and the Year following, wherein nothing was done, we made as great Efforts as the former, when we did ſo many glorious Things; and to proceed further, in all human Probability, it would have been certa Pernicies, to our then Enemy the French. The Biſhop of London anſwer'd, " My Lords, at the Ceſſation " of Arms, our Caſe was the very Caſe in Point, which the Biſhop of Sarum puts, " for we had then come to our ultimus Conatus, and, for ought we know, to proceed " further, would have been certa Pernicies. Hereupon the Earl of Wharton reply'd, I did deſign to have ſaid a great deal to Day, but I find it all anticipated by the Lords who have ſpoken before me: Only I muſt ſay what I learn by ſitting here, that the carrying this Vote, is the ultimus Conatus of the Miniſtry, and that if they don't carry it, it will be to them certa Pernicies: Good, my Lords, gratify my Curioſity, to let me ſee what certa Pernicies will be? Some other Whig-Lords maintain'd, That there was no abſolute Neceſſity of making a Peace, the Nation having given near as much Money for theſe Three Years paſt, as during any Three Years of the War; and as for the pretended Advantages, gain'd by the Treaty with Spain, 'twas plain they were no more than what had been ſtipulated before by the Treaty of the Year 1667. They alſo complain'd of the Method in which the Negotiations of Peace had been carried on, and of our giving up the Intereſts of the Emperor, the King of Portugal, and of the poor Catalans: But after a warm Debate, that laſted 'till about Nine a-Clock in the Evening, it was reſolv'd by a Majority of Eighty Two Votes, againſt Sixty Nine, to preſent an Addreſs to her Majeſty, to acknowledge " her " Majeſty's Goodneſs to her People, in delivering 'em by a ſafe, honourable, and " advantageous Peace with France and Spain, from the Burthen of a conſuming Land- " War, unequally carried on, and become, at laſt, impracticable; and to intreat " her Majeſty, to purſue ſuch Meaſures as ſhe ſhould judge neceſſary, for compleat- " ing the Settlement of Europe, on the Principles laid down in her Majeſty's " Speech." An Addreſs to that Purpoſe was, the next Day, drawn up, reported, agreed to, and ſent down to the Commons, for their Concurrence.

Proceedings in the Houſe of Commons.

This naturally leads us to the reſuming the Proceedings in that Houſe: On Thurſday, the 8th of April, it was reſolv'd to preſent Three Addreſſes to her Majeſty, that ſhe would be pleaſed to order to be laid before them, Firſt, An Account of the Negotiations of the ſeveral Treaties of Peace, between her Majeſty and her Allies, and France and Spain, and of the Obſtructions which occurred in carrying on the ſaid Negotiations. Secondly, An Account what Licenſes, Privy-Seals, or Paſſports had been granted ſince the Year 1688, to Perſons Outlawed, or Attainted in Great Britain, or Ireland, or who had born Arms in the Service of her Majeſty's or the late King's Enemies, for their returning into theſe Dominions. And Thirdly, A Copy of the Articles of the Capitula- tions of Limerick and Gallway. The next * Day, the Commons reſolv'd to addreſs the Queen, Firſt, " For an Account of all Sums of Money, which had been paid " to the Highland Clans in North Britain, ſince the Year 1688, with the Names of " the reſpective Perſons, to whom any ſuch Sums had been paid, and by whom. " Secondly, For the State of the Gariſons in North Britain, and an Account of what " Arms and Ammunition, had been brought out of North Britain into South Bri- " tain, ſince Michaelmas, 1710. And Thirdly, For Copies of the ſeveral Papers and " Repreſentations, relating to the Gariſons of Jamaica, and the Leeward Iſlands, " which had been ſent over from the reſpective Governors of thoſe Places, and the " Opinion of the Aſſembly, with reſpect to the Forces there.

* April 9. Other Papers called for.

The Commons having ſpent ſome Time, on the Supply, controverted Elections, and other Affairs of leſs Moment, Mr. Winnington, from the Commiſſioners of publick Accounts, preſented † to them a Report, with ſome Obſervations made by them, and a State of the Expence of the late War. This Report related chiefly to " the Abuſes " committed in the cloathing the Army, and the Miſmanagement in diſpoſing of " the Off-Reckonings of Regiments; of which they gave particular (a) Inſtances; and concluded, " That the good Huſbandry, and Oeconomy, ſo much pretended to, " in carrying on the late War, was as defective in theſe Articles, as in any of the " other publick Expences. This was further evinc'd, by an Account of the Cloath- " ings furniſh'd by the Publick, to the Queen's Forces in Spain and Portugal; by " which the Government had diſburſed the Sum of Two Hundred Forty Four Thou- " ſand, Two Hundred Ninety Eight Pounds. Adding, they had reaſon to believe, " that the Contracts in general, purſuant to which that Sum was paid, were not al- " ways made with the greateſt Caution: Beſides which they found, that there yet re- " main'd above Fifty Thouſand Pounds unanſwer'd to the Publick. Then, to give " a View, how heavy the Maintenance of the War was become to England, and " how inſupportable the Continuance of it would have proved, they ſubjoin'd to " their Report, a STATE of the EXPENCE of the LATE WAR, for Twelve Years, " which on the ſeveral Heads (of Forces Abroad, Guards and Gariſons, Arrears, " Hoſpitals, Ordnance, Tranſports, Navy, Victualling, Sick and Wounded, Ma- " rines, and South-Sea Company) they computed at Sixty Five Millions, Eight " Hundred Fifty Three Thouſand, Seven Hundred Ninety Nine Pounds (b). Con- " cluding with ſome Obſervations on the Practice of buying and ſelling Commiſ- " ſions, which had receiv'd ſo great Countenance, as to have a publick Office " erected, for the tranſacting it; on the Grievances of the Sufferers in the Iſlands of " Nevis and St. Chriſtophers; and on a Tranſaction relating to the Cuſtoms in Scot- " land, whereby her Majeſty had been conſiderably defrauded." Several other Papers were, the ſame || Day, laid before the Commons; the moſt remarkable of which was, An Account of the State of the ſeveral TREATIES of Peace, between her Majeſty and her Allies, and France and Spain, with an Account of the Obſtructions her Majeſty had met with, in her Endeavours to make the ſame Univerſal and Compleat; and of what was done relating to the Catalans.

|| April 13. Account of the State of the ſeveral Treaties of Peace, laid before the Commons.

This Account was, undoubtedly, drawn up by the Lord Bolingbroke, who, in order to remove the moſt material, and moſt popular Objections againſt the late Trea- " ties, viz. The giving up the Intereſts of the King of Portugal, and of the Catalans, " did plauſibly and artfully ſuggeſt, " That her Majeſty look'd upon the Peace be- " tween Spain and Portugal, to be as good as concluded: That in the mean while, " her Majeſty had taken the moſt effectual Care of the Intereſts of the King of " Portugal, having given to that Prince, on the 18th of Auguſt, 1713, of her own " Motion, a new Guaranty, whereby the Queen obliged her ſelf to ſecure the Re- " ſtitution, even by Force of Arms, if that ſhould become neceſſary, of any Thing " which might be taken from Portugal, before the Concluſion of the Peace; to pro- " cure to that Crown the Colony of the Sacrament, or in lieu thereof ſuch an Equi- " valent, as the King of Portugal himſelf, ſhould be contented to accept; to obtain " Satisfaction to the Portugueze, for what they claim'd to be due to them, on Ac- " count of their Aſſiento, or Contract with the Crown of Spain; and to ſet on Foot, " after the Peace, an amicable Negotiation, for accommodating the Differences " which had ariſen, concerning ſeveral Eſtates ſituated in Portugal, and claimed by " Subjects of Portugal, reſiding in Spain; and concerning thoſe Spaniſh Ships which " were, about the beginning of the War, ſeized by the Portugueze. " Principles, the Earl of Strafford made a ſolemn Declaration to the Miniſters of " Spain, in February laſt, when he exchanged with them the Inſtruments of Ratifi- " cation of the Treaties between her Majeſty and the Catholick King, That the " Peace which the Queen then ratified, did not diſpenſe with the Obligations which " ſhe lay under to the King of Portugal, as well by her Guaranty lately granted, as " by her defenſive Alliance, made in 1703. As to the Catalans, it was ſhrewdly alledg'd, " That the landing of the Earl of Peterborow in Catalonia, and her " Majeſty's entring into that Part of the War, were in Conſequence of the Sollici- " tations of the Catalans, and other Spaniards, affected to the Houſe of Auſtria; and " that all the Engagements which ſhe gave to theſe People, went no further than " the obtaining from King Charles the Third, a Confirmation of their Rights and " Privileges; and although her Majeſty offer'd, at that Time, to give a Guaranty " for the ſame, and to enter into a Treaty with that People; yet it did not appear " that ſuch a Guaranty was ever given, or, that ſuch a Treaty was ever made. " That notwithſtanding the Treatment the Queen had receiv'd from the Emperor, " and the juſt Provocation ſhe had to leave him to ſtruggle with the Conſequences " of his own Meaſures: Yet, at the end of the Year 1713, her Majeſty ſet a Nego- " tiation on Foot, for the Evacuation of Catalonia, and the Neutrality of Italy. " That her Majeſty's Aim, by the firſt Part of this Treaty, was, to ſecure the Re- " turn of the Emperor, and of the Imperial Troops, and ſince ſhe could no longer " ſupport the Catalans, by her Arms, to provide for them by the Terms of Peace. " That her Majeſty's Aim, in the Second Part, was to leave as little room as poſ- " ſible for France or Spain to attack his Imperial Majeſty, when the Treaties be- " tween her Majeſty and the States-General ſhould be concluded with the Moſt Chri- " ſtian King. That the Queen conſider'd that theſe Treaties, and the Barrier of the " States, would ſecure the Ten Provinces of the Netherlands from any Invaſion; and " by this Convention for a Neutrality in Italy, the Emperor's Territories in that " Country were likewiſe cover'd; ſo that by the Care which Her Majeſty took, " ſince he was determin'd to run the Riſk of continuing ſingle in the War, he " would lye open in no Frontier but that of the Rhine; where, by the ſame Means, " he would be able conſiderably to increaſe his Strength, as well with Draughts out " of Italy, as with the Germans, and other Forces, which were to be tranſported " from Spain. That it was no ſooner than the End of January $17\frac{1}{13}$, that by the " good Offices of her Majeſty's Miniſters at Utrecht, the Imperial and French Ple- " nipotentiaries were brought to meet upon this Negotiation; and in the mean Time, " her Majeſty endeavour'd to induce the Catholick King to facilitate this Matter at " much as poſſible, and particularly on the Head of the Privileges of the Catalans; " in which the Miniſters of France concurr'd with the greateſt Earneſtneſs. But that " it ſoon appear'd, that his Catholick Majeſty, who ſaw the Advantage which the " Conduct of the Imperial Court gave him, would hardly be prevail'd upon to grant " any Thing more than a General Act of Oblivion, and a Reſtitution of Honours " and Eſtates. That on the 14th of March, N. S. 1713, the Convention for the " Neutrality of Italy, and the Evacuation of Catalonia, was executed, and the Article " concerning the Privileges of the Catalans left undetermin'd; a Right being re- " ſerv'd to her Majeſty to inſiſt, whenever the Emperor ſhould treat of Peace, that " thoſe Privileges ſhould be preſerv'd to them; and the Moſt Chriſtian King decla- " ring, that he would concur with the Queen to the ſame End. That in May 1713, " the Treaty of Peace between her Majeſty and the Catholick King was ſign'd provi- " ſionally here, and, in July, definitively at Utrecht; whereby there was not only " an abſolute Amneſty, with a full Poſſeſſion of all their Eſtates and Honours, but " alſo the Privileges of the Caſtilians granted to the Catalans; which Article was, " at leaſt, in this reſpect conſiderable, that the People of Catalonia are thereby enti- " tled to hold any Employments in the Weſt-Indies, or to trade directly thither, " in as full and ample manner, as the People of Caſtile; from which they were for- " merly as much excluded, as any Foreign Nation whatever. That the Preſervation " of their Ancient Privileges was neither granted, nor directly refuſed by this Article; " ſo that the Queen, either when the Peace ſhould come to be treated between their " Imperial and Catholick Majeſties, or on another favourable Occaſion, which might offer " it ſelf, was at Liberty to renew her Applications upon this Head. That in the " mean Time, it was certain, that the Refuſal of the People of this Principality, " as well as the Iſland of Majorca, to ſubmit to the Catholick King, when in Pur- " ſuance of the Treaty of Neutrality, theſe Countries were evacuated by the Em- " peror's Forces; and their obſtinate Reſiſtance ſince that Time, muſt have render'd " the obtaining of their Privileges ſtill more difficult than it was. In ſhort, that " if the ancient Privileges of theſe People, in their full Extent, were not obtain'd, " it muſt be attributed to thoſe, who render'd it unpracticable to treat effectually

" for them, before the withdrawing of the Queen's Forces out of Catalonia; and if " their Condition was become ſince more deſperate, thoſe were only to anſwer for " it, who had encourag'd them not to ſubmit a Second Time to their Prince, with " the Hopes of Relief, which they who gave ſuch Hopes, muſt have known them- " ſelves in no Condition of making good. As to the Treaty with France, after a long Detail of the Negotiation, upon the Overtures made by that Crown in April, 1711, it was, with great Strength of Argument, ſuggeſted, " That by the Conferen- " ces held with Monſieur Buys here, by the Accounts which came from Abroad, and " by the Repreſentations ſome of the Allies made to her Majeſty, it appeared unde- " niably evident, not only that the War was become, on the preſent Foot, abſolutely " impracticable; but alſo that no Alteration could be attempted, either in the Me- " thod of carrying it on, or in the Views towards which it was directed, without " diſſolving at once the Confederacy; and that the Diſpute was in Fact, not whe- " ther a Peace, by which Spain and the Indies would be left to Philip, ſhould be " made; but who ſhould have the making of it? That the real annual Expence of " this Kingdom, amounted to more than Seven Millions; whereas we were not in " a Condition effectually to raiſe near Six Millions in the courſe of a Year; from " hence it follows, that if this Proportion had been continued, about Nine Millions " would have been the true Charge of a Second Year, and about Eleven Millions " that of a Third. That this was the State of our Affairs, whilſt the Houſe of Au- " ſtria contributed nothing but one Regiment, to the War of Spain, little to that of " Italy; had but few Forces, and thoſe entirely unactive, on the Rhine; and ſent " none into the Netherlands, except ſuch as thoſe haraſſed Provinces were obliged " to maintain, and were thereby rendred unable to furniſh Troops, or make the " neceſſary Proviſions for the Operations of the Army; both which they might " otherwiſe have done, and both which they did in an eminent Degree, whilſt they " were under the Government of the preſent King of Spain. That the States-General " bore a conſiderable Burden; but as they had from the Year 1708, ſent no Supplies " of any Kind, either to Portugal, or to Catalonia, and had drawn themſelves almoſt " entirely out of the Spaniſh War; as they furniſhed, in no Proportion, their Quota " for the Sea Service; as they had reduced their joint Contributions with the Queen " in all Payments, to one Third of the whole; and as they were very backward in " anſwering even this ſhare of Expence; ſo the Load of Great Britain came, upon " their Account, as well as upon the Emperor's, to be vaſtly increaſed: As to the " reſt of the Allies, all the Troops which they furniſhed, were maintain'd by the " Queen and the States, except a few, and thoſe almoſt wholly employ'd in cover- " ing their own Frontiers. That in this Situation of Affairs, her Majeſty declared " to the Imperialiſts, and to the Dutch, That if they would not allow France to have " given ſufficient Grounds, for opening the Conferences; if they were deſirous to " carry on the War, and determined to accept of no Terms of Peace, inferior to thoſe " which had been formerly demanded and refus'd; ſhe was, on her Part, ready to con- " cur with them: But that, in Juſtice to her ſelf, and to them, ſhe thought her ſelf " bound to let them know, that ſhe could no longer bear ſo diſproportionate a Bur- " then; that it was evident, that the common Effort muſt be ſtill greater than it " was, or that there would remain no Proſpect of arriving at the Ends which they " propoſed; and that for theſe Reaſons, it would be incumbent upon them, if the " War continued, to increaſe their Expences, whilſt the Queen reduced hers. That " the Miniſters of the States-General were very candid and open upon this Head: " Monſieur Buys aſſerted, that his Maſters had done their utmoſt already, and could " be obliged to no more; many of the other had, on ſeveral Occaſions, declared " their Country unable to ſupport the Charge they were at, another Summer; and " the Penſionary himſelf, in a Deputation of the States, appointed to attend the " Earl of Strafford, in October, 1711, declared, that it was impoſſible to think of " continuing the War another Year; that what from the Emperor, and what from " the Princes of the North, we ſhould be in the utmoſt Danger, ſhould we attempt " to do it; and finally, that they were Traytors to their Country, who were againſt the " Peace. That many Inſtances might be produced, to ſhew that there was at leaſt " as little Reaſon to expect from the Houſe of Auſtria, as from the States-General, " a greater Effort than they had hitherto made: That the Imperial Miniſters con- " feſs'd, that their Maſter expected the Queen ſhould furniſh all the Money, and " that the utmoſt he could do, was to ſend Troops at her Expence; in the ſame " Breath avowing the Emperor's Intention to break the Negotiation of Peace, and to " continue the War 'till Spain was conquered; the entire Monarchy whereof he ex- " pected. That upon the Death of the late Emperor Joſeph, in the beginning of " the Year 1711, the Eyes, not only of the Princes of the Empire, but of all the " Confederates, and of her Majeſty, in the firſt Place, were immediately fixed on " his Brother. And this Event occaſioned a great Alteration in the Counſels of " Europe, and gave a new Turn to the Sentiments of may Princes. That there was " Reaſon to believe, that the Miniſters of Vienna themſelves began to cool, in the " Project of recovering Spain and the Indies: They ſeemed to intend nothing more, " than to get the preſent Emperor into Germany, and to ſecure the Poſſeſſion of Italy " to themſelves. That in Holland, a Partition of the Spaniſh Monarchy, ſeemed al- " moſt the general Scheme; and the Conduct of that Republick, as well as the Con- " feſſion of its Miniſters, ſhewed, that the Project of driving Philip out of Spain, " was look'd upon there to be pure Chimera. That her Majeſty had been acquaint- " ed, that ſome of the Princes of the Empire thought it a Point, which deſerved the " moſt ſerious Reflection; whether they ſhould ſuffer the Imperial and Spaniſh Crowns " to be united on the ſame Head; and whether it might not be proper, in the Ca- " pitulation of the Empire, to inſiſt on the ſeparating of them: That other Mem- " bers of the Grand Alliance, and thoſe the only Two, with whom her Majeſty " had entred into any formal Engagement, for recovering the entire Spaniſh Monar- " chy, repreſented upon the ſame Occaſion, againſt placing this Crown on the Empe- " ror's Head: And it was urged by one of the moſt conſiderable Princes in the Al- " liance, that the Principle upon which he engaged in the War, was now altered; " and that inſtead of fighting, to procure the Spaniſh Monarchy to the Houſe of " Auſtria; his Intereſt, and even his Safety, required that he ſhould fight to prevent " it. That the Caſe therefore ſtood thus: The preſent Emperor, even after his Bro- " ther's Death, and his own Election, would content himſelf with nothing leſs, " than the whole Spaniſh Monarchy, and inſiſted, that the War ſhould be proſecuted " in this View. Of the other Allies, ſome looked on this Proſpect as Chimerical, " others as dangerous; from whence it follows, that to keep the Grand Alliance " united in this Principle, was impracticable; and it muſt be allowed, that to have " altered this Principle, to have changed ſo many Treaties, to have reconciled ſo " many different Intereſts, and to have formed a Syſtem entirely new, in the midſt " of the War, was an Experiment too hazardous to be attempted. That in this Si- " tuation of Affairs, no Time was to be loſt: The Queen knew very well, that " Attempts to open a Treaty with France, ſeparately from her, were made by thoſe " who clamoured the loudeſt againſt her Meaſures; and the preſent Emperor had " thought fit, on board one of her Majeſty's Ships, and by her own Miniſter, to " ſend her a Meſſage of the ſame Nature. She therefore inſiſted with the IMPE- " RIALISTS, and with the DUTCH, that ſhe would be at ſome Certainty, and that " they ſhould comply with her in the Meaſures, either of War or Peace. The War " being become impracticable, as was ſhewn before, the Author of the Account re- " lates what Obſtructions there were, to the carrying on a Treaty of Peace. That " the Principal, and only avowed Diſpute between her Majeſty and the States at this Time, " concern'd the Method of carrying a Negotiation forward. That the States pretended, " that a fair Opportunity would be given to the Miniſters of France, to divide the " Confederates, if they were ſuffered to meet together in a general Congreſs, before " the Eſſential Articles of Peace were ſettled by Specifick Preliminaries: That the " Uſe which had been made of this Method, on a former Occaſion, to evade the " concluding of any Peace, when, according to the Confeſſion of the Dutch Mini- " ſters themſelves, the Differences on which the Allies and France broke off, did not de- " ſerve the Life of a ſingle Soldier, gave no great Encouragement to purſue the ſame " again; beſides which, as the Queen would not take upon her to ſettle the Intereſts of " others, ſo neither would ſhe ſuffer others to determine thoſe of her own Kingdoms; " and if all the Confederates were to aſſemble, in order to adjuſt a Preliminary " Treaty, the Objection made by the States, returned upon them. That in De- " cember, 1711, The States concurred with her Majeſty in fixing the Place and Time of " the Treaty: And if nothing had happened to revive the Spirits of thoſe who were " bent againſt the Peace, it is highly probable, by the little Time which it coſt to " conclude moſt of the Treaties, after the Conferences, that had been interrupted, " were reſumed at Utrecht, and the Allies proceeded in earneſt to negotiate, that " the Treaties of all the Confederates with France, might have been finiſhed, before " the Seaſon of opening the Campaign in 1712: But that before Monſieur BUYS " returned into Holland, or the Conferences could begin, the Efforts were renewed " with the greateſt Vigor, to break off the Negotiation; the Cry againſt a Peace, by " which Spain and the Indies ſhould be left to any Branch of the Houſe of Bourbon, " became louder than ever; and Letters and Memorials were not only delivered, but " printed; and Appeals made againſt her Majeſty's Proceedings to all Europe, and " even to her own Subjects. That on theſe Encouragements, the good Diſpoſitions " towards Peace, received a Check, and ſome of thoſe who had own'd themſelves " againſt the Proſecution of the War, to recover the whole Spaniſh Monarchy to the

" Houſe

" Houſe of Auſtria, joined now, under this very pretence, to break the Meaſures of Peace. That the Treatment which her Majeſty met with at this Time, will appear in the cleareſt Light from this Circumſtance: The Miniſter of the States-General propoſed to her Majeſty's Servants, that conſidering the Difficulties which the Queen lay under, how impoſſible it was to recover by War, or by Treaty, the Spaniſh Monarchy from King Philip, and how impoſſible he apprehended it to be, for her Majeſty to carry on any Negotiation, by which this Monarchy ſhould be left to Philip, he was ready (to extricate her Majeſty from this Dilemma, and to ſcreen her Miniſters in carrying on the Work which they had begun,) in the Name of his Maſters, to preſent a Memorial, by which the Point of obtaining Spain and the Indies, ſhould be given up: Provided he might be aſſured, that the Dutch ſhould have an equal ſhare with her Majeſty's Subjects, in the Aſſiento, which Contract, he ſuppoſed, it was ſtipulated ſhould be made with Great Britain. That from the Cauſes, and by the Steps above-mentioned, was the Diſunion among the Allies arrived to the higheſt Pitch, at the opening of the Conferences in January, $17\frac{11}{12}$, when the ſtricteſt Union amongſt them, was more than ever neceſſary, and when the whole Fruit of thoſe Succeſſes, wherewith God had bleſſed their Cauſe, in the Courſe of the War, depended on it. That they ſent their ſeveral Plenipotentiaries to Utrecht, but it was very apparent, that moſt of them acted on that Maxim, which one of them profeſſed, That giving into the Meaſures of Peace, was the ſureſt way to continue the War. They flattered themſelves, that the Imperial Miniſters, in Conjunction with thoſe of Britain, having, Two Years before, baffled the Deſigns of Holland to make Peace, it would be, at leaſt, as eaſy for the Miniſters of the Emperor, in Conjunction with thoſe of the States-General, to render fruitleſs, at this Time, all her Majeſty's Endeavours to the ſame End. And that after this it would not appear ſurprizing, if the utmoſt Dexterity was exerted, to delay the entering on Buſineſs at Utrecht, and to wait for the Events of the Campaign. Concluding, that from this State of the ſeveral Treaties, between her Majeſty, her Allies, and France and Spain, the Reaſonableneſs of all the Steps her Majeſty had taken, and thoſe Deſigns which had been purſued at firſt, to wreſt the Negotiation out of her Hands, and ſince, to unravel all that had been done, and to throw us into Confuſion, would ſufficiently appear. This Account carried a great Weight, and made a deep Impreſſion on the Generality of the Members.

* April 19. The Commons conſider the State of the Nation, with relation to the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

Two * Days after, the Commons conſider'd the State of the Nation, with regard to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, in a Committee of the whole Houſe, of which Mr. Freeman was choſen Chairman. After the Reading of the ſeveral Papers that had been laid before the Houſe, relating to the Pretender's Removal out of the Duke of Lorrain's Dominions, the Negotiations of Peace, the Demolition of Dunkirk, and Paſſports granted to Perſons Outlaw'd or Attainted; A Motion was made by Sir Edward Knatchbull, and the Queſtion put, " Whether the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe " of Hanover, be in Danger under Her Majeſty's Government?" Mr. Secretary Bromley endeavour'd to prove the Negative, by repreſenting what Her Majeſty had done for ſecuring that Succeſſion, and removing the Pretender from Lorrain. He was anſwer'd by Mr. Walpole; who, with a great deal of Spirit, ſhew'd the Proteſtant Succeſſion to be in Danger, not from Her Majeſty, but from the dubious Conduct of ſome Perſons in high Stations; and therefore inſiſted, That Her Majeſty might not be mention'd in the Queſtion. Mr. Campion having ſpoken in Vindication of the Miniſtry, he was anſwer'd by the Earl of Hertford. The Lord Hinchingbrooke expreſs'd likewiſe his Fears of the Proteſtant Succeſſion being in Danger, from the Encouragement that was given to the Pretender's Friends, and particularly in North Britain; which his Lordſhip had an Opportunity to obſerve, when he was there with the Regiment, in which he had a Troop. After ſome other Speeches, the Court-Party being apprehenſive that the Queſtion would go againſt them, endeavour'd to drop it, by moving, that Mr. Freeman ſhould leave the Chair: Hereupon, Sir Thomas Hanmer, the Speaker, made a memorable Speech, importing, in Subſtance, " That he was ſorry to ſee that Endeavours were uſed to wave that " Queſtion, and ſtop their Mouths: But he was of Opinion, this was the proper, " and, perhaps, the only Time for Patriots to ſpeak. That a great deal of Pains were " taken to ſcreen ſome Perſons, and, in order to that, to make them overlook the " Dangers that threaten'd the Queen, the Nation, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion. That, " for his own Part, he had all the Honour and Reſpect imaginable for Her Ma- " jeſty's Miniſters; but that he ow'd ſtill more to his Country, than to any Miniſter. " ger, and ſo little to make out the contrary, that he could not but believe the " firſt :" And thereupon he took notice of " Sir Patrick Lawleſs being ſuffer'd to " come over, and admitted to an Audience of Her Majeſty." This Speech had a great Influence on all unbiaſs'd and unprejudiced Members; but nevertheleſs, after a warm Debate, that laſted till Nine a Clock in the Evening, it was reſolv'd, by a Majority of Two Hundred and Fifty Six Voices, againſt Two Hundred and Eight; " Firſt, That it was the Opinion of this Committee, That " the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, was in no Danger under Her Ma- " jeſty's Government. Secondly, That the Houſe be mov'd, humbly to addreſs Her " Majeſty, returning the Thanks of the Houſe to Her Majeſty, for the Inſtances ſhe " had us'd for the Removal of the Pretender from the Dominions of the Duke of " Lorrain; and humbly deſiring Her Majeſty to inſiſt upon, and renew her Inſtances " for his ſpeedy Removal from thence." The next * Day, Mr. Freeman reported theſe Two Reſolutions to the Houſe; and the firſt being read a ſecond Time, there aroſe a Debate, in which Mr. Walpole, Mr. Lechmere, and General Stanhope made very ſmart Speeches. Mr. Walpole, among other Things, applauded " the Publick " Spirit the Speaker had ſhewn the Day before; but added, He deſpair'd of ſeeing " Truth and Juſtice prevail; ſince notwithſtanding the Weight of a Perſon of his " known Integrity, Merit, and Eloquence, the Majority of Votes had carry'd it " againſt Reaſon and Argument." General Stanhope endeavour'd to prove the Proteſtant Succeſſion to be in Danger, by this ſingle, but forcible Induction; " That " as 'twas univerſally acknowledg'd it had been the French King's INTENTION, " ſo it was ſtill his INTEREST, and he had it now, more than ever, in his " POWER, to reſtore the PRETENDER." However, the Queſtion being put upon the firſt Reſolution, the ſame was agreed to, without a Diviſion; as was alſo the Second Reſolution.

The Commons vote the Proteſtant Succeſſion not to be in Danger, &c.

On the 17th of April, upon a Meſſage from the Lords, That they had agreed to an Addreſs to Her Majeſty, to which they deſir'd the Concurrence of the Houſe; the ſaid Addreſs was twice read; and, after ſome Debate, it was reſolv'd to preſent Three Addreſſes to Her Majeſty: " Firſt, For the Treaties of Peace and Commerce be- " tween Her Majeſty and the King of Spain, and the Inſtructions given to Her Ma- " jeſty's Ambaſſadors thereupon; together with the Copies of the King of Spain's Ra- " tifications of the ſaid Treaties, and the Preliminaries ſign'd by the Lord Lexington " and the Marquis of Bedmar, at Madrid; and all other Agreements and Stipulati- " ons, made concerning the Commerce between Great Britain and Spain. Secondly, " For an Account what Engagements of Guaranty Her Majeſty has enter'd into, " by Virtue of any Treaty with any Foreign Prince or State, from the Year 1710. " And, Thirdly, An Account what Inſtances had been us'd by Her Majeſty, for the " reſtoring to the Catalans their ancient Privileges, and all Letters relating thereto." And then it was reſolv'd, " To take into further Conſideration the Meſſage, that " Day ſent from the Lords, upon Thurſday next following." After this, the Conſideration of that Part of Her Majeſty's Speech relating to Libels, was further put off to that Day Fortnight: And Mr. Secretary Bromley acquainted the Houſe, That, purſuant to their Addreſs, for the Pretender's ſpeedy Removal from Lorrain, Her Majeſty had been pleaſed to declare, That ſhe would inſiſt upon, and renew her Inſtances, as this Houſe deſired.

Debate about the Lords Addreſs in the H. of Commons, April 17.

Papers call'd for.

The Queen's Anſwer to the Commons Addreſs about the Pretender.

The Commons ſpent the Three next Sittings on controverted Elections, and on Ways and Means; and then, on the 22d of April, took into Conſideration the Meſſage from the Lords before-mention'd; which occaſion'd a warm Debate, from One till Six of the Clock in the Afternoon. The moſt material Objections were raiſed by Mr. Ward, an eminent Merchant, to the Treaties of Commerce; in which many eſſential Points, particularly the Duties on ſeveral Sorts of Goods and Merchandize, were left looſe and undetermin'd, and therefore liable to arbitrary Explanations. Mr. Auditor Foley having anſwer'd him, he was reply'd to by Mr. Horatio Walpole; and the latter was ſupported by Sir Peter King, and John Aiſlabie, Eſq; ; who ſuſpecting which way ſome of the Miniſters were driving, had, ſome Time before, left the Court-Party, and was thereupon * remov'd from his Place of one of the Lords of the Admiralty; and who, on this Occaſion, ſpoke with notable Vehemence againſt the Miniſters, who had made ſuch a precarious Peace. They were anſwer'd by Mr. Campion: And the leading Men among the Whigs plainly perceiving, from the Noiſe and Laughter of their Antagoniſts, that they were ſure of a Majority, gave up the Conteſt, and did not think fit to inſiſt on a Diviſion, which would but expoſe their Weakneſs: Whereupon it was reſolv'd, " That the Houſe did agree " with the Lords in the ſaid Addreſs, to be preſented to Her Majeſty:" And or-

On Saturday, the 24th of April, both Houſes attended Her Majeſty with the ſaid (a) Addreſs; to which they receiv'd ſo gracious an Anſwer, that, upon the Report of it, the Commons reſolv'd to return Her Majeſty their humble Thanks for it. Thus having obtain'd a Parliamentary Sanction to their late Meaſures, the Miniſters thought themſelves ſecure from any future Inquiries. A. D. 1714.

In the mean Time, notwithſtanding the Proceedings and Addreſſes of both Houſes againſt the Chevalier de St. George, his Friends, depending on a ſuperior Power, ſtill endeavour'd to promote his Intereſt, with indefatigable Induſtry. To this Purpoſe, a printed LETTER, written * by Mr. Leſley (a famous Non-juring Clergyman) from Barleduc, in Lorrain, the Pretender's Reſidence, to a Member of Parliament, in London, was openly handed about; containing a particular Account of the State of Affairs, and what Obſervations Mr. Leſley had made ſince his coming there. This Piece begun with a fine Deſcription of the Chevalier's Perſon and Character; " His graceful Mien, Magnanimity of Spirit, " Devotion free from Bigotry, Application to Buſineſs, ready Apprehenſion, " ſound Judgment, and Affability; ſo that none converſed with him, but what " were charm'd with his good Senſe, and Sweetneſs of Temper." - - - - - Then coming cloſe to the main Deſign of this Letter, Mr. Leſley ſaid, " That the Cheva- " lier expreſs'd no Reſentment at the cruel Proceedings of the Parliament, to leave " him no Place to flee unto: But that other Men were aſtoniſh'd, and ſaid, For " what is all this Rage? What has He done? Was it a Crime in Him to be born? If " his Birth was Suppoſititious, it was a good Reaſon, indeed, to bar His Acceſſion to " the Throne; but none to perſecute Him, or ſet a Price on His Head, as was pro- " poſ'd in Parliament, by a rich and powerful Party, to encourage the Aſſaſſination of " Him." He added, " That ſince ſo much depended on his Birth, why was it " not inquir'd into? That the Prince of Orange promis'd it in his Firſt Declara- " tion, and referr'd it to be examin'd in Parliament: But this not having been " done either by Parliament, Court of Judicature, or any other Authority whatever, " it afforded an infallible Demonſtration of the Truth of his BIRTH; ſince, by " the Laws of GOD and Man, every Child that is own'd by both Parents, is to " be received as ſuch, unleſs evident Proof be made to the contrary. That it " was very obvious, why former Parliaments, and in a former Reign, would not " enter into the Examination of his Birth; becauſe they knew the Truth of it, and " that no Proof could be made againſt it: But the falſe Rumours and Suppoſiti- " ons, which were induſtriouſly ſpread abroad concerning it, to make way for the " Prince of Orange, more eaſily to aſcend the Throne, (having ſerved their Turn) " were laid aſide, like Scaffolding, when a Houſe is built. That he hop'd it was " reſerved for this Parliament, to make a full Examination, and to ſet the Na- " tion at Reſt upon this Material Point; if not, the Birth of this Prince was in- " fallibly confirm'd. That there was no Danger herein to his SISTER, who " now reign'd; for none could doubt, but he would be very well pleas'd to make " ſuch a Com-Promiſe with Her, that ſhe might hold the Crown during her " Life; provided his Succeſſion, after Her, were ſettled; and give all the Security " for this that could be deſired, even to put his Perſon into her Hands, if ſhe

(a) The ADDRESS, and ANSWER, were as follow:

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

" WE your Majeſties moſt Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, " and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, beg Leave to expreſs the juſt Senſe which we " have of your Majeſty's Goodneſs to your People, in delivering them by a SAFE, HONOURABLE, " and ADVANTAGEOUS Peace with France and Spain, from the heavy Burthen of a conſuming " Land-War, unequally carry'd on, and become at laſt impracticable. And we do moſt earneſt- " ly intreat your Majeſty, That You will be pleaſed, with the ſame Steadineſs, notwithſtanding " all the Obſtructions which have been, or may be thrown in your Way, to purſue ſuch Mea- " ſures as You ſhall judge neceſſary, for compleating the Settlement of Europe, on the Principles " laid down by your Majeſty, in your moſt Gracious Speech from the Throne.

The QUEEN's ANSWER.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" THE State of Publick Affairs in Europe, as well as the Neceſſities of my own Kingdom, ob- " liged Me to enter into a Negotiation of Peace; and notwithſtanding all Obſtructions and " Difficulties, I have, by the Bleſſing of GOD, brought it to a Happy Concluſion.

" I eſteem this Addreſs as the United Voice of my Affectionate and Loyal Subjects; and I re- " turn you all the heartieſt Thanks, which can be given by a Sovereign, who deſires nothing " more, than to ſee her People ſafe and flouriſhing.

" thought fit: And that would unite both their Intereſts, and render her Reign " more ſecure and comfortable to Her, than it was, or could be otherwiſe. That " if we were afraid of a Popiſh Succeſſor, why did we make the next Succeſſor a " Papiſt? For it was they did it, who baniſh'd him, when an Infant, into a Po- " piſh Country, and paſs'd an Act of Attainder againſt him, if he ſhould return " to be inſtructed in our Religion; and had ſent to all the Proteſtant Courts in Eu- " rope, not to admit him, or to drive him thence if he ſhould come; and had " excluded him from the Crown, without any Reſerve for him, tho' he ſhould be- " come a Proteſtant; and, at the ſame Time, declar'd openly, they would not be- " lieve him, if he ſhould profeſs it: Which Things were ſo irrational, that they " had no tolerable Foundation to ſtand upon. - - - - That the Britiſh Nation had no " Reaſon to be afraid of the Chevalier's introducing Popery and Slavery; ſince he " had neither Foreign Force, nor Alliances; and, if he were upon the Throne, he " muſt be perfectly in the Hands of his People. That as to Religion, he had " promis'd to hear, in due Time and Place, what could be ſaid on that Sub- " ject; which was all that could be expected: But that whatever ſhould be the Iſ- " ſue of his Hearing, as to his own private Judgment, the Church of England " might be no leſs ſecure: For it was always his fix'd Perſwaſion, that the Security " of the Crown, and Church of England, was, next under GOD, in their mutual " Support of each other. And becauſe the greateſt Hurt any King of England can " do to the Church of England, is, putting bad Biſhops upon her; this being a " corrupting the Fountain; Therefore, to avoid all Jealouſies, he was willing, du- " ring his Reign, ſo far to wave his Prerogative in the Nomination of Biſhops, " Deans, and all other Eccleſiaſtical Preferments in the Gift of the Crown: That " Five Biſhops ſhould be appointed, of which the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, for " the Time being, always to be one; Who, upon any Vacancy, might name " Three Perſons to him, of whom he would chuſe one. And the Church of Eng- " land, as by Law Eſtabliſh'd, ſhould be ſecur'd in the ſole Poſſeſſion, not only of " all the Churches, but of the Univerſities, and even Schools. And, as a further " Mark of his Favour, he remitted, during his Time, the Tenths and Firſt-Fruits, " payable by the Biſhops and Clergy to the Crown. That he had inform'd him- " ſelf of paſt Miſcarriages, and knew well the Difference between the Office of a " KING, and a MISSIONARY: That therefore he would concern himſelf " with no Man's Religion; but was reſolv'd to defend that which was Legally Eſta- " bliſh'd, and whoſe Principles are true to Monarchy, and ſafe for Government. That, " for the Satisfaction of the CHURCH of ENGLAND, and his own " RESTORATION, he thought himſelf obliged to do every Thing that was con- " ſiſtent with Conſcience and Honour. That, as an Inſtance of his good Intentions, " he had ſent for Mr. Leſley, to officiate to the Proteſtants in his Family; had cauſed " a Room to be fitted up in his own Houſe, for a Chapel for them; and had taken " out of their Congregation his preſent Secretary of State, and Chief Miniſter." And, in order to diſaffect the People to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, Mr. Leſley ſubjoin'd a ſhrewd Inſinuation, " That the avowed Doctrine of the Illuſtrious Houſe of " HANOVER, was Conſubſtantiation; which was as erroneous, and as contrary " to the Doctrine of the Church of England, as Tranſubſtantiation: And yet no " Proviſion had been made, that when they ſhould come into Great Britain, they " ſhould be of the Communion of the Church of England.

Reaſons for, and againſt the Duke of Cambridge's coming over.

(a) The EXAMINER of April 23. 1714, contains what follows:

" I ſhall not pretend to ſpeculate upon the Motions of this Prince, with whom the Faction have " made ſo free, nor explain thoſe Words in the Preamble of the Duke's Patent, which ſeem to croſs " upon any ſuch early Undertaking as the Whigs pretend is in View: Much leſs will I undertake " to draw Parallels from Hiſtory, or inquire into the Conduct of Princes. It is enough, that the " Proteſtant Succeſſion is neareſt Her Majeſty's Heart: Any other Approaches ſhould ſeem unneceſ- " ſary. Her's is the Toil of calming a ruffled Nation, and compoſing the Minds of a reſtleſs, " uneaſy People; and the Illuſtrious Houſe of HANOVER, her lawful Succeſſors, will reap the " Fruits of her Care. Who would ſet ſail in a Storm; and not rather ſtay till the Paſſage is " ſmooth'd, the general Ferment abated, and Peace at Home more firmly eſtabliſh'd? I have all " along argued in theſe Papers for the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and have endeavour'd to perſwade my " Fellow-Subjects, that this is a Common Concern, in which all of us ought to unite; and that the " Faction, by miſplacing the Publick Securities, and by pretending to engroſs all Zeal for the Suc- " ceſſion to themſelves, and to make it the diſtinguiſhing Badge of One Party only, (and that a very " inconſiderable one) have moſt ſcandalouſly bely'd their Country, and brought as much Detriment " upon

But, it ſeems, neither the Queen, not her Miniſters, were willing to put Things upon that Iſſue : For upon a Report, that the Princeſs Sophia intended to deſire the Queen's Approbation for the Duke of Cambridge's coming into England, her Majeſty, with the Advice of her Cabinet Council, wrote to her Highneſs the following Letter :

MADAM, SISTER, AUNT,

The Queen's Letter to the P. Sophia.

" SInce the Right of Succeſſion to my Kingdoms has been declar'd to belong to " You and your Family, there have always been diſaffected Perſons, who, by " particular Views of their own Intereſt, have enter'd into Meaſures to fix a Prince " of your Blood in my Dominions, even whilſt I am yet living. I never thought " till now that this Project would have gone ſo far, as to have made the leaſt Im- " preſſion on your Mind : But, as I have lately perceiv'd, by publick Rumours " which are induſtriouſly ſpread, that your Electoral Highneſs is come into this " Sentiment ; it is of Importance, with reſpect to the Succeſſion of your Family, " that I ſhould tell you, ſuch a Proceeding will infallibly draw along with it ſome " Conſequences, that will be dangerous to that Succeſſion it ſelf ; which is not ſecure " any other ways, than as the Prince, who actually wears the Crown, maintains " her Authority and Prerogative. There are here (ſuch is our Misfortune) a great " many People that are ſeditiouſly diſpoſed : So I leave you to judge what Tumults " they may be able to raiſe, if they ſhould have a Pretext to begin a Commotion. " I perſwade my ſelf, therefore, You will never conſent that the leaſt Thing ſhould " be done, that may diſturb the Repoſe of Me, or my Subjects.

" Open your ſelf to me with the ſame Freedom I do to you, and propoſe what- " ever you think may contribute to the Security of the Succeſſion ; I will come into " it with Zeal, provided that it do not derogate from my Dignity, which I am re- " ſolv'd to maintain. I am, with a great deal of Affection, &c.

Death of the moſt excellent Princeſs SOPHIA.

There was a Fourth Letter, to wit, from the Queen to the Elector of Brunſwick, but written in a Style ſo unbecoming the one and the other, that the Perſons to whom theſe Letters were tranſmitted hither, did not think fit to give Copies of it. It was generally believed, That the Receipt of thoſe ungrateful Letters, anticipated the Death of the Princeſs Sophia; which happen'd on the 28th of May, O. S. or 8th of June, N. S. For though this moſt excellent Princeſs was, like mellow Fruit, gather'd to her Royal Anceſtors, in the Fulneſs of Years, and had almoſt reach'd the utmoſt Line of human Life, yet thoſe Letters caſt ſuch a Damp upon her Spirits, that as ſhe was, in the Evening, walking in the Gardens at Herenhauſen, ſhe was ſeiz'd with a Fit of an Apoplexy, and died in the Arms of the Electoral Princeſs, and the Counteſs of Pickenbourg, who were talking with her, before any other Perſon could come up to her Aſſiſtance. She was the Fourth and youngeſt Daughter of Frederick, King of Bohemia, and Elizabeth of England, (only Daughter of King James the Firſt,) and was born at the Hague, in Holland, on the Third of October,

Her Pedigree Marriage, Iſſue and Character.

October, 1630; ſo that ſhe was Eighty Three Years, Eight Months, and Five Days Old, when ſhe expired. In the Year 1658, ſhe was married to Erneſt-Auguſt, Duke of Brunſwick and Luneburgh, Fourth and youngeſt Son to George, Duke of Luneburgh-Zell; which Duke Erneſt-Auguſt, in 1662, ſucceeded Count Francis of Wirtenberg, in the Biſhoprick of Oſnabrugh; in 1680, on the Death of his eldeſt Brother, John Frederick, Duke of Hanover, he ſuccedeed him alſo in that Dignity; and in the Year 1692, he receiv'd the Inveſtiture of the Electoral Dignity of Brunſwick Luneburgh. This noble and potent Prince, died the 23d of January, 1698, having had Iſſue by his Royal Conſort the late Princeſs SOPHIA, Six Sons, viz. GEORGE LEWIS, Frederick-Auguſt, Maximilian-William, Charles-Philip, Chriſtian and Erneſt-Auguſt; and one Daughter, Sophia-Dorothy, who in the Year 1684, became the Second Wife of Frederick the Third, King of Pruſſia. The late Princeſs Sophia, was bleſſed with a ſtrong, healthy Conſtitution; and endow'd with admirable natural and acquir'd Abilities; ſhe was perfect Miſtreſs of the Low-Dutch, German, Engliſh, French and Italian Languages; and had a Genius equally turn'd for Converſation or Buſineſs, which rendred her not only the Ornament and Delight of her Court, but qualify'd her to manage and ſupport the higheſt Intereſts. The Greatneſs of her Soul, bore exact Proportion to her Princely Birth, and the Station which ſhe fill'd; but withal, was temper'd with ſo much Sweetneſs and Affability, that the Duty of thoſe below her, became all one with their Pleaſure. No one ever gave Liberties with a better Choice, or could act without Reſerve, to greater Advantage. She behaved in both Parts to Admiration, as a Daughter of England, and a Mother of Germany. Her Wit was ſprightly, curious and ſurprizing; her Judgment ſolid and penetrating, founded upon the nobleſt Maxims from Reading and Study, explain'd by Obſervation and Experience. Nothing could exceed the Beauties and Advantages of her Converſation, but her Letters: Both were eaſy, entertaining and uſeful. She had a Fund of Happineſs within her ſelf, which gave a Reliſh to her Retirements: But her Care in Government and Oeconomy, ſhew'd the juſt Senſe ſhe had of being born for the Good of others. Her Piety was exemplary without Affectation; her Sentiments of Religion worthy and noble, neither perplex'd with Doubts, nor enſlav'd by Superſtition. The Neighbourhood of the Jeſuits, ſerv'd only to confirm her in the Opinion ſhe had of the Cheats and impious Corruptions of their Church and Order: But though bred up in the Reformed Religion, according to the Calvinian Diſcipline; yet ſhe ever had a great Eſteem for the Liturgy and Conſtitution of the Church of England. She hated every Thing that was ſowre, malicious, and ill-natur'd, to ſuch a Degree, that none could be more ſedulous to oppoſe, or more active to ſuppreſs, every little Quarrel and Party that grew up, or ripen'd, where ſhe had any Influence. A Life thus ſpent, needed not a Minute's Warning to prepare for Immortality.

A. D. 1714.

To reſume the Thread of Hiſtory: Upon a Report, induſtriouſly ſpread by the Agents of the Chevalier de St. George, "That the Duke of Cambridge might have "come over, if the Elector, his Father, would have let him; but that his Electoral "Highneſs did not think the Crown of Great Britain worth accepting:" They who watch'd here for the Proteſtant Succeſſion, thought fit to have the Three Letters above-mentioned, diſpers'd in Print; which gave ſo great Offence to the Men in Power, That both the Publiſher, and the Perſon who ſent him thoſe Letters, were taken up by Warrants from the Lord Bolingbroke, and bound over to appear at the Queen's-Bench Bar. About this very Time, Baron de Bothmer arriv'd * in London, with the Character of Envoy Extraordinary from the Elector of Hanover, and on the 29th of June, had a private Audience of the Queen, to notify the Death of the Princeſs Sophia; whereupon an Order was made in Council, for Mourning, and for praying for the Elector of Brunſwick, in the Liturgy of the Church of England.

* Jan 25. Baron de Bothmer arrives in London.

It was then confidently reported, that in the Conſultation (hinted at before) wherein it was debated, whether, or no, the Queen ſhould invite over the Duke of Cambridge? The Lord Treaſurer, the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Privy-Seal, and another Privy-Counſellor, were for the Affirmative. But that the Lord Bolingbroke having inſiſted on the Negative, and carried that material Point, he reſolv'd to puſh his Point, and to uſe all poſſible Means to defeat the Proteſtant Succeſſion; and with that View, broke all Meaſures with the Treaſurer, and united himſelf more cloſely with the High-Church Party. Be that as it will, the further Diſcouragement, and (if poſſible) the utter Ruin of the Diſſenters, being thought a neceſſary Step to bring the preſent Scheme to bear, on the 12th of May, upon a Motion made by Sir William Wyndham, the Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, and Eleventh Sections, of the Statute of the Thirteenth and 14th Year of King Charles the Second, intituled, An Act for the Uniformity of publick Prayers, and Adminiſtration of Sacraments, &c. were read: After which it was order'd, That Leave be given to bring in a Bill, to prevent the Growth

Bill to prevent the Growth of Schiſm, order'd to be brought in.

A. D. 1714.

Growth of Schiſm, and for the further Security of the Church of England, as by Law Eſtabliſh'd; and, that Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Cholmondley, Mr. Comptroller, Sir Arthur Kay, Mr. Campion, Lord Down, Mr. Finch, Mr. Gore, Mr. Secretary Bromley, Mr. Windſor, Sir William Whitlock, Dr. Paſke, and Mr. Aldworth, do prepare and bring in the ſame. After this, it was reſolv'd to addreſs the Queen, for a Copy of the Inſtructions given to the Earl of Strafford, "with relation to the "Declaration made by him, on the Part of her Majeſty, to the Miniſters of the ſe-"veral Allies, who had any Troops in her Majeſty's Pay, before the Ceſſation of "Arms:" Which Addreſs was generally look'd upon to be made, in order to find a Pretence, not to pay the Arrears due to the Troops of the Elector of Hanover, and lately demanded on the Part of his Electoral Highneſs; becauſe upon the Ceſſation of Arms, thoſe Troops refus'd to obey the Duke of Ormond, and rather choſe to follow Prince Eugene, with the reſt of the Confederates.

Addreſs intended againſt paying the Arrears to the Troops of Hanover.

A few Days after, the Bill to prevent the Growth of SCHISM, &c. was brought in *, read the firſt Time, and order'd to a Second Reading; which was done accordingly, on the 24th of May, and the Bill committed to a Grand Committee. On the other hand, in order to ſupport and ſtrengthen the Epiſcopal, and, which was the ſame, the Jacobite Party in Scotland, they who promoted the Bill againſt the Preſbyterians, moved † for Leave to bring in a Bill, for veſting the Revenues and Rents which did belong to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops of that Part of Great Britain, call'd Scotland, in her Majeſty, her Heirs, and Succeſſors, to be by them applied to the Support and Maintenance of the Epiſcopal Clergy there. The Whig Members immediately perceiv'd the Drift of ſuch a Bill; and in order to render it, in ſome Meaſure, ineffectual, propoſed this Addition, viz. (after the Words, Epiſcopal Clergy there) who ſhall pray for her Majeſty, and the Princeſs Sophia, in expreſs Words, and conform to the Liturgy of the Church of England: Which the Court Party not having the Confidence to oppoſe, the Bill was order'd to be brought in accordingly. At the ſame Time, it was reſolv'd to addreſs her Majeſty, "for an Account what Rents and "Revenues, formerly belonging to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops in Scotland, were "now veſted in the Crown; what Grants had been made out of the ſame, to what "Uſes, and upon what Conſiderations." But it is to be obſerv'd, that moſt of the Revenues belonging to the Epiſcopal Clergy in Scotland, having, at the Revolution, been forfeited, by the Incumbents refuſing to ſwear Allegiance to King William and Queen Mary; and having been given to the Preſbyterians, the reſuming of them would have been attended with great Difficulties; which, together with the Clauſe above-mention'd, occaſion'd the dropping of that Bill.

† May 22.

Bill order'd for reſuming the Epiſcopal Revenues in Scotland.

On the 26th of May, the Commons, in a Committee of the whole Houſe, went through the Bill, to prevent the Growth of SCHISM, &c. and made ſeveral Amendments to it, which being, the next Day, reported, were agreed to; and, upon a Motion, that the Bill be ingroſs'd, the ſame was carried by a Majority of Two Hundred Twenty Two Voices, againſt One Hundred and Sixteen. Five Days after ||, the ſaid Ingroſſed Bill being read the Third Time, and a Motion made, that it ſhould paſs; the ſame occaſioned a very warm, and long Debate. Mr. Hampden, Mr. Robert Walpole, General Stanhope, Mr. Lechmere, Sir Joſeph Jekyll, and Sir Peter King, exerted their Abilities and Eloquences in oppoſing this Bill; repreſenting, in general, "That it look'd more like a Decree of JULIAN the APOSTATE, "than a Law enacted by a Proteſtant Parliament; ſince it tended to raiſe as "great a Perſecution againſt our Proteſtant Brethren, as either the Primitive Chriſtians ever ſuffer'd from the Heathen Emperors; or the Proteſtants from Popery, and the Inquiſition." Mr. Stanhope ſhew'd, in particular, the ill Conſequences of this Law, as it would of Courſe occaſion Foreign Education, which, on the one Hand, would drain the Kingdom of vaſt Sums of Money; and, which was ſtill worſe, fill the tender Minds of young Men with Prejudices againſt their own Country. He illuſtrated and ſtrengthened his Argument, by the Example of the Engliſh Popiſh Seminaries Abroad, which, he ſaid, were ſo pernicious to Great Britain, that inſtead of making new Laws to encourage Foreign Education, he could wiſh thoſe already in Force againſt Papiſts, were mitigated; and that they ſhould be allow'd a certain Number of Schools. The chief Stickers for the Bill were, Mr. Bromley, Principal Secretary of State; Sir William Wyndham, Mr. Hungerford, and Mr. Collier: Mr. Bromley maintain'd, That the Diſſenters were equally dangerous, both to Church and State: However, if the Members, who ſpoke in their Behalf, would have this Bill drop, he would readily conſent to it, provided another Bill were brought in, to incapacitate them either to ſit in that Houſe, or to vote in Elections of Members of Parliament. Mr. Walpole anſwer'd this Speech with a great deal of ſolid Reaſoning: After which, Mr. Hungerford recapitulated, and, in his uſual ludicrous way, faintly labour'd to confute what had been offer'd by the Whig Members. Mr. Collier, who brought up the Rear, did ſtill worſe: This Man, formerly a petty-fogging Attorney, had, by a Wile, got the Directorſhip of the Play-Houſe in Drury-Lane; and, afterwards, by his bold, intruding Aſſurance, the Acquaintance and Intimacy of the Lord Bolingbroke; who, from a Buffoon, and an obſequious Companion in his nocturnal Debauches, thought fit to advance him to a brighter Station. Hereupon, at his Lordſhip's earneſt Requeſt, Mr. Collier (tho' hardly worth Thirty Pounds a Year) was, by the Duke of Beaufort's Intereſt, brought into the Houſe of Commons; where he took this ſolemn Occaſion to ſignalize his Zeal for the Cauſe he was to ſerve. With this Intention, he back'd Mr. Hungerford; and, in order to expoſe the Diſſenters, he deſir'd Leave to read to the Houſe, a Collection of Abſurdities and impious Expreſſions, which he pretended to have cull'd out of their Writings. After the Reading of Part of his impertinent Legend, he fell on a Paſſage taken out of the nonſenſical Rhapſodies of the late Mr. Hickeringill, Miniſter at Colcheſter; wherein, Mr. Collier ſaid, he averr'd, that our BLESSED SAVIOUR was a Son of a W——. At theſe ſhocking Expreſſions, Mr. Bromley ſtopt him ſhort, ſaying, Such impious Words ought not to be repeated in that Aſſembly. Some other Members obſerv'd, on the other hand, Firſt, That Mr. Hickeringill was not a Diſſenting Teacher, but a Miniſter of the Church of England: And, Secondly, That he was known to be crack-brain'd; ſo that his Extravagancies and Blaſphemies proved nothing againſt any Set of Men; much leſs againſt the Diſſenters. Mr. Lechmere ſpoke againſt the Bill, with a great deal of Vehemence; and, among other Things, took notice, "That "the Indulgence granted to Proteſtant Diſſenters ſince the Revolution, had been ſo far "from hurting the Church, that it had rather enlarg'd its Pale: And that it was "notorious, that ſome * Perſons, who had been bred among Schiſmaticks, were, or, "at leaſt, pretended to be, the ſtrongeſt Supports of the Eſtabliſh'd Church." Several other Speeches were made for and againſt the Bill; but whoever got the better in Point of Reaſoning, it was carry'd by a Majority of Two Hundred and Thirty Seven Voices, againſt One Hundred and Twenty Six, That the Bill do paſs; and Sir William Wyndham, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who brought it into the Houſe, was order'd to carry it to the Lords. We may take notice, that the Publick were divided in their Opinions, whether the Lord Treaſurer was for, or againſt this Bill? They who held the Negative, ſuppoſed, That there having been of late ſome Miſunderſtanding between him and the Lord Bolingbroke, the latter, in order to ſtrengthen his Party, was willing to ſacrifice the Diſſenters, whom the Lord Treaſurer ſtill entertain'd with fair Promiſes: But others look'd upon the apparent Coldneſs between thoſe Two Great Men, either as Chimerical, or as a Political Artifice to amuſe and divide their Joint Enemies. Be that as it will, it was obſerv'd, that the Lord Harley, Thomas Harley, Eſq; (lately return'd from Hanover) and, in ſhort, all the Lord Treaſurer's Friends, except his own Brother, the Auditor, voted for the Bill; which, the * next Day, was carry'd to the Houſe of Lords.

* Meaning the Lord Treaſurer, the Lord Chancellor, and Lord Bolingbroke.

* June 2.

Their Lordſhips thought fit to proceed with the matureſt Deliberation, in an Affair of ſo great Moment; and therefore put off the firſt Reading of the Bill till Friday, the Fourth of June; when the Lords, in and about London, were ſummon'd to attend. In the mean Time, the Preſbyterians, Quakers, and Foreign Proteſtants, were not idle; for, beſides their private Sollicitations, they repreſented in Print the Hardſhips and Inconveniencies of ſuch a Law. On the † Day appointed, the Lords (in a full Houſe) read the Bill the firſt Time; and the Lord Bolingbroke ſaid, "It "was a Bill of the laſt Importance, ſince it concern'd the Security of the Church of "England, the beſt and firmeſt Support of the Monarchy; both which, all good "Men, and, in particular, that Auguſt Aſſembly, who derive their Luſtre from, and "are neareſt the Throne, ought to have moſt at Heart:" And therefore, his Lordſhip moved, that it ſhould be read a Second Time. Hereupon, the Lord Cowper ſaid, "No Man was more ready than himſelf to do every Thing, that ſhould ap-"pear neceſſary to attain the ſeeming Intention of this Bill; viz. The preventing "the Growth of Schiſm, and the further ſecuring of the Church of England: But that "the enacting Part would be ſo far from anſwering the Title of it, that, in his O-"pinion, it would have a quite contrary Effect, and prove equally pernicious to "Church and State." His Lordſhip enlarg'd on thoſe Two Heads, in a Diſcourſe of near Half an Hour; and, among other Things, repreſented, "That inſtead of "preventing Schiſm, and enlarging the Pale of the Church, this Bill tended to in-"troduce Ignorance, and its inſeparable Attendants, Superſtition and Irreligion." To this Purpoſe, his Lordſhip took notice, "That in many Country-Towns, Reading, "Writing, and Grammar-Schools were chiefly ſupported by the Diſſenters; not only "for the Inſtruction and Benefit of their own Children, but likewiſe of thoſe of "poor Churchmen; ſo that the ſuppreſſing of thoſe Schools would, in ſome Places, "ſuppreſs the Reading of the Holy Scriptures." On the other hand, his Lordſhip obſerv'd, Subſtance of the Lord Cowper's Speech.

A. D. 1714.

obſerv'd, " That this Bill ſtruck at the ancient Rights and Prerogative of the " Houſe of Peers; which, by the Conſtitution, is the Supreme Court of Judica- " ture, and the Dernier Reſort in all Cauſes; whereas, by this Bill, the Juſtices of " the Peace were empower'd, finally to hear, and determine the Offences againſt the ſame. " My Lords, added he, I would rather enlarge, than abridge the Power of Juſtices " of the Peace, were it but to encourage Gentlemen to take upon them an Office ſo " troubleſome, and, at the ſame Time, ſo unprofitable; unleſs it be, perhaps, in " the County of Middleſex: But, My Lords, I ſhall never conſent to give up the " Birth-Rights, and ancient Privileges, of this Auguſt Aſſembly, of which I have the " Honour to be a Member.

The Earl of Wharton's Speech againſt the Bill.

The Earl of Wharton ſpoke afterwards, with his uſual manly Eloquence, and poignant Wit: He ſaid, " He was agreeably ſurprized to ſee, that ſome Men of " Pleaſure were, on a ſudden, become ſo Religious, as to ſet up for Patrons of the " Church: But he could not but wonder, that Perſons who had been educated in " Diſſenting Academies, whom he could point at, and whoſe Tutors he could name, " ſhould appear the moſt forward in ſuppreſſing them. That this was but an indif- " ferent Return for the Benefit the Publick had receiv'd from thoſe Schools, which " had bred thoſe Great Men, who had made ſo glorious a Peace, and Treaties that exe- " cuted themſelves; who had obtain'd ſo great Advantages for our Commerce, and " who had paid the Publick Debts, without any further Charge to the Nation: So that " he could ſee no Reaſon there was to ſuppreſs thoſe Academies; unleſs it were an " Apprehenſion, that they might ſtill produce greater Genius's, that ſhould drown " the Merits and Abilities of thoſe Great Men. My Lords, continued the Earl of " Wharton, to be ſerious, 'tis no leſs melancholy than ſurprizing, That, at a Time " when the Court of France proſecutes the Deſign they have long ſince laid, to " extirpate our Holy Religion; when not only ſecret Practices are uſed, to impoſe " a Popiſh Pretender on theſe Realms, but Men publickly inliſted for his Service; " it is melancholy and ſurprizing, I ſay, that, at this very Time, a Bill ſhould be " brought in, which cannot but tend to divide Proteſtants, and, conſequently, to " weaken their Intereſt, and haſten their Ruin. But then, the Wonder will ceaſe, " if we conſider what Madmen were the Contrivers and Promoters of this Bill." The Lord Wharton excepted, in particular, againſt the Word SCHISM, with which the Frontiſpiece of this Bill was ſet off; and ſaid, " It was ſomewhat ſtrange, they " ſhould call Schiſm in England, what's the Eſtabliſh'd Religion in Scotland; and there- " fore, if the Lords, who repreſented the Nobility of that Part of Great Bri- " tain, were for this Bill, he hop'd that, in order to be even with us, and conſiſtent " with themſelves, they would move for the bringing in another Bill, to prevent " the Growth of SCHISM in their own Country." He ſaid alſo, on another Occa- ſion, (for his Lordſhip ſpoke more than once) " That both in this Bill, and in the " Speeches of thoſe who declar'd for it, ſeveral Laws were recited and alledg'd; " but that there was a Law, that had not yet been mention'd: I expected, added " he, that Venerable Bench, [turning to the Biſhops] would have put us in mind of " it; but ſince they are pleaſed to be ſilent in this Debate, I will my ſelf tell them, " that 'tis the Law of the Goſpel, TO DO UNTO OTHERS, AS WE WOULD BE " DONE UNTO.

Speeches for the Bill.

The Earls of Abingdon and Angleſey ſpoke afterwards for the Bill; and the latter ſaid, among other Things, " That the Diſſenters were equally dangerous both to " Church and State: That they were irreconcileable Enemies to the Eſtabliſh'd Church; " which they had ſufficiently manifeſted in the late King James the Second's Reign, " when, in order to obtain a Toleration, they join'd themſelves with the Papiſts; " and that they had render'd themſelves unworthy of the Indulgence the Church of " England granted them at the Revolution, by endeavouring to ingroſs the Education " of Youth; for which Purpoſe, they had ſet up Schools and Academies in moſt Cities " and Towns in the Kingdom, to the great Detriment of the Univerſities, and Dan- " ger of the Eſtabliſh'd Church.

The Lord Halifax's Speech.

The Lord Halifax ſpoke on the other ſide, and, among other Things, urged, " That the very bringing in of this Bill was injurious to the Queen; and he could " not believe, Her Majeſty would ever give her Royal Aſſent to ſuch a Law, " after the ſolemn Declaration ſhe had made from the Throne, That ſhe would " inviolably maintain the Toleration; which this Bill viſibly ſtruck at. That Her " Majeſty made it the Glory of her Reign, to follow the Steps of Queen ELIZA- " BETH, who had not only entertain'd and protected the Reform'd Walloons, who " took Sanctuary in her Dominions, from the Spaniſh Inquiſition; but had likewiſe " allow'd them the Publick Exerciſe of their Religion, and cauſed a Clauſe in their " Favour to be inſerted in the Act of Uniformity: That, by that means, that " Wiſe and Glorious QUEEN had vaſtly increaſed the Wealth of the Realm;

" the

" the Walloons having ſettled here the Woollen Manufactures, which are the beſt " Branch of the National Trade. That the Protection and Encouragement, the " late King William and Queen Mary, and her preſent Majeſty, had given to the " French Refugees, had proved no leſs advantageous to Great Britain: And there- " fore, it would be a Piece of Barbarity, to make an Act, which ſhould debar " many French Proteſtants of Means of ſubſiſting, either by keeping Publick " Schools, or Teaching in private Families; eſpecially conſidering their late hard " Uſage, the Government not having, for above Three Years paſt, paid them any " Part of the Fifteen Thouſand Pounds per Annum, allow'd by Parliament, in " the Civil Liſt, towards the Maintenance of their Miniſters and Poor." His Lord- ſhip concluded, with taking notice of the " fatal Conſequences of perſecuting the " Diſſenters in King Charles the Firſt's Reign, which kindled a furious and unnatural " Civil War, and ended in the total Overthrow of Church and State, and in the King's " Parricide.

The Lord Viſcount Townſhend ſpoke on the ſame ſide; and, among other Arguments, repreſented the ill Effects of Perſecution in general: He ſaid, to that Purpoſe, " That he had liv'd a long Time in Holland, and had obſerv'd, that the " Wealth and Strength of that Great and Powerful Commonwealth, lie in the Num- " ber of its Inhabitants: And, at the ſame Time, he was perſuaded, that if the " States ſhould cauſe the Schools of any one Sect, tolerated in the United Provinces, " to be ſhut up, they would ſoon be as thin of People as Sweden, or Spain; whereas " they now ſwarm with Inhabitants.

The Lord Townſhend's Speech againſt the Bill.

The Lord North and Grey, who ſpoke for the Bill, maintain'd the general Aſſertion of his Party, viz. That the Church was in Danger from the Growth of Schiſmaticks. The Earl of Nottingham ſaid thereupon, " He own'd he had formerly " been of Opinion, that the Occaſional Conformity of Diſſenters was dangerous to the " Eſtabliſh'd Church; and therefore, he ever promoted the Bill to prevent it: But " that the Church having now that Security, he believed her ſafe, and out of Dan- " ger; and therefore he thought himſelf, in Conſcience, obliged to oppoſe ſo bar- " barous a Law as this, which tended to deprive Parents of their Natural Right of " Educating their own Children. He added, He had obſerv'd, both from Hiſto- " ry, and his own Experience, That all the Perſecutions that had been raiſed in " England againſt Schiſmaticks, originally proceeded from, and tended to Favouring " Popery." His Lordſhip particularly excepted againſt that Part of the Bill, which enacts, That any Perſon, who ſhould keep any publick or private School, or inſtruct any Youth as Tutor, ſhould have a Licenſe of the reſpective Archbiſhop, or Biſhop of the Place, &c. " My Lords, ſaid he, I have many Children; and I know not whether " GOD Almighty will vouchſafe to let me live, to give them the Educa- " tion I could wiſh they had: Therefore, my Lords, I own, I tremble when I " think, that a certain Divine, who is hardly ſuſpected of being a Chriſtian, [mean- " ing Dr. Swift] is in a fair way of being a Biſhop; and may, one Day, give Li- " cenſes to thoſe, who ſhall be intruſted with the Inſtruction of Youth." Some other Lords made Speeches for and againſt the Bill: But the Lord Treaſurer contented himſelf with ſaying, That he had not yet conſider'd of it; but when he had, he would vote according as it ſhould appear to him, to be either for the Good, or Detriment of his Country: And therefore, he was for reading the Bill a Second Time; which was agreed to, without dividing, and put off to the Monday following.

The E. of Nottingham's Speech.

The Lord Treaſurer's ambiguous Speech.

After this, the Preſbyterians preſented a Petition, praying that they might be heard by their Council againſt the Bill; but the ſame was rejected by a Majority of Seventy two Votes, againſt Sixty ſix. It was obſerv'd, That, on this Occaſion, the Earl of Powlet, the Lord Foley, the Lord Manſel, and ſome other Friends of the Lord Treaſurer, voted with the Whig Lords, for allowing the ſaid Petition; and that the Lord Treaſurer himſelf went out of the Houſe, that he might not be obliged to declare on either ſide; which ſtrengthen'd their Opinion, who thought the Bill to be levell'd againſt his Lordſhip.

Petition of the Presbyterians rejected.

On Monday, the 7th of June, the Lords read the ſaid Bill a Second Time, and committed it for the Wedneſday following: After which, their Lordſhips took into Conſideration, the Caſe of the Dutch and French Proteſtant Churches above-menti- on'd; and after a ſmall Debate, it was carried, without dividing, That a Clauſe ſhould be inſerted in the Bill in favour of thoſe Churches. On the 9th of June, their Lordſhips, in a Committee of the whole Houſe, of which the Lord Archbiſhop of York was choſen Chairman, took the ſaid Bill into Conſideration, and examin'd the ſame Paragraph by Paragraph, from One in the Afternoon, 'till Eight in the Evening. The Biſhop of London having ſuggeſted, " That the Diſſenters had made " this Bill neceſſary, by their Endeavours to propagate their SCHISM, and to " draw the Children of Churchmen to their Schools and Academies:" The Lord

A Clauſe order'd in Favour of the Dutch and Fr. Churches.

The Lords make ſeveral Amendments to the Bill.

A. D. 1714.

" Halifax anſwer'd, " That what they did, was with the Knowledge and Conſent " of the Parents, who, in many Places, had not ſufficient Means to educate their " own Children:" And his Lordſhip took from thence Occaſion to move, " That " ſince this Bill was occaſion'd, as was ſuggeſted, by the Diſſenters endeavouring to " ingroſs the Education of the Youth of both Perſuaſions, they might be allow'd " Schools to inſtruct their own Children." Which Motion being form'd into a Queſtion, was debated for near Three Hours. The Lords Cowper and Halifax, the Earl of Sunderland, and ſome other Peers, made ſeveral Speeches for the Affirmative: But the Lord Bolingbroke, the Earl of Abingdon, and the Lord Chancellor, inſiſted on the Negative, which was, at laſt, carried by Sixty Two Votes, againſt Forty Eight. After this, it was moved, That Diſſenters might, at leaſt, be ſuffer'd to have School-Miſtreſſes, to teach their Children to read; which, after a Debate of about half an Hour, was carried without dividing: As was alſo a Clauſe, That this Act ſhould not extend to any Perſon, who ſhould inſtruct Youth in Reading, Writing, Arithmetick, or any Part of Mathematical Learning, that relates to Navigation, or any Mechanical Art only. Then their Lordſhips examin'd that Part of the Bill, whereby the Conviction of Offenders againſt this Act, was left to the Juſtices of the Peace; and after a warm Debate, it was carried by a Majority of Fifty Nine Votes, againſt Fifty Four, that the Conviction ſhould be in the ordinary Courſe of Juſtice, viz. upon an Information, Preſentment, or Indictment, in any of her Majeſty's Courts of Record at Weſtminſter, or at the Aſſizes, or before Juſtices of Oyer and Terminer. The Court Party finding by this laſt Diviſion, that they loſt conſiderable Ground; and being apprehenſive that other Amendments would be made, which would render the Bill altogether uſeleſs, moved, that the Chairman leave the Chair, in order to adjourn; but though the contrary Party, at firſt, oppoſed it; yet, after ſome Debate, upon the Penalties to be inflicted on the Offenders, both Parties being equally tir'd, the Houſe adjourn'd to the next Day.

Penalties in the Bill fix'd.

Accordingly on Thurſday, the 10th of June, the Lords, in a Committee of the whole Houſe, reſumed the Debate about the Penalties, and fix'd the ſame to Three Months Impriſonment; after which it was moved, and agreed, That Perſons aggrieved, might appeal from Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures, as in Caſes of ordinary Juriſdiction. A Clauſe was afterwards propoſed, and carried, to exempt from the Penalties of this Act, any Tutor, who ſhall be employ'd by any Nobleman, or Noblewoman, to teach in their Families, provided ſuch Tutor do, in every Reſpect, qualify himſelf according to this Act, except only in that of taking a Licenſe from the Biſhop. Tho' there was no Diviſions upon theſe Queſtions, yet the Debate laſted 'till Six in the Evening. The next * Day, their Lordſhips, ſtill in a Grand Committee, conſider'd further of the ſaid Bill; and the Earl of Angleſey moved, That a Clauſe might be inſerted in it, to extend this Act to Ireland: Which, after ſome Debate, was carried in the Affirmative, by the Majority of one Voice only; after which it was ordered, that the Amendments made to the Bill, ſhould be reported to the Houſe the Monday following. Accordingly, on the 14th of June, the Archbiſhop of York made the ſaid Report; and ſevere Speeches were made againſt the Clauſe to extend this Bill to Ireland; particularly by the Duke of Shrewſbury, Lord Lieutenant of that Kingdom, who being juſt returned from thence, took, on that critical Day, his Seat in the Houſe: But the Queſtion being put, it was carried by Fifty Seven Votes, againſt Fifty One, that the ſaid Clauſe ſhould ſtand; and ordered that the Bill, with the other Amendments, be ingroſs'd. The next Day, the Bill was read the Third Time, and after a ſmall Debate, it was carried by Seventy Nine Votes, againſt Seventy one, that it ſhould paſs: But the following Peers enter'd and ſign'd a Proteſt againſt it, viz. the Dukes of Somerſet, Bolton, Grafton, Devonſhire, Schomberg, and † Argyle; the Marquis of Dorcheſter; the Earls of Wharton, Sunderland, Dorſet, Carliſle, Orford, Derby, Lincoln, Nottingham, Radnor, and Torrington; the Lords Viſcounts Townſhend and Longueville; the Lords Somers, Halifax, Cowper, Rockingham, Haverſham, Cornwallis, and Foley; and the Biſhops of Ely, Bangor, St. Aſaph, Landaff and Lincoln.

* June 11.

The Bill paſs'd the Houſe of Lords, with Amendments. Several Peers proteſt againſt it.

† As Earl of Greenwich.

The Commons put off the Conſideration of the Amendments made by the Lords, 'till the 23d of June, when the ſame were read, and occaſion'd a ſmall Debate; Mr. Lechmere and Mr. Walpole, among the reſt, repreſented, " That ſince the Pro- " teſtant Diſſenters of Ireland, were made liable to the Penalties of this Bill, it " were but juſt, either to inſert a Clauſe in it, or to bring in another Bill, to make " them enjoy the Benefit of the Toleration Act, that was paſt in England, in the " laſt Reign? But Sir William Wyndham, and Mr. Campion, ſaid thereupon, That if Leave were given to bring in ſuch a Bill, they hoped they ſhould have Leave alſo to bring in another, to incapacitate Diſſenters from voting in Elections for Parliament Men: Upon which that Matter dropp'd. On the other hand, General Stanhope propos'd, " That " the

" the Tutors in the Families of Members of the Houſe of Commons, might be put " on the ſame Foot with thoſe who taught in the Families of a Nobleman, or No- " blewoman: It being reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that the Members of that Houſe, ma- " ny of whom were of Noble Extraction, had as great a Concern as the Lords, for " the Education of their Children; and an equal Right to take Care of their Inſtru- " ction." Several Members of both Parties, were of Mr. Stanhope's Opinion: But Mr. Hungerford was very plain, and repreſented, That the leaſt Amendment now made in the Houſe, might occaſion the Loſs of the Bill: Which had ſuch a Weight with thoſe who promoted it, that the Queſtion being put, it was carried by a Majority of One Hundred Sixty Eight Votes, againſt Ninety Eight, that the Commons agreed to the Lords Amendments. On the 25th of June, the ſaid Bill, (a) with ſeveral others, receiv'd the Royal Sanction, by Commiſſion: But it is obſervable, that the very Day on which it was to take * Place, the Queen departed this Life; which Accident broke all the Meaſures of thoſe who had promoted that Law, and rendred it, in a Manner, ineffectual.

The Commons agree to the Lords Amendments.

The ſaid Bill paſs'd, with ſeveral others, June 25.

* Auguſt 1.

On the 5th of May, the Queen removed from St. James's, to her Palace at Kenſington, in Appearance, pretty well in Health: But having, the next Day, in the Evening, felt a Shivering, her Phyſicians thought fit, that ſhe ſhould immediately come back to St. James's, where ſhe was, for ſome Time, detain'd in her Chamber, by an Impoſtumation in one of her Legs. The Duke of Shrewſbury having, (as was hinted before) early Notice of the dangerous Condition the Queen was in, was very deſirous to be in England; though, on the other hand, his Grace was loth to leave the Government of Ireland in their Hands, whom he knew inclined to favour the Pretender's Agents, who ſtill continued inliſting (b) Men for his Service. But, all Things conſider'd, his Grace judg'd his Preſence more neceſſary at London, than in Dublin, and thereupon came over about the beginning of June. Finding thoſe about the Queen, jarring and disjointed, his Grace reſolv'd to act a cautious and reſerv'd Part; and not to ſide with either of the contending Parties: But, as ſoon as a proper Occaſion (which he judg'd could not be far off) offer'd it ſelf, to put himſelf at the Head of the Well-affected to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, who, indeed, were no leſs ſtrengthen'd by his Grace's Arrival, at this Critical Juncture, than the Lord Bolingbroke's Intereſt was weaken'd, by the Death of the Duke of Beaufort, which happen'd ſome Days † before.

The Queen again indiſpos'd.

The Duke of Shrewsbury comes over.

† May 24. The Duke of Beaufort dies. See the Appendix.

Towards the end of May, the Marquis de Trivié, Ambaſſador in Ordinary from the new King of Sicily, made ‖ his publick Entry; but it was the 8th of June, before the Queen was in a Condition to admit him to a publick Audience, in which his Excellency made the following remarkable Speech:

‖ May 25. The Sicilian Ambaſſador's publick Entry, and Audience. His Speech to the Queen.

MADAM,

' YOUR Majeſty's Eminent Virtues, whoſe preſent Brightneſs will not fail " being tranſmitted to Poſterity, together with the Memory of the great " Events, to which they have ſo much contributed, afford juſt Matter of Applauſe " and Veneration to all the World. Every one is forced to admire the ſhining Ex- " ploits of your Arms, almoſt ever Victorious, in the Defence of your Allies; and,

(a) This Act enjoins, That no Perſon in Great Britain or Wales, ſhall keep any publick or private School, or Seminary, or teach or inſtruct Youth, as Tutor or Schoolmaſter, that has not firſt ſuperſcribed the Declaration to conform to the Church of England, and has obtained Licenſe from the reſpective Dioceſan, or Ordinary of the Place, or upon Failure of ſo doing, may be committed to Priſon, without Bail or Mainprize. And that no ſuch Licenſe ſhall be granted, before the Party produces a Certificate, of his having receiv'd the Sacrament, according to the Communion of the Church of England, in ſome Pariſh-Church, within a Year before obtaining ſuch Licenſe, and hath ſuperſcribed the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy.

That if any Perſon, having complied with theſe Points, ſhall knowingly, or willingly reſort to any Conventicle, or be preſent in any Aſſembly, where the Queen is not prayed for, ſhould be liable to the Penalty of this Act, and from thenceforth be incapable to keep any School, or Seminary, or inſtruct any Youth, as Tutor, or Schoolmaſter. And if any Perſon teaches any other Catechiſm, than what is ſet forth in the Common-Prayer, his Licenſe ſhall be thenceforth void, and he be liable to the Penalties of the Act; but no Perſon to be puniſhed Twice for the ſame Fact. Any Perſon convicted by this Act, conforming to the Church for one Year, without having been preſent at any Conventicle, ſhall be again capacitated. This Act to be conſtrued to extend to Ireland.

(b) On the 14th of May, Information being brought to the Duke of Shrewsbury, that about One Hundred and Fifty Men, liſted for the Pretender's Service, were at the Hill of Health, near Dublin, waiting to go on Shipboard for France, ſome Conſtables, with a File of Muſqueteers, were ſent thither, who took Twenty Four of them, and brought them to Dublin, where they were committed to Priſon, in order to be try'd for High-Treaſon. On the 26th of June, John Rily, Alexander Bourk, and Martin Carrol, were executed for it at Stephen's-Green: And about the beginning of July, Twenty One Perſons more were try'd and condemn'd for the ſame Crime.

" yet more the Magnanimity, and Superiority, which inclin'd you to ſtop their Pro-
" greſs, as ſoon as the Hopes of a good and ſolid Peace, made way for the commen" dable Project of giving Repoſe to Europe, and Eaſe to your People.

" The King, my Maſter, who, in moſt eſſential Reſpects, is attach'd to all that " Concerns your Majeſty, lies under a ſtronger Obligation, than any other Sovereign
" to congratulate your Majeſty on the Immortal Glory, which ſo diſintereſted, and
" ſo magnanimous a Conduct, ſecures to you for ever. 'Tis to that Conduct he " partly owes both the Honour of having happily ſuſtain'd the Extremities of a " heavy conſuming War, in favour of the Common Cauſe, and all the Advantages
" your Majeſty thought juſt to procure to him by the Peace. Theſe could not be " expected, but from the powerful Aſſiſtance of your Majeſty, who being ſeconded
" by the Efforts of a Warlike and Wealthy Nation, purſues with ſo good Succeſs,
" the heroick Maxim, of adding to your own Security, by taking Care of that
" of others; and who know how to intereſt your Neighbours and Allies, in the Proſ-
" perity of England, by the conſtant Diſpoſition your Majeſty ſhews, on all Occaſi-
" ons, to contribute towards their Happineſs.

" Theſe Conſiderations add to the Univerſal Admiration, and to the particular " Motives the King has to congratulate with your Majeſty upon all the great and " wonderful Things that have happen'd in your Glorious Reign, the deepeſt and " livelieſt Gratitude for the Benefits he ſtands indebted for to your Majeſty. He " has honour'd me with the Character of his Ambaſſador in Ordinary to your Ma-
" jeſty, in order to give you the moſt ſincere, and moſt reſpectful Proofs of it. I am " commanded to aſſure your Majeſty, that both the Dominions preſerved by your " Care, and thoſe newly acquired, will be equally employ'd, at your Majeſty's Plea-
" ſure, towards the good Succeſs of your juſt Deſigns, and the Advancement of your " Glory. The Ties of Blood, the mutual Relation of Intereſts, and the conſidera-
" ble Obligations the King has to your Majeſty, are ſure Pledges of thoſe Aſſu-

" will more and more engage you to employ the moſt powerful Means, that are in " your Diſpoſal, towards the ſtrengthning of your moſt Glorious Work: And not " to ſuffer either the Firmneſs with which the King my Maſter ſeconded your Ma-

" or the entire Confidence he ever had in your prudent Direction for the Settlement
" of the Peace, to be deprived of the Advantages of which your Majeſty thought
" them worthy. In Expectation of this natural Conſequence of your Majeſty's ſo-
" lid Friendſhip, whoſe Continuance the King ſhall ever be ſtudious to deſerve, by
" the moſt inviolable Devotion, his Breaſt glows with the moſt ardent Wiſhes for
" the important Preſervation of your Majeſty's Royal Perſon, and the Accompliſh-
" ment of all that can give your Majeſty any Satisfaction.

The Queen's Anſwer.

The Queen's Anſwer to this Speech, was in Subſtance, That what her Majeſty had done for the King of Sicily, was entirely owing to his Merit, and the great and important Services he had done the Common Cauſe in the late War. That ſhe hoped this would be a Means to promote the mutual Intereſts of the Two Crowns, and to unite them in the ſtricteſt Bonds of Friendſhip: Of which his Sicilian Majeſty had, on his Part, given her Majeſty an early Pledge, by this Embaſſy, and the Choice of his Ambaſſador. Two Days after, the Queen finding her ſelf ſomewhat better, removed from St. James's to Kenſington.

About this Time, upon Information given to the Earl of Wharton, that Two Iriſh Officers, Hugh and William Kelly, were liſting Men for the Pretender, in London and Weſtminſter, his Lordſhip carried his Evidence to the Lord Chief Juſtice Parker, upon whoſe Warrant, William Kelly was ſeiz'd at Graveſend, with Five Men inliſted; as Hugh Kelly was, a few Days after, at Deal, with a Paſs from the Earl of Middleton, Secretary of State to the Chevalier. This Affair having made a great Noiſe, and raiſed a juſt Alarm, the Queen's Miniſters could not avoid taking Notice of thoſe audacious and treaſonable Practices; and thereupon a Proclamation was iſſued out, for apprehending the Pretender, whenever he ſhould Land, or attempt to Land, in Great Britain, and promiſing a Reward of Five Thouſand Pounds, for that Service. The next * Day, Mr. Freeman having made a Motion in the Houſe of Commons, for an Addreſs, " acknowledging her Majeſty's Concern for the Proteſtant " Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, by iſſuing ſo ſeaſonably the ſaid Pro-" clamation, &c. He was ſeconded by Mr. Auditor Harley, the Treaſurer's Brother; and ſupported by the Earl of Hertford: But the latter added, " That the Five Thouſand Pounds, mention'd in the Queen's Proclamation, " was too ſmall a Recompence for ſo important a Service: And therefore moved, for an Addition to the Addreſs, viz. " That this Houſe would chearfully aid and aſſiſt her Majeſty, by granting the Sum of a Hundred Thouſand Pounds, as a further

Proclamation for a Reward of 5000 l. for apprehending the Pretender, dated June the 21ſt, and publiſh'd June 23.

* June 24.

The Commons vote an Addreſs of Thanks, and a further Reward of 100000 l.

A. D. 1714.

" Reward to any who ſhould perform ſo great a Service to her Majeſty, and her " Kingdoms. This was oppoſed by Mr. Secretary Bromley, Sir William Wyndham, and Mr. Campion; who ſuggeſted, " That the promiſing a Reward, ſo far beyond " what was mention'd in the Queen's Proclamation, would be a ſort of Reflection " on her Majeſty: But this Objection being exploded, the Addreſs was unanimouſly carried; and, Four Days * after, preſented by the whole Houſe to the Queen, who told them, That the hearty Concern they ſhew'd in it, for the Proteſtant Succeſſion, was very agreeable to her: And ſhe hoped their Concurrence would have the deſired Effect, in removing Jealouſies, and quieting the Minds of her good Subjects.

* June 24.

The Queen's Anſwer to it.

Nor were the Lords, on this Occaſion, leſs forward than the Commons, in ſhewing their Zeal and Concern for the Proteſtant Succeſſion: For on the 24th of June, the Earl of Nottingham moved for an Addreſs of Thanks for the Proclamation againſt the Pretender, and was ſeconded by the Lord Halifax. The Earl of Wharton, who likewiſe back'd the Motion, holding the Queen's Proclamation in his Hand, did moſt pathetically lament her Majeſty's owning that her Endeavours to remove the Pretender from Lorrain, had been ineffectual. " Unhappy Princeſs, ſaid he, how " much is her Condition alter'd! Will Poſterity believe, that ſo great a Queen, who " had reduced the exorbitant Power of France, given a King to Spain, and whoſe " very Miniſters have made the Emperor, and the States-General, to tremble, ſhould " yet want Power to make ſo petty, ſo inconſiderable a Prince, as the Duke of Lor- " rain, comply with her juſt Requeſt, of his removing out of his Dominions, the " Pretender to her Crown?" None of the Peers ſpoke againſt the Earl of Nottingham's Motion, ſo that it was unanimouſly carried, and the Addreſs being immediately drawn up, and agreed to, was, the next † Day, preſented to her Majeſty, who told their Lordſhips, They might be aſſured ſhe ſhould continue to do whatever ſhe judg'd neceſſary for the ſecuring our Religion, the Liberty of her People, and for putting an End to the vain Hopes of the Pretender.

Proceedings of the Lords againſt the Pretender.

† June 25.

The Lord Bolingbroke being come into the Houſe of Peers, juſt after the Addreſs, before-mentioned, was voted, appear'd ſomewhat ſurpriz'd at that Reſolution, and ſaid, " There was a more effectual way to ſecure the Succeſſion in the Houſe of " Hanover. Some Members expreſſing thereupon their Deſires, that he would propoſe it to the Houſe, his Lordſhip propoſed a Bill, to make it High-Treaſon for any Perſon to liſt, or to be liſted into the Pretender's Service. My Lord Halifax repreſented thereupon, " That ſuch a Bill was altogether needleſs, both the Pretender, and all his Adherents, and Abettors, being already attainted of High-Treaſon: " However, he ſhould be glad ſuch a Bill were brought in; becauſe, with ſome Al- " terations, it might be made a very good one." Hereupon the Bill was brought in, ‖ read the firſt Time; and, on the 26th of June, the Houſe of Peers went into a Committee of the whole Houſe, upon the ſaid Bill, and choſe the Lord Bolingbroke Chairman. The Lords Halifax, Townſhend, Cowper, Somers and Wharton, made it their Buſineſs to ſhew, " That the Pretender was inconſiderable of himſelf; " and not to be fear'd, but ſo far forth as he was countenanced and protected by the " French King, whoſe Intereſt, and conſtant Deſign was, to impoſe him upon theſe " Realms." And therefore they moved, and it was agreed, That the Title of the Bill ſhould be, to prevent the Liſting her Majeſty's Subjects to ſerve as Soldiers, without her Majeſty's Licenſe; and that it ſhould be High-Treaſon to liſt, or be liſted, to ſerve any Foreign Prince, State or Potentate, without a Licenſe under the Sign Manual of her Majeſty, her Heirs or Succeſſors. Moreover, the following Proviſo was mov'd, and agreed to; viz. That no Licenſe ſhould be effectual, to exempt any Perſon from the Penalties of this Act, who ſhould liſt, or cauſe to be liſted into the Service of the French King, until after the ſaid French King ſhould have diſbanded, and diſmiſs'd, all the Regiments, Troops, or Companies of Soldiers, which he had in his Service, conſiſting of the Natural born Subjects of the Crown of Great Britain: This Act to continue in Force for Three Years. The Amendments made to this Bill were reported, and agreed to by the Houſe, on the 28th of June, and the next Day the Bill was ſent to the Commons, who gave it their Concurrence, without any Amendments. This, and other Proviſions againſt the Pretender, ſeem'd the more neceſſary, becauſe his Friends were, by this Time, grown to that Pitch of Audaciouſneſs, as publickly to aſſert his Right, and to drink his Health. To this Purpoſe we may obſerve, That on the 24th of June, above a Hundred Iriſh Roman Catholicks had a Feaſt at the Sun-Tavern in the Strand, of which the Lord Fingal was choſen Steward; and to which Gentlemen were admitted by a printed Ticket, in which was the Image of a Pope, or Popiſh Saint, treading Hereſy under Foot.

Debates in the Houſe of Lords, about the Bill to prevent the Liſting her Majeſty's Subjects, &c.

‖ June 25.

Great Meeting of the Pretender's Friends, June 24.

On the 2d of July, the Lords took into Conſideration the Trade to Spain and the Weſt-Indies, and the Earl of Nottingham made it plainly appear, that by Reaſon of the Diſcouragements to which that Trade was ſubjected by the Explanations of the Debates in the Lords Houſe, about the Spaniſh Trade.

A. D. 1714.

Third, Fifth and Eighth Articles of the Treaty of Navigation and Commerce between Great Britain and Spain, (which Explanations were made at Madrid, after ſigning of the Treaty at Utrecht) it was impoſſible for our Merchants to carry on that Trade without certain Loſs. This was confirm'd by the Teſtimony of Sir William Hodges, and of about Thirty more eminent Merchants, who being call'd into the Houſe, unanimouſly averr'd, that unleſs the Explanations of the Three Articles, before-mention'd, were reſcinded, they could not carry on their Commerce, without loſing Twenty, or Twenty Five per Cent. It was obſerv'd, That the Lord High-Treaſurer join'd with the Lords, who inſiſted on the Hearing of the Spaniſh Merchants; which was ſtrenuouſly oppoſed by the Lord Bolingbroke: But, after a long Debate, it was reſolv'd to addreſs the Queen, for all the Papers relating to the Negotiation of the Treaty of Commerce with Spain; with the Names of the Perſons who adviſed her Majeſty to that Treaty. Hereupon the Queen ſent an Anſwer, "That being given to underſtand, "that the Three Explanatory Articles of the Treaty of Commerce with Spain, were "not detrimental to the Trade of her Subjects, ſhe had conſented to their being ra-"tified with the ſaid Treaty." The Queen making no mention of the Perſons who had adviſ'd her to ratify thoſe Explanatory Articles, the coming at the Knowledge of whom, was the chief Deſign of the Lords Addreſs, ſeveral Members excepted againſt that Anſwer, as unſatisfactory: And among the reſt, the Earl of Wharton, and the Lord Halifax repreſented, "That if ſo little Regard was ſhewn to "the Addreſſes and Applications of that Auguſt Aſſembly to the Sovereign, they "had no Buſineſs in that Houſe, and moved that a Repreſentation be made to her Majeſty, to lay before her the inſuperable Difficulties, that attended the Spaniſh Trade, on the Foot of the late Treaty: Which was agreed to. It was alſo moved, That the Houſe ſhould inſiſt on her Majeſty's Naming the Perſons who adviſed her to ratify the ſaid Three Explanatory Articles; but the Courtiers warded off that Blow, which was chiefly levell'd at the Lord Bolingbroke, and his Agent, Arthur Moore.

* July 6. The next * Day, the Lords proceeded to the Conſideration of the Spaniſh Trade, and to the Examination of the Commiſſioners of Trade and Plantations. The Earl of Wharton ſaid, ironically, He did not doubt one of thoſe Gentlemen could make it appear, that the Treaty of Commerce with Spain was very advantageous: Which was meant of Mr. Arthur Moore, who had the chief Management of that Affair, and who contradicted himſelf in his Anſwers to ſeveral Queſtions that were aſk'd him by the Lord Cowper, about the Three Explanatory Articles in Queſtion. This was aggravated by the Confeſſion of the other Commiſſioners, particularly of Robert Monkton, Eſq; who declared, That Mr. Moore only read curſorily to them the ſaid Articles, without giving them Time to examine the ſame: Beſides which, Mr. Popple, their Secretary, depoſed, That Mr. Moore had ſhewn him a Letter, in French, from Monſieur Orry, directed to Don Arturio Moro, importing in Subſtance, "That he "muſt not expect the Two Thouſand Louis d' Or per Annum, that had been pro-"mis'd him, unleſs he got the Three Explanatory Articles ratified. The Lords came to no Reſolution about that Affair; but, the next † Day, at a general Court of the South-Sea Company, upon a full Hearing of a Complaint of Captain Johnſon, it was reſolv'd, Firſt, "That Arthur Moore, Eſq; while a Director of this Compa-"ny, was privy to, and encouraged a Deſign of carrying on a clandeſtine Trade, to "the Prejudice of this Corporation, contrary to his Oath, and in breach of the "Truſt repoſed in him. Secondly, That the ſaid Arthur Moore, Eſq; for ſuch his "breach of Truſt, be declared incapable of being a Director of, or having any "other Employment in this Company." Which Cenſuremade a great Noiſe, and was highly reſented by the Lord Bolingbroke.

† July 7 Cenſure put on Mr. Arthur Moore, by the South Sea Company.

‖ July 8. The next ‖ Day, the Houſe of Lords conſider'd further of the Trade with Spain, particularly in relation to the Aſſiento; and it appear'd, by the Confeſſion of Mr. Lowndes, Secretary, and Mr. Taylor, firſt Clerk to the Lord High-Treaſurer, That they were only Nominal Aſſignees for the Quarter Part of the Aſſiento Contract reſerv'd for Her Majeſty; and that ſome Perſons, to them unknown, (but who were ſtrongly ſuſpected to be the Lord Bolingbroke, the Lady Maſham, and Mr. Arthur Moore) were to have the Benefit of it. The Lord Cowper having repreſented, "That the Uncertainty and Suſpence, in which the South-Sea Company had a long "Time been kept, whether Her Majeſty would retain to her ſelf, or give to the "Company, the Quarter Part of the Aſſiento Contract therein reſerv'd to her, had "been the principal Obſtruction to the Company's carrying on that Trade." The Earl of Wharton moved, "That an Addreſs be preſented to Her Majeſty, that ſhe "would be graciouſly pleaſed to give to the South-Sea Company, not only the Quar-"ter Part of the Aſſiento Contract, reſerv'd to Her Majeſty, but alſo the Seven and "a Half per Cent. granted to Manuel Manaſſes Gilligan, Eſq; and any other Profits "ariſing from the ſaid Contract:" But the Queſtion being put thereupon, it was carry'd in the Negative, by Fifty Five Voices, againſt Forty Three. After this, the Earl of Angleſey moved, and it was reſolv'd, by Fifty Six Votes, againſt Forty, to "preſent an Addreſs, to return the Thanks of the Houſe, for Her Majeſty's "having ſo generouſly given not only Licenſes for Two Ships, of Five Hundred "Tuns each, and the Aſſiento Contract; but alſo the Quarter Part, which Her Ma- "jeſty was pleaſed, at firſt, to reſerve to her ſelf; and that ſhe would be pleaſed, "that ſuch other Advantages which were, or might be, veſted in Her Majeſty, "might be diſpoſed of for the Uſe of the Publick." This Day's Debate took up the Lords till Nine of the Clock in the Evening, ſo that they had no Time, as ſome Whig Lords deſign'd it, to proceed to the Cenſure of Mr. Moore.

A. D. 1714.

The Lords addreſs the Queen about the Aſſiento.

The next * Day, Her Majeſty's Anſwer to their Lordſhips Addreſs was reported; viz. That Her Majeſty had always had a great Conſideration for the Advice of the Houſe. And as to the Particulars deſired, Her Majeſty would diſpoſe of them, as ſhe ſhould judge beſt for the Service. The latter Part of this Anſwer was very ill reliſh'd by the Whig Lords; and ſome Members took that Occaſion to complain of Her Majeſty's Silence, in relation to the Perſons who had adviſed her to ratify the Three Explanatory Articles: But the Lottery-Bill being ready for the Royal Aſſent, Her Majeſty came that very Day to the Houſe of Peers, which put an End to that ungrateful Debate. After the paſſing of ſeveral publick and private Acts, the Queen made the following Speech to both Houſes:

* July 9.

Acts paſs'd.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

"THE Progreſs which has been made in Publick Buſineſs, and the Seaſon of "the Year, render it both convenient and neceſſary, that I ſhould put an End "to this Seſſion.

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

"I return you hearty Thanks for all your good Services to Me, and to your "Country, and particularly for the Supplies you have given Me, as well to defray "the Expences of the current Year, as towards the Diſcharge of the National "Debts.

"In our preſent Circumſtances it could not be expected, that a full Proviſion "ſhould be made on both theſe Heads.

"What you have granted, ſhall be laid out with the beſt Huſbandry, and to the "greateſt Advantage.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

"I hope early in the Winter to meet you again, and to find you in ſuch a Tem- "per, as is neceſſary for the real Improvement of our Commerce, and of all the "other Advantages of Peace.

"My chief Concern is, to preſerve to you, and to your Poſterity, our Holy Re- "ligion, and the Liberty of my Subjects; and to ſecure the preſent and future "Tranquillity of my Kingdoms. But I muſt tell you plainly, that theſe deſirea- "ble Ends can never be attain'd, unleſs you bring the ſame Diſpoſitions on your "Parts; unleſs all groundleſs Jealouſies, which create and foment Diviſions amongſt "you, be laid aſide; and unleſs you ſhew the ſame Regard for my juſt Preroga- "tive, and for the Honour of my Government, as I have always expreſs'd for the "Rights of my People.

After this Speech, the Lord High Chancellor, by the Queen's Command, prorogued the Parliament to the 10th of Auguſt next. About this Time, Sir John Gibſon, Deputy-Governor of Portſmouth, like a vigilant Officer, ſent up to the Secretary of State an Information he had receiv'd, of great Preparations then making at Havre de Grace, for an Imbarkation of Troops, which he apprehended to be in order to invade the Kingdom, and bring in the Pretender: And, at the ſame Time, he repreſented how unprovided he was, both with Men and warlike Stores, to defend that important Place, in Caſe of a ſudden Attack: But no Notice was taken either of his Information, or Repreſentation.

The Parliament prorogued.

Sir J. Gibſon repreſents the ill Condition of Portſmouth.

Not many Days after the Riſing of the Parliament, the Jars among the Miniſters broke out into an open Rupture. The Treaſurer, ever ſince he receiv'd the Staff, had kept to himſelf the main Secret, and principal Direction of Domeſtick Affairs, and the Diſpoſal of moſt Places of Profit; and by the Credit and Intereſt of his High Poſt, and Favour with the Queen, had procur'd illuſtrious (a) Alliances for his Children, brought vaſt Riches into his Family, and advanc'd all his Relations: Whilſt the Weight and Fatigue of Foreign Affairs lay on the Lord Bolingbroke; who, as he was leſs circumſpect in the Proſecution of bold Meaſures, than the Treaſurer, had therefore the largeſt Share of the Publick Odium, without any other Advantage than the Profits of his Office, moſt of which he laviſh'd away in riotous Pleaſures. Being a Man of excellent Parts, and great Penetration, he could not but be ſenſible of his own Merit, and impatient of Dependance, and unequal Uſage: And thereupon, he had frequent warm Expoſtulations with the Prime Miniſter; who thinking himſelf ſecure in the Queen's Favour, and in his great Intereſt with the Parliament, ſneer'd, with Unconcern, at his Complaints; which ſtill enrag'd the more the fiery Secretary. Their private Diſputes would often have come to an open Quarrel, had not either the indulgent, good-natur'd Queen, aſſiſted by the Lord Chancellor, and the Lady Maſham, as often reconciled them; or, which was, perhaps, more prevailing with them than the Queen's Commands, had not their Confederacy in the late Counſels, made them ſuſpend their mutual Hatred, to conſult their common Safety: But as ſoon as the Danger was over, by the Parliament's ſolemn Approbation of the Peace, it appear'd that there was an irreconcileable Rivalſhip and Enmity between them; and that the one would bear no Equal, nor the other be longer a Second. Before this laſt Struggle, the Treaſurer, either finding his Intereſt declining at Court, or deſpairing of the Queen's Life, and apprehending the Conſequences of the late Steps, bethought himſelf of a timely Retreat, and, in order to that, endeavour'd to reconcile himſelf with the Whigs. Hereupon, he try'd to gain the Friendſhip of the Lord Cowper, who had the greateſt Weight amongſt them; and, with that View, procured him to be choſen Umpire between his Son, the Lord Harley, and the Lord Pelham, in a Controverſy about the Inheritance of the late Duke of Newcaſtle. But, it ſeems, the Lord Cowper contented himſelf with arbitrating the Matter, according to the ſtricteſt Rules of Equity; and, with doing Juſtice to the Son, without eſpouſing the Intereſt of the Father. On the other hand, the Treaſurer expected to be ſtrongly ſupported by the Duke of Shrewſbury, who, by his Integrity and Virtue, and conſummate Wiſdom, had ever maintain'd himſelf in the Eſteem, both of the Sovereign, and of the Publick; and whoſe late Behaviour in Ireland, had wonderfully endear'd him to the well-affected to the Hanoverian Succeſſion; but his Grace juſtly reſenting the Neglect of the Miniſters while he was in Dublin, was very unconcern'd about them, when he came to London; and rather inflam'd, than moderated their Differences, by complaining to the Queen of ſome Orders that had been ſent him, which he thought inconſiſtent with Her Majeſty's and the Nation's Service. Notwithſtanding theſe Diſappointments, the ſanguine Treaſurer form'd the Deſign of removing his Competitor, as the beſt Means to approve his Affection to the Proteſtant Succeſſor; and thereupon he ſet Mr. Robert Monkton againſt Mr. Arthur Moore, (the Lord Bolingbroke's Creature) who narrowly eſcaped a Cenſure in the Houſe of Peers, in which the Treaſurer hop'd the Secretary might have been involv'd. But, in this very Inſtance, the Treaſurer found he had loſt conſiderable Ground at Court; the Queen having thought fit, at the Lord Bolingbroke's Deſire, to put a ſudden Stop to that Inquiry: And it appear'd ſoon after, that what by his ſuperior Intereſt with Lady Maſham; what by the Aſſiſtance of the Lord Chancellor; what by his humouring the Queen's natural Inclination, and boldly purſuing the Meaſures ſhe had enter'd upon; the Secretary entirely ruin'd his Rival in Her Majeſty's Favour and Confidence.

Whilſt the Court was in this Ferment, which viſibly prognoſticated an approaching Change in the Miniſtry, the Lord Chancellor took * Leave of the Queen for a few Days, and went down to his Country-Seat for ſome Refreſhment, intending, from thence, to have attended the Queen at Windſor; whither ſhe reckon'd to go, on Tueſday the 27th of July. But, in the mean Time, ſomething happen'd, that retarded the Queen's Departure from Kenſington, and haſten'd the Treaſurer's Diſgrace. Some pretend, that the Lord Bolingbroke had, and gave the Queen, Intelligence of the Earl of Oxford's inviting the Duke of Marlborough to come over; (for which Purpoſe, his Grace was, indeed, arrived † at Oſtend;) and of the Treaſurer's private Conferences with ſeveral Whig Lords: Others, that he was ſuſpected of diſcovering the Queen's Counſels to the Court of Hanover, and even of putting them upon demanding a Writ for the Duke of Cambridge: Others, again, that he was both againſt the Scheme of New-Modelling the Army, and the Project of a new Offenſive and Defenſive League between the Crowns of Great Britain, France, Spain, Sweden and Sicily: And others ſtill, That the Queen was extream angry at his preſuming to ſend Orders to Ireland, without conſulting with her or the Council: And that thereupon the Duke of Shrewſbury inſiſted on his Removal, which the Duke of Marlborough had made a previous Condition of his Return to England. But all theſe are mere Conjectures, on which no more Streſs can be laid, than as they will, in time, appear to have ſome Foundation of Truth. Be that as it will, on Tueſday, the 20th of July, the Lord Chancellor was ſent for to Court, in all haſte; and the next Day, was in cloſe Conference with the Queen, and the Lord Bolingbroke, after which it was generally reported, that the Treaſurer would be ſpeedily removed. It was ſaid, at the ſame Time, that to ſoften the Blow, the Queen deſign'd to beſtow on him an Annual Penſion of Five Thouſand Pounds for Life, with the Title of Duke of Newcaſtle; and, upon his Recommendation, to give the Title of Earl of Clare to the Lord Pelham: But, contrary to his own, and, indeed, the general Expectation, when he came to Court, on Tueſday the 27th of July, the Staff was taken from him, rather with mortifying, than agreeable Circumſtances. 'Tis certain, that bitter Reproaches paſs'd, in the Queen's Hearing, between the falling Miniſter, and the Lord Chancellor and Lady Maſham, whom the Treaſurer look'd upon as acceſſary (a) to his Diſgrace; and thereupon told them, "That he had been wrong'd "and abuſed, by Lies and Miſrepreſentations; but that he ſhould be reveng'd, "and leave ſome People as low as he found them." Theſe ungracious Expoſtulations could not but ſhock and perplex the ſickly Queen, and give her uneaſy Suſpicions of her being abuſed and deluded, by One or Two of the Three principal Miniſters, if not, ſeverally, by the whole TRIUMVIRATE. Some will have it, that in this Agitation of Thought, which open'd Her Majeſty's Eyes, ſhe deſign'd to reſign her ſelf wholly to the Conduct of the Duke of Shrewſbury: But whether, in her preſent Condition, ſhe was capable of forming ſo vigorous a Reſolution, and ſo inconſiſtent with her late Meaſures, can hardly be ſuppoſed: 'Tis far more rational to imagine, That the Lord Bolingbroke had gain'd ſo great an Aſcendant over her, that he was moſt like to ſucceed the Earl of Oxford in the principal Management of Affairs. This is certain, that, on the very Day the Treaſurer was remov'd, the Lord Bolingbroke entertain'd at Dinner the Generals Stanhope, Cadogan, and Palmes; Sir William Wyndham, Mr. Craggs, and ſome other Gentlemen: Which Meeting, of Men of ſuch jarring Principles, as it could not be the Effect of Chance, ſo did it occaſion various Reaſonings. The moſt probable Conjecture was, That the Lord Bolingbroke, conſidering he could not depend on the Queen's precarious Life to accompliſh his Deſigns, and foreſeeing a Storm he could not be able to weather, reſolv'd to ſtrike in with the Whigs, and to invite over the Duke of Marlborough; in which he had Reaſon to expect better Succeſs than his late Rival, with whom the Duke had vow'd never to be reconcil'd. Some other Particulars were, at that Time mention'd, to corroborate theſe Suggeſtions: But tho' 'tis certain, that the Duke of Marlborough, after having been detain'd about a Fortnight by contrary Winds, did, at this very Juncture, embark at Oſtend for England, yet we are ſtill in the dark, as to the true Motive and Ground of his coming over, at this critical Juncture. It appear'd plainly, however, ſoon after, that whatever were the Lord Bolingbroke's Thoughts and Views at this Time, the main Deſign of the Whigs was to inflame the Animoſity between him and the Earl of Oxford, as the readieſt Way to ruin them both.

The Treaſurer's Removal was ſo ſudden, and occaſion'd ſuch Striſe and Confuſion, that no Scheme was either form'd, or agreed on, to ſupply his Place, and to fill up ſuch other Vacancies, as muſt naturally attend his Diſgrace. A Cabinet-Council, or rather Chamber-Conſultation, was, indeed, held in a Hurry, for that Purpoſe; the very * Night on which the Earl of Oxford ſurrender'd the Staff; and, in the firſt Place, ſeveral Perſons were propos'd to manage the Treaſury, which was deſign'd to be put in Commiſſion. Their Number was to be Five; of which Sir William Wyndham, as Chancellor of the Exchequer, was certainly to be one: But the Choice of the other Four puzzled both the Queen and her Counſellors. 'Tis ſaid, that the Perſons nam'd, were, the Lords Bolingbroke, Paget, Lexington, Bathurſt, and Maſham; the Biſhop of London; the Honourable Mr. Henry Boyle, and Mr. Bridges; Sir John Packington, Mr. Campion, Mr. Hill, and ſome others: But whether there were fewer, or more in Nomination, 'tis certain, that no Reſolution was taken, as to the Choice of Four out of them, either in that firſt Conſultation, or in the Council held the next † Morning; ſeveral Perſons who had been propoſed, and ſpoken to, having declin'd to accept a precarious Employment, in ſo tickliſh a Juncture. On Thurſday, the 29th of July, the Cabinet-Council was to have ſat on the ſame Affair: But their Meeting was put off to the next Day, by reaſon of the Queen's Indiſpoſition; which, ſhe was ſenſible, was occaſion'd by the late Quarrelling among her Servants; having intimated to one of her Phyſicians, That She ſhould not outlive it.

Account of the Queen's Sickneſs.

'Tis certain, that both the Diſpute, to which ſhe was an Ear-witneſs, and the Conſultation that was held thereupon, and laſted till near Two a Clock in the Morning, occaſion'd ſuch a violent Agitation of the Queen's Spirits, as could not but hinder the uſual Diſcharge of the Impoſthumation in her Leg; ſo that the * gouty Humour tranſlating it ſelf upon the Brain, was the immediate Occaſion of her Death. On Thurſday Morning, Her Majeſty finding her ſelf indiſpoſed with a dozing Heavineſs, and a ſhooting Pain in her Head, her Phyſicians judg'd proper, that ſhe ſhould be let Blood, by Cupping; an Operation which ſhe lik'd better than Phlebotomy, and which, in the like apparent Symptoms, had often given her Eaſe. The Queen was now ſomewhat reliev'd by it; went to Bed at the uſual Hour; reſted pretty well till Three a Clock in the Morning, † when ſhe wak'd; and finding ſomething heavy on her Stomach, and reaching to vomit, ſhe brought up ſome Matter, and then compoſed her ſelf to ſleep. Towards Seven a Clock, ſhe wak'd again; and finding her ſelf pretty well, roſe from Bed, and got her Head comb'd. This done, towards Eight, Her Majeſty went to look on the Clock; and Mrs. Danvers one of the Bedchamber-Women, taking notice, that ſhe fix'd her Eyes a long Time upon it, aſk'd Her Majeſty, What ſhe ſaw in the Clock more than ordinary? The Queen anſwer'd her only with turning her Head, and a dying Look; at which Mrs. Danvers being frighted, ſhe call'd for Help. The Phyſicians in waiting, judging that ſhe was ſeiz'd with a Fit of an Apoplexy, caus'd her to be let Blood; upon which, the Queen came to her ſelf again, and was pretty quiet 'till a little after Nine, when ſhe was ſeiz'd with a Second Fit of Heavineſs and Dozing, which increaſed ſo much upon her, that for above an Hour ſhe was ſpeechleſs, motionleſs, and unſenſible. Thoſe about her Majeſty, judging ſhe was either dead, or near expiring, the Dutcheſs of Ormond, one of the Ladies of the Bed-Chamber, then in Waiting, ſent, with all Speed, a Meſſenger to her Conſort, with this melancholy News, which being brought to the Committee of Council, then aſſembled at the Cockpit, near Whitehall, they immediately broke up, and went to Kenſington. In the mean Time, the Phyſicians thought fit to give her Majeſty a Vomit, which not having all the deſired Effect, they adminiſtred another Medicine, propoſed by Dr. Mead, upon which her Majeſty recover'd her Speech, and was ſenſible.

* This was Dr. Shadwell's Opinion.

Proceedings in this nice Juncture.

The Dukes of Somerſet and Argyle, being inform'd of the deſperate Condition the Queen's Life was in, their Graces repair'd, with ſpeed, to Kenſington, and without being ſummon'd, went into the Council-Chamber, where the Lord Chancellor, the Dukes of Shrewſbury, and Ormond, the Three Secretaries of State, the Biſhop of London, and ſome others, were in a Committee. It is eaſy to gueſs, that ſome of them were ſurpriz'd at their coming in; but their Graces having acquainted the Board with the Reaſons that brought them hither, the Duke of Shrewſbury return'd them Thanks for their Readineſs to give the Council their Aſſiſtance in that nice Juncture; upon which they took their Places; and then moved, that the Queen's Phyſicians might be examin'd, and order'd to give an Account, in Writing, of her Majeſty's Illneſs, which they did accordingly. After this, one of the Council repreſented, how neceſſary it was, in caſe it pleaſed God to call the Queen to his Mercy, that the Place of Lord Treaſurer ſhould be fill'd: To which the whole Board aſſenting, the Duke of Shrewſbury was propoſed, and unanimouſly approved, as the fitteſt Perſon for that high Truſt. Sir Richard Blackmore, Dr. Shadwell, Dr. Mead, and the other Phyſicians that were examin'd, having aſſur'd the Council that the Queen was ſenſible, and might be ſpoke to, the Lord Chancellor, with the Duke of Shrewſbury, and ſome other Lords, were order'd to attend her Majeſty, and to lay before her, the unanimous Opinion of the Council, upon which her Majeſty ſaid, They could not recommend a Perſon ſhe liked better, than the Duke of Shrewſbury; and giving him the Treaſurer's Staff, bid him uſe it for the Good of her People. His Grace would have return'd her Majeſty the Lord Chamberlain's Staff; but her Majeſty deſired he ſhould keep them both: So that the ſame Nobleman was, at once, poſſeſs'd of Three of the higheſt Places of Truſt, Honour and Profit, under the Imperial Crown of Great Britain, being Lord Treaſurer, Lord Chamberlain, and Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. His Grace's Advancement to the Poſt of Lord Treaſurer, immediately changed the Face of Affairs; daſh'd the towring Ambition of the Lord Bolingbroke; baffled his undigeſted Schemes; alarm'd the Friends of the Pretender; and wonderfully reviv'd the drooping Spirits of the Well-affected to the Hanover Succeſſion. The Dukes of Somerſet's and Argyle's coming ſo ſeaſonably to the Council, had this further good Effect, that upon their Motion, it was agreed, that all Privy-Counſellors then in or about London, without Diſtinction, ſhould attend; which the Sudden turn in the Face of Affairs.

Lord Somers, and ſome other Sticklers for the Houſe of Hanover, did that very Day.

About Three a Clock in the Afternoon, the Queen relapſed into a kind of Lethargick, or Apopleptick Fit, out of which ſhe was hardly recover'd, by the Application of the Spirit of Sal Almoniac to her Noſtrils. Hereupon her Phyſicians thought fit to apply Bliſters: But, at the ſame Time, acquainted the Council, that the Queen's Life was in the utmoſt Danger, and intirely depended on the Effect of this laſt Remedy. In the mean Time, the Privy Council took into Conſideration, the State of the Kingdom; and very ſevere Reflections were made on the late Adminiſtration, for leaving the Maritime Places, particularly the important Town of Portſmouth, unprovided with Men, and Warlike Stores, and conſequently uncapable of Defence, in Caſe of a ſudden Invaſion, which might be reaſonably apprehended, in Caſe of her Majeſty's Demiſe. But the preſent Buſineſs not being to inquire into, but to mend Faults, the Council, with wonderful Prudence and Diſpatch, provided for the Security of the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, of the Maritime Towns, and of Scotland and Ireland. Orders were immediately diſpatch'd to Four Regiments of Horſe and Dragoons, quarter'd in remote Counties, to march up to the Villages near London, to keep the Jacobites and Diſaffected in Awe: And to Seven of the Ten Battallons of Britiſh Forces, then in Flanders, to embark at Oſtend, and ſail for England, with all poſſible Speed. On the other hand, the Lords of the Admiralty laid an Imbargo on all Shipping, and gave Directions for fitting out as many Men of War, as could ſooneſt be got ready. By theſe excellent Orders, the publick Tranquility remain'd undiſturb'd, and no Conſternation appear'd, but in the Faces of the avow'd Partiſans of the Pretender.

Reflections in Council againſt the late Miniſters, for leaving the Maritime Towns unprovided.

Excellent Orders given by the Council, for the Security of the City of London, and of the whole Kingdom.

The Queen continued all the Night, in a kind of Lethargick Dozing, which increaſed to ſuch a Degree, about Ten a Clock, on Saturday * Morning, That all her Phyſicians deſpair'd of her Life. Hereupon the Privy Council ſent Orders to the Heralds at Arms, and a Troop of the Life-Guards, to be in a Readineſs to mount, in order to proclaim the Elector of Brunſwick, King of Great Britain. And at the ſame Time, their Lordſhips cauſed a Letter to be written to his Electeral Highneſs, to acquaint him "with the extream Danger the Queen's Life was in, with the "Meaſures they had taken to ſecure the Crown to him; and to deſire his Electoral "Highneſs to repair with all convenient Speed to Holland, where a Britiſh Squa-"dron, that was fitting out with all poſſible Expedition, would attend his Electoral "Highneſs, and bring him over, in Caſe it pleaſed GOD to call the Queen to his "Mercy." This Letter was, that very Morning, ſent Expreſs, by James Craggs, Eſq; Junior: And with him, Orders were diſpatch'd to the Earl of Strafford, to deſire the States-General to get ready to perform the Guaranty of the Proteſtant Succeſſion if Need ſhould require. This done, the Privy Council reſumed the Conſideration of the State of the Sea-Port Towns, order'd a ſtrong Reinforcement to be forthwith ſent down to Portſmouth: And rightly judging, That if the Pretender's Friends ſtirr'd any where in Great Britain, 'twould be, moſt probably, in Scotland, their Lordſhips order'd Major-General Whetham to repair thither, and aſſiſt Major-General Wightman; and appointed the Earl of Berkley to command the Fleet. The Queen gave ſome Signs of Life, between Twelve and One a Clock, and took ſome Spoonfulls of Broth. Her Majeſty continued in a dozing heavy Condition, 'till about Six in the Afternoon, when her Pulſe beating ſomewhat faſter, and higher, thoſe about her began to entertain ſome Hopes. But this was but the Flaſh of a dying Light: For the Bliſters not having the Effect that was expected, her Majeſty expired on Sunday, the 1ſt of Auguſt, little after Seven a Clock in the Morning, in the Fiftieth Year † of her Age, (being born at St. James's, on the 6th of February, $166\frac{4}{5}$, at Thirty Nine Minutes paſt Eleven at Night:) And having reign'd Twelve Years, and Five Months, wanting Seven Days. She was not able, either to receive the HOLY EUCHARIST, which the Biſhop of London was ready to adminiſter to her; or to ſign the Draught of a Will, whereby ſhe directed her Burial to be in the ſame Manner, and Place, with her late Royal Conſort; and in which ſhe left Legacies to ſome of her Servants.

Her Perſon was middle-ſized, and well made, but, after ſhe bore Children, corpulent. Her Hair dark brown, her Complexion ſanguine and ruddy; her Features ſtrong, but regular: And the only Blemiſh in her Face, was owing to the Defluxion ſhe had in her Infancy, in her Eyes, which left a Contraction in the Upper-Lids, that gave a cloudy Air to her Countenance. She had an excellent Ear, which qualify'd her for a true Dancer, and gave her a great Reliſh for Muſick; inſomuch that ſhe

Her Character.

A. D. 1714.

ſhe was accounted one of the beſt Performers on the Guitar, an Inſtrument formerly much in Vogue. She had alſo a good Taſte of Poetry, Painting, and all the Liberal Arts. What was moſt remarkable in her Perſonal Accompliſhments, was a clear, harmonious Voice, particularly conſpicuous in her graceful Delivery of her Speeches to her Parliaments. GOOD NATURE, the Characteriſtick of the STUARTS, predominated in her Temper, which was a Compound of Benevolence, Generoſity, Indolence, and Timidity; not without a due Senſibility of any Slight which, ſhe thought, was offer'd, either to her Perſon or Dignity. To theſe may be referr'd all the Actions of her private and publick Life: Theſe were the Sources, both of her Virtues, and of her Uneaſineſſes. Her greateſt Bleſſing, on Earth, was the entire Union of Affections and Inclinations, between her and her Royal Conſort, which made them a perfect Pattern of Conjugal Love. She was a fond and tender Mother, an eaſy and indulgent Miſtreſs, and a moſt gracious Sovereign: But ſhe had, more than once, Reaſon to repent her giving up her Heart, and truſting her Secrets, without any Reſerve, to her Favourites. She retain'd to the laſt, the Principles of true Religion, which ſhe had early imbibed: Being devout, withont Affectation, and Charitable without Oſtentation. She had a great Reverence for Clergymen eminent for Learning, and good Morals; and no leſs Beneficence towards the poorer Sort of them; of which ſhe left a Monument, that will perpetuate her NAME * and BOUNTY, to all ſucceeding Generations. She kept her Family in excellent Decorum, and Regularity; being an exact Oeconomiſt, without deſcending to trifling Particulars; and never launching into any extraordinary Expence, without conſulting her Treaſurer. If ſhe was not equal to the Weight of a Crown, and the Management of arduous Affairs, yet it muſt be own'd, that the Wiſdom of her Counſels, and the Succeſs of her Arms, were, in ſome Meaſure, owing to her juſt Diſcernment in her firſt Choice of her Prime Miniſter, and General: And if ſhe was, afterwards, prevail'd with to part with them, it cannot be denied, that the Abuſe of her Confidence and Authority, was the main Occaſion of it; and gave a Handle to ſome Men to make her Frailties and Reſentments ſubſervient to their own Revenge, and ambitious Deſigns. After all, as the firſt Warlike Nine Years of her Reign, eclipſe the moſt Glorious of any of her Predeceſſors, ſo will they ſhine to the remoteſt Poſterity: And whatever Cenſures may paſs on the latter Part of her Adminiſtration, Impartial Men will not reflect on the PEACE ſhe made, before it is mended, by more advantageous Treaties. 'Till then, her Reign will juſtify the Reflection againſt the SALICK LAW, "That Monarchies are ſometimes beſt adminiſtred, when Wo-"men fill the Throne, becauſe then Men govern; whereas when Men wear the "Scepter, it is generally ſway'd by Women.
